This excessiv, meddlesome, costly legislation may bring ruin at last. And our patent laws, too, make a few millionaires and many slaves. Had $100,000 from the public treasury been awarded each inventor of the sewing-machine and the McCormick reaper, and everybody been allowed to make them, they would hav been furnished the public at one-third the prices they hav been. The owner of a thousand-acre field of wheat can buy a number of costly reapers and gain thereby; while the man with a few acres only cannot afford to buy one. The patented sewing-machine brought calamity to the thousands of women who had previously earned a living by the needle. They could no longer do so. The machine became a necessity to compete with itself. The poor woman must hav one or starve. But the patentee, having the exclusiv right to make them, could and does get $55 for such as cost just $15; and many a seamstress, forced to buy on the instalment plan, has filled a grave without filling the contract; while the capitalist, using numbers of them, could make money, and the inventor become a millionaire. And so with other patents. When A gets some labor-saving machine, B must hav the same to compete with—there was no necessity before. The wrong is in taxing the whole community during a lifetime or more for the benefit of a few monopolists who generally become millionaires.

Including federal and state governments, we hav about ten thousand legislators—enough for the whole world. Nature's laws are permanent—as good for this year as for the last; but our legislators pass few laws that do not prove unsatisfactory and require continual doctoring. It is difficult to get a good law enacted or a bad one repealed; yet a multitude of legislators will make a multitude of laws, a multitude of laws require a multitude of officials, and a multitude of officials entail great public cost. Local or special laws should never be enacted. General laws, universal in application, are all that the Constitution warrants.

Absolute monarchies are based on the theory that all power is rightly lodged in the crown; that all privileges of the people are grants from the crown; that the government may tax the subjects to impoverishment, but may be prayed to return a trifle when a famin occurs; that the divinely appointed ruler may be petitioned to grant some relief to prevent starvation. But our federal government was established on the reverse theory of local and self-government; a minimum of governmental authority with a maximum of individual liberty consistent with order.

Now, a large portion of our foreign element retain some notion of the paternal rule of their nativ land; and when they do not prosper here satisfactorily they look for governmental action in their favor. They like the greater freedom, but seem to think it consists mainly in greater ease to get public favors. The office-seekers of either party tell them, "Our party is the friend of the workingman," when they should know that the government has no business with rich or poor, workmen or employers, as such. But the American is most to be blamed. He is gradually voting away state rights and individual liberty—concentrating more and more power in the federal government. If the customs in some states or of some persons do not square with his notions, he sanctions governmental correction, whether the Constitution is infringed or not. If he does not smoke or drink himself, he is often disposed forcibly to prevent others from doing so. If he wants his God in the Constitution and his particular religion adopted as the basis of its authority, he is about ready to demand it. If his cellular organism is so piously bleached that he cannot look on unadorned nature without shuddering, he is ready to imprison editors and close the mails. His own bigoted mind, not the Constitution, is his guide.

In the early days of the republic the people demanded repeal of the unconstitutional alien and sedition laws that had been enacted, which inspired the maxim that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." But notwithstanding the curtailment of individual liberty through meddlesome legislation, and the threatened combination of Protestants and Catholics to again compel obedience to their dogmas, the present generation has no idea that anything on, under, or above the earth could destroy the republic. The priest is still omnipresent; and with all the boasting of Christian civilization, few Christian nations are liberal enough to be fit for an intelligent person to liv in. Every priest wants to rule in the name of his God. He is a brigand against individual liberty. He destroyed proud, cultured Greece and impartial Rome. And his animus is the same always and everywhere.

A century is but a drop in the ocean of time. The republic is still on trial; universal suffrage is being tested. It is becoming a serious question whether our mixed population, with its diverse interests and prejudices, is fit for self-government. Individual liberty, and respect for the equal rights of each and every member, is the only rule by which the republic can be preserved. But we are already drifting into a current leading to disaster. Individual liberty is being crushed between priest and legislator. The priest claims control of our thoughts and the legislator that of our actions. The priest is still marshaling his forces to subdue Freethought, and a strait-jacket, to prevent us from freely roaming through the commercial world and get cheated, is being drawn tighter and tighter by the meddlesome legislator. L. G. Reed.

The Case Against the Church in the Illinois Courts.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: In your editorial of April 30th on the American Secular Union you refer to C. B. Waite's circular appealing for funds to prosecute the case pending in the supreme court, restraining the Cook county board from granting moneys to St. Mary's Training School for Boys, which, when secretary, I inaugurated.

Permit me further to state that the case of the Industrial School for Girls was largely brought about through the same instrumentality. I had found in my old neighbor, friend, and comrade, Commissioner Williams, a man, though an office-holder and politician. Mr. Williams had been a member of our local society and continued a generous contributor as long as I was connected with it. This courageous commissioner proved himself one man in ten thousand; for at the solicitation of friends (among whom was our friend A. D. O'Neil) Mr. Williams undertook to put a curb on the robberies perpetrated by the Romish power and compel it to respect the constitution—a daring purpose even for an earnest Liberal to espouse. An opinion was obtained from the county attorney, which, while it did not satisfy the board, did pave the way for the suit which it had been determined to bring. By a stroke of diplomacy, our friend, the commissioner, got the county attorney to fight the case, so that only the expense of securing evidence to establish certain legal points which we wished introduced was incurred by a few Liberals—these points being supplied the attorney through the commissioner. When the case was tried, County-Attorney Bliss made a brilliant fight, but was overruled by Judge Tuthill; but, on appeal, was sustained by the supreme court. That case made clear the way for the pending suit.

On one point Mr. Waite appears to me misinformed.

From the time of the decision by the supreme court on the Illinois Industrial School for Girls, no money was voted that institution until last November. Had they (the county commissioners) done so it would only hav been necessary to cite them for contempt.

Last November, just two days prior to election, when five mayoralty candidates were in the field, and the representativs of three were willing to outdo each other in "conciliating" the Catholic vote, then the political pressure was brought to bear on the county board by the "meek and lowly" Jesuits. It was then that all but four members voted to violate the constitution and set at defiance the supreme court's explicit decision. Then it was that my friend Stauber, together with General Leib, Cool, and Stepine, resisted, to the extent of their vote, this case of theological anarchy.

If we take into consideration that institution's average increase, the sum that they were cut off from must hav approximated in round numbers some $60,000. However, that decision gave rise to the building of other houses of refuge of a semi-theological character, so the patronage is now more widely distributed; and as the Protestants are getting their share of the spoils, they are not "kicking" against the Catholics. This much to place credit where credit is due, chiefly to my friend William Williams, who, it is hardly necessary to say, never was reëlected after that. He sacrificed his political future for the Secular cause.

Considering the foregoing, I think it somewhat singular that Mr. Waite, who is supposed to know something about law, should issue such a circular asking for funds for such a purpose when he knows that the case, as it stands, rests wholly and solely in my hands and cannot be opened without my consent. At least, it seems to me that if the American Secular Union really means to use funds for such purpose, its president would hav done me the slight courtesy to hav consulted with me about it. The case had to be brought by a citizen of Chicago. Though the chief expenses were paid by the American Secular Union, Judge Russell well knows there were many expenses in connection with that case that I never even charged up to the American Secular Union which might be urged as an additional reason why Mr. Waite should hav asked my permission whether I had any objection to its being taken up by the present administration.

E. A. Stevens.

Constitution of the Ohio State Secular Union.

PREAMBLE.

In the course of human events honorable combinations are marching hand in hand with civilization for the moral and social improvement of the race, and to promote the general happiness of mankind. Therefore, we, as Freethinkers, residents within the state of Ohio, do hereby organize this Union to assist in the establishing of a universal brotherhood, composed of the great human family, without distinction of country, color, or sex.

The time is now come when we must seek that unity which givs strength and means. Heretofore we hav restricted ourselvs to individual exertion only. Secularism is now widely spread, but to raise its head publicly and efficiently it must hav a staff of organized workers, supported by a well-organized body.

The purpose of this organization shall be:

To render secular service to mankind, and to protect its members from the evil consequences of speculativ errors.

It indorses the right of free discussion upon all topics pertaining to the present welfare of man.

It claims freedom of thought upon all subjects without prejudice or bias; freedom of examination, without being curbed or confined by human authority or dogma; freedom of speech, that all may be made acquainted with the result of Freethought and free examination, and freedom of discussion, that all utterances may be tested.

With these in full and free exercise there can be no fear of beneficial progress of humanity, as it would sweep out of existence an immense amount of obstruction that now cumbers our social edifice.

Secularism is the practical philosophy of this life. It is a protest against the popular theology of the day, and as such this Union is in the main formed upon a purely antitheological basis, believing that theology is entirely delusiv, robbing man of the realities of life here, and deluding him with the shadow of a life hereafter.

Secularism inculcates morals as independent of any system of theological belief, by basing him upon human considerations more immediate, more demonstrativ and universal.

Secularism pertains only to the present welfare of man, and to those actions the issues of which can be tested by the experiences of this life.

The principal objects of this Union are:

1. The inculcation of positiv philosophy, correctiv of popular theology.

2. The devising of secular plans for the improvement of the human race.

3. A systematic defense of secular truth against whatever contradicts it or impedes its progress.

Its operations shall consist of:

Lectures, meetings, the distributing of literature, the establishing of Secular Sunday-schools, the formation of Freethought libraries throughout the state, and to establish, wherever possible, local auxiliaries in connection with this Union.

For this purpose we invite the coöperation of all friends of Secularism, and all those who can indorse and assist in the propagation of the principles and objects of this Union herein set forth.

In consideration whereof, we, the members of this Union, hav adopted this constitution and by-laws for its government.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

Section 1. This Union shall be known as the "Ohio State Secular Union."

Sec. 2. It shall hav power to establish, wherever possible, throughout the state of Ohio, local auxiliaries, to be affiliated under a charter with this Union, when the necessary requirements in connection therewith shall be fulfilled.

ARTICLE II.

Sec. 1. Its officers shall consist of a president, two vice-presidents, a general secretary, a treasurer, and an executiv committee, which shall be elected (by ballot) at each annual meeting of the Union.

Sec. 2. The executiv committee shall consist of the president, secretary, and the treasurer, in conjunction with four other members of the Union to be elected under the provisions of Sec. 1 of this Article.

ARTICLE III.

Sec. 1. The annual meeting shall be held at such time and place as the executiv committee shall decide. All business to be transacted at the same shall be sent to all local auxiliaries and certificated members at least one month previous to the time of such annual meeting.

Sec. 2. The executiv committee shall meet during the first week in each quarter of the year for the transaction of such business as may be required pertaining to the Union.

Sec. 3. In case there should be any important business that may need to be dealt with between these meetings, the president shall be empowered to call a special meeting for the transaction of the same.

Sec. 4. The expenses of the excutiv committee shall be paid by the Union, for attendance at these meetings, but no expense shall be allowed for any attendance at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE IV.

Sec. 1. In any town or village within the state of Ohio, where seven or more persons may desire to form a local auxiliary in connection with this Union, they shall make application to the secretary in writing accompanied with the sum of $5. When the necessary requirements of the Union shall be fulfilled, the secretary shall then forward a charter properly made out to the persons named, with the signatures of the president and secretary attached, and sealed with the authorized seal of the Union.

Sec. 2. Each local auxiliary shall draw up a constitution and by-laws for its own government, and shall act independent of the state Union, provided such actions are not in violation of, or contrary to, any of the principles and objects set forth by this constitution.

Sec. 3. Each local auxiliary shall be required to pay to the treasurer of the state Union a quarterly subscription fee of fifty cents per member of such local auxiliary, the same to be paid during the first week in each quarter of the year, and in consideration therefor, each local auxiliary shall be entitled to the services of a lecturer, a share (pro rata to membership) in the distribution of literature, and other assistance as far as the funds of the Union shall allow.

ARTICLE V.

Sec. 1. Each local auxiliary shall be entitled to send three delegates to the annual meeting for the first twenty members or a fraction of twenty, and an additional delegate for each ten, or a fraction of each ten, over and above the first twenty. The same to be elected at least one month previous to the time of annual meeting, and the secretary to be promptly notified of the number of delegates to be sent, together with the names of all delegates elected. The said delegate shall upon presentation of their credentials, properly signed by the president and secretary of his own local Union, be entitled to sit in the annual meeting and assist in the transaction of all business pertaining to the same.

Sec. 2. No delegate shall be allowed to vote, or to take part, in any of the proceedings of the state Union, at any annual or other meeting, unless the local auxiliary which he shall represent shall be clear on the books of the state Union, and is not indebted thereto by way of dues, etc.

Sec. 3. Each local auxiliary shall, upon payment of its dues, immediately receive a printed report of the work done by the officers of the state Union during the past quarter, together with a balance-sheet, showing the financial standing of the Union, its income and expenditure for the past quarter, the total membership of all local auxiliaries, and the progress made by them throughout the state.

ARTICLE VI.

Sec. 1. Providing one or more persons, residing in any town or village in the state of Ohio, where the numbers are insufficient for the establishment of a local auxiliary, or where one could not be successfully maintained, shall desire to join the Union, they shall be permitted to become members of the state Union upon application to the secretary in writing, accompanied by a quarterly subscription fee of $1, which may be paid annually or quarterly in advance; and they shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges of the Union. Such members shall receive a certificate of their membership properly signed and sealed, but shall not be allowed to vote at any annual meeting unless they hav been a member at least six months previous to the time of such annual meeting.

ARTICLE VII.

Sec. 1. Any local auxiliary, desiring to introduce any resolution at the annual meeting, shall notify the secretary of the state Union of the intentions of that local auxiliary, together with the exact wording and purport of the resolution, at least two months previous to the time of the annual meeting, so as to allow ample time to send the same to all local auxiliaries and certificated members at least one month previous to the time of the annual meeting, or before delegates to the said annual meeting are elected.

ARTICLE VIII.

Sec. 1. The annual meeting shall be held in different parts of the state, the time and place to be decided by the executiv committee.

Sec. 2. Any local auxiliary may invite the state Union to hold its annual meeting under its auspices; such invitations, however, must be made at least three months previous to the time of the annual meeting.

ARTICLE IX.

DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

The president's duties shall be: To preside at all annual meetings of the state Union and of the executiv committee; he shall indorse all bills of indebtedness to the Union, which shall hav been ordered paid by the executiv committee; he shall superintend the actions of its officers and direct the general business of the Union when the Union is not in session, or when the executiv committee shall hav adjourned. He shall indorse all drafts on the treasurer, and decide all questions submitted to him in accordance with the principles and objects set forth in this constitution.

The duties of the vice-presidents shall be: To perform all the duties pertaining to the office of president in his absence.

The duties of the secretary shall be: To keep a faithful record of the business transactions of the Union and the executiv committee in a book provided for that purpose. He shall answer all correspondence and attend to all communications from local auxiliaries and certificated members. He shall fill out all charters and certificates of membership, and submit the same to the president for his signature and approval. He shall devote the whole of his time to carry out the work of the Union in accordance with the principles and objects set forth by this constitution. He shall make out a quarterly report of his work, the same to be printed, and a copy sent by him to all local auxiliaries and certificated members, when their dues shall be paid. He shall lecture for the Union, and organize local auxiliaries in connection therewith, wherever possible. Should any measure be presented to the legislature affecting the members of this Union, as Freethinkers, it shall be his duty to appear before the committees on such measures, and present petitions thereto from the members of the Union, with such other signatures as shall be obtained, and argue against such measures before them. He shall fill up all charters and certificates, and make out all papers required of him by the Union, the executiv committee, or the president. He shall, together with the president, indorse all bills of indebtedness to the Union (when the same shall be ordered paid by the executiv committee), all drafts on the treasurer, etc. He shall submit an annual report of the Union, together with the doings of the executiv committee, to each annual meeting. He shall notify all local auxiliaries and certificated members of their indebtedness to the Union, when duly instructed thereon by the treasurer, at least two months before the time of annual meeting. All moneys earned by him, by lectures, debates, or otherwise, shall, after all legitimate expenses hav been paid, be handed by him to the treasurer of the Union, and the same to be added to the funds of the Union; and for the faithful performance of his duties he shall receive the sum of one thousand dollars per annum.

The treasurer's duties shall be to receive and to hold all moneys in his name belonging to the Union; to pay all bills of indebtedness of the Union when the same hav been duly indorsed by the president and secretary, without which indorsements no bill shall be paid by him; to make out and forward to the secretary a quarterly report of the financial standing of the Union, all moneys received by him from local auxiliaries and certificated members, and all arrears owing by them to the Union. He shall draw up an annual report of his work and submit the same to each annual meeting. He shall keep an account of all expenses incurred by him in the fulfillment of his duties, and the same shall be refunded to him by the Union.

The duties of the executiv committee shall be: To transact such business as may be brought before them pertaining to the welfare of the Union at their quarterly meetings, or at a special meeting called for that purpose by the president. All bills of indebtedness shall be submitted to them, and without their order none shall be paid. They shall order all drafts on the treasurer and conduct the general business of the Union when the Union is not in session.

BY-LAWS.

Sec. 1. A two-thirds vote of all delegates present at an annual meeting shall be required to amend, alter, set aside, or suspend any portion of this constitution or by-laws.

Sec. 2. A majority vote shall decide all questions brought before the executiv committee or the annual meeting, except in such cases as provided for in Section 1 of this article.

Signed this 17th day of April, E.M. 292.

F. S. DEAN, President.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Secretary.

DR. J. B. SCHUELLER, Treasurer.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, May 15th, at 3 o'clock, W. C. Owen, of New York, will lecture. Subject: "Can Christianity Save Man in This Life?"

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH's lecture appointments:

Ottumwa, Ia.	May 15	Columbus, O.	June 12
Manchester, Ia.	" 17–19	Cleveland, O.	" 13, 15
Angola, Ind.	" 30	Pittsburgh, Pa.	" 19
Waterloo, Ind.	June 4, 5, 6	Butler, Pa.	" 20, 21
Butler, Ind.	" 7, 8	Philadelphia, Pa.	" 26

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

PHILOSOPHICAL Association, Sundays at 3 P.M., Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D.—Lectures for May:

May 15th, Mr. S. H. Wilder: "Self-Contradictory Evolution."

May 22d, Mr. Henry Frank: "Selections and Discussions from 'His Bold Experiment.'"

May 29th, closing service: Mr. H. Rowley, Review of the Season's Work.

W. S. BELL is now in Oregon, where he will lecture in May and June; afterward he goes to Washington. The following are his dates till June 12th:

Bandon, Ore.	May 13	Corvallis, Ore.	May 27
Langlois, "	" 14	Silverton, "	" 28, 29
Arago, "	" 16	Oswego, "	" 30
Woodburn, "	" 18	Stella, Wash.	" 31
Canby, "	" 19	Cathlamet, Wash.	June 2–4
New Era, "	" 20	Skamokawa, "	" 5, 6
Forest Grove, "	" 22–26	Deep River, "	" 12

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Toronto	May 22	Murray, Utah	June 14
Columbus, O.	" 24–26	Kaysville, and
Cincinnati, O.	" 29	Farmington, Utah	" 15
Ottumwa, Ia.	June 1	Morgan City, Utah	" 16
Blackhawk, Col.	" 3	Echo, Utah	" 17
Boulder City, Col.	" 4, 5	Reno, Nev.	" 21
Georgetown, Col.	" 6	Carson City, Nev.	" 22
Denver, Col.	" 7	Virginia City, Nev.	" 23
Scofield, Utah	" 9, 10	Inyo county, Cal.	" 24–27
Salt Lake, Utah	" 12, 19	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash.	July 3, 4
Provo, Utah	" 13

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

AFTER Mr. Albert Bach's lecture on "Lunacy" at the Manhattan Liberal Club, on the evening of April 29th, the annual business meeting for election of officers was held, with the following result:. President, E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D.; vice-presidents, R. A. Gunn, M.D., Wilson McDonald, and Mrs. Emma Beckwith; secretary, Huldah A. Gunn, M.D.; treasurer, Miss Schachtel; librarian, Mrs. C. Leonard; trustees, E. W. Chamberlain, Dr. Julius Fehr, James Morris. The lecture appointments for May are as follows:

May 13th, "Evolution and the Spiritual Theory," S. H. Wilder and T. B. Wakeman.

May 20th, "An Outlook for Humanity," Caroline B. Le Row.

May 27th, "The Government of Cities," Dr. L. G. Janes.

Meetings will be discontinued during July, August, and September.

The Place To Be Happy Is Here.

The other Sunday a visiting clergyman addressed the Sunday-school of a Detroit church. After a serious talk he said to the children:

"All of you who desire to liv in a better world than this please rise to your feet."

All the children rose except one small boy in the corner.

The good man looked at him in pained surprise.

"My child," he said, very gently and kindly, "why don't you rise with the others?"

"Detroit's good enough for me, that's why," sung out the youngster, and the solemnity of the occasion was knocked to pieces.

Letters of Friends.

Pours a Drop Into the Lamp of Truth.

LONG LAKE, MINN., Feb. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We consider THE TRUTH SEEKER the best paper we ever had. We could not do without it. Inclosed please find $10—$3 for my subscription for another year, $1 for the Bible Picture Book, and $6 to put where it does the most good.

Yours truly, CHAS. WOLSFELD.

A Reformed Exhorter and Baptizer.

MINDEN, NEB., March 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER four years—will not do without it. I was a member of the Campbellite church for seventeen years, and am in debt to THE TRUTH SEEKER for my redemption from bondage of mind. I am very thankful to you for it. I hav preached and baptized several persons. SIMON P. REED.

We Are Happy to Please So.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., April 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Since the retirement of the San Francisco Freethought—which I very much regret—I hav been receiving your spicy paper, and find it a most acceptable substitute. Please find inclosed $5, $3 of which amount will pay for my subscription; for the balance please forward me as soon as possible two copies of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," one for myself and one for a friend. J. M. HELM.

Pictures Are Telling.

RIVERSIDE, CAL., April 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5, for which sum please send me four copies of the Bible Picture Book and one copy of Miss Wixon's "Story Hour." The four Picture Books previously ordered went off like hot cakes, and were highly appreciated. It is easier to show pictures, and they cause more solid thinking than reading matter. You cannot afford to do without Heston. Even the full-fledged Christians will look at the pictures and see absurdities in the Bible they never see by reading it. C. NEWTON ROSS.

Brought Tears to the Eyes of Sinners.

CAMDEN, ARK., April 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me the Bible Picture Book, by Heston. While writing this I hav shown THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 16th to three or four of the straitest-waisted Christians the town affords, and I had trouble to get the paper away from them. They laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks. So there must be some virtue in Heston's pictures. I hav the promis of a new subscriber soon. Long life to THE TRUTH SEEKER and all concerned. Yours truly, LEWIS COX.

We Shall Be Afraid When We Come to Die.

BALTIMORE, MD., April 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1 for the Bible Picture Book. I hav quite a time arguing with some of the Bible-believers where I am working. One, a Catholic, asked me the other day why I did not believe the Bible. I told him, because I had read it through twice, and if he would do the same he would not believe it either. He acknowledged he had never read it, but said he would swear to its truth. He gave me then the old, old story, "You will find out when you come to die!" Chestnuts!

Yours for liberty,

J. M. KAUFFMAN.

Then Freethinkers Would Not Need to Take a Back Seat.

COLUMBUS, O., April 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3, for the best Freethought paper in the world. I like it very much in its new dress. I would also say that I hope Brother Heston will be spared for many years. I giv away all my papers. I find a large number of Freethinkers here, but they do not feel the necessity of organizing. And for my part, I do not think it is possible to hold Freethinkers together, as they seem to think they are all right and hav no need to get together. We hav had Mr. Charlesworth lecturing here. I think he is as fine a Freethought lecturer as there can be. He explains everything so nicely. I hope and trust that the Freethinkers of Ohio will put their shoulder to the wheel of Freethought and help Brother Charlesworth along with it in his grand and noble work. It is the dollars that will help most. If our Liberal friends would only giv as much to the cause of Freethought as they did the churches they used to attend, Freethinkers would not hav to take a back seat as they do now.

Respectfully yours, J. H. WHITE.

Our Book Is Good to Convert Sinners.

POCATELLO, IA., March 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3, for which you will send me three more copies of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." To use a Western phrase, THE TRUTH SEEKER Illustrated Bible takes like hot cakes. It is now several months since I got my first copy, and I yet hav not had a chance to look through it myself. By sending for three I may hav a chance to get to read one of them. So far as I hav looked through the book it is one of the grandest publications yet out to convert sinners (!). Every Liberal should hav one in his home.

I am fraternally yours in the grandest cause on earth, D. POULSON.

Afraid of a Scarecrow—Then They Are No Better Than Crows.

JOPLIN, MO., April 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $8.80, for which please send me the inclosed list of books. I am in hopes that I will be able to get you some new subscribers for the grand old paper, and I will try and get some orders for the Picture Books. My "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" is about worn out. It is on the go all the time, and it is doing good work. There are as many Freethinkers here as in any place I hav been at, but they are either too busy hustling after the almighty dollar, or they are afraid of the old scarecrow, Madam Grundy, and will not come out bold with it. I think that the ones that are outspoken belong to that class of Freethinkers that believe in guerrilla warfare and do not believe much in organization, and they do not turn out to hear a speaker when one is here. Yours for truth,

W. E. HUNTER.

Piercing Points for Parsons.

BOZILL MILLS, NEB., April 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A few points for preachers to answer:

Is it right to lie to children about Santa Claus, and other things, thus learning them to lie?

Then is it right or just to punish them for lying?

You people that are so opposed to Anarchism ought to look out or you may find you are Anarchists yourselvs. The Anarchism of religion was the very worst that ever existed. It murdered men, women, and even little children. All the sects today hav no respect for each other. They disagree in everything except falsehood, slander, and slavery of the body and mind.

Religion has always denied the right of a man to think for himself. Present social institutions, the outgrowth of religion, deny the right of a man to work for himself.

There is not one religion that I know of that has the least particle of the principles of Christ. Religion is not Christianity. It is therefore the devil in Christ's clothes.

The preacher says, I am sorry for you. The Freethinker, I will help you.

T. F. MORRISSEY.

Wears Out His Papers on Christians' Hard Heads.

BONNEY, MICH., April 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I do not want to miss a single number. I hav been a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for six years, and like it very much. I hav a small library of your publications, which I hav loaned until they are about worn out. I also hav three volumes of Mr. Charles Watts's paper, Secular Thought, bound, which are doing good "missionary" work. I lived in Grand Rapids, Mich., four years, and enjoyed a great many intellectual treats in the shape of lectures delivered by Mr. Watts and others, through the generosity of Hon. S. A. Blodgett.

I enjoy the "Letters of Friends," and should you see fit to publish this letter and it should meet the eyes of any of my friends, I should be pleased to hear from them through THE TRUTH SEEKER or by letter.

Inclosed you will find a few names of Freethinkers whom I would like to hav receive sample copies of your valuable paper.

Hoping I may receive my paper regularly, and that the good work may go on until superstition is entirely driven away, I am, Very truly yours,

H. W. GILLETT, P.M.

The Condemner of the Golden Rule Meets Opposition.

GIBBON, NEB., April 26, 1892.

MY DEAR BROTHER ANDERSON: You say the Golden Rule is a farce. I hav often thought the same thing, but upon examination of the specious argument I find it too partial and ex-parte to come up to that standard of truth and fairness we Infidels aim to maintain. By such reasoning what rule of right would not meet the same fate? Right and wrong are relativ terms at best, and until we arrive at the absolute with reference to the essence of these terms we can never make a perfect law. In the righteous administration of any law it is presumed that justice, equity, and fairness are to govern our action and be the soul of our motivs. Otherwise the law itself would be a stumbling-block to the very object of its existence, as it is even now too often made by the carping technicalities of unscrupulous attorneys and the unheroic methods of an accommodating judiciary.

But let us apply your own logic to a wider conception of the case. We will assume that your criminal was a horsethief; and then when the judge's psychic conception of the wish of the horsethief appealed to the horsethief's ethical construction of the Golden Rule, suppose the wish of the man whose horse was stolen, and the wishes of a thousand law-abiding citizens who had horses subject to theft, should throng the judge's mind with powerful spiritual pleading in the opposit sentiment, then what would the judge do? Even if there were no other people in the world than judges and horsethieves, your logic would fail. It is a saying almost as old as theft itself, "There is honor among thieves"—which doubtless means a practical application of the Golden Rule—and hence their occupation would be gone unless they stole the judge's horses, which would be fatal to the motion to set aside the verdict.

Let us stick to the Golden Rule. It is all there is in the Bible that is worth anything, and as it was made five hundred years before Christ, we need feel under no obligations to biblical inspiration for this moral gem of human production.

C. PUTNAM.

Those Perpetual Christian Lies.

LAKE CITY, IA., March 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been deeply impressed, from a circumstance which took place recently in this neighborhood, of the great importance of declaring our faith and belief to some true friend, while living and of sound mind, that he may see our desires and requests strictly carried out after we can no longer speak for ourselvs. The case in point is that of Samuel Berry, a true and stanch Liberal of long standing and a member of the TRUTH SEEKER family for years. But at his funeral, less than a week after his burial, he was declared a true Christian in his belief, although a Universalist minister preached his funeral, and according to Universalism Mr. Berry could hav been saved without any false statements in regard to his belief. I know not who was responsible for this great wrong to the memory of Mr. Berry. I only knew him as a stanch Liberal who had no more faith in a God as creator of man, or Christ as a savior, than I hav. I hav talked many times with Mr. Berry and never found him differing from myself in anything, except what would be termed a scientific belief in Spiritualism. He thought it possible that the same eternal law governing this universe and bringing life and death into this world might prolong that life in the world to come. He said very little to me on that subject. But on all others we talked freely and often. With Mr. Berry's death passed away a grand, noble, good old man, one who has done right all his life for the love of the right, without fear of God or devil. He took no stock in either.

I write this to challenge the statement made at Mr. Berry's funeral that he was a Christian, for every near friend of his that knew him well was shocked at the statement. J. L. TOMPKINS.

Striking Illustration of Divine Justice.

CALVERT, TEX., April 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Some years ago Colonel Ingersoll said that hell was born of the hatred and heaven of the love and affections of the human mind. To-day the truthfulness of this declaration was beautifully illustrated in our little community.

Thirteen years ago a loving and affectionate lady's brother was cruelly assassinated in his own business house by a man whose name it is not now necessary to call. He was arrested, and through the mockery of court, misnamed justice, was acquitted and discharged. A few years subsequently this same brutal man sent another victim to eternity, for which he was never tried. In the mean time this estimable lady became an ardent and activ member of the Methodist church, in which is ever kept in mind that everlasting burning hell for all evil-doers. She thought of course this was exactly as it should be, for she supposed this hell was specially made and filled by a good and loving God for the punishment of this man, murderer of her loving and affectionate brother. No amount of argument could convince her of the contrary. She reasoned from the promptings of a wounded heart, and, sincerely believing that God was just, honestly felt that nothing short of this brimstone burning would be adequate punishment for this monster fiend—for his cruel deeds.

To-day, however, all is changed, in both hell and heaven. This man, the object of her extreme hatred, became a convert to her church, and is promised complete absolution from all his sins, and will occupy a prominent seat with her on the throne of grace, from which both together will look down below and view with pride and joy upon the man's victims in endless torments. This she cannot reconcile with her idea of divine justice, and declares with all the vehemence of outraged decency that henceforth she will abandon her connection with this church and look for some creed which will insure her a proper punishment for this murderer. It is suggested to her that perhaps God will not punish in heaven for crimes committed on earth; then in that case she expresses her preference to go to hell, where our friend Putnam says the climate may not be quite so pleasant but the company is decidedly better.

With kind wishes for the success of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, I remain,

Your old subscriber,

L. A. BERGERON.

Adventures With American Savages.

SPRING VALLEY, MINN., April 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been thinking for some time of giving the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER some of my "experiences" in a Christian town, but a press of other things has always deterred me.

Duty compelled me to take up my residence a year ago last March in this place, and from the rumors I heard before coming here I expected to drop right into the New Jerusalem, and I did, if the cussedness I found here is any sign to go by. It is, to start with, a no-license place, and on almost any Saturday you can count from twenty-five to fifty men on the streets drunk. There are no less than fifteen so-called societies for the suppression of vice, etc., Women's Christian Temperance Union, Christian Endeavor, etc., until you cannot see the end of them, and as I heard one merchant remark, while the mothers are praying for the boys the girls are left to shirk for themselvs, and it is a gospel fact that one man here "went a-gunning" for three young men at the same time, and made them all march up and marry the girls. This is only one of the many blessings heaped upon our heads by too much adherence to the "good book."

"Hain't" I loved by these howling hypocrits? Well, I rather think so. It was my good fortune to secure a life-sized portrait of Colonel Ingersoll a short time ago, and (hoping Mr. Ingersoll will forgiv me for debasing him so) I hung it over my office door, and if any of them ask me who it is (which they always do) I tell them it is my savior, and I find that it has a very quieting effect on them.

About the first introduction that my wife had to the good people of the town, was a brotherly call by the white-necktied leader of the Methodist gang, who invited her to his church, and requested the presence of the children at the Sunday-school. I do not know how they met, but I do know how they parted, for the parting was made the base for his next Sunday's "bray." We hav not been molested since.

I understand they brought the World's Fair to their senses last Sunday night, or rather they found the way to make them close her up Sunday, and that was, that each and every one of them promised, with tears in their eyes, that they would all stay at home.

Great Cæsar, what a blessing that would be for the rest of us! but still I do not know; I am afraid that to breathe pure air, purged of their foulness, would kill us all.

I am located so that it is not good policy for me to speak out too often my opinions (being agent of a railroad at a competitiv station), but I will not allow them to trample on my "pet hobby" without a whirl at them once in a while, and I do enjoy reading the book of holy iniquity to them when they begin to preach morality to me. Fraternally, W. L. HORTON.

Lay In Munitions and Then Fall On the Enemy.

BRADFORD, PA., April 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I just received all the books I ordered some time since, for which you will accept my thanks. By your postal of the 12th inst. you tell me you hav placed $3 to my credit, subject to my order. This is an oversight somehow on your behalf. I hav received "Champions of the Church" and this squares our account. I am sorry to learn that this magnificent literary work will not be published again for a long time. And I will say here while I am passing that no Liberal's library is complete without this book and Saladin's "God and His Book." Those splendid fellows hav rendered—i. e., D. M. Bennett and Saladin—the cause of Freethought able and valuable services. And while I am writing I must say a word in favor of the "Pictorial Text-Book" and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," both of them illustrated by the genius, Watson Heston. These wonderful volumes in every Liberal's library, carefully looked over, will furnish arguments sufficiently strong to conquer all priests and parsons that may come in your path. "Truth is mighty and it must prevail." Although it is crushed to earth by the orthodox in the "beautiful summer-time" at their camp-meetings and so on, it will "come up again with grass next spring" and every succeeding spring as long as a thirst for it finds a place in the human heart. And so I say, and I speak for hosts of others that hav not the opportunity of saying for themselvs, Go on with the good work, and if possible, shame these dried-up little ministers and followers of the lamb out of preaching and listening to these infernal dogmas and superstitious creeds. You will, we think, make it possible for them at last to humanize—to request nothing they would not be willing to grant to others.

I like to speak to THE TRUTH SEEKER'S large congregation from this free and independent standpoint, or pulpit, to urge them to place these books mentioned above in their possession, keep themselvs familiar with their contents. Then you will always be able to conquer the priests and parsons wherever you meet them. When your favorit subject is made the theme of discussion—and when you get amongst them and they learn who you are, it is a subject they never fail to bring down—if you are posted the chances are largely in your favor to convert to the side of truth and reason, or at least to compel them to do a little thinking for themselvs. It is amazing to see the change I hav worked in a large number of my good Christian friends in this section of the country (excuse the egotism). To talk to them and reason with them upon these great truths has a splendid tendency to civilize them, make them neighborly and friendly. This reasoning business is a powerful engin for good in all Christian communities. It has been my good fortune to visit, and in my vocation (locomotiv engineer) I visit, a number of them, and they look for my coming, a large number of them with arguments to smother me and then convert me. But the one with the necessary conversion has not reached me yet. JAS. SPELLEN.

Infidels, Be Men!

TURNER, ORE., March 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue for the 19th inst. I note the communication of F. B. Wheeler, of Nebraska, regarding his being driven from a position as public-school teacher for being an Infidel. And I hav this to say: There is nothing new in this, only that Mr. Wheeler did better than school-teachers usually do, in procuring a certificate of the facts. Christians here are trying to capture the public schools, and are usually successful—through the apathy of Infidels. Mr. Wheeler is right—"our public schools are our hope. In them we" should "teach the coming generations the infamous, blood-stained history of the past." The "coming generation" should also be taught to look out for the wiles and rascalities and hypocrisies of orthodoxy, and to search for truth, to think for themselvs, to rely upon themselvs and form their own opinions. And in this direction the "coming generation" should be taught and shown that no one has any control of his own belief; that belief comes from reason, by evidence presented to the senses, and is entirely involuntary. Not many adults hav given this matter serious thought, and they are usually greatly surprised when it is presented and brought home to them.

But the great trouble with Freethinkers—many are still afraid of the term "Infidel"—is their lack of disposition to unite. There is hardly a school district in the United States where there are not enough Infidels to at least very much ameliorate the conditions, if not change them altogether, if they would only unite and work intelligently and boldly. But they will not. Most of them dread the row there would be at first, and the underhand persecutions in business and society afterward. This fear is largely imaginary. Orthodoxy always bullies and persecutes most those who fear it most. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you," has its application here. Half a dozen Infidels, organized and working together intelligently and harmoniously, can effectually check the orthodox abuse and persecution in almost any school district in the land. No doubt there are Infidels enough in District No. 4, Pawnee county, Neb., to hav protected Mr. Wheeler if properly united.

Why is it that Infidels will not unite to defend themselvs and their interests when they are able to do so? They are not cowards. They hav the argument largely. They can defend themselvs, and they hav really nothing to fear. They are subjected to humiliating abuse and persecution anyway; why not resist? The orthodox are organized, and herein consists their power. They are arrogant and overbearing because they think Infidels are afraid of them. And they cause the school-children and the unthinking public to think so too. We who hav tried it know that there is nothing to fear. Then why not unite and take our own part? Then there will be a hundred outspoken Infidels like Mr. Wheeler where there is one now. And it is not justice that Freethinkers should remain silent and hide away while those who would fight gallantly for them are allowed to go down for lack of their support. This matter ought to be remedied. In the mean time let public-school teachers giv in their "experience" F. S. MATTESON.

P.S.—If some one would collect the "experience" of school-teachers regarding this matter, it would make an interesting book. M.

On the Late Kindness of the Preachers to the Infants.

BEULAH, COL., April 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you my last article on religious topics in the Pueblo Opinion. You perceive and appreciate the homeopathic style made necessary in writing in a first-class society paper. Though the editors allow me full scope, it is better not to come out too boldly.

GUST. E. KRENZKE.

INFANT AND OTHER DAMNATION.

The world is moving. That the Presbyterians should strike infant damnation from their Confession of Faith proves that the world took a lively whirl lately. Hurrah for our infants! This horrid baby Blue law will henceforward only liv in our memory to be recalled with a shudder as we read and remember the laws for burning, hanging, and drowning of witches, though these measures were imperativly commanded by the holy inspired scriptures in Ex. xxii, 18, in unequivocal language: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to liv." The noble, gallant men who voted to giv hereafter clear title-deeds to our babies to the mansions in the skies are entitled to unstinted praise and everlasting gratitude and eternal glory from every blessed one of us who has a baby here upon his hands. Undoubtedly every affirmativ vote in the revision committee was from a minister who had a baby, or had lost one, or who loves them. The glorious sun of light, love, and reason has again dispelled another dark, ugly, hideous cloud that shrouded God's fair earth through many gloomy centuries. Was it not bitter enough for us to bury our sweet darling baby boys and girls, but to be tormented also with the frightful reflection that, perhaps forever and ever, they were tortured in indescribable agonies, faint glimpses of which are so frequently dished up to us by the sympathetic orthodox Bible-expounders? Yet the thrilling delight in finding an obnoxious statute repealed, makes us forget and forgiv the former authors and supporters, though they deserve to be arraigned and roasted alive over redhot coals fed with pitch. Our happy hearts go out with unwonted alacrity to the good, generous, whole-souled preachers that ushered in a new departure for our kids. The very breezes whisper sweet, sonorous songs of praise. Once more the morning stars sing together and all creation joins to sing soft songs and to chant mellow melodies. Glory hallelujah! The infants are safe at last.

But what of these infants that died before Jan. 18, 1892? The cold sweat runs down my brow. What of those? Where did you leave them? For mercy's sake, did you forget and overlook them? Are they to be left to a cruel fate that a crueler Fate once ordained for them? No hope, no amnesty for them? The worst is only too true. No provision was made for them except to giv them another kick into the brimstone furnace. Chapter 23, Section 4, reads, "Prayer is to be made for all things lawful and for all sorts of men living, or that shall liv hereafter, but not for the dead." It would seem that the infants were left out in the cold, or rather in the heat. Some of them died too young. A week, a month, or a year would hav insured thousands of babies election of grave. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, cholera infantum, mumps, and Christian Science too early terminated life and consigned them to everlasting death in a torrid latitude. Such are the inevitable workings of fate and faith! And I am expected to believe that or be—well, my overburdened feelings, strained to the utmost tension with badly mingled and mixed joys and sorrows, strike for relief. I am not through with Section 3, Chapter 13. And the 7th Section of Chapter 18, about the useless work of unregenerated men, deserves worlds of comment. Some day when my nerves are composed again the other damnations may get attention.

GUST. E. KRENZKE.

Talmage Truthfully Characterized.

LEON, IA., March 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As yet I hav seen nothing in THE TRUTH SEEKER in the shape of a criticism of Dr. Talmage's sermon of March 13th in Brooklyn, and I do not feel competent to properly criticise the sermon and hav hoped that some one who could do the matter justice would do so; but as no one else has done so I desire to call attention to a few of the doctor's remarks.

Dr. Talmage has the reputation of being one of the ablest proclaimers of the word of God now living, consequently I think it reasonable to suppose that a great many credulous people swallowed all he said whole, without mastication, and consequently will never be able to digest it. I therefore desire to giv them a small digestion wafer. I sincerely regret that a more skillful physician has not offered to attend to the case. I also regret that my dose cannot through THE TRUTH SEEKER reach those who most need it.

The first thing the doctor says in this sermon is, "The story [meaning the story in the Bible] about giants is mixed with myth."

I agree with him about that. Then, after speaking at some length about the giant Og and his thirteen-foot iron bedstead, and about many other giants ranging in hight from eight to eleven feet, he says: "Do you know the name of the biggest giant you can possibly meet? And will you meet him? He is not eleven feet high, but one hundred feet high, and his bedstead as long as the continent. His name is Doubt. His common food is Infidel books, skeptical lectures, ministers who do not know whether the Bible is inspired at all or in spots, and Christians who are more Infidel than Christian."

He says: "You will never reach the promised land until you slay Doubt. Avoid as you would ship-fever and small-pox people who lack faith. Oh, the giant Doubt is a cruel giant. He attacks many in the last hour. He could not let my mother alone in her dying moments. After a life of holiness and consecration such as I never heard of in anyone else, she said to my father, 'Father, what if after all our prayers and struggles should go for nothing?'"

The last remark of this good old woman shows plainly that the doctor told the truth when he said that the old man Doubt did not let his mother alone in her dying moments, but that he clung to her and she to him even in death. In other words, she had not slain the giant Doubt; and as she had not slain the giant Doubt she never reached the promised land, but at the present writing is in that endless hell created by an almighty, just, and merciful God for the purpose of torturing for countless millions of years a great majority of his creatures, whom he has made with his own hands and without our consent, simply because we are all creatures of circumstances, and consequently must believe or disbelieve according to the circumstances by which we are surrounded; that is, we must believe or disbelieve according to the amount and nature of the evidence presented to our minds.

He says: "Avoid as you would ship-fever and small-pox people who lack faith." The words faith and doubt are words of opposit meaning. Consequently, as his mother had doubts she lacked faith, and as we must avoid as we would ship-fever and small-pox people who lack faith, we must always avoid such women as his mother as we would ship-fever and small-pox.

In one of Dr. Talmage's sermons to the people of Paris, he told his hearers that they should not say, "I hav faith, I believe, I hope," but say with all the concentrated powers of mind, soul, and body, "I know it." The doctor evidently thinks he knows. If he knows, he has no doubts; oh, no, he has slain the great giant Doubt, and will not be disturbed by him in the hour of death as his good old mother was. Having slain the giant Doubt, he will reach the promised land and look down on his good old mother in hell with composure and happiness.

Such are the conclusions at which we must necessarily arrive if we believe in the plan of salvation as taught in the New Testament and also in the exact language of Dr. Talmage.

The Rev. Dr. Talmage and all other Christians and Bible-believers are welcome to all the comfort they can get out of such belief. I do not wish to take comfort in such belief. I do not want belief. I want knowledge. Beliefs never did satisfy me, especially on subjects of importance.

In conclusion, I will say that, of all the small and contemptible things on earth, the smallest and most contemptible is a man who thinks he can be happy in heaven while his neighbors, his friends, and some of his family, yes, even his own mother, are suffering in an endless hell.

Oh, ye contemptible, bald-headed, holy chicken-eater! It would require a very large fish to swallow your body; but one of the little wiggletails in a barrel of sour rain-water could swallow your little pinched-up soul without grease, and without difficulty, except the difficulty of finding the poor little dwarf.

I am, for knowledge and truth,

FRANK COOK.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Word to the Wise.

"Never cross a bridge till you come to it,"
My grandmother used to say,
Which means, little folks, that we mustn't fret
Over troubles that may the future beset,
If we've done what we can to-day.

You remember the time-worn fable
Of the farmer's eight-day clock—
How the pendulum counted, with trembling and fear,
The number of times it must tick in a year,
And then stood as still as a stock,

Till, aided by friendly counsel,
It decided it would not shirk
The duty that plainly before it lay,
Because, at some very distant day,
It might be too tired to work.

So, little folks, liv in the present;
Daily strive to be useful and glad,
For when you are old you will find this out:
That many a trouble you've worried about
Is one you hav never had. —Anon.

Biographical.

A BRAVE MAN.

Prominent upon the pages of history, back to the remotest antiquity, stands forth the record of great and daring deeds accomplished on the burning battlefields of war. Many are the dauntless heroes whose names crown and illumin the pages of American history, conspicuous among which is the name of Baron de Kalb, the brave foreigner whose generous and patriotic spirit impelled him to come to America and aid our people in their struggle for independence.

John, Baron de Kalb, was born in Bavaria, June 29, 1721, and in early life joined the French army. In 1777 he came to the United States, and was made a major-general by Congress. He fought gallantly throughout the war of the Revolution, rendering valuable services. The day before the disastrous battle of Camden, several officers, who had received orders of departure, called upon their good old friend De Kalb, and expressed their deep regret at parting with him. "It is with equal regret, my dear sirs, that I part with you," said De Kalb, "because I feel a presentiment that we part to meet no more." The officers told him that they hoped such would not be the case—that they hoped for better things. "Oh, no," said he, "it is impossible. War is a kind of game, and has its fixed rules, whereby, when we are well acquainted with them, we can pretty correctly tell how the trial will go. To-morrow, it seems to me, the die is to be cast; and, in my judgment, without the least chance on our side. The militia will, I suppose, as usual, play the back game—that is, get out of battle as fast as their legs will carry them. But that, you know, will not do for me. I am an old soldier, and cannot run; and I believe I hav some brave fellows who will stand by me to the last. So, when you hear of our battle, you will probably hear that your old friend De Kalb is at rest."

The officers were deeply affected, and tears came to their eyes. De Kalb saw this; and taking them by the hand, he said with great firmness and a look of animation: "No, no, gentlemen; no emotion for me but that of congratulation. I am happy. The happiness of man is my wish; that happiness I deem inconsistent with slavery. And to avert so great an evil from an innocent people, I will gladly meet the British to-morrow at any odds whatever." The officers departed on the morning of Aug. 15, 1780, leaving the army in a good position near Rugley's Mills, twelve miles from where the enemy lay, which was at Camden. That night, at about 10 o'clock, orders were given to march and surprise the enemy, who had at the same time commenced a march to surprise the Americans. Both armies met unexpectedly at 2 o'clock and began firing on each other. The firing soon ceased, however, and the matter was left to be decided by daylight. A council of war was held, in which De Kalb advised that the army should fall back to Rugley's Mills and wait to be attacked. General Gates did not approve of De Kalb's splendid plan, and even threw out insinuations that it originated in fear; whereupon the brave old De Kalb leaped from his horse, placed himself at the head of his command on foot, and said, "Well, sir, perhaps a few hours will show who are the brave."

Daylight dawned, and soon the British army, "with rattling drums and thundering cannon, came rushing on to the charge," and as De Kalb had predicted, the militia broke, and fled in every direction. Even Gates clapped spurs to his horse, and did not stop until he reached Charlotte, eighty miles from the battlefield. But did De Kalb and his handful of Continentals run? No, they stood firm, and as a certain history says, "more determined valor was never displayed: for though outnumbered more than two to one they sustained the whole British force for more than an hour. Glorying in the bravery of his Continentals, De Kalb towered before them like a pillar of fire. But, alas! what can valor do against equal valor, aided by such fearful odds? While bending forward to animate his troops, the brave old veteran received eleven wounds. Fainting with loss of blood, he fell to the ground, while Britons and Americans were killed over him, as they furiously strove to destroy, or to defend. De Kalb died, as he had lived, the unconquered friend of liberty. When an English officer condoled with him for his misfortune, he replied, 'I thank you, sir, for your generous sympathy; but I die the death I always prayed for; the death of a soldier, fighting for the rights of man.'"

He was buried near where his last battle was fought. Many years after, when the great Washington visited Camden, he eagerly inquired for the grave of De Kalb. It was shown to him. Gazing upon it thoughtfully, he exclaimed, with a deep sigh, "So, there lies the brave De Kalb—the generous stranger who came from a distant land to fight our battles, and to water with his blood the tree of liberty! Would to God he had lived to share its fruits." GEO. J. REMSBURG.

Children Discoverers.

As in many other cases of discovery, that of the telescope appears to hav been the result of a playful accident. Several stories are told about it, but they are all similar. The one most generally accepted tells how, about the year 1590, over three hundred years ago, the children of Zachariah Jansen, a spectacle-maker residing at Middleburg, Holland, were playing one day in their father's workshop and observed that when they held between their fingers two spectacle-glasses, one some distance before the other, and looked through them at the weathercock of the church, it seemed inverted, but very much nearer to them and greatly increased in size. Their father, when his attention was called, saw that one of the glasses was convex and the other concave. He made experiments, and ended by fixing such glasses in wooden tubes a few inches long and selling them for curiosities.

Another account tells us how one Lipperscheim discovered the telescope in a similar manner. Descartes, however, a contemporary, givs the credit to James Metius, a glass-cutter in Holland, whose brother, a professor in mathematics and a maker of burning-glasses and mirrors, hit upon the discovery in the same way that Jansen's children are said to hav done.

Improving.

Few words hav more good meaning than the word "improving." Its first definition is, growing better. We think of a sick friend and how glad we feel that the loved one is improving, the disease leaving, the ease coming back, danger fleeing and health returning.

Then there is an improvement in character, the leaving off of bad ways and the doing of better things.

Improving in studies, becoming more learned, educated, and wise.

We also improve land, make it richer and more productiv.

Improve seeds by selecting the best year by year.

All improvements come by slow degrees.

A bad, wicked person cannot improve into a good, true, and just one all at once.

It takes time to form bad habits and time to improve and grow good ones. But each step gained makes the next one easier and we improve more and more rapidly.

There is always room for improvement, so we hav the pleasure of knowing that we can keep on improving as long as we liv.

AUNT ELMINA.

Correspondence.

ARCH BEACH, April 20, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: That is the way most of the letters begin, so I will begin mine that way.

My mother takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I like to read the Children's Corner, especially the letters; they are so nice. I am twelve years old, and liv on a farm, but I hav never been to school; the school is so far from here I cannot go to it, so my mother buys books and I study at home. My mother, all my sisters and brothers, and myself went to a lecture at Arch Beach on the 3d of March, by Mr. S. P. Putnam. We all thought it was fine, but I think it was too much for some of them, for right in the middle of the lecture they got up and left the room and did not return till the lecture was over. My mother bought a book written by Mr. R. G. Ingersoll; the title was "Interviews on Talmage." I read it through and liked it very much. I like all Mr. Ingersoll's works.

Well, my letter is getting pretty long, so I will bring it to a close. Hoping to see this in print, but fearing the waste-basket, I remain, Ever your friend,

CHARLOTTE F. THURSTON.

[Write again, Charlotte, and tell us all about the farm.—ED. C. C.]

NEILLSVILLE, WIS., May 1, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: Being a constant reader of the Corner and the good old TRUTH SEEKER, I thought I too would write you a few lines.

I hav seen but very few letters from Wisconsin in the Corner, and am very sorry to note that fact.

I enjoy reading the Corner, and was very much pleased with the talk on Political Economy in the last issue.

I think Miss Ballou is very kind in giving us sketches of that interesting study. I am studying it now, and like it as well, if not better, than any other study I hav had.

George Remsburg's letters are always so kind and interesting, I am always glad when I see there is one in the Corner. His description of his collection of curios was very interesting. I think the book he is now writing will be splendid.

Some time ago, I saw a letter in the Corner from Otto Wettstein, Jr., and I wish every boy and young man of our country could say of himself what he can.

I hav joined the Young Men's Freethought Temperance Society, and now take the Freethinkers' Magazine. It is a splendid paper, and does honor to any reading-table.

Neillsville is rather an orthodox city. There are two thousand inhabitants and five churches. Nearly everyone attends church. We hav had several Liberal lectures given here. Mrs. Mattie Freeman, of Chicago, delivered four two years ago. Mr. John Remsburg delivered three soon after, and Charles Watts gave three about a year ago. Those lectures stirred up the people's thoughts a little, but only for a short time. They soon lost their hold on Freethought, and are again wending their way toward the churches.

We hav had a remarkably fine winter and spring this year. There was no sleighing to speak of, and the roads hav been very dusty. But it has been raining to-day, although it will soon clear off, I think.

I am attending the high school, but will finish one year from next June.

I would like to correspond with some of the readers of the Corner, and shall be pleased to hear from them any time.

I will close now, wishing you much success in your good work.

Yours for mental liberty,

MAY TAPLIN.

[An excellent letter.—ED. C. C.]

Conundrums.

A lady asked a gentleman how old he was. He eccentrically replied, "What you do in everything." What was his answer and his age? Answer: XL (40), excel.

Why were Bulwer Lytton and Dickens the most industrious of novelists? Ans.: Because Bulwer Lytton wrote "Night and Morning," and Dickens wrote "All the Year Round."

Why is a church like a skull with an imperfect phrenological arrangement? Ans.: Because it has only one organ.

What was the exact length of the year 1888? Ans.: One and three eights.

Which travels faster, heat or cold; and why? Ans.: Heat—because you may catch cold.

What is that instrument by which every tooth in your head may be drawn, without pain or perception, provided you only shut your eyes, and keep your mouth open? Ans.: A lead pencil.

Why is a kiss like a properly divided sermon? Ans.: Because it requires an introduction, two heads, and an application.

What was the first banking transaction? Ans.: When Pharaoh received a check on the bank of the Red sea that had previously been crossed by Moses.

What is it that a gentleman has not, never can hav, and yet can giv to a lady? Ans.: A husband.

Why are two young ladies kissing each other like an emblem of Christianity? Ans.: Because they are doing unto each other as they would men should do unto them.

Why was Goliath surprised when David struck him with a stone? Ans.: Because such a thing never entered his head before.

Why are doctors always bad characters? Ans.: Because the worse people are the more they are with them.

Why is a camel a most irascible animal? Ans.: Because he always has his back up.

Why is the world like music? Ans.: Because it is full of sharps and flats.

When does a man impose on himself? Ans.: When he taxes his memory.

Why are good intentions like fainting ladies? Ans.: Because all they want is carrying out.

Why does a duck go under water? Ans.: For divers reasons.

Why does it come out again? Ans.: For sun-dry purposes.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

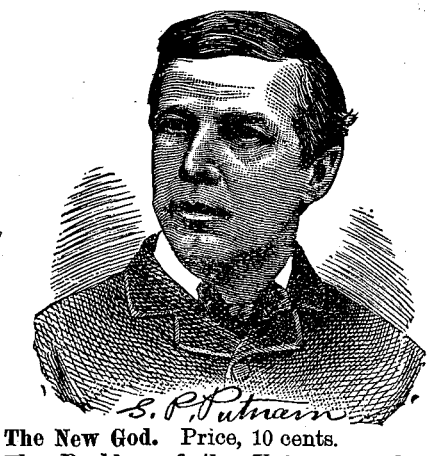
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.



Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

D. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 330 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - - 50 cents.

News of the Week.

WOMAN suffrage has been defeated in the British House of Commons.

THE pope is said to be taking measures to hav the Vatican officially represented at the World's Fair.

A SUNDAY edition of a newspaper has been published in Montreal for the first time. It is being furiously antagonized by the clergy.

JOHN BURNS, the powerful leader of the London workingmen, proposes a strike throughout England for an eight-hour day. In that event, he says, "We may take possession of the mines and the workshops and so on, and do the whole job while we are about it."

THE priest of an Italian town directed his parishioners to keep March 19th, the Feast of St. Joseph, as a religious holiday. The mayor demanded the church keys that the children might be rung in to school as usual. The priest refused, and has been indicted.

IN Germany Jews may be eliminated from the public schools, where they are said by Christians to act as unholy leaven. The minister of public worship has inquired how many pupils are Jews, and of these how many are exempted from religious instruction.

FREDK. DOUGLASS says that if the outrages on his race in the South continue they will become chemists and use bombs like Anarchists. His chief complaint is that a negro accused of rape or other crime is held guilty from the start and given an unfair trial, or lynched without one.

AT Homolicz, in the very religious and superstitious Austrian province of Hungary, a number of decapitated corpses had been found. It has been learned that the men had died natural deaths and the beheadings were committed by bridegrooms of the widows, who thought such measures necessary to protect their married life from spectral disturbance.

THE Catholic clergy of France are urging to opposition at the polls against "the party and men whose program seems to be the destruction of Christianity in France." Freethinkers, they complain, "hav long been trying to sweep religion out of the schools. Hardly a week passes in which divine services are not disturbed and bishops and priests howled down or otherwise interrupted and insulted."

THE superstition of the Tartar population of Russia presents difficulties to the work of relieving the starving. They look on the famin as a visitation of Providence and consider it impious to try to thwart the will of Allah. When they get any money they spend it on trinkets and leave the future to take care of itself. The Christian population hold a corresponding belief, and are equally paralyzed by it.

RUDYARD KIPLING, the famous English novelist, has published unfavorable impressions of New York city under its Catholic-Tammany government. This government, he says, is "a despotism of the alien, by the alien, for the alien, tempered with occasional insurrections of decent folk. In this Christian city they think lightly of human life, buy and sell justice at a certain price openly and without shame, and are content to do without good streets."

THE most eminent members of the negro race hav invoked their fellows to a united appeal to God for deliverance from cruelties practiced by the whites, especially lynchings, which are "frequently perpetrated in the shadow of churches, whose ministers are perhaps overawed by the prevalent passions of their communities, or worse, their consciences are seared, their ears are deaf, and they fail to hear the voice of their brother's blood when it cries from the ground."

THE Parliament of Religions to be held in connection with the World's Fair has been indorsed by Gladstone, Whittier, O. W. Holmes, Frances Willard, General Howard, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishops Ireland and Ryan, etc. The advisory council consists of one hundred of the most eminent divines of Europe and America. Among the objects are: "To indicate the impregnable foundations of Theism, and the reasons for man's faith in immortality, and thus to unite and strengthen the forces adverse to a Materialistic philosophy of the universe. To show how many important truths the various religions hold in common. To set forth, for the permanent record to be published to the world, an accurate and authoritativ account of the present condition and outlook of religion among the leading nations of the earth. To discover, from competent men, what light religion has to throw on the great problems of the present age, especially temperance, labor, education, and wealth and poverty."

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp, 25 cts.

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Women. Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman.

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP,
DARWINISM,
DESIGN ARGUMENT,
EVOLUTION,
JESUS NOT PERFECT,
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet– No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

PRAYER leads to trusting to God what should be sought by our own efforts. A landlady was overheard to pray imploringly that God would fill her house with boarders and bless her dog "Gypsy," but she left her room and scolded so much at her servants that her boarders all left her; and she stuffed her dog into an apoplectic condition.—Robt. C. Adams.

THE results of all actions are equally certain, but not equally known, not equally perceived. If all men knew with perfect certainty that to steal from another was to rob themselvs, larceny would cease. It cannot be said too often that actions are good or bad in the light of consequences, and that a clear perception of consequences would control actions.—Ingersoll.

GOD is the self-consciousness of man. Man created God in his own image. The history of every nation is an unbroken chain of evidence for this contention, and how could it be otherwise? Without knowledge or conception of the absolute, without a direct revelation—the existence of which is alleged, but not proved, by all religious sects—all representations of God, of whatever religion, could but be human; and since man finds in animated nature no higher intellectual being than himself, his ideas of a supreme being could only be abstracted from his own ipse; they must be a self-idealization. Therefore do we find reflected in the religious ideas of every nation, most faithfully and characteristically, the conditions, wishes, hopes, nay, even the intellectual development and special intellectual tendency that obtained among that nation at the time.—Büchner.

A CHRISTIAN city, when Europe was really Christian—before it was permeated with Infidelity as it is now—was revolting and filthy beyond description. Offal and excrement rotted and stank in the streets, and in the city squares dogs and swine snarled and fought with each other for favorit morsels of the mortal remains of decomposing cats, dogs, horses, and even human beings, that sent up their pestilestial stench under the broiling sun or the plashing rain. Then a horrible disease would break out, and in less than a week glut the churchyards with the mortal remains of more than half the citizens. These were the "Black Deaths" and the "Sweating Sicknesses" we hear so much of in medieval history. They were truly Christian visitations, and hurried hundreds of thousands of dirty and ignorant saints right into Abraham's bosom. . . . These plagues and Black Deaths were considered a direct visitation of almighty God. The smug Christian priest enjoined upon his dupes that Jehovah had so afflicted them for their sins, and for a wise purpose, in his gracious goodness! They looked to Jehovah and forgot the heaps of offal rotting in the streets. Instead of appealing to Jesus, they should hav thrown quicklime on the dead dogs; instead of expecting anything from the Holy Ghost, they should hav sprinkled Condy's fluid on their filthy floors; instead of troubling the Virgin Mary, they should hav sent their garments to the laundry.—Saladin in God and His Book.

I HAV attempted to discover some ray of light in the mythological times of China which precede Fohi, but I hav attempted in vain. At the period, however, in which Fohi flourished, which was about three thousand years before the new and common era of our northwestern part of the world, I perceive mild and wise laws already established by a beneficent sovereign. In the laws of that sovereign I see nothing but what is mild, useful, and amiable. I was afterward induced to inspect the code of a small nation, or horde, which arrived about two thousand years after the period we hav been speaking of, from a frightful desert on the banks of the river Jordan, in a country inclosed and bristled with peaked mountains. These laws hav been transmitted down to ourselvs, and are daily held up to us as the model of wisdom. The following are some of them: "Not to eat the pelican, nor the ossifrage, nor the griffin, nor the ixion, nor the eel, nor the hare, because the hare ruminates, and has not its foot cloven." "To exterminate without pity all the unfortunate inhabitants of the land of Canaan, who were not even acquainted with them; to slaughter the whole, to massacre all, men and women, old men, children, and animals, for the greater glory of God." "To sacrifice to the Lord whatever any man shall hav devoted as an anathema to the Lord, and to slay it without the power of ransom." A Jesuit, who was formerly a missionary among the cannibals, at the time when Canada still belonged to the king of France, related to me that once, as he was explaining these Jewish laws to his neophytes, a little impudent Frenchman, who was present at the catechising, cried out: "They are the laws of cannibals!"—Voltaire.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free.

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

FITS—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch st., Phila., Pa.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c. cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The

Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices; $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW," and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

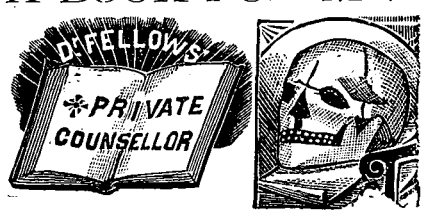
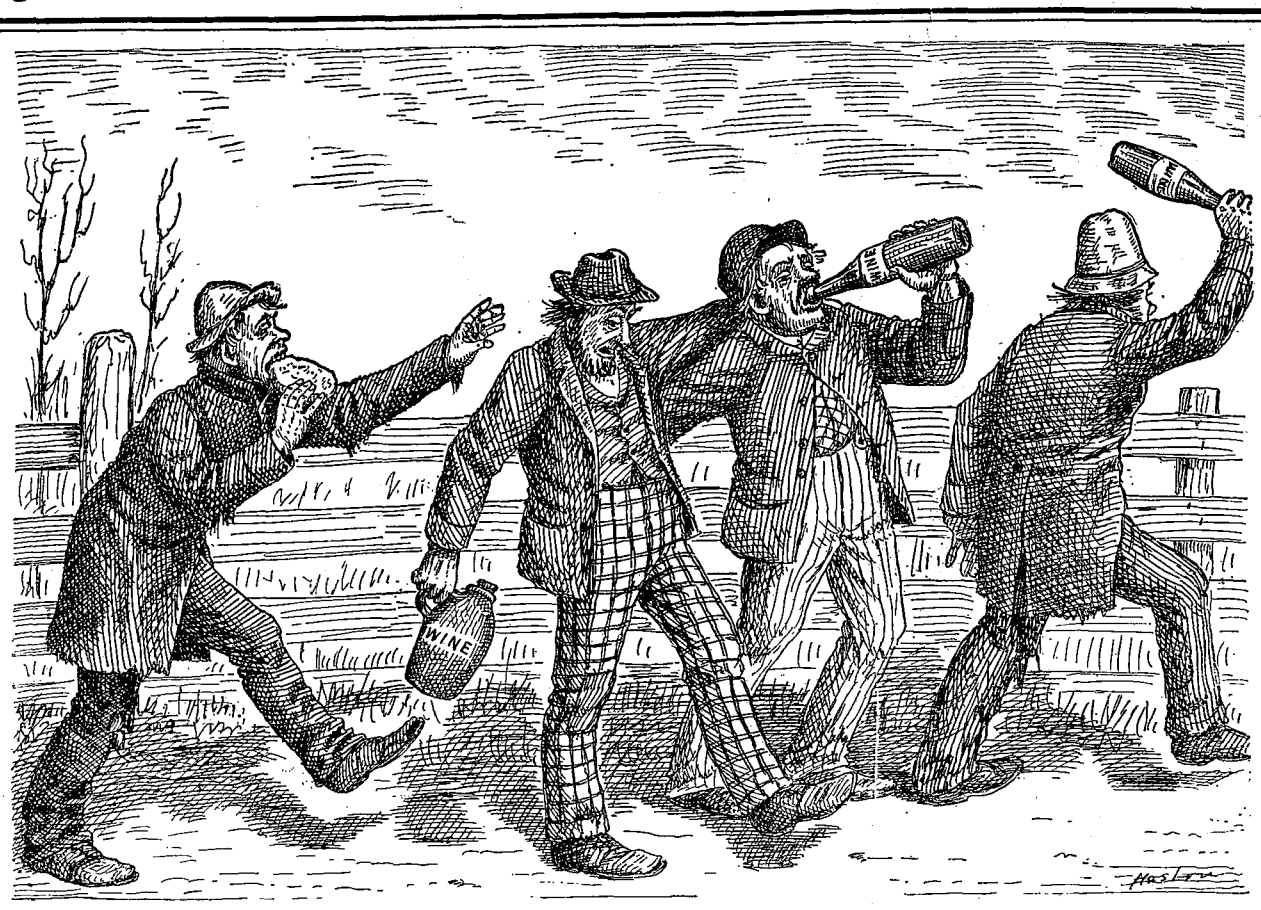
WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WORKS WHICH ARE ACCEPTABLE TO GOD.

Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.—Eccles. ix, 7.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price. 15 cts.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

Those of our readers who have not already signed and obtained signatures to this petition should now cut it out, paste it to a sheet of stout paper, get all the signatures possible, and send it before September 15th to John T. Dickinson, Secretary World's Columbian Commission, Rand-McNally building, Chicago, Ill.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago, who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

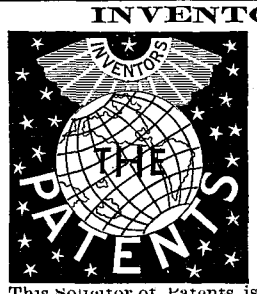
John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.



Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 21 {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 21, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

HYPOCRISY OF WARLIKE CHRISTIAN NATIONS.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Cloots, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF
ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

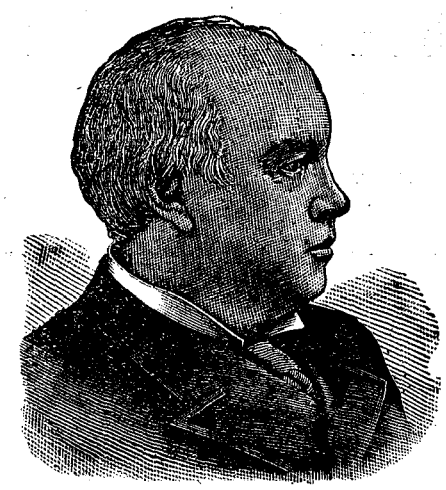
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.



RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper. 25c.; cloth. 50c.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

PAPER. 50 cents: cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 21. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 21, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - MAY 21, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

A Fit Companion to "God and His Book."

Saladin in Agnostic Journal.

Watson Heston, the caricaturist of the New York TRUTH SEEKER, and a colleague who has furnished letter-press to the caricaturist's pictures, hav turned Holy Writ into a species of Don Quixote or Hudibras. Mr. Heston's work is forceful and original in conception, and sufficiently artistic in execution to satisfy all except the objectionably fastidious in perspectiv and outline. Many of the numerous designs are really clever, and replete with much hilarious if irreverent humor. On page 13, for instance, we find a counterfeit presentment of the voice of the Lord walking in the garden in the full of the day. We had always imagined the said voice as a great open mouth, mounted on a pair of Wellington boots, tearing through the garden like a madman with his beard ablaze. But Mr. Heston has a far sublimer Voice than that, shambling along with spindle shanks and big, bare feet, and terribly in-toed. It must be a revelation to many of us that the voice of the Lord God cannot afford boots, and that it is in-toed. On page 23 Cain may be seen trudging off to the land of Nod; and a clumsy-looking yokel he is. The Lord has set a mark upon him, lest any finding him should kill him, and the "mark" is quite obvious on the hinder part of his smock: it is Y. M. C. A. and a horseshoe. But page 17 has the cleverest cartoon in the whole portfolio: it is Adam tilling the ground. He uses a pig for a plow. The snout of the brute is turning up the ground, while the first man holds on by the hindlegs, and the first goat, yoked by a sort of crude harness, drags his porcinity along making the first furrow. Eve, a prize barmaid-looking female, looks jocosely on "over the garden wall." This really talented design requires to be seen to be appreciated. We heartily recommend that the book be brought under the attention of those who hav not been able to descry that biblical sanctity is, after all, only mythological absurdity. We should like to make the volume, in this country, the companion of "God and His Book"—the two productions should work well together. But the difficulty is, in England, American books are considered expensiv, and they are not over-easy to obtain for supply.

Two Stories About It.

The City Mission Monthly for April is filled with an account of the wonderful conversion work Mr. Hermann Warszawiak is alleged to be doing among the Jews of this city. Mr. Schauffler, the editor, calls it "the record of a wonderful work that God has put into our hands." Not for a thousand years, he says, "has God shown such favor to anyone preaching to Jews as he has shown to Mr. Warszawiak," who is described as a model of piety, a confounder of rabbis, and a veritable St. Paul in fervor and eloquence. His piety and exemplary life are especially dwelt upon, and Mr. Warszawiak tells the same of himself.

In the Jewish Messenger of May 6th appears an affidavit by Albert Klopfer, of 128 East 7th street, this city. Mr. Klopfer says that he was converted to Christianity by Mr. Freshman, was baptized, and given a position as assistant missionary at $5 per week, free lodging and clothes. He was, he says, under the impression that he would eventually grasp the idea of true Christianity, but eventually realizing the hypocrisy of Mr. Freshman and his converts, his appreciation of his new faith vanished. He has known these converts, he asserts, to come directly from ill-repute resorts and deliver "touching testimonies at divine worship." Some of them he found playing cards in a saloon on Sunday. Of Mr. Warszawiak, so highly extolled in the City Mission Monthly, he says:

"Thus some time in the beginning of last February I followed Missionary Hermann Warszawiak to the 'White Elephant' on Broadway, where I saw him staking money on various racehorses. His familiarity with all the slang of a jockey indicates that he was no novice at the horse-race. When expostulating with him by calling his attention to his position he holds at the city mission, he heartily laughed at my apparent piety; he said, since the money he receives for his mission work emanates from Scotland and not from America, he is responsible to no one here for his actions. I then called his attention to the confidence reposed in him by Drs. Hall and Schauffler. To this Mr. Warszawiak replied with epithets that will not stand public gaze."

Readers of the Mission Monthly ought to hav both sides of this matter presented to them. If Mr. Warszawiak is such a wolf in sheep's clothing it might affect their opinion of his religion and lead them to doubt its alleged beneficial moral effect.

But one thing seems certain: that of all the religious humbugs maintained by the Christian church none is more palpable than the Jew-converting missions.

On Religion and Politics.

The following is from a fellow-townsman, and his political inquiries are, therefore, pertinent. The answers may also enlighten others:

"NEW YORK CITY, May 3, 1892.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Dear Friend of Truth and Reason: I am an admirer of your logic, and get your paper as often as I can. I want to ask you a few questions on subjects in which I am in doubt. What is heresy? Can a difference of opinion that does not involve life be a crime? Is it ignorance that makes the Catholic church think they hav a right to control government affairs in this or any other country? Does civilization owe anything to any particular creed, and if so, what creed? I also want your advice for next election. I hav considered myself a Jeffersonian Democrat, and respect the Constitution, but I am afraid Democracy seems to be degenerating. Do you think a man can be a true Democrat and a Romanist? Do you think the Catholic church has control of the liquor traffic, or of Tammany Hall? Can you explain, in the name of reason, how Democracy and Romanism ever came to be united?

"Yours for truth, reason, and liberty,

J. MACMULLIN."

The word heresy means, originally, a choosing for one's self. It is especially applied to choosing a religion for one's self, and is an opinion taken in opposition to the generally-received opinion or doctrin. In this country the name heretic is given to one who disbelieves and opposes the Christian religion. But it is a word which various sects, assuming to be orthodox, apply to others. The Catholic applies it to all Protestants; the Protestants apply it to Freethinkers; the Mormons apply it to the gentiles, and so on. In Turkey heresy would consist of rejecting Mohammedanism; in India the non-believer in Buddhism is a heretic; in China the one who rejects Confucianism. It is all a matter of taste, locality, and religion.

Difference of opinion, or the expression of that opinion, upon any subject cannot be, naturally, in itself, a crime. It has been made so by statute, as the laws against "blasphemy" make that a crime. But to classify it as a crime, like theft or murder, is morally wrong, and is the work of religious bigotry. It is not criminal, but meritorious and truly moral, to form opinions for one's self, regardless of what our savage ancestors thought or what the traditionists of to-day think.

The leaders of the Catholic church are bigoted men, who probably really think that they get the right to govern from God. The people who believe the claim are ignorant, or they would know the claim is false. As a matter of fact the church keeps its people ignorant—that is, limits their education—because it fears that with real education would come independence and a revolt against the church.

We do not know of any particular creed to which civilization owes anything—unless it be the Quaker creed, which restrains from religious persecution.

No man can be a true democrat and a Romanist, for democracy means equality of the people, and Romanism means a theocracy or government of the many by the church, which is the very opposit of equality of conditions. The church teaches that God made some to govern and some to be governed, and that the lowly governed must be contented with their place in life. In this city the Roman church controls Tammany Hall, because its members are chiefly Irish Catholics, and it controls the liquor-dealers because the larger part of the dealers are Catholics. Tammany Hall is a frightful incubus on this city, and back of Croker and the other "bosses"—Gilroy, Martin, and Edward S. Stokes—is Archbishop Corrigan. In a political contest in this city a few years ago Tammany supremacy was in danger and the priests were ordered to tell their parishioners to vote for Tammany's candidate. We hav this direct from one of the parishioners who was so directed. And when Mr. Corrigan was bishop of Newark he sent a letter to all his priests telling them to direct all Catholics how to vote, and the letter was printed. It is difficult to get direct and positiv evidence against the Roman machine, but that it controls the Tammany part of New York's politics is as sure as that "Boss" Croker and Mayor Grant are Catholics.

But Democracy and Romanism are not generally united, though the Romanists are usually Democrats. There is, however, a considerable Romanist element in this state which plays to the Republicans, which shows that the church uses both parties. She would be and is all things to all men, so far as she can gain power and steal a dollar from the public treasury. Our advice in politics in this city is to oppose Tammany Hall first, last, and all the time.

The "Faribault Plan."

Some months ago we called attention to the aggression of the Catholics in Faribault and Stillwater, Minn., upon the public school, and the idiotic supineness of the Protestant element in not only permitting it, but actually aiding them in making Catholics of the school-children. The aggression was this: Faribault is a town in Archbishop Ireland's archdiocese. There was a parochial school there in charge of the Sisters of St. Dominic. Mr.

Ireland bethought himself of a plan whereby he could get the people to support the school and it would still remain practically a Roman institution. He leased this school to the town for a year, on condition that the Sisters of St. Dominic should be teachers, but that they should only instruct in secular learning during school hours. After school hours the Catholic children remain and receive religious instruction. The burden of supporting the school is thus taken from the Catholics of the place. Shortly after the inauguration of the new order of things at Faribault Archbishop Ireland introduced the plan at Stillwater, another place in his archdiocese.

It would seem that this plan ought to satisfy the Romanists, whatever others might think of it. They had the school maintained for them; they had the pictures of their saints and popes on the walls, with which to impress the children; their teachers were in the uniform of their faith, and had hundreds of opportunities daily to speak for Catholicism, and also to induce the children of careless parents to remain to the Romanist exercises. One would think that they had enough.

Some of the churchmen, however, did not think so, and objected because the parochial school was not maintained intact. They said among other things that the scheme was unqualifiedly uncatholic, because it precluded giving religious and secular instruction at the same time. Education that is not tempered with religious instruction, they declared, is unchristian.

The quarrel was taken to Rome, and the decision has just been rendered. Accompanying it is a letter from the Propaganda Fide to the American bishops, setting forth the position of the church as regards educational matters. The holy see, says the letter, always has been solicitous for the healthy education of the youth, especially in the United States, as has been evidenced by the instructions given in 1875. Following them, the third Baltimore council, anxious to preserve the youth from vice and error, wisely resolved to open schools in connection with each church and to teach in them to Catholic children letters, fine arts, religion, and manners. Some persons believe that the action of Archbishop Ireland in the two celebrated cases of Faribault and Stillwater was irreconcilable with the resolutions of the Baltimore council, and blamed him for it, while others approved of it. The cardinals, after pondering deeply upon the subject, and diligently examining and considering Archbishop Ireland's action in every respect, at the same time weighing the particular circumstances, ways, and conditions of the arrangements under the Faribault-Stillwater plan, gave on April 21st this judgment, which the pope on the same day adopted.

The judgment is that while this special case can be tolerated, the plan must be condemned, and not extended. "The union of all the forces of the church is necessary," the letter says, "to fight the errors of the church's enemies and to surmount the difficulties and obstacles which these enemies place in the way. The cardinals hav resolved that the American bishops in council shall study diligently how many Catholic children in attendance at the public schools should go to the parochial schools. The Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda hopes that the bishops will consider diligently and find the best remedies for the present difficulties. Once calm dissension, and, with filial veneration and concord of spirit, all will defend and increase the Catholic name."

The gist of all this is that because in Faribault and Stillwater the church cannot do better it will accept what it has got, but that other places may not use the plan, but instead must hav schools where religion and arithmetic can be taught together. It means that the decree of the council of Baltimore, that all parishes must hav a parochial school within two years, is to be enforced. That it is so understood is shown by Archbishop Corrigan's remarks on reading it: "The decree says that Archbishop Ireland's plan 'can be tolerated.' Toleration, however, does not signify permission. For instance, the Catholic church tolerates divorce among the members of the Greek church, which is in union with the holy see, but the holy see does not permit divorce in the Catholic church. In a few words, the decision means that the Faribault plan cannot be extended in this country, and that the parochial school system is the only authorized one for the Catholics of America. The Sacred Congregation has taken into consideration the peculiar circumstances in the towns of Faribault and Stillwater, and says that Archbishop Ireland's plan in those places is not condemned, but is only tolerated. Inasmuch as Archbishop Ireland's intention was to hav his scheme introduced all over this country, and as the holy see refuses to permit him to do so, the Faribault plan has been condemned. The question is settled finally by the decision of the Propaganda."

The Roman church has made wonderful gains in strength in this country within the past few years, and the decision shows that the Roman authorities hav confidence in gaining still more. They do not intend to stop short of having separate sectarian schools, all supported by the state.

The Sabbatarians who are trying to hav the World's Fair closed on Sundays are not a particularly honest lot. During the month they hav turned in to the Columbian commission petitions from Ohio and Michigan "representing" in each state several hundred thousand more people than the last census givs the state. The excess of petitions over population in Michigan was eight hundred thousand. They hav also filed a petition from England signed by the bishops and scaly old members of the House of Lords.

In an interview with a woman in this city whom Dr. Parkhurst has had convicted of keeping a disorderly house she said: "I was brought up in the Presbyterian church, and that's Dr. Parkhurst's own. I was baptized at Newburg by a Presbyterian minister. My father and mother were both members of the Presbyterian church. My grandfather was a Scotch Covenanter. He cut his arm and signed the covenant with his blood. I go to church. Why not? I hav always been a strict Presbyterian. I contribute to churches and to parish work, and I help the poor." Religion doesn't seem to hav done her much good, morally.

The result of the conversion of the nativs of Uganda, East Africa, to Protestantism and Catholicism is a war between the two sects. And when these colored Christians of Africa enter upon a theological controversy the authorities which settle the dispute are guns and knives. The Zanzibar correspondent of the London Standard reports that the Protestant chiefs hav sold many Catholics into slavery, and that the Catholics, under a missionary bishop, are preparing to prove Catholicism to be the only true religion by shooting the Protestants. Thus is the scripture fulfilled that "I came not to bring peace but a sword."

Some amenities of a Methodist conference: During a discussion Dr. Buckley, of the Advocate, had some trouble in securing recognition from Bishop Fowler, who occupied the chair. When he finally succeeded, he said: "I am reminded of the scripture, 'I am escaped like a bird from the snare of the Fowler.'" As soon as the laugh subsided, the bishop replied: "And the same scripture givs thanks for escape from 'the noisome pestilence.'" Roars of laughter followed this repartee, to which, when he had a chance, Dr. Buckley replied: "It is clear, then, that I am not the pestilence, for you hav not escaped from me." And ministers, especially bishops, are alleged to be gentlemen!

The second annual session of the School of Applied Ethics will be held at Plymouth, Mass., July 6th to August 17th. The courses of lectures will be on the History of Religions, Economics, and Ethics. The principal lecturers will be evangelical and Jewish professors and doctors, and the papers will be a mixture of religious mugwumpery and scholastic pedantry. The school is willing that the Infidels should advertise them, but we know of no instance when a Freethought speaker has been invited to address an applied ethical audience. Complete programs can be had by applying to the secretary, 118 South 12th street, Philadelphia, Pa.

One of the workers against Sunday legislation stationed at Washington says that many Congressmen say to him that they wish those who are opposed to religious legislation would make their opposition known by petitioning to Congress, as they are being very strongly urged to pass Sunday legislation, and do not know how they can avoid it unless protests come in against it. Many of them are opposed to such legislation, but as representativs of their constituents they feel that they are bound to carry out their wishes as far as possible. Some of the Congressmen hav written to their constituents that they were opposed to such legislation, and urged them to send in petitions as rapidly as possible. Petitions and letters are the best means of influencing official action, and we hope that our readers will bear this in mind in regard to the World's Fair.

A statement of fact which the Prohibitionist will do well to think upon is this from the Flushing, L. I., Evening Journal of last Monday: "Nearly every saloon in Flushing had its side and front doors locked and its windows shuttered yesterday when Captain Hance and the village police went the rounds. And this morning there is a rumor that Sunday here was another day of drouth; but it is only a rumor, a contradiction being borne out by the testimony of five 'drunks' who came before Justice Smith in the town hall at 9 o'clock. Captain Hance says: 'There is no use talking, the more you restrict men from drinking the more they want it, and the more drunks you get. The town hall is full of men we locked up yesterday, and yet to all appearances the saloons were closed. In two years I havn't seen as many drunken men about the village as I saw yesterday—it's because you tell them they can't hav it.'"

Of Colonel Ingersoll and his suit against the Rev. A. C. Dixon, the Clermont, O., Courier says: "Dixon's attack was probably based on the fact that Ingersoll has a very decided feeling of hostility and contempt for Comstock and his meddlesome methods in invading private homes and seizing upon their statuary and paintings not sufficiently draped to suit the modest vision of the great American meddlesome mountebank. Ingersoll is a man; all man; he does not profess to be a saint nor an angel, and aside from his peculiar views on religion, is one of the greatest men of this day, a man of broad, deep brain, of the largest and highest reasoning capacity; a man of the deepest, truest sympathy for the sorrows of his fellow-man; liberal in his views, charitable in his conclusions, and lavish with his wealth; a man with the highest moral sense, and, as is believed by all the world, of the utmost purity of mind. The charge otherwise is indeed libel; but it is to be regretted that he stoops to notice so small an insect as the one that has assailed him, and who by contact with so great a light, will for the first time in his life attract public attention. The mind that conceived the noble words to the soldiers at Indianapolis, and thousands of other words as loyal and eloquent, is incapable of an impure thought, and the voice that uttered them could not giv expression to a personal attack upon his fellow-man."

A day or two before Colonel Ingersoll lectured in Cincinnati the Inquirer of that city said: "The appearance of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll in Music Hall Sunday night is noteworthy for many reasons, and means an epoch in the history of that great monument to the philanthropy of the late Reuben Springer. A tremendous crowd will greet the celebrated Agnostic, whose oratorical fame is world-wide; but when it is noted that it will be the first time that other than a minister has lectured in Music Hall on a Sunday night, his appearance is a departure that possibly will not suit the church-going people. A significant fact, though, is that on this identical spot, nearly sixteen years ago, lacking but a few days, Robert G. Ingersoll sprang into fame at a single bound. He was hardly known outside of Peoria and some Illinois districts before that time. Then his famous speech nominating James G. Blaine for the presidency was made, and had not some well-known Ohio politicians, wearing the Hayes badges, accidentally (?) turned out the gas, compelling an immediate adjournment, the 'Plumed Knight,' as Ingersoll called him, would certainly hav received an overwhelming ballot in his favor. This was in the old Music Hall, or, possibly better, that known as the 'Sængerfest Hall,' and the place where Colonel Ingersoll will stand as he delivers his lecture Sunday night on 'Myths and Miracles' is almost identical with the position he occupied when he gave life to a speech that will liv through the ages. Cincinnati may well be proud of the honor of being the city in which such a gifted orator first revealed his grandeur of speech, and that he is appreciated here is evident from the advance sale of seats. On Agnostic subjects Ingersoll stands as an advanced leader, and the greatest of all in his championship of personal freedom and religious liberty. Freethinkers all over the world look for his utterances with impatience, for never has he spoken but with telling effect, and with new illustrations and word-pictures."

The Pittsburgh Law and Order League is composed of extremely pious Sabbatarians, but several of its agents are no more moral than they should be. One of them, accused of beating his wife, has jumped his bail; another is awaiting trial upon a criminal charge; while another, a creature named Flynn, alias Magee, is in custody awaiting the result of a criminal operation performed upon a woman whom he calls his wife. These are the sort of cattle that all private societies seem to employ. The Society for the Prevention of Crime agent figured conspicuously in court in this city the other day on his own account, and two of the agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children are charged with attempting to blackmail the keeper of a disreputable house. And if Dr. Parkhurst is to be believed—and his reputation for veracity is good, whatever may be thought of his doings—the regular police are not much better. In a lecture last week he recounted some more of his finds as he wandered around town, and this is what he said about our municipal police: "I wonder if you hav watched some things that hav transpired recently. I am going to say a little about them, so that you may see how evident it is that our municipal authorities —I am speaking now of the police department—stand in a league with the criminal classes. There is no question of it. You can't bore down into the heart of things for weeks as I hav and not know it. The police department is in league with the criminal classes, and Tammany's exchequer is filled as the result of that league. Destroy the excise sham, nail up the gambling hells and the brothels, and Tammany's exchequer would be empty. Awhile ago I was visiting a house in the course of some nocturnal explorations. We came to the foot of the stairs leading to a temple of Venus. A policeman stood near the door. We went in, and while there the door-bell rang. One of my friends was in a room nearer the door than that in which I was, and he heard the talk between the girl who answered the ring and the person who rang. It was the policeman taking care of the house. Well, that's the kind of police you've got. And there is a concrete demonstration that the police and the criminals understand each other. A few nights ago there was a raid—four disorderly houses in a certain street were raided. It had the air of thoroughness, but twenty-one other houses are close to those four and they were not molested. Saturday night there was a raid upon gambling-houses in the Tenderloin precinct—and there's a good deal that's funny about it if you know what's back of it. Superintendent Byrnes issued eighteen warrants, supposed to include all the houses in that district. It was going to be a clean sweep. The raid took place, and the papers hav told you how clean each place was found —like the house in scripture that was swept and garnished. Well, one of these warrants was for Daly's place. There was a gentleman at my house about the time the raid was going on. He had been out to gamble a little and went to Daly's, but they wouldn't let him in. They said: 'We know you and would like to let you in, but we are doing nothing now. In fact, we hav received instructions from the authorities to keep very quiet till the storm blows over.' But they told him of a place where they were temporarily accommodating their customers, and this man went there and lost all he had. That place was in the same precinct and it was not touched by the raid. There is some comedy in that." In view of these things it might be well to let the criminals run things awhile. They could scarcely do worse than our present "guardians."

In the East.

News and Notes.

Once more in New York, with its wonderful variety and magnificence—the metropolis, unequaled in its growth, its wealth, its splendor of life.

Dr. Foote, Jr., givs me a long drive beyond Central park, along Riverside, to Haarlaem, etc. I am simply astonished at the vast changes. Since I first came to New York fifteen years ago, a city of over half a million has grown up on what was then a wilderness. Masses of elegant buildings seem to spring up like magic. The brilliancy and magnitude of the prospects can scarcely be described. The bay, Long Island sound, the river, the forests, blue hills, innumerable sails, the gilded trains with wreaths of smoke, the broad highways checkered with splendid equipages, the verdant fields, gorgeous flowers, beautiful swards, all these in a panorama miles in extent, swift, exhilarating, manifold, make the heart beat with hope and triumph, for man has made this world joy and beauty and far surpassed every glory fabled of the ancient gods.

Again I am before the Liberal Club. Famous organization, where Greeley, Parton, and Stephen Pearl Andrews hav shed their luster; and where every thought in the universe has been expressed; where there is nothing new and nothing old; where every crank has had its turn, and every reform its hour; where every humbug has been drenched with criticisms, every opinion assailed, every good abolished, and every truth has had to stand naked and fight its way. Well do I remember the brilliant evenings passed in this intellectual circle, the imperial combats, the fiery clash of argument, wit, sarcasm, reason, sentiment, denial, affirmation, in quick succession. Here is where one learns the splendid aphorism of Aristotle, "To doubt is the beginning of wisdom;" here is where one also learns not only to hold his own opinions at the point of the sword, and in no coward's castle; but also with a decent regard for the opinions of his fellow-men, no matter how different they are from his own. I do not know of any other city where the Liberal Club could hav flourished, and been such a powerful instrument of education. Dr. Foote, Jr., and others, still maintain the prestige of the club.

It is like bringing coals to Newcastle to lecture on any subject before this cosmopolitan institution, but there is plenty of intellectual hospitality; and its critical audiences giv every man a chance. If he has anything to say, he can say it; but it won't do to indulge in much oratory or rhetoric. Words are at a discount, ideas are welcome.

I was pleased to meet old-time workers—Wakeman, Chamberlain, Dr. R. A. Gunn and Mrs. Gunn, Dr. Weeks, Macdonald of THE TRUTH SEEKER, etc.

It was my fortune to meet for a few moments our magnificent leader, Colonel Ingersoll; a leader by attraction and not by command, whom we love, not simply honor—for it is not genius only, but humanity, that illuminates. I cannot help relating one little incident that happened while I was in his office, so beautiful, so suggestiv of better days to come—not of "Christian charity," but of universal brotherhood. A poor devil, in prison for twenty-two years—once a soldier under our flag, who in a moment of passion, and perhaps in self-defense, had killed a man, and been sentenced for life, wrote, in his plain way, to Ingersoll, asking that something might be done to giv him liberty after his long and terrible imprisonment. It was a pathetic letter. The author had no friends. He had written to many people, but not an answer had ever been received to giv one ray of comfort in his loneliness and agony. Out of his busy life Ingersoll immediately answered the poor fellow's appeal, the only one who for twenty-two years had taken any notice of the captiv, who undoubtedly was far more unfortunate than criminal. How many a Christian had passed him by. The first word that would giv him new life, a hope for the future, came from the pen of the Infidel, whose table was crowded with messages from all parts of the world. The rich man, and the prosperous man, and the big corporation might be unanswered; but the trembling prisoner receives a message worth its weight in gold, flooding the gloomy bars with light, and giving hope after years of desolation. Of course I visit the TRUTH SEEKER office, where the wheels of reform are moving and the "Bible Pictures" adorn the sunny windows.

Saturday I pursue my Pilgrim's way to Boston. New York, big and splendid though it is, cannot take away a single glory of Boston: Boston is still necessary to human happiness. It is as neat and cosy as heaven itself, but without the monotony of harp-playing. The "Great White Throne" is translated into the common, and public gardens. I never want to get any nearer heaven than Boston.

It is awfully quiet on Sunday, though. The Puritan spirit prevails. Not a mouse is stirring, you might say. Even the railroad stations are locked up. You can't get shaved or hav your boots blacked. A drink is out of the question, and it is difficult even to get a breakfast.

Along toward afternoon the people begin to stir, and something of the liveness of a week-day appears. There are many Liberals in Boston. At 3 o'clock the Investigator Hall is pretty well filled, and I never found an audience that would giv one more buoyancy than this. They just take you up and carry you along and you feel at once that you are in the swim, and it is the easiest thing in the world to talk to the people. They see the point you are driving at. So I had a delightful hour in this grand Paine Building where so much has been done for liberty.

I must needs go out with Washburne to his beautiful home in Revere, where he writes his editorials, and it is no wonder they are breezy and good with such delicious environments to exalt the mind and giv it sparkling energy. The sea and land mingle in manifold loveliness. The home itself is artistic, and Mrs. Washburne, and Mabel the daughter, add the beauty which makes man do his level best. I don't wonder that Washburne keeps the flags flying so bravely and brilliantly to all the winds of heaven. Dr. Noyes, who has written some sharp, effectiv pamphlets against church power, was with us also, and there was indeed a blazing campfire in the Infidel quarters.

Boston is crowded with reformers. I hav met Appleton, who puts a good deal of reform into the pages of the Globe, which has a circulation of one hundred and sixty-three thousand; Stillman, in the lists of battle and defying fate; E. C. Walker and Lillian Harman Walker, bravely working away; Capt. Robert C. Adams, of Montreal; the Tiltons, of infinit courage and devotion; Schumm, formerly of the Radical Review; Geo. N. Hill, of the Era of Man; Mr. Rockwood, who was chairman of our meeting, etc. Heywood comes out of prison Friday, to-morrow, and his friends will giv a welcome at the Quincy Home. I meet with W. B. Clark and other friends of Worcester, Mass., and hope some time to awake that staid old town with the sounds of an Infidel lecture, for over forty years ago I used to liv in that town and go to church and Sunday-school, and I want to hav a little revenge on that orthodox community for making my childhood so unhappy. I also hav the pleasure of making acquaintance with John C. Hatch, who has given forth some vivid translations of the Old and New Testaments, which are true to fact, but not conduciv to piety. They are interesting.

Paine Memorial Hall greets the sunshine gloriously. The Investigator fronts the world, as it has fronted the world for more than half a century. Ernest Mendum and John A. O'Malley, with Washburne, keep it illustrious with its old-time vigor and excellence. None the less, however, do we miss those fearless soldiers, Seaver and Mendum, who through long eventful years so wonderfully maintained our cause, to whom is due the grateful tribute of millions who to-day are happier because these men toiled and sacrificed for human liberty. Standing upon the scene of their patient and courageous labors, with marvelous memories of New England and the republic thronging the mind, the history of half a century more magnificent than any in the world's progress, I can but thank these splendid men for their heroic action, for the gifts they hav given to me and to all mankind—more truth, more freedom, more justice. I thank them for making the way more broad, more open to advancing humanity—that in dark and perilous hours they hav been at the front—that they hav left a name and fame in which we can rejoice—that out of the fruit of their toils we can gather hope and courage for the work of to-day, and press forward to fulfillment of their noble dreams.

Boston, May 12, 1892. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"The Infidel's Couch"—Infidels and Infidelity.

At the Old South church, last evening, Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad selected for the subject of his discourse "The Infidel's Couch." His text was: "For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it, and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." He said:

"An ancient proverb representing painful unrest. One of the methods of inflicting pain in Inquisitorial times was, to commit one to solitary confinement in an apartment so small that by no possible adjustment could the body assume a normal condition. Distortion and deformation result from contracted positions and conditions. There is nothing about pain attractiv. We are always trying to avoid it yet ever fulfilling the conditions which insure it. Infidelity is the contracted compartment denying to the soul the conditions of comfort and progress. It is the miserable couch suggesting rest but utterly incapable of contributing comfort. Its covering suggests the importance of hiding conscious imperfections, but its narrowness renders it incapable of hiding the heart's recognized blemishes. 'Wanted' is written in bold type upon every heart. The very constitution of man may be represented in one of its aspects by an outstretched hand, and in another, by an interrogation. The soul compelled to recline on the couch of Infidelity necessarily becomes distorted, deformed, dwarfed, and ultimately a suggestion merely of what might hav been. I wish to consider with candor and all earnestness the intellectual, ethical, and purely spiritual needs of the individual, and suggest the impossibility of these needs being met by any creed of negations, or gospel of despair, such as forms the couch of Infidelity when pressed to its necessary conclusions.

"The intellectual needs are legion. We must hav rational explanations and solutions to the questions and problems that hav to do with this life and the life to come. Infidels talk of the intellectual difficulties of Christianity, but the difficulties of Infidelity intellectually considered are insurmountable. They hav the gigantic task of producing change from the unchangeable, motion from absolute rest, life from the dead, sense from the senseless, purpose from chance, intelligence from the unintelligent, spirit from crude matter. Eminent biologists, in a report before the royal commission on vivisection, declare that science finds no explanation of life. Consciousness of personal responsibility can neither be argued nor ridiculed out of existence, yet Infidelity finds no explanation; only denies. A couch of denials is too short, and a covering of denials is too narrow, to meet our deepest wants.

"Intricate social relations of humanity demand the introduction of a principle of adjustment, but Infidelity offers nothing.

"As a spiritual being we see man at his best. But just here, where the wants are greatest, Infidelity is completely dumb. Not a spiritual aspiration is satisfied by the propositions of Infidelity. That noblest emotion within the soul, worshipful adoration, is despised and ignored. That which is most venerated is the result of a disordered fancy or a perversion of mental powers. Are we created so that our holiest desires must go forever ungratified? Are we to be mocked with longings after the true, the right, the good, the perfect, and never to be able to come to a knowledge of these things?

"The tendency of Infidelity is pessimistic. With a pessimistic philosophy, joy and good cheer for the mass of humanity would be impossible. Now contrast all this with the sweetness, the beauty, and the blessedness offered in the gospel of Christ. Here we hav the truth touching man at his highest and lifting him to the celestial summits for which his soul yearns. Intellectual wants are met, ethical needs are supplied, and as a spirit we hav explanation both as to origin and destiny.

"Here we hav principles for the guidance of conduct that satisfy the conscience. That which is spoken is with authority. It is the simplest, clearest, most soul-satisfying presentation of the truth our souls demand for true satisfaction.

"Infidelity gets rid of God, the atonement, duty, but at the same time it gets rid of salvation, satisfaction, peace. It fights its own salvation and progress at every point. Christianity and Infidelity look through the same perspectiv glass, but Infidelity from the wrong end, and thus things are minimized which ought to be magnified. If you want restlessness, peacelessness, hopelessness, then put your trust in the denials of Infidelity. No matter by what name you call your series of denials, they can never be dignified into a system of truth. The pendulum swings all the way from transcendentalism to positivism, concealed by high-sounding phrase and many capital letters, but if the authority of Jesus of Nazareth is denied it will be a comfortless couch. There is rest in truth, and truth can never be annihilated by a denial. Be sure of this, God livs and reigns. You must meet him. His word appeals, invites, entreats. His spirit becomes to the soul what magnetism does to the bar of steel, making it self-directiv. God will save every soul that will permit it. He will pillow your heads on his bosom if you will let him. He will enable you to lie down in peace and arise to a glorious immortality."

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: A friend has sent me a recent issue of the Worcester Telegram, in which I find the foregoing report of a sermon by the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, in which the preacher makes a severe attack on a class of people known as "Infidels." On reading this report it occurred to me that, at least on that particular Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Conrad had forgotten the ninth Commandment, which reads: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." On this subject, as on many others, there is a wide difference of opinion, and of course every person is entitled to hold such views as they deem just and true. This preacher seems to think Infidels are the very worst class of people, probably because he has been so educated from his youth up, whereas the writer of these lines, who was brought up in a minister's family, whose father, and grandfather on both sides, were preachers, by a thorough study of the subject, has come to the opinion that the best men in every age are the Infidels. And I am sure if the Rev. Mr. Conrad would carefully and fairly investigate the question, he would come to the same opinion, and then see how he slandered them in his late sermon, and as I suppose he admits that the best life makes the most peaceful death-bed, he would then change his views as to "the Infidel's couch."

The true definition of an Infidel is, one who holds views antagonistic to the church of his day. Jesus was the most prominent Infidel of the age in which he lived, and our friend now worships him as a God. Jesus said as severe things of the church of his day as Colonel Ingersoll ever said of the present church: "Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrits! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers. Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrits! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than before. Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrits! for ye are likened unto whited sepulchers, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones and of all uncleanness." Did Colonel Ingersoll ever denounce the church in such cutting sentences as those? Then, as we suppose Jesus is good authority with the Rev. Mr. Conrad, allow me to call his attention to the parable of the good Samaritan. Whom did Jesus commend in this narrativ, the religious zealot—the priest—or the good Samaritan, who at that time was the Infidel? That parable is one of the best defenses of Infidelity that I ever read. Thomas Paine nor Colonel Ingersoll never made a plea for Infidelity stronger than the parable of the good Samaritan. And it would seem that these "hypocrits" that Jesus so often alludes to, like our friend Rev. Mr. Conrad had a great abhorrence of Infidels and considered them the worst people in the world, and Jesus rebuked them by declaring that those who failed to provide for their families were worse than Infidels.

Now, where do we find the hypocrits in all ages? In the popular and fashionable churches. Did you ever hear of there being a hypocrit among the Infidels? Men never join an unpopular movement who are hypocrits. It takes an honest, brave man to stand up in a community for an unpopular idea. That is the reason that you can always trust a man known as an Infidel. Allow me here to call your attention to a fact apparent to everybody who reads the newspapers. You can scarcely read of a great defalcation but that you read in the same notice that the defaulter was an activ member of the church, and very likely the superintendent of the Sabbath-school. Did you ever read of one of these being an Infidel? Then, again, hav you not noticed that all of those people, with very few exceptions, who die on the gallows, are firm believers in the Christian religion? Nearly all of them declare that they expect to go directly to heaven, notwithstanding they may hav sent their "unprepared" victims directly to hell.

But it is only the Infidels of the present age and time that the churches denounce. As has been shown, they now worship the Infidel of Galilee. In 1600 the Christians burnt Bruno at the stake because of his Infidelity, but a little over a year ago all Italy turned out to celebrate the unvailing of a grand statue to his memory, erected in the city of Rome, on the same place where he was burnt. And to come to this country. For the last hundred years the church has been unable to find language vile enough with which to malign the memory of Thomas Paine, and now one of our most popular publishing houses, Putnam's Sons, of New York, is about to bring out two large volumes written by that distinguished writer Moncure D. Conway, that will prove beyond question that Thomas Paine was one of the noblest men of the period in which he lived, and one of the greatest patriots of the American Revolution.

But a few years ago Garrison, Theodore Parker, and Wendell Phillips, and their co-workers in behalf of antislavery, were the most despised Infidels in this country; and now all of the three above named hav, so soon after their death, had grand monuments erected to their memory. One minister, while Parker was preaching in Boston, offered up a prayer that God would remove Theodore Parker out of the world, and if he would not do that, put a hook in his jaws so that he could speak no more in Music Hall. I hav not heard of any monument being raised to that zealous defender of the gospel.

And now it has come to pass that we hav many Infidels in high places in the churches; and are they not as good men as those who cling to the old faiths? Where are there any nobler men in the church to-day than Robert Collyer, Bishop Brooks, Dr. Heber Newton, Rev. J. M. Savage, and Professor Briggs, all Infidels, and all still in the church, and the church dare not expel them? A few years ago it was different. Then such men as Professor Swing and Dr. Thomas of Chicago were expelled for preaching Infidelity, but although pronounced by the church to be Infidels, they now preach to the largest congregations that assemble in Chicago every Sunday.

Then if we turn to national affairs we find the grandest men this country has ever produced hav been Infidels. For instance, Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, and Abraham Lincoln. And there is no truer, grander man in America today than the priest-despised Robert G. Ingersoll. A thousand years from now marble fine and pure enough cannot be found with which to erect his monument. His reputation can afford to wait. The other day an Infidel, James Parton, died in Newburyport, Mass., and this is what the preacher, Rev. C. S. Beane, who spoke at his funeral, had to say of him: "His religion was to do good. His worship was the adoration of great truths and noble ch racters; reverence for man in all his conditions; a loving admiration of nature, a looking up to higher things in earnest aspiration, and an untiring endeavor to bring them to pass in human life." This "Infidel's couch" was one of the most peaceable and serene, as are those of most Infidels. And why should not an Infidel meet death with resignation and composure? He has no fears of meeting an "angry God," a "tormenting devil," nor a burning hell. He believes only in old Mother Nature, and knows that her laws are uniform everywhere. He does not pretend to know what the future is to be for him, or whether there be a future existence or not. When he has lived an honest, upright life here, done all in his power to improve the condition of humanity on this earth, been true to his honest convictions, he is content to rest his destiny with the same power that brought him into this world. Such a man is prepared either for life or death. He has fulfilled the duties of life here, as expressed in the following beautiful words of the poet Bryant, and is ready to go without fear at the command of nature. His "creed" is:

So to liv, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon; but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

H. L. GREEN.

About Your Soul.

I am pretty busy just now on matters which do not pertain to the proofs of a hereafter. I am engaged in a manner to minister to the present, but as ever, I am interested in the subject of Spiritualism, and often hav to smile at the arguments pro and con about the question, "Has man a soul?" "And what is a soul?" "Hav women souls?" etc., without end, and the many smart things said by those peculiar souls who don't believe that they hav souls. But in your issue of April 23d, page 262, Miss Lizzie Magie caps the climax by claiming that men and women hav souls but that at death these souls "mix with the universe, just as other matter of the body does, and there is an end of it." She practically says that force and matter make souls. That is, there is so much force and so much matter in the universe, and it is the action of force on matter which makes souls. This has become of late, among the material philosophers, quite an idea—that force acting upon matter produces mind and soul—when, in fact, force and matter are substantially the same thing. The chemical action of matter produces force. It is the action of particles of matter coming into contact (or as nearly so as that is possible, for no two atoms ever touch each other) which generates force. Force is a resultant, a product, not an agent. In fact, matter and the life of matter are coeternal and coexistent—always hav existed and always will exist. And no such thing as anything mixing up with the universe could destroy either force or matter, because the very fact of matter and force mixing would generate more force, or vice versa, if you like. The only rational way to determin whether a soul or intelligence has an existence after the death of the body is by receiving such evidence of facts and intelligence from the phenomena produced as will satisfy the mind of its truth; and any persons who cannot be convinced by such evidences are simply too stupid to understand the elements of facts, too prejudiced to reason to a conclusion on the matter, or too anxious to hear themselvs talk for the mere sake of argument. Intelligence is the only test of the truth of immortality. One that cannot be convinced in that way cannot be convinced at all, and is not worth the time it takes to attempt it, for, as the great Shakspere has said, "All darkness is ignorance"—and I might add, all ignorance is sin.

Miss Magie, however, lays down a proposition which givs me some hopes that, in her case, may be reached. It is a reasonable one and should be met by the Spiritualists. It is this. She says, "I hav never heard or read of an instance where a spirit has revealed a fact that had hitherto been unknown to any mind then living; I hav searched in vain for such an instance." And I suppose she means by the above that the questioner nor the medium should hav knowledge of such facts, else the proposition were an absurdity. If the medium and the person or persons are ignorant of facts which after searching prove true, the conditions of her proposition would be proved. Now, attention, and see: Once a lady went from Wilkes Barre to Philadelphia, Pa., and while there she (lady A) called upon a medium (B), whom she had never seen or known before. While lady A was sitting with medium B a spirit purported to speak. The spirit C said to lady A: "I am your departed sister, C, and I want you to do me a favor. My little child which I left was placed in the Children's Home previous to my last sickness and death. I went out one day and bought a small lot of goods," naming the articles, "from Mr. D for my baby. The amount was sixty cents. I want you to call on merchant D and pay it for me. I also owed merchant E a small bill for goods I got of him," stating articles; "the amount is $1.20. Be kind enough to call on these parties and pay those small amounts. It is all I owe anybody, and as you never knew of these transactions it will convince you that I am your dead sister. Good-bye. From your loving sister, C."

Now, as we say in algebra, here was an unknown quantity to be found. We hav the medium and the lady utter strangers, and a spirit coming through B to A, the sister C having given lady A her full name.

On returning home she, lady A, called on the merchant D and said to him, "Sir, did my sister C, before dying, call on you and get a bill of goods charged?" The merchant said, "I cannot remember, but will look." He found upon his books the articles which sister C said she got, and the amount was sixty cents. Encouraged by this she called upon merchant E with the same inquiry. The merchant replied, "I think she did get a small amount of goods, but I cannot say until I look, nor what it was." On looking he said, "Yes, here they are," naming over the articles and the amount, $1.20. The lady A, being fully satisfied, paid the bill, and considers it unquestionable evidence that the intelligence came from her sister C by means of the medium B, who was simply used to giv her that convincing test of her presence. Now, I claim that the above fully meets Miss Magie's requirements. It is the lost or sought quantity found. I can furnish hundreds of such facts to prove the existence of spirit intelligence. The medium could not hav known of her own account either of the transactions. The parties were utter strangers. The merchant had forgotten them, but the immortal spirit, possessing the knowledge, and finding a way open to use the brain and speech of the medium B, could furnish the beautiful evidence of her continued life beyond the death of the body and convince her sister of the fact of immortality.

Can Miss Magie pick a flaw in this compliance with her proposition? I submitted these facts to a blank Materialist in an argument once in a private letter, and the party said if they found such a case it would wipe out the whole structure of the Materialist's theories upon death and the hereafter. And yet media are furnishing such proofs daily.

The soul, or the substance in which the impressions of life hav been made, must remain intact after the death of the body, and must hav some means of manifesting its intelligence pertaining to the former life as above shown, and this is what we call immortality. The particular mode in which the living, intelligent soul manifests, or the relation of its form, substance, or being, we cannot grasp or explain, only by the intelligence given. Nor can we explain the relation by which the soul or intelligence acts and produces the expressions of knowledge, memory, etc., in the natural body. Reflex action and the many explanations are only partial truths, or truths but partly understood; and if we cannot understand the uses and relations of this our soul and body, except by its expressions of intelligence, no more can we explain the modes of the spirit except by its expressions of intelligence. It is our only test. Those who will not receive this must remain in darkness. J. R. Perry.

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

The Hunting-Grounds of Hope.

There is a happy hunting-ground,
Not sought beyond the grave;
A land whose shining shores are bound
And washed by golden waves;
Where plenties grow by gushing spring
And glories soar on golden wing;
Where pleasures roam in fields of peace,
And joys sing sweetly in the trees.

To-day our riches may be found
To be both few and small,
Still on hope's happy hunting-ground
Is plenty for us all.
O take all to that happy land;
The soul upon its hills would stand,
And in the valleys join the chase
To run hope's happy hunting-race.

A land where shines our fortune's star—
The spirit flies to thee,
For 'mongst thy hills life's fountains are,
And will forever be.
Yes, happy, happy hunting-land,
The spirit flies to seek thy strand,
Where in the air and on the tree
The birds of life sing merrily.

O. L. Callecod.

Coffee Growing and Prices.

When we drink our morning cup of coffee and smack our lips over its delicious flavor, feeling also that its properties hit the very spot, let us remember that we owe it to a Frenchman named Delicleux, by whose energy and perseverance it was transplanted to America for cultivation. The Arabs to-day prevent the Mocha from being exported, except the refuse beans, after the third picking, and Palgrave says, "No one ever saw the true Mocha bean out of Arabia." The Dutch for centuries jealously guarded the coffee of Java from being transplanted, and monopolized the crop. One bush was taken to the government botanic garden in Holland. No one was allowed to see it but under the eye of officials. This was in 1710. Finally, after trying for years to steal a shoot, Delicleux got one, took it to Paris, and in 1720 started for the West Indies with it. The voyage was long and delayed. Water so gave out that all were put on short rations. Delicleux went dry himself to save his precious plant. He suffered much, but finally got to Martinique alive and with his precious coffee plant alive. In brief, from this one shoot has come all the coffee-growing of South America, Central America, Mexico, and the West India isles. Men like Delicleux deserve to be immortalized. When we think what an addition coffee makes to the simple bread-and-meat fare of the poor, how it strengthens the weak, how it gladdens the heart for hours, how it makes life comfortable to millions living under poor roofs, we may begin to hav some idea of its importance. During the war of the Rebellion how often an army, after a long, hard day's march, the men all broken down and ill-humored, would, after a half hour's halt, be all singing, laughing, and good-humored, simply because each man had his pint of good, strong coffee.

Pity it is that this among greatest of blessings to mankind shall be monopolized and abused by a few persons, so that its use is becoming almost impossible for the masses, save as a rare luxury.

Few crops can be grown over such vast areas and none can be produced cheaper. It grows best on high lands near the ocean, but grows well elsewhere. Many of the vast islands of the Pacific, each one almost a continent, are coffee-growing regions; most of Africa, much of Asia, most of South America, all of Central, part of Mexico, and Lower California are also coffee-growing lands. Also the West and East Indies. The crop is easily grown. Where enterprising, intelligent labor gets at it, the fruit that surrounds the bean more than pays for the cost of growing the coffee, as excellent sugar and the finest brandy of a peculiar aromatic flavor is made from it.

Often other fruits are necessarily grown to shade the coffee, and which pay the cost of it.

See now how the crop is abused by monopoly. From 600 to 1,800 pounds are produced per acre. In the heart of the Maracaibo district, the producers get from 3 to 4 cents per pound for it. Two sacks, 125 pounds each, Maracaibo, will cost as follows to be got on shipboard:

Sacks	.62	Storage there	1.25
Sewing	.13	Freight to Maracaibo	3.00
Freight to Calcutta	1.50	Insurance	.15
Frontier custom house	.13	Cartage	.22
Storage there	.50
Freight to river	2.50		10.00

ten pesos being equal to $7.69 United States gold.

Now, to this must be added several more charges, in the shape of imposts, or rather impositions:

For the hospital	$ .10	Stamps and paper	$ .10
State tax, for wharfage	.20	Government drayage	.30
Land custom	.90

That makes $1.60 more. The poor coffee-planter got, at 3½ cents per pound, for his 2 sacks of 125 pounds each, $8.75. It has cost $9.29 to get the 2 sacks to the ship, nearly all of which is imposition. Other impositions elsewhere are put on to make prices of coffee about equal. In Brazil there are state taxes and government export dues. There is danger that the cultivation will be abandoned some day. In many places the farmers grow only for their own use of late years, because of the impositions. The worst of all perhaps is the state and export taxes, because they enable speculators to learn just what the crop is and how to control it. At the ship our own speculators put their charges on the coffee which has there cost, say 8 cents per pound. They manage to bring it all the way up to 25 and 40 cents. In consequence of these prices the consumption of coffee is limited to one-third what it ought to be. This is done by the use of substitutes, extracts, and by the use of less coffee. So far our monopolists hav done little or nothing to raise the price of bread, but the time is coming near when that, too, will be in their power. These facts are from our consular reports.

In view of these export duties, is not the proposal of reciprocity a mockery? How absurd any treaty with such nations to admit our goods duty-free in exchange for their overtaxed products. Holt.

The Single Tax.

In your issue of April 16th appears an article from Richard Lechner, in which he asks, "How shall we collect a tax that is (shall be) least burdensome to the people?" and then states that latterly a single tax on land has been advocated by the free-trader Henry George. "That means," he says, "that the farmers of the country will please pay all the tax and done with it." If the tax proposed by Mr. George was to be one upon land, it would indeed be a hardship to the farmers, but as it is to be assessed upon all land values, it will be of the greatest benefit to farmers. How this would be of benefit to farmers can be in a measure estimated when it is understood that farm values constitute a small part only of all the land values in the country. At a late sale of land in New York city a small piece sold at the rate of $14,000,000 per acre; and one small lot of land sold in Chicago at the rate of $17,000,000 per acre, which would equal 280,000 acres of the farming lands in Illinois at $50 per acre. Now, when it is understood that the farmers would hav to pay only this one tax upon the rental value of their land alone, not including improvements or personal property, and be free entirely of all tariff or internal revenue taxes, does not reason teach that they would be greatly benefited? The fact is, Brother Lechner's objection to the single tax is that he thinks it is to be one assessed against the land, according to the area, when it is the land value that will be taxed. In other words, he is opposing what all good single-taxers would oppose—that is, a tax upon land—and his full understanding of what the single tax really is will cause him to advocate it, as it does absolutely compel the mind's assent, when understood; the only people who hold out against it being those whose interests lie in robbing their fellows. As to Colonel Ingersoll's illustration of the ton of steel rails, if Brother Lechner will substitute the word "state" for "country" he will see the absurdity of the statement that Colonel Ingersoll makes. If he cannot readily see it, let him substitute the word "county" for "country," then "town," then "ward," and he will hav the colonel making the following statement: If a ton of steel rails is produced in this ward, costing $30, both the money paid for the raw material and labor done to produce the steel, and the ton of steel itself, are in this ward; and if we buy the steel in another ward for $25, the money which is expended for labor and material goes out of our own ward to the other ward, etc. On such reasoning it would be to the economic advantage of all Methodists to trade among themselvs, all Baptists to do the same, all Freethinkers to trade among themselvs, in order that all their raw material may be kept to themselvs, all their expenditures of money for wages be kept to themselvs, and all their products be kept to themselvs; so to obtain the greatest advantage possible from one's labor it would be best for each person to produce for himself all that he could, and retain it all; and we should then hav the colonel's idea carried out to its logical conclusion. The whole difficulty with the colonel lies in a confusion of thought and a lack of knowledge as to what constitutes production and the laws of trade. We could not take from England a ton of steel rails without returning to England an equivalent value of our labor products; and the more we take from England, the more we must produce at home to pay up, or balance trade, for so-called "balances" are only suspended trade, and the accounts are balanced by additional imports or exports as the case may require. Instead of protection "diversifying" our industries, it is free trade that will most effectually do it. The writer has good reasons to believe that Brother Lechner will take this view of trade in the near future, and meanwhile waits for Colonel Ingersoll to reply to the question as to whether freedom to trade and freedom to think are not both essential rights of the individual.

Mobile, Ala. EDWARD Q. NORTON.

Heywood Released and Banqueted.

There is a law above all enactments of human codes.—Lord Brougham.

This fine old world of ours is but a child,
Yet in the go-cart.—Tennyson.

Friday morning, the 13th inst., the iron doors of Charleston prison were unbolted, and E. H. Heywood, the editor of the Word, who has been so unjustly and outrageously confined there for nearly two years (six hundred and fifty-eight days) for writing and publishing useful and rightful sentiments, walked a free man—that is, as free as this ignorant government allows a man to be.

Some friends were present waiting to greet him; among them Mrs. Elizabeth M. F. Denton, wife of the late Prof. William Denton, geologist, of Wellsley, Mass., from whence she had driven with Mrs. Schull, of Ohio, who is now stopping at Wellsley, fifteen miles that morning, to help to sustain individual rights. From there Mr. Heywood was driven to the residence of his sisters-in-law Josephine and J. Flora Tilton, at 85 Westland avenue, Boston, where he again met with warm congratulations from other friends who had assembled from various parts of the country, the embrace of his beautiful children, and the free, fragrant breezes and the music of the song-birds in the park.

In the evening a banquet was tendered him at the Quincy House, Boston, where the friends of freedom from every species of slavery of mind or body again, with beaming faces, glistening eyes, speeches, and applause greeted the most advanced iconoclast, who has been hounded, persecuted, without any just cause, for fifteen long years by this ignorant, vulgar, and tyrannical government that pretends to think, or does think, if it thinks at all, that purity and morals can be regulated by statute laws made by drunken, tobacco-using, blasé men who constantly dishonor the name of woman.

Capt. Robert C. Adams presided at the banquet and officiated with calm, intelligent, and commanding dignity. Samuel P. Putnam was the first speaker, and then Captain Adams called upon Mrs. Dr. Gilbert, who, it may be remembered, conveyed the immense petition to President Harrison. She gave a brief account of the struggle to procure Mr. Heywood's release.

Among the audience were several persons of note in the various fields of reform, including E. C. Walker and Lillian Harman, who a few years ago shocked the prurient taste of Kansas society because they had the good sense to refuse to ask of the majestic dunces of church and state permission to cohabit.

Few things in the history of New England Puritanical customs and laws hav been more cruel and barbarous than this long persecution of Mr. Heywood, a man who was activ in the antislavery struggle with Garrison and Phillips, and whose whole life, of over sixty years, has been devoted, since arriving at manhood, to the interest and advancement of his fellow-beings in all the fields of thoughts and actions.

Early in life he read John Stuart Mill, and saw with a clear brain the truthfulness of that great man's statement when he said that "the only freedom that deserves the name is that of pursuing our own good in our own way, so long as we do not attempt to deprive others of theirs or impede their efforts to obtain it. Each is the proper guardian of his own health, whether bodily or mental and spiritual. Mankind are gainers by suffering each other to liv as seems good to themselvs, more than by compelling each to liv as seems good to the rest."

That is precisely what Mr. Heywood has attempted to do, and what he has written and preached with an earnestness and enthusiasm worthy the most famous reformers that history records.

Now that he is out of prison, I hope that all the friends of advanced thought will unite, sustain him, and restore to him as far as possible his broken and scattered fortune, wrenched from him by the strong arm of statute laws, made under similar motivs to those that governed the Moorish pirates.

Though he spoke with much earnestness and some vigor at this banquet, I could see at a glance he had lost much vitality since I last visited him in prison a year ago. He looks very pale, but his spirit is undimmed and unmarred by the disgusting and infernal fangs of Christian morality, that has cursed everything it touched for the last thousand years, if no more.

I hope he may fully recuperate among the healthful breezes of his picturesque and rock-bound town of Princeton, and be able to go on many years in his work of emancipating the race from the shibboleth of vulgar prudery that has killed more people than the accursed evils of rum and tobacco.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Josephine and J. Flora Tilton for their untiring devotion, amid all their other arduous duties, to Mr. Heywood while he has been imprisoned.

I send a few of the many letters of sympathy and cheer that were sent and read at the banquet.

Boston, May 14, 1892. JAY CHAAPEL.

The Heywood Fund.

The receipts in response to my call for a benefit subscription amounted to $108.50 on May 12th, and a check for that sum was forwarded, so that it was presented to Mr. Heywood on the day of his release. The subscriptions were: Abbie and Amos Knapp, $2; C. Emmendorf, $1; Joshua Burrows, $1; J. F. Ruggles, $1; J. E. Phelps, $1; J. E. Marden, $1; O. H. Warner, $1; W. F. Lerich, $2; P. F. Spencer, $3; R. S. Johnson, $5; W. H. Burr, $5; W. B. DuBois, $5; M. D. Conway, $5; Eliza B. Burnz, $5; J. L. Parshall, $5; Joseph L. Long, 50 cents; E. B. Foote, $25; E. B. Foote, Jr., $25; R. A. Gunn, $10.—Total, $108.50. Further donations hav come in since May 12th, and more doubtless will; they will be acknowledged later.

E. B. FOOTE, JR.,
Sec. National Defense Association.

My Second Campaign.

Upon my arrival at Centralia I found that brave and gallant Freethinker, F. D. Rexford, on hand to welcome me back to this little town. Our friends here, with the assistance of "Bob" Dwyer and "Dave" Robertson, had made great preparations to make my course of lectures a success, but what with political caucuses, G.A.R. meetings, and friendly society rallies, my audiences upon the first two nights were somewhat slim, the hall being not more than half filled. The above events had tended to act against a very large attendance, to which must also be added the work of the preachers, who had endeavored to make their influence felt as far as possible by offering an antidote to the Infidel meetings, where advice was given gratis, to avoid their influence, or the "evil" effects thereof. But they will find out erelong that it is impossible to subdue the human mind by making war upon opinions; they may succeed for a season, but the end thereof is death. The Romish church grasped her power in precisely the same way, and that which she gained by force and corruption she has been compelled to relinquish, step by step. Reason has dethroned faith from the pedestal of power, and the gods are giving way to man.

Milton has truly said,

A forbidden book is a spark of truth, that flies up in the face
Of him who seeks to tread it out,

And let me add, that any system which seeks its safety in the suppression of honest opinions will sooner or later meet with certain destruction. The human mind cannot be imprisoned; it is irrestrainable and must be free. Reform the abuses that at present obscure liberty and we will answer for its safety; for as imprisoned wild-fowl refuse to breed, so caged thought cannot grow. Yet you cannot imprison the mind. You may for a time suppress the activity of the thinker, but as he emerges once more into the free sunlight of the heavens he takes up his former work with renewed vigor.

My first lecture was given to a small audience, but small as it was I felt amply rewarded by the eagerness they displayed; they felt they had listened long enough to the time-worn platitudes of church creeds and evinced a desire to hear something new.

There were no preachers present, not even a church deacon, nor anyone sufficiently interested in the retention of orthodoxy to question what I had said; consequently we had no discussion—a feature that I always welcome, because it not only adds interest to the meetings, but it givs us the opportunity to show the people that ours is the right side. The preachers know this secret but too well; hence they fight shy of discussion, feeling somewhat satisfied with the assurance that if they let us alone our cause will die of inertia. Meanwhile we must creep steadily on, until, like the tortoise, we shall win the race while the hare is sleeping in fancied security, with the hopes that she has already won.

The next day a column report of my lecture was printed in the Daily Sentinel, which being read by the populace added a little more interest to the occasion, and brought a few more to my next lecture. The editor of this little daily, although an adherent to the principles of the church, is extremely Liberal in his views. He very willingly publishes both sides, so that the people may hav an opportunity of hearing them before passing judgment.

Centralia is noted for the production of strawberries, and the luscious fruit is being shipped to all parts of the country in large quantities. Owing to the strict attention this industry requires at this season of the year, everything must giv way to that. Even Freethought lectures come in for their share of the general neglect; consequently I hav many adverse conditions to strive against; but, nevertheless, my audiences perceptibly increased each night, owing in a great measure to the highly complimentary notices I had received from the press up to that time.

On the second night I found a few more in attendance, and among them this time was one of the local preachers of the Congregational church. The chief attraction for him was probably that I was lecturing on this occasion upon the "Origin of Christian Symbols and Ceremonies." He did not, as I had anticipated, attempt any criticism or to say anything in reply, although he took copious notes of what I had said, which I suppose he intends to make use of in his pulpit at some future time, when the "Infidel" has gone, as usual.

At the close of the lecture one of our friends asked him what he thought of the lecture, to which he replied, in reference to a statement I had made respecting the doctrin of the "Virgin and child," that I had simply asserted that it was so, but it remained for me to prove it. His answer is sufficient to show that the reverend gentleman has read but little concerning the origin of his creed, and still believes in the divine revelation of it, a dogma which all educated Christians themselvs hav long since given up. If he has read it, he must hav forgotten it, and should he wish to refresh his memory, or to learn anything concerning it, I take these means of giving him the necessary information how he can verify the statements I had made for himself. In the hope that some of our Centralia friends will bring it to his notice, let him read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest Dr. Hyde's "Religion of the Ancient Persians," Wilmot's "Asiatic Researches," Rev. Dr. Giles's "Christian Records," Taylor's "Diegesis," Conway's "Sacred Anthology," Jacolliot's "Bible in India."

Please order of THE TRUTH SEEKER. And methinks he will find sufficient in these to show him conclusivly that Christianity has been bodily transplanted from far older creeds, and is in reality but a thinly disguised stem of ancient paganism.

Again the press gave me an excellent report, and made a special appeal on its own behalf for the people to come out and hear my next lecture. This resulted in a full house; not one vacant seat could be found upon this occasion. But no preacher came out to this lecture.

Several ladies could now be distinguished among the audience, although they seemed a little shy at first, with the exception of about three, one of whom attended the whole course. This lady was, but a short time ago, a devout Christian, but is now a strong supporter of our cause, and who, together with her husband, never missed hearing one of my lectures.

Up to this time my efforts, aided by the valuable assistance of the press, were beginning to be felt, but upon this occasion, my third lecture, the press manifested an ominous silence concerning them, and failed to show me that courtesy they had hitherto extended toward me. I am unable to state why the papers should so suddenly refrain from publishing an account of my meetings, or even to announce the coming lectures, unless perhaps outside pressure had been brought to bear upon them; but even then I could scarcely attribute to the editor a display of pusillanimity, when I remember his former courtesies and the publication of my previous letter in answer to "Senex."

Well, if we cannot get what we would like, we must like what we can get; and so if we cannot succeed in securing the sympathies of the press, why, we must get along without it, and let our motto be, "Though the gods are against us, never say die."

Notwithstanding the silence of the papers, my next audience increased a little more, and the results grew more and more encouraging. These incidents combined tended to urge me to renewed activity to make our meeting successful, and I went on determined not to suffer defeat; and I must certainly extend to our friends in Centralia my heartfelt sympathies for the manner in which they stood by me.

My last lecture brought a large house; several attended this who had not been to the others; great interest was now being manifested in the lectures, and I wished that I could hav staid a week longer.

During my stay here I was the guest of F. D. Rexford, at the Centralia Hotel, where everything was done to make me as comfortable as possible. It is such attentions as those that cheer the heart of the traveler and sometimes remind him of home.

I was pleased to meet here once more our old friends, and they gave me a right royal welcome among them again.

I met while here G. Shaw, of Chicago, again; A. Cope, of Tonti, and J. Cunningham. These men are old allies of our cause, and hav stood by it through storm and sunshine. It is always a pleasure to me to meet those who hav so nobly battled for the right, and though they hav now grown old in the struggle and can no longer take an activ part therein, still they are always ready and willing to assist those who can, and meanwhile fire a shot where they are able.

Immediately after my lecture on Friday night I took the train again, which, fortunately for me, was an hour late, and went off once more to pastures new.

My next place was Strasburg, where a "basket picnic" had been arranged for May day, and at which I gave two lectures. Arriving in Strasburg, Dr. A. York found me in his office awaiting his return, and very soon I was placed once more in my old room at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bernhardt.

I found our Strasburg friends eagerly anticipating a fine day for Sunday, and I heartily joined them in their wishes.

Saturday morning was spent in rehearsing a few part-songs for presentation the next day. The rehearsal was kept up until a late hour, when the singers retired to dream of May day and its attendant festivities.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Secretary Ohio State Secular Union.
154 N. High Street, Columbus, O.

W. S. Bell Lecturing in Oregon.

I gave two lectures to large audiences at Grant's Pass, and had the pleasure of helping the good Liberals of this place organize a Secular Union. I hav great hopes for the work to be done in this part of the state. The Union starts off with fifteen members who are enthusiastic for the fray. The officers of the Union are: William M. Richards, president; W. O. Ridgway, secretary, and John G. Abbott, treasurer. Quite a good number of TRUTH SEEKERS are taken here.

I gave an invitation at each of my lectures for anyone to reply to my lecture or to ask questions. But silence was the only sound I heard.

As several of our Liberal folks and I were going to the court-house on the evening of my second lecture, the church-bells rang out loud and long to gather the sheep of the various flocks into their respectiv sheep-cotes, for the wolf was nigh.

After the lecture each night there were numerous earnest, if not violent, discussions on the street.

W. S. BELL.

Welcome Home.

WHITELAW REED, Editor of the Tribune: You are welcome home to America. Extremes meet. You are on the top round of the social ladder of distinction, that reaches from earth to an intellectual heaven. I am at the bottom. Yet I venture to make you welcome home to America.

A Roman citizen was Rome's care, even as to-day an Englishman may look with confidence to England for protection from the uttermost parts of the globe we liv upon. The United States are the home of humanity. Its primary laws and Constitution were thought out by abstracted thinkers like Paine, Jefferson, and Franklin, and then fought out by Washington and his fellow-soldiers—Infidels all! They defined the "rights of men and women—inalienable"—as against all then-existing church-and-state governments deriving their power to rule from Gods, Christs, and Holy Ghosts of their own creating. They are all Holy Inquisitions torturing the body and soul to convince the understanding by means of religious legislation—church and state. These men founded a purely secular government, that derived its power to rule from the people, being administered by the people, and in their own interest. And Washington declared that this was "not a Christian government." From the initiation of our government to the present time, the Christian clergy hav been its most deadly enemies. Lincoln found that out of forty ministers in his own city of Springfield, Ill., not one would sign his Emancipation act. When the canvassers returned and reported the fact, Lincoln sat down and cried as "Jesus wept."

As the priesthood hav manipulated and subverted Girard College, in Philadelphia, so are they manipulating to subvert and pervert the United States secular government, wherein a Materialist, a Deist, or an Atheist has all the inalienable rights that are possessed by the most religious professor.

Hitherto all governments hav been church and state, with the result, foreseen by John the Spiritualist, that "the sun [church] was darkened and the moon [state] turned to blood." Christianity lost the gift and light of divine revelation, and we had the Dark Ages. And the state is fighting or preparing to fight continuously. War is the business of all peoples, from Russia to our own. It swallows up the labors of the industrial producing power of all nations and turns them into destructiv forces. Thus a spurious Christianity and wars are inseparable. Rome and Greece, like Egypt, created their own gods and goddesses and established a priesthood to interpret their oracles. The statesmen and priesthood played into each other's hands in taxing the producing classes within an inch of their lives. In Russia the system has culminated in a national famin. Christendom has created Gods and Christs, and Holy Ghosts, and Holy Inquisitions, and a priesthood to interpret and remodel the "word of their God" from time to time to suit itself.

The whole Antichristian machinery has no more objectiv reality or existence than had the heathen mythology of gods and goddesses, and the heavens and hells, of Egypt, Greece, and Rome. It is all a grand farce!

A "new heaven and a new earth" are being created, and "the former heaven and the former earth"—products of Dark Ages—are "passing away" with a great noise and commotion. The whole order is breaking up; even death and hell are being cast into their own lake of fire and brimstone, together with the trinity, atonement, physical resurrection, and a fictitious New Jerusalem with streets of gold, walls of sapphire, and gates of pearl. They are all "passing away," and "In God we trust" should go with them, with the chaplains and their muddled prayers to a Christ who declared that his true followers "would not fight."

All religious legislation should cease, leaving us a clean secular government, deriving its powers from those who are governed by it—the people, whom friend Reed has so faithfully represented.

Please, friend Reed, do not let the Babel priests close the World's Fair on their heathen Sabbath, nor upon either of the Sabbath days, and much oblige the whole Shaker order of Christians, and your friend,

F. W. EVANS.
Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.

MEN of science rose, in the stricter sense of the word, even in the centuries under the most complete sway of theological thought and ecclesiastical power; a science, indeed, alloyed with theology, but still infolding precious germs. Of these were men like Arnold of Villanova, Bertrand de Gordon, Albert of Bollstadt, Basil Valentine, Raymond Lully, and, above all, Roger Bacon, all of whom cultivated sciences subsidiary to medicin, and in spite of charges of sorcery, and consequent imprisonment and danger of death, kept the torch of knowledge burning, and passed it on to future generations. . . . All germs of a higher evolution of medicin were for ages well kept under by the theological spirit. As far back as the sixth century so great a man as Pope Gregory I. showed himself hostil to every development of science. In the beginning of the twelfth century the council of Rheims interdicted the study of law and physic to monks, and a multitude of other councils enforced this decree. About the middle of the same century St. Bernard still complained that monks had too much to do with medicin; and a few years later we hav decretals like those of Pope Alexander III. forbidding monks to study or practice it. In the beginning of the next century Innocent III. in the council of the Lateran forbade surgical operations to be practiced by priests, deacons, and sub-deacons; some years later Honorius III. reiterated this decree and extended it. In 1243 the Dominican order forbade medical treatises to be brought into their monasteries. Five years later the council of Le Mans forbade surgery to monks, on the ground that "the church abhors the shedding of blood," and many other councils did the same. At the end of that century Boniface VIII. interdicted dissections as sacrilege.—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Toronto.....	May 22	Murray, Utah.....	June 14
Columbus, O.....	" 24–26	Kaysville, and
Cincinnati, O.....	" 29	Farmington, Utah	" 15
Ottumwa, Ia.....	June 1	Morgan City, Utah	" 16
Blackhawk, Col..	" 3	Echo, Utah.....	" 17
Boulder City, Col.	" 4, 5	Reno, Nev.....	" 21
Georgetown, Col..	" 6	Carson City, Nev.	" 22
Denver, Col.....	" 7	Virginia City, Nev.	" 23
Scofield, Utah.....	" 9, 10	Inyo county, Cal.	" 24–27
Salt Lake, Utah...	" 12, 19	Athens and Cath-
Provo, Utah.....	" 13	lamet, Wash.....	July 3, 4

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

AFTER Mr. Albert Bach's lecture on "Lunacy" at the Manhattan Liberal Club, on the evening of April 29th, the annual business meeting for election of officers was held, with the following result: President, E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D.; vice-presidents, R. A. Gunn, M.D., Wilson McDonald, and Mrs. Emma Beckwith; secretary, Huldah A. Gunn, M.D.; treasurer, Miss Schachtel; librarian, Mrs. C. Leonard; trustees, E. W. Chamberlain, Dr. Julius Fehr, James Morris. The lecture appointments for May are as follows:

May 20th, "An Outlook for Humanity," Caroline B. Le Row.
May 27th, "The Government of Cities," Dr. L. G. Janes.
Meetings will be discontinued during July, August, and September.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Angola, Ind.....May	30	Cleveland, O.....June	13, 15
Waterloo, Ind....June	4, 5, 6	Pittsburgh, Pa....	" 19
Butler, Ind.....	" 7, 8	Butler, Pa.....	" 20, 21
Columbus, O.....	" 12	Philadelphia, Pa.	" 26

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

W. S. BELL is now in Oregon, where he will lecture in May and June; afterward he goes to Washington. The following are his dates till June 12th:

Forest Grove, Ore.	May 22–26	Stella, Wash., Ore.	May 31
Corvallis,	" " 27	Cathlamet, Wash.	June 2–4
Silverton,	" " 28, 29	Skamokawa,	" " 5, 6
Oswego,	" " 30	Deep River,	" " 12

PHILOSOPHICAL Association, Sundays at 3 P.M., Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D.—Lectures for May:

May 22d, Mr. Henry Frank: "Selections and Discussions from 'His Bold Experiment.'"
May 29th, closing service: Mr. H. Rowley, Review of the Season's Work.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, May 22d, at 3 o'clock, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, of New York, will lecture. Subject: "The Historical Evolution of the Individual."

Truth Succinctly Told.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is a large sixteen-page paper, devoted to the advocacy of Freethought pure and simple. It is the paper that was founded by D. M. Bennett. It is now illustrated and has recently put on a new dress, and is now a better paper than it has ever been before. This paper has for ten years been dropping some of the useless letters in its spelling. It deserves a wide circulation.—Wichita, Kan., Leader.

Little Blasphemies.

Eastern Clergyman: "I am told that you hav never had a backslider in your church. How do you manage it?"

Parson Fewclothes, of Arizona (toying with his gun): "Not any. They know better."

Ernest: "Dearest, do you think I could succeed in becoming a minister?"
Clara: "I feel doubtful, Ernest?"
"It don't require much ability."
"No—no; but it requires some, you know."

Clericus: "Did you never in your experience hav a prayer answered?"
Cynicus: "Never, except in one instance."
Clericus: "What was that?"
Cynicus: "I started in on the 28th of February to pray for spring."

Mephisto: "If St. Peter doesn't stop sending American crank inventors down here I'll throw up my job." Asmodeus: "What is the trouble?" Mephisto: "Why, one of these fellows came to me to-day and submitted plans for having the place heated with steam and hot air instead of brimstone."

Dominie (to choir-leader): "The collection this morning, Mr. Hotwater, was very small, and I am sorry to say that I think the meagerness was largely due to you." Choir-leader: "Largely due to me, sir?" Dominie: "Yes. Hereafter, while the plate is being passed, I wish you would make a better selection of music than 'Salvation's Free.'"

Letters of Friends.

Four Civilizing Agents Sent Forth.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5. Please send by Adams's Express four Bible Picture Books. I received one by mail a month ago or more. It was fine—superfine—in slang, a "daisy." Send two in board covers and two cloth.

E. J. DODGE.

Liberal-Handed as Well as Liberal-Minded.

MARQUEZ, TEX., April 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Our old friend Jack Snow being unable to take THE TRUTH SEEKER, and as he will read nothing else, some of his friends hav clubbed together and will pay for a year's subscription for him. Please continue it a year longer to Uncle Jack Snow, Snow post-office, Leon county, Texas. J. T. ALLISON, P.M.

Freethinking Physicians, Take Notice.

ANAHEIM, CAL., May 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Anaheim is in need of a first-class medical doctor—one versed in modern practice and treatment; and in order to make sweepstakes of the whole practice, it would be necessary to speak and write English, French, and German. Now, if you hav a relativ, friend, or acquaintance that would like to come to this beautiful land of "Paradise Found," "do to him as you would like to be done by" and great will be your reward in this world.

For particulars address, S. P. BATES,
Sec. Orange County Information Bureau,
Anaheim, Cal.

Such a Paper as The Truth Seeker Would Hav Saved Russia.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find twenty-five cents in stamps for a copy of "Infidel Death-Beds," by G. W. Foote.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is my only favored paper. I highly appreciate the course it pursues. Were such a paper published in my despotic country, Russia, no religious persecution would hav occurred, and instead of bigotry, humanity and Freethought would hav taken its place. At a better opportunity I may furnish you some interesting facts of the holy bigotry and fanaticism prevailing in that dark country, which will serve as moral for the followers of Freethought principles that where religion is there is ignorance.

HERMAN KATZ.

Who Knows About Heaven?

COLFAX, WASH., April 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $6.65, for which please renew subscription, and send the "Pictorial Text-Book" and the Bible Picture Book, and one copy of "Self-Contradictions of the Bible." I hav worked hard to get subscribers for THE TRUTH SEEKER, but in vain. The most of the people out here are afraid of it. But some like to read it at others' expense, and laugh and talk of the pictures. I think the pictures are splendid, and the way they are got up—especially the one in April 9th, "The Way to Be Happy."

If it would not be asking too much, I would like to hav some one tell me where in the Bible I could find where it speaks of the first, third, or seventh degrees of heaven. The question was asked the minister at church last Sunday, and he could not answer. GEO. W. HULL.

Church-Members' Education Is Always Finished.

BROOKLYN, E. D., May 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: You must be aware you hav on your list of subscribers quite a number of Spiritualists. Many years ago I was introduced to Mr. D. M. Bennett by my friend Mr. Daniel Mason. Addressing Mr. Mason, he remarked after a pause, "Mr. Mason, are you a Spiritualist?" Mr. Mason answered in the affirmativ. Mr. Bennett: "Are you also a Spiritualist?" I gave an affirmativ nod. For a few seconds he looked at us thoughtfully, but at length remarked, "I hope it is true." No attempt was made by Mr. Mason or myself to dilate upon the various methods of spiritual intercourse, but knowing time was ever precious with Mr. Bennett we courteously withdrew.

Agnosticism Spiritualists find an important factor in the investigation in these invisible influences and intelligences. Agnosticism clears away the brambles and underbrush of venerable superstition and prepares the mind for reception of new conceptions. Advanced thinkers on Spiritualism as a general rule never attempt to invite a church-member to investigate. The church-members seem to hav finished their education: the church does their thinking. DAVID BRUCE.

The Yale Prophet Receiving No Honor.

CHICAGO, ILL., March 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am a stranger to you, but how well I know you by your grand and good work. I only wish to say a word of praise for the best and brightest periodical in existence at the present time. I receive it weekly through Mrs. Eames, of this city, and must say you can never get a more honorable representativ than she. I hav been reading the gem for four years and hope to be able to procure it as long as I remain in this sphere. I keep it doing missionary work constantly.

I wish to ask one question: What proceedings are necessary to oust Professor Totten from Yale? I think he is in league with the priests and wants to create another church boom.

Find inclosed $1 for Mr. Heston's Bible. I wish you all the greatest success possible for your noble work in trying to kill superstition and ignorance. J. H. MADAN.

"My God, Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me?"

GRANGER, MINN., April 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am living with my uncle, Henry Arnold, who has been a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for the past fifteen years.

I hav been looking up the account of the crucifixion in the New Testament, and I find but two (Matthew and Mark) agree as to Christ's last words, Luke and John each using the language they thought best suited to the account they were writing.

I find no two of the above giv the same wording to the superscription on the cross.

I am brought to believe that Christ was taught by his mother and all near and dear to him, from cradle to manhood, that he was the messiah, and not until his dying moments on the cross was he aware of the mistake. He evidently expected something quite different—perhaps of the miraculous order, like bands of visible angels—to sustain his expiring moments, but instead went up that wail of despair. When dying he realized he had been taught a falsehood.

Let escape from the dying lips of such men as Voltaire, Paine, or Ingersoll, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matt. xxvii, 46; Mark xv, 34) and the orthodox clergy would outrival the antics of our Western aboriginal ghost-dancers in their delight.

We are delighted with the Biblical Picture Book and "Some Mistakes of Moses." A. B. VAN DEE.

Catholic Rapacity.

KANSAS CITY, MO., March 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please inclosed find $1 for the Bible Picture Book. We hav the Freethinker's "Pictorial Text-Book," and want the Bible Picture Book also. The book has been lying on my counters for two years, so my customers can see the pictures, and often I see them take a memorandum of them to see if the verses are quoted correctly. As I hav been a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for twelve years, I leave the copies lying around the store, and often giv them away. Our city, one of the best in the United States, has one drawback, and that is the Catholics. They try to monopolize everything, but the people are getting their eyes a little open. They hav institutions under the guise of charity, and are grabbing after every dollar they can get the city officials to donate them, and it has grown monotonous, and the people in our city elections will hereafter look at the matter in a different light. Our mayor, no longer ago than St. Patrick's day, issued a proclamation allowing the city officials, including the police and fire departments, a half holiday. Such a thing in Kansas City is unprecedented, and it is plain, coming from a non-Catholic, was intended to catch the Catholic vote.

If ever he runs for office again it will be used as a weapon against him, but I hope it will be a lesson to all the future mayors. The time is coming when the election will be a fight in all cities between the Catholics and Americans.

But long liv THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A. B. FOX.

At Least, Put None But Liberals On Guard.

ST. LOUIS, MO., April 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me two copies of "Bible Self-Contradictions," for which you will find price inclosed. I hav been reading your highly interesting paper for the past eighteen months, and am greatly pleased with the good work it has done for the Liberal cause. This city is a hotbed of orthodoxy, especially Roman Catholic. In fact, it is called "the Rome of America," and there is a Roman Catholic "push" element in municipal control from the mayor down, which will eventually ruin the city if they are not crushed out of all possibility of ever again coming into power. There has been for some time a strong organized opposition to Catholicism in this city, but all efforts hav so far failed to crush the viper which is gnawing at the vitals of the city's prosperity. The watchword should always be, "Put none but Americans on guard," and this "consummation devoutly to be wished" may yet be realized.

I wish you success in your noble undertaking, and hope the pictures will be perpetuated. Long life to you, and "three cheers and a tiger for Heston," who is doing more for the Liberal cause by means of his pictures than all their efforts combined. I shall shortly send for a copy of "Old Testament Stories"—possibly two or three—and will endeavor to get some subscribers for the paper. There are plenty of Liberals here, but they are too lukewarm. It is a hard thing to get them to subscribe, though they say they like the paper. I generally put my paper, after reading, where I think it will do the most good.

Once more, wishing you success,
I am, respectfully,
J. F. CLANCY, Ex-Catholic.

A Church Elder Prepareth to Do His Duty.

NEW DULUTH, MINN., April 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1, for which please send two copies of "Paine Vindicated," two of "Science vs. Religion," two of "Ingersoll's Christmas Sermon, Criticisms, and His Replies," and anything else you may choose to send that would suit a strictly religious community. I hav been elected trustee of the Presbyterian church without leave on my part or any questioning whatever. I hope you will be prompt with the pamphlets. I want to send "Paine Vindicated" to the minister who has made the same old stale assertion of Paine's recantation, and Voltaire's screaming with terror and that his nurse would not afterward nurse an Infidel for fear of their dying in the same agony. So you can see we need to set the clergy right. I hav compelled the Rev. E. M. Noyes to state in his paper, the Record, that a certain lie which he spun about R. G. Ingersoll was only a newspaper report, but from the knowledge he had of Ingersoll he concluded it was true—although he claimed never to hav read the speech in which he claimed Ingersoll stated such things. So it is plain to be seen they—the clergy—are bound to malign Freethinkers without any cause whatever.

I hav just finished Arnold's "Light of Asia," a work all Freethinkers should read. And another thing to be read is Brown's "Researches in Oriental History," which sets forth a great many fine principles independent of the "inspired scripture," and showing a great many difficulties which seem very hard to overcome.

I see a letter from Wm. L. Worley, of Holden, Mo. If he is in Howell county he finds plenty of religious stupidity. I lived some three years in that county. I congratulate Brother Worley for writing from so strong a portion of the state, where the belief in witchcraft is still prevalent.

I remain yours for truth and reform,
H. H. SALMON.

Spiritualists Will Eventually Evolve.

MOUNDS JUNCTION, ILL., April 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of April 16th, Dr. A. K. Ayres, of Hannibal, advises Materialists to avoid association with Spiritualists.

While I am enrolled with the Moralists, and heartily approve of their avowed principles, it does not preclude me from working with those who do not wholly approve of the course of the Moralists, if by so working I can help dethrone the capricious and revengeful God of the churches.

A vast majority of the commercial nations of the earth are blind devotees of an imaginary deity, in adoration of whom an immense amount of time and wealth is wasted, absolutely and utterly wasted.

This vast army of devotees is so organized and so directed that unless there should be some organized and opposing force working from without they will continue in stupid adoration forever. I know of no condition of the human mind, outside of the state of lunacy, so pitiably wrong as that of the devotee, and if the Spiritualist has evolved out of that condition, he can safely be trusted to evolve into the full light of mental liberty; and when this is done he is, as Emerson well says, virtually "land-lord, air-lord, sea-lord," and prepared to "act wisely in every walk of life."

Therefore, let us treat lightly minor differences, and work with energy and with every possible ally, even though they are enrolled under a different name, and carry a different flag.

It is not the triumph of a sect, or class, we are after; it is the liberation of the human mind from the abject state of idolatrous devotion. JAS. H. CRAIN.

Helps Them "Grow in Grace."

COVINGTON, KY., April 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am not a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, though I read it every week, and am always glad when Saturday evening comes, for on my way home I call on the newsdealer, who always has just one copy hid in a box under his counter. When I enter the store he begins to dig down into the box for my paper, and I plank down my nickel and three coppers and feel that I hav just received the most value on that deal for the least money of any other deal during the whole week. I like THE TRUTH SEEKER, and could scarcely do without it. My children enjoy reading it; also my mother, who is eighty-two years of age. Frequently when in Cincinnati I buy two or three copies of it and send them to my Christian friends back in my nativ state, for I know they need something to help them Bear The Cross and enable them to Grow In Grace.

Some of my family in looking over some old numbers of THE TRUTH SEEKER noticed and called my attention to an article written by R. R. Jones, of East Randolph, N. Y., in the issue of Dec. 12, 1891, in which he criticises something that he knows nothing of. He says, "As a matter of fact, has any Spiritualist ever investigated their home that they claim awaits them above?" I would like Mr. Jones to tell us how he knows all about the present condition of D. M. Bennett. How does he know all about Mr. Bennett's sleep, whether it is dreamless or not? How does he know of Mr. Bennett's domain, whether it is wide or narrow? As a matter of fact, has Mr. Jones ever investigated that vast realm of dreamless sleep and rest that he says Mr. Bennett now enjoys? If Mr. Bennett is now resting in the grave, I would like Mr. Jones to tell us how the law of nature has been thwarted and decomposition avoided in Mr. Bennett's case. If Mr. Jones would know a little more about life he would not draw so extravagantly on his imagination about the condition of those he calls "dead." If he would be more a student of nature, per haps he would find that her order was life and that which he had always called death was simply change. Mr. Jones seems to be struck on the dead. He says, "I will giv $100 to shake hands with my sister, brother, father, or any friend dead." He would be perfectly safe in offering a cool million for the privilege of shaking hands with his dead friends, for according to his meaning of dead they would be enjoying that dreamless sleep and unconscious rest that he seems to know all about; and if they could leave that vast realm and place of dreamless sleep, while they would be off in some séance-room shaking hands with Mr. Jones the small, cold worm that fretteth the enshrouded form would in all probability miss a meal. If Mr. Jones will come to Cincinnati I will guarantee that he can shake hands with some of his friends that he no doubt thinks are dead, and he will hav about $99.50 of his $100 left to defray expenses of coming and going, and if he could be induced to know something more about the laws of nature he would be less superstitious and not hav the necessity of believing so much about how dead people rest and sleep in their wide domain, the narrow grave with its maggots and putrefaction. A. C. SELBY.

Fearful and Wonderful Argument.

SALESVILLE, MONT., April 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I question whether or not modern Infidelity grows out of inability to comprehend the sacred scriptures, or whether a morbid disinclination to accept the divine afflatus of sacred things prompts Infidels to their wicked maledictions against the Holy Bible. Be this as it may, the tone of their coarse and flippant writings and blatant harangs would convict them of intellectual disqualifications for passing on matters so momentous and solemn, and indicate that they are not possessed of those essential qualities necessary for scripture explanations.

To my mind it would seem that the Divine Author of that Sacred Volume had dictated it with special deference to undisciplined minds, and most likely had that specific end in view. Therefore, it would seem that the slaughter-house condemnation and attempted havoc of the Book by Infidels is directly attributable to depravity of heart, rather than to imperfection of understanding.

That you may see this to be the case, I shall select a scripture text, one upon which Infidels hav lavished the most malignant abuse, and show your readers how easy it is of explanation, when one is guided by the least modicum of the spirit of God, and has the proper disciplin of mind so to do. The portion of the text to which I direct attention is found in the last verse of the last chapter of the gospel of John, and reads, "I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written, amen;" meaning, of course, that if all that Jesus said while on earth had been written down an extension would hav had to be built to the world to hold the books. Infidels hav in all ages given vent to all their venom and pierced this self-luminous text through and through with shafts of mud—stood erect in an agony of desperation and abused it as if they could never get their fill.

For one moment, lost skeptic, look and see how easy it is of solution to one under the immediate dictation of the Holy Ghost. I am not certain that I exactly know just what the trouble with Infidels is about this text, but infer that the principal objection is, a supposed lack of earthly material commensurate with an enterprise so stupendous. Such an objection, however, resolves itself into the most sickly stupidity when contrasted with the immense power of God. Why, my dear Infidel bantling, God could work up everything on the face of the earth into books. And I dare say that St. John, in the felicity of his soul, had snakes, bullfrogs, bedbugs, and all else of earth's vermin under his spiritual vision when he penned this hallowed text. What a blessing it would hav been to hav worked all such pestilent vermin up into Holy Bibles and got rid of the monsters. There is no text within the lids of the great Book that goes further to prove its Divine origin than this. But some ingrate Infidel may say: "The earth would remain the same in size, impinging on its center of gravity as before, not the least increased in bulk; the only visible difference being that its surface would be changed into books." Talmage ought to be set on such a man as this! Well, over against this I may say that God in his infinit capacity for digging could dig up the whole earth and work it up into books. But it seems that I am ever to be haunted by wicked Infidel hosts. One now seems to suggest that "the earth would only be changed into a mammoth bookstore without any increase in its mass whatever." Well, I shan't fly to Talmage yet, but to the moon. Could not God call the moon down and work it up into books? Does not the reader see how easy the thing is of explanation? All that is required is Christian courage, tempered with a small residuum of brains. Down with Talmage on Infidelity! Here the Infidel comes again! (Why don't Infidels believe, not think? Then stocks in scripture solutions would go up to a high market price.) He now says: "That would be merely adding to the earth's mass and rendering its holding capacity greater than before." Oh, if I could but commune with Talmage and Father Lambert a thousand years! If God puts anything in my mouth now, you bet I'll say it! Undismayed, by the grace of God invested w th Christian valor unparalleled, determined to explain at all hazards, I call down Jupiter and work it up into books; that ought to be big enough to satisfy the most fastidious Infidel. But, as if the devil had penetrated his very vitals, the Infidel impudently exclaims, "Pile on every orb, if you please, of the starry vault, and work them all up into books, and you hav only succeeded in consolidating the universe into one inconceivable mass of books, rendering its holding capacity—infinity itself. A great book emporium indeed. Everybody and everything worked up into books, no one to read them, and still room yet." There she goes again! Where in thunder is Talmage? Like a stray dog, he is always gone! Well, I hav explained scripture, and know that I can do it again. I would hav done it all right this time, but unluckily my foot slipped just while on an uphill pull, being at that particular moment partially overcome by the sweet, petrifying fumes of religion. But I see a ray of light—my Redeemer liveth! My armor is buckled on! No Christian can be defeated when battling against the hosts of Satan! God will put in his mouth what he shall say! My faith is unshaken! Scientific heresies may shake the faith of some, but not mine! I can read my titles clear to mansions in the skies! The Infidel theory of the globular form of the earth has made havoc of biblical truth. John was an inspired man, and he knew the earth to be flat. Thus I thrice prove the divine origin of the Bible. True, if, as Infidelity teaches, the earth be round, with the force of gravity attracting to its center, it might hold all of Jupiter, some of Talmage's sermons, and a part of the filth of the Vice Society; but now we see it to be flat, expounding Scripture becomes pleasant, easy, and graceful. Now dump your Jupiter on and see if the world doesn't slop over. One must be sadly wanting in all the Christian graces not to see that if all that Jesus said—and didn't say, never knew nor heard of—had been written down, books, no doubt, would hav been slipping over the edges of the earth all round. Possibly it was in this way that all the lost books of the Bible went. If so, it is another striking proof of the divine origin of the great Book. Now, should this masterly and unanswerable production be the means, as I opine it will be, of saving Infidels from the consuming wrath of a crusty God, I trust they will say what paper they read it in, and by whom they were converted, and liv long to regale themselvs on the top side of a flat earth, now proved beyond question. SMALL SAM.

P.S.—April fool!

A Brilliant Miscellany.

CATHLAMET, WASH., March 15, 292.

MR. EDITOR: I am mad! Not insane—on account of too much religion—however. But I'm jest bilen' poppen' angry at sum uv them fellers what rites fur THE TRUTH SEEKER! Just think of John Peck—"Our Peck"—saying, as he did in his Naples peroration: "While I do not believe that woman is the physical nor mental equal of man—because nature has put an eternal bar against such equality—at the same time I do not believe that the rights of men are to be measured by their power or weakness" (italics mine).

So Mr. Peck knows that woman is not the mental equal of man. And what is more, an eternal bar is placed against her.

Are any two of the same mentality—even among men (against whom no bar is raised)? There are some women so superior mentally that they would not commit a sentiment like the one just quoted to paper. And Mr. Peck knows that this bar is there for "all eternity;" that is just what God claims, the only difference being that he put the bar there. Not the kind you appeal before, but the kind that keeps you behind. There are people who say an eternal bar is placed against Freethought and reason. Do you believe it?

Now for the ches(s)nuts, Chess and Horsehair Snakes. S. W. Foss says:

JEB'S HORSEHAIR SNAKE.

Jeb took a horsehair every day and rushed down to the lake,
And threw it in and watched to see it turn
into a snake;
He'd seen little snakes in puddles that looked like horsehairs, so
He thought all horsehairs would be snakes
if they had time to grow.

Every time it rained the highway gleamed with temporary lakes,
All perturbed with writhing horsehairs
which had been turned into snakes;
They looked like snakes, they looked like hairs, and Jeb he said the rain
Had turned the horsehairs into snakes—
'twas easy to explain.

So he put horsehairs in the lake and watched from day to day
To see them turn to wriggling snakes and swim or crawl away.
But though he gazed intently with eye-
balls tense and strained,
The horsehairs still were horsehairs and as horsehairs still remained.

Perhaps we all are much like Jeb; beside life's sheltered lakes
We watch for harmless horsehairs to turn into noxious snakes.
The hissing vipers of the soul, the serpents of the brain,
Are mostly fangless horsehairs and will ever so remain.—(S. W. Foss in Yankee Blade).

Now silence; that settles the Horsehair Snake question.

Now in re Chess. Our controversialists will please take note of the following warning and act accordingly:

The death of the great chess-players, Morphy, Zukertort, and Le Bourndonnas, was attributed to the great mental strain consequent upon playing chess blindfolded. —(Public Opinion).

Now, if this blindfold controversy be continued, some one may hav a "rush of brains" to the head and die a miserable death.

I am glad you hav at least one fonetik (phonetic) speller among your "Friends" —M. M. Secor. "M. M." must stand for Mad Man if the tenor of his letter be accepted. There is no danger of his becoming an Anarchist. All he lacks—in that direction—is brains and a logical training. He has the grit.

Now I hav vented some of my little spites, I feel better, and would say that the letter of G. E. Moulton in the same TRUTH SEEKER (Dec. 19, 1891) would be a good one for most Liberals to read before writing. The letter of Edna Heald in the Feb. 6, 1892, number is a masterful effort, and emanates from a brain, though young, powerful. May she grow in years, stature, and intellect, prosper, and continue to write.

Now I am going to tackle a man near home—a good man, but perhaps a mistaken one—Judge C. Beal. He has a beautiful town-site near—I might say in—Cathlamet, called Athens. That is good, but is this?—he invites Liberals of all shades of opinion, those of cardinal colors as well, to come here and build up a Liberal community; that is not bad, but he offers to giv a lot to any church that will build there. What think you? I kicked—because it was none of my business. So did Dr. Boynton. He called it a joss-house—but why insult the joss? I went and saw Judge Beal. We talked—i. e., he did, I haranged. I said, "Why not, at least, offer Liberals the same chance?" He said, "I intend to build, first, a library to be free to all, and a hall free to Liberal lecturers: yes, more, I will engage to hav nearly a constant series of lectures; then I will build an opera house, and in time a Liberal University." Then I shut up, and actually tried to think. Imagin the unusual strain on my convolution-forming tissue.

I thought it unfair to the Christians here, as they would stand no show—don't now, never did, and I hope never will. I asked a lady the other day if Mr. so-and-so was a Liberal. She replied, "No, I think not; but he caters to them to get trade." Think of it! a community forty-two years old and the Christians catering to the Indels! Whew! No church, and but two or three Christians, and they believe the world flat and made in six days and forty-two minutes. They are "amusing as well as instructiv," as I used to say in my bills.

I hav had private letters asking about this place. Life is short (so is my cash for postage), so I take this way of replying. First, I giv a sample sentence or two to giv an idea why I should answer at all.

"I hav had plenty land-agents' stories; now I want you to tell me the truth," writes one. "O that I could liv in an atmosphere of pure, unadulterated Atheism!" writes a woman friend. "What are the prospects?" writes a third. Now, I hav no land to sell, no lots in Athens—Washington, I must add, as there are forty-two Athenses in the United States, one in Georgia, and there is a rumor to the effect that there is one in Greece. Why do not Liberals call their towns Hypatia, Bruno, Ingersoll, Paine, Voltaire, or something in point? But the following I know and will stick to: That there is no prettier, higher, or healthier spot on the Washington side level enough for a city up the river till you come to Kalama, and its situation is not so good till you come to Vancouver. It has a good country to back it—the Elokomin river valley. It is on the Columbia, with Puget island stretching aslant the stream in front. A good harbor—capable of improvement, however—and of easy reach to Portland and Astoria. Some manufactories—space and demand for more.

Carl Blitz(en), D.D., please take notice and keep this place out of both the bigot's and the bigots' directory.

But the descriptiv is not my forte, so in future address Judge C. Beal, Cathlamet, Wash. He is an honest, honorable, and capable man; having been to the fore among Liberals for years, three of which he was president of the Oregon Secular Union, which should be some recommendation.

Lots of Liberals here—good ones; smart, intellectual ones; geniuses, poets, philosophers, and critics; men of brains, courage, and ability. I would not return east of the Rockies and stay—unless imprisoned—for the wealth of Creosote! For here one can think, act, believe or not believe, curse God (were he worth it) or praise him (if ye know no better), and all without fear of persecution for one's opinions.

I hav no interest in getting people to this coast beyond their own desires. I see question in THE TRUTH SEEKER after question as to where one can liv as one wants to, and not as some good Christians say. I see one asks for a Liberal colony. Of all "hells," I could conceive of none equal to this. To liv in a colony where every man is a thinker, and nearly all on opposing lines, would be torture, especially where all want to run it and some must. Where you hav to submit yourselvs to rules and laws of the colony and perhaps the state and government as well.

On this coast, and especially here, one does not hav to liv by rule. The more Liberals we get out here the better will the country be. I need not expatiate upon our genial climate, productiv soil, and immense resources. The daily papers, the census reports, and reports of those who hav seen with their own eyes, render this unnecessary. MAURITZ S. LIDEN.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Little Boys' Questions.

Mamma, sit down, I want to ask
You just one thing or two:
What makes my shadow stretch out so?
And tell me, what is dew?
Is it the trees that make the wind
By switching round their boughs?
And where do dogs go when they die,
And kitty-cats, and cows?
And when it thunders in the skies
What makes the clouds all wink?
Could I dig down to Chinaland
In ten years, do you think?
Why don't the people tumble off
When China turns this way?
And when you say the moon is full
What is it full of, pray?
How far is it up to the clouds?
How long are comets' tails?
And why won't umbrellas do
For boats as well as sails?
How did the very firstest man
Who made tape-measures know
How long to make the firstest inch?
And say, do yardsticks grow?
How many workmen did it take
To build a pyramid?
And won't you show me on the map
Where Baby Moses hid?
What makes the little darkies black?
What makes the sky so blue?
And is it right to tell a joke
When not one word is true?
Why do you love me just the same
When I am cross and bad?
And tell me, mamma, why was I
The only boy you had?
And will you be the grandmother
To all my little boys?
And when you come to see us bring
Your pockets full of toys?
Is Santa Claus a truly man?
Hav reindeers hoofs or paws?
Who dresses all the Christmas dolls—
Does Mrs. Santa Claus?
Is Jesus real, mamma dear?
Were frankincense and myrrh
His Christmas gifts? Did Mary think
That they were sent for her,
Or did she save them all for him?
Why doesn't the Bible tell
Was ever God a little boy,
That he knows their hearts so well?
What makes volcanoes smoke and blaze?
Who built their fires in them.
If all the earth was finished off
Before God made the men?
Where is our fire when it's gone out—
Why can't I understand?
Well, won't you tell me where to find
Some undiscovered land?
If God could make the whole green earth
With only six days' stir,
Why need he be so awful long
A-fixing Jupiter,
And putting air and water there,
And grass, and trees, and flowers—
To make it fine and nice for folks—
Just like this world of ours?
How can he hollow out the hills
Without one single tool?
. . . . . .
You don't know everything?
Well, then,
Why don't you go to school?

Lone Rock, Ore. MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

Grandpa's Pet.

She sat within an easy chair,
Quite big enough for two,
So still one scarcely knew she was there,
She had so much to do.
Her dolly had been put to sleep,
And picture-books were piled
Up by her side, about knee-deep,
To please the eager child.
While my typewriter's shuttle-stick
Swelled and shouted, "Chick-a-te-lick!"

The flying hours went on apace,
Until the little miss
Looked up and said, with witching grace,
"Grandpa, I want a kiss."
And then there was a sudden tack
From what we both were doing,
And all the fairies heard a "smack,"
Just like two lovers wooing;
While many "hugs" came in between
Me and the "click-a-lick" machine.

Yet, tired at last—"Grandpa? I think I'll go to sleep awhile;"
And her sweet eyes began to blink,
All mixed up with a smile.
I put a pillow at her head,
And spread a wrap above
To keep her warm. "Oh, this," she said,
"Is like a fairy's love,
While your typewriter goes so quick,
A-singing softly, 'Click-a-lick.'"

And soon within the mystic land
Of dreams my darling pet
Was walking with her dolly's hand
Clasped warmly in hers yet.
Her sunny head peeped out at me,
With every curl so fair
I thought that anyone could see
There was an angel there.
And yet the rushing words came thick,
"Chick-a-te-lick, chick-a-te-lick!"

O Mildred! Some time you will know
How bright my study grew,
For your sweet presence made it so,
And all the fairies knew
That when my fairy came to rest
Within that big armchair
The great room then was doubly blessed,
For love was everywhere,
And throbbed along each nerve as quick
As "chick-a-lick! chick-a-te-lick."

—Ebenezer Gregg Danforth Holden.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Tabby's History.

A TRUE STORY OF A CAT AND HER KITTENS.

Once on a time there was an old cat and five kittens, and they lived in a barn on top of a granary, in a box. Their box was a nice box, with straw for the five little kittens' and old cat's bed, and the box had a saddle-blanket on it to keep the light out of the baby cats' eyes. And one was black, and one was black and white, and one was yellow, and two were gray. And the black kitten's name was Coaly, because he was so black; and the black and white kitten's name was Fancy, because she was so fancy-colored; and the yellow cat's name was Orange, because she was so yellow; and the two gray cats' names were Tiger and Lion, because they were so rough with their little brothers and sisters that their mamma, whose name was Tabby, threatened that they should hav no mice for dinner. Tabby was a nice cat, with soft gray coat and yellow ears, and soft yellow eyes, and she called her kittens, "Permeu, permeu!" and they called her, "Mew, mew, mew!"

Old Tabby would catch mice and the little kittens would eat them all up but the tails.

But as old Tabby was a great-great-grandmother, and there was a grown son whose name was Roley and a half-grown daughter whose name was Cicely, Tabby and her kittens were too many.

So she was put in a sack with her kittens, and then, in the hind end of a buggy, sent to a neighbor, who had lots of mice, but only one cat, which was a big gray cat named Tom.

Tabby had lived in the barn a long time, so of course she did not like to leave it and go away. And it almost killed her when the man who took her away said, "Meow, meow; shekt, sh-s-h-k-e-sh-e-k scat!" and spit and howled at her, to hav fun, till she almost died. And after he got her and her five little kittens home, he spit and howled at her so that poor Tabby jumped up and ran back to the barn as fast as she could. And in the morning their little girl came after her, and brought the five little kittens, too. And then they went and got Tabby and brought her to the kittens, and she jumped right on top of them and began to wash them, while they got dinner. And she kept saying all the time, "Permow, permow;" and they said, "Mew, mew, mew." Then they put her and her kittens in a can and took her back, and put her in an old trunk in the woodshed. These neighbors, whose names were X——, had a great big pup which was as big a coward as he was a pup. He tried to scare Tabby, but she scared him so that he ran right under the house. And ever after that he never bothered her or her kittens again, and she was there a long time. But after a while they killed her and her kittens, except little black and white Fancy. And one night when Tabby's old owners were eating their supper, their little girl heard a yelp, and her papa went to the door, and then he heard three or four yelps, and he went down to the gate. And when he came back there was Fancy with her claws fastened in his beard, and howling for all that was out. He gave her to the little girl, who took her in the house and gave her bread and milk to eat.

And Fancy grew up to be a nice kitten. And one day when there had been snow on for almost a week, they set a trap to catch some birds, and when they were caught Fancy was let in the trap to catch them, and as she did not know how, she just sputtered and scratched the birds.

. . . . . .

This history was written in 1889, when I was ten years old. It is now 1892. Fancy has a good home with a friend; and I hav her kitten, which is the living image of old Tabby. We call her "Little Tabby." Roley is living and fat and happy. Poor Cicely! she went insane and had to be killed. Colonel, the pup, is as big as ever, in fact, bigger. He comes to see me sometimes; then little Tabby runs.

KATIE D. MATTESON.

Legend.—Continued.

The children appeared so languid and miserable that the raven brought them, every day, a basketful of cooked provisions and fruit from a restaurant, for the wan looks of the poor are caused by the want of a variety of simple food. A furious Christian opium-eater, who owed them $50, whispered falsehood about these helpless beings, with the assistance of a female saint who was pretty well known to be guilty of every crime. Her money closed people's eyes. The consensus of holy luxury held a sacred meeting occasionally, at 5 in the evening, to accommodate their selfish habits. They closed their purses all day, really saving more than the humble laborers, who must eat at noon. But the elect were devouring their rich dessert at half-past 4, when the first bell rang. Oh, how heavenly were the prayers offered at 5 o'clock! These orisons being over, with hearts melted by the grace of God, these kind Christians uttered falsehoods which deprived poor Mrs. Sadlone of the affection of her best friend. She was neat and industrious, but the holy tormentors left her for months without paying for her labor; and to make their fiendishness more complete they caused the world to believe that they actually supported her. They broke up her business in many foolish ways, so that she was obliged to remove into some distant corner to escape from their persecutions and slander.

"Jane," said Seth, "look at Mrs. Spider—one of Herbert Spencer's finest. Just now she pounded her husband until he was tender, and then devoured him, like church-members who abuse the poor till vertigo or suffering causes them to drop nearly dead in the street. Think of such female Christians voting and holding office! Some dispositions must be like that of the toad, whose poison is distributed under his skin and throughout his body. The spider, perhaps it should be said, is not a true insect, for it is composed of three parts, and undergoes metamorphosis. Will some kind entomologist explain this further?"

But with regard to the silk-worms, they move their heads in a circle, in a pitiful manner, while they are spinning. And work seems to be a natural necessity in the life of such humble beings. How nice it would be to furnish the little creatures with hands for spinning. "Sometimes," continued Seth, "I feel like the Spanish king who remarked to an archbishop that if he had been present when the world was created, he should hav suggested some alterations."

To include the human race, the effect of exertion ought to be a splendid constitution—in that case, the fearful inroads of disease would not be likely to sweep off the great majority of those who inhabit this clumsily formed planet. ALHAZA.

Lexington, Ky., April 30, 1892.

Reason.

For half a lifetime the dictionary has been my Bible or book of inspiration; and as I open it this lovely May morning the first word that greets me is "reason." A beautiful word it is, too, and one belonging especially to Liberalism. It is the life of all true thought. To reason is to consider, to purpose, to design, to weigh the for and the against.

We hav reasons for all we think, say, or do, and yet our reasoning is not always correct; but the more we reason, weigh, judge, and reflect, the more apt we are to hav right and true reasons. Once man claimed to be the only reasoning being on earth, but we hav found that all animals, birds, and insects reason, compare, and reflect, some more and others less. But so far as we know, human beings are the superiors, in reasoning, to all other existences. We are, each one of us, proud of our ability to reason well—to think good, true, and noble thoughts. The thought is the mother of the deed, and hence our thought, our reasonings, make us what we are. Pope says:

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words—health, peace, and competence.

AUNT ELMINA.

Correspondence.

TURNER, ORE., April 30, 1892.

MISS WIXON AND LITTLE FRIENDS: I thought I would write to the Corner today. I see that there were not any letters week before last, and last week there were only two.

There are many wild flowers in bloom here now, the largest of which is the dogwood; wild violets, or johnny-jump-ups, as we little "Webfoots" call them, of yellow, purple, lavender, white; buttercups, lady-slippers, etc.; and the California poppies will soon be in bloom.

Papa sent some China pheasants back east awhile ago, and he sent some eggs also. I inclose a little story that I wrote when I was ten years old. The characters are all true, living people and animals. If you do not think it worthy of a place in the Corner, I suppose there is room in the wastebasket. KATIE D. MATTESON.

BRONSON, KAN., May 6, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: This beautiful Saturday afternoon I take the pleasure of writing a few lines to the Corner if it is welcome, as I hav been a constant reader of it for quite a number of years and like it very much. Papa takes the good old TRUTH SEEKER and thinks he could not do without it. I shall be glad to see the day when it will be a grand, big paper and not only a little Corner. I do not go to school now. I went seven months last term. My teacher belonged to the Baptist church, but papa gave her a TRUTH SEEKER to read. She read it and said it was good argument, but not convincing.

Well, as this is my first letter to the Corner, I will close.

Wishing you success in all your good works, I remain,

Your Liberal friend,
DORA BEAMAN.

P.S.—If this escapes the wastebasket I will write again. D. B.

[Certainly, you are welcome, Dora, and we hope you will write often to the Corner. —ED. C. C.]

STRASBURG, ILL., May 4, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Will you allow me space in the Children's Corner for the purpose of writing a few lines? As we hav had a great number of lectures in our town, of which all were good; nevertheless, Mr. John R. Charlesworth is my favorit speaker. As he was on his lecture trip West he stopped here a few days for the purpose of lecturing to the people of Strasburg. He came April 30th and left May 4th. He was here once before, on Christmas last, and while here the young people serenaded him at Mr. H. Barnhard's. They were called in and had a good time. Then Saturday night last, while practicing the songs for the next day's lecture, he returned the compliment. Mr. Charlesworth is a musician as well as an orator. He taught us to sing the songs correctly. We practiced for more than an hour. He then sang a song, accompanied by the banjo, that was so beautiful that we went home thinking of Mr. Charlesworth and the old plantation banjo.

This is my first letter to the Corner. I am fourteen years old. PETE YORK.

[Although this is the first letter to the Corner, it is a very good one and we hope it will not be the last.—ED. C. C.]

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialist Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

THE Lord's Day Rest Association of England is about to forward to Chicago bulky petitions that the Fair be closed on Sundays.

THE Catholic church and monastery at Morraillton, Ark., were made subjects of a visitation of divine wrath on the 9th by suffering exceptional damage from a storm passing over the neighborhood.

IT seems as though Italy if it maintains its present war strength must go into bankruptcy, or if it reduces it must be dropped from the Triple Alliance. In the midst of these embarrassments the Catholic church continues to harass it venomously.

AT the Russo-German frontier there are great numbers of Jews who hav started to fly from Russia to escape religious persecution and been stopped by the German guards. Their sufferings from famin, diphtheria, and typhus are terrible. Bands of them are occasionally shot down by Russian guards.

AT a late ceremony in Rome the pope said on the education of youth: "It is not only the education, but the utmost care is necessary in the selection of those who impart it. A mistake committed in these early critical years is so difficult to repair in after life. The tendency to subordinate the religious element in the instruction of youth is one of the grave dangers of modern civilization."

OF the Freemasons, Odd Fellows, and Knights of Pythias Archbishop Janssens says: "The clergy should be zealous in dissuading from joining these associations which the archbishops, after mature deliberation, declare to be dangerous to the faith of Catholics, and which, as is known by experience in this province, lead to indifferentism as to revealed religion and to the neglect of Christian duties."

THE bishop of Nancy, France, in a pamphlet against the restrictions imposed on Catholicism by the Freethinking leaders of the government says: "The chains of slavery which for twelve years hav been weighing on the Catholic church of France are becoming unbearable. . . . The liberties and essential rights of Catholics are suppressed one after the other to lead up to the extinction of Christian France."

THE artist, Geo. Frost, who accompanied Kennan through Russia, on his return stored his sketches in a studio in Henderson Bros.' carriage manufactory at Cambridge, Mass. The Century Magazine hesitated to publish the disclosures of Russian iniquities, on account of their terrible character. A few weeks ago the building and its contents were burnt by incendiarism, and it is believed that this was the work of a Russian secret emissary.

PERMISSION has been received that the piece of the arm of the Virgin Mary's mother may remain at the church in New York city a few more days. Among the cures reported are those of Mrs. Mary Smith of dumbness; John Brennan of an abscess; Wm. O'Connor of rheumatism; Mrs. Ann Coleman of pains; Jas. Nelson of paralysis; a Prendergast child of ulcer; R. Beary of heart disease; Margaret Flynn of blindness. Fifty cents admission is charged, and many additional offerings are made.

THE Parliament of Religions to be held in connection with the World's Fair will be divided thus: General Parliament, Aug. 25–Sept. 3; Catholic Congress, Sept. 5–9; other church congresses, Sept. 6–10; Congress of Missions, Sept. 12–17; Evangelical Alliance, Sept. 19–24; Sunday Rest Congresses, Sept. 26–29; Christian Endeavor, Oct. 8. Many subsidiary meetings of various Christian organizations will be held. The managers hope to obtain the use of one of the Fair buildings, the magnificent Memorial Art Palace, and of many smaller halls belonging to the Fair.

REV. DR. SILVERMAN, of New York city, is trying to create a movement to hav the state institute a Board of Public Morals. It is to be composed of "men both from the clergy and the lay ranks, who will hav the authority necessary for the protection of public morality." "We need," he says, "state institutions and state moneys for the purpose. Just as there is a board of public works, a board of public education, a board of public health, so we need a Board of Public Morals. The only recourse for the pulpit thus far has been to resort to a number of private societies for the prevention of crime and cruelty and for the prevention of the dissemination of obscene literature. But all such societies, and even a dozen more of them, would be inefficient, because they do not represent a scientific, systematic, and absolutely authoritativ treatment. . . . The Board of Public Morals should also be empowered to exercise a sort of moral censorship over the press, the stage, literature, and advertisements."

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MÜLLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman. Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman.

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP.
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION.
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
8	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

For { INVALIDS, CONVALESCENTS, NURSING MOTHERS.

Supplies complete nutrition. Agreeable to the most delicate palate. The only liquid pre-digested Food Tonic on the market.

Physicians Prescribe it. Your Druggist Sells it.

The ALE & BEEF CO., Dayton, O., U. S. A.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Delnge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Brnno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitntion. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlangh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitntes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Stndies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

AT present let us remove what is bad; which must always be done before good of any kind can spring up.—Landor.

ACTIONS are neither right nor wrong by virtue of what men or gods can say; the right or wrong livs in results—in the nature of things, growing out of relations violated or caused.—Ingersoll

To know what the Ghost wrote, the unlearned are entirely at the mercy of the learned, and the learned themselvs are notorious for their disagreement as to what the Holy Dove really wished to be at when cooing the Bible to mankind.—Saladin in God and His Book.

To the rarest genius it is the most expensiv to succumb and conform to the ways of the world. Genius is the worst of lumber, if the poet would float upon the breeze of popularity. The bird of paradise is obliged constantly to fly against the wind, lest its gay trappings, pressing close to its body, impede its free movements. He is the best sailor who can steer within the fewest points of the wind, and extract a motiv power out of the greatest obstacles. Most begin to veer and tack as soon as the wind changes from aft, and as within the tropics it does not blow from all points of the compass, there are some harbors which they can never reach.—Thoreau.

THERE are philosophers who imagin that they can get out of all difficulties by unifying the notions of "God" and "Universe," and who hold that God is neither without nor above the world, but is himself within it, that he has, as it were, changed himself into the universe. . . . Well may Schopenhauer remark, as against the Pantheistic theory: "A God who has allowed himself to be changed into such a bad or imperfect world, must verily hav been plagued by the devil!" If God is in us all and is the soul of the world, then he must directly partake of all our wickedness and imperfections. He suffers in us toothache and bodily pain; he denies or insults himself in the mouth of one, while he reveres and worships himself in the mouth of another. In one man he does good, while in another he works evil and contends against his own laws He worries himself with insoluble riddles, he dies in each individual in doubt and pain, he rewards or punishes himself in a future life, and so on. But enough of all this nonsense!—Büchner.

HERESIES had had time to multiply, and more than fifty were enumerated as existing in the fifth century. Without daring to scrutinize the ways of providence, which are impenetrable by the human mind, and merely consulting, as far as we are permitted, our feeble reason, it would seem that among so many opinions, on so many articles, there would always exist one which must prevail, which was the orthodox, "the right of teaching." The other societies, besides the really orthodox, soon assumed that title also; but being the weaker parties, they had given to them the designation of "heretics." . . . It is known how their chosen opinions were treated; what crusades were preached against them; and that, from that period to the present day, Europe has not enjoyed a single year of tranquillity and toleration. It is a great evil to be a heretic; but is it a great good to maintain orthodoxy by soldiers and executioners? Would it not be better that every man should eat his bread in peace under the shade of his own fig-tree? I suggest so bold a proposition with fear and trembling.—Voltaire.

THE operations of mind are found to depend entirely upon physical organs, and can be suspended or altered by changes in the conditions of those organs. Anatomists and physiologists find a correspondence between the brain, the contour of head, and the mental faculties, so that a man's or animal's mental powers and characteristics can be predicated from his physical formation. This chain of sequence is so well traced that it is made clear that the link between the brightest dog and the lowest Hottentot is closer than that between a Hottentot and a Newton. Wallace remarks that the faculties exercised by savages are very little above those of the animals. May not mind be traced as truly in the vegetable world? When plants catch and devour insects, reach out tendrils toward supports, close their flowers in the shade or at the approach or touch of a person, may it not be called an operation of mind, as truly as when a dog answers the dinner-bell or a man opens an umbrella when it rains? Thus there is a mind or soul in all nature, and it is so connected with and inseparable from the outward form that they may be considered one, the mind, the later manifestation, being an inherent property of matter from its first existence.—Robt. C. Adams.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecntions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discnssion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesns Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samnel Colgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

FITS—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch st., Phila., Pa.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - - 40 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The

Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW," and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

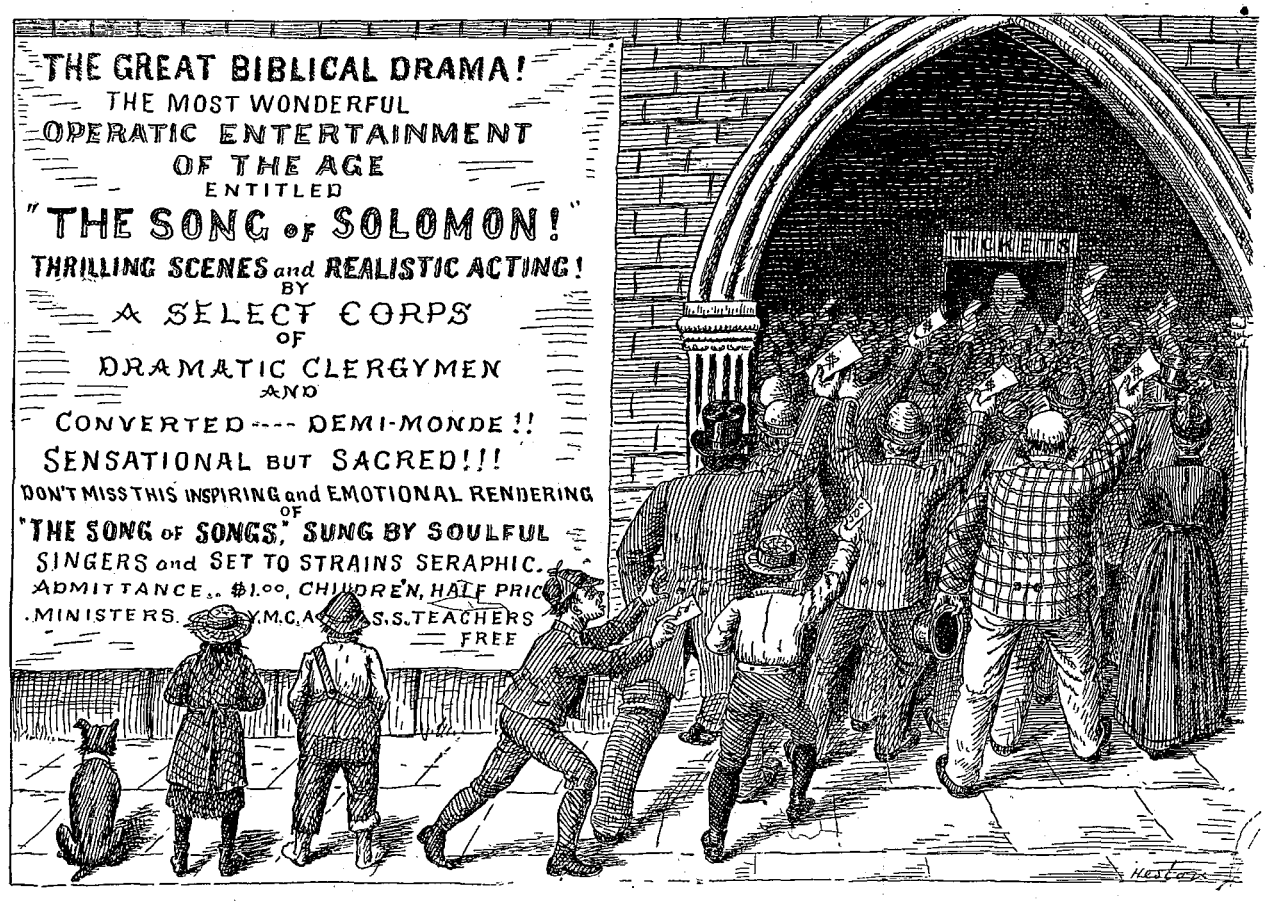
WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.



Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied exter nally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Ad ress, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A POINTER FOR THE CHURCH ON HOW TO RAISE MONEY.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO? | SEND AND SEE!

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 22. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 28, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

WHAT PROTESTANTISM HAS DONE FOR MANKIND.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST - - - CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 899pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc.. etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc.; with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

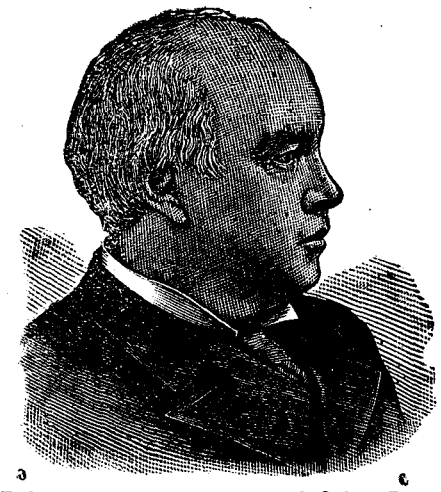
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.



RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890 With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 22. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 28, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - MAY 28, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Calculated To Sap Reverence.

From the London Freethinker.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" is the title of a volume which reaches us from the office of our excellent contemporary, THE TRUTH SEEKER, of New York. The illustrations are by Watson Heston, whose fancy is superior to his technique. Some of them are really very amusing. They are enough to sap the reverence of the longest-faced Christian. We are not told who wrote the letterpress, but it is very well done. Altogether it is a nicely got-up book, and one well calculated to impair the sanctity of the great Protestant fetich—the pretended Word of God.

The Fair On Sunday.

The Sabbatarians hav made a great noise over the length of their petitions to close the World's Fair on Sundays, and their method of counting signatures, at least in Ohio and Michigan, has been referred to by us. Others are now sharing the opinion expressed that these Sabbatarians are a not particularly honest lot. On the same subject the Jackson, Mich., Industrial News says: "Long petitions for closing the World's Fair on Sundays hav lately been showered upon Col. John T. Dickinson, secretary of the national commission. It begins to look as though people who are clamoring to hav the gates closed on Sunday are stuffing the ballot-boxes. It is considered somewhat peculiar that a number of petitions from several states exceed the total population as shown by the census of 1890. The states in which the petitions seem to hav been padded out of all reason are Ohio and Michigan. The tally-sheets in Secretary Dickinson's office show that 4,053,425 citizens of Ohio hav signed petitions. The census of 1890 givs Ohio a population of 3,672,316. On the face of the returns it therefore appears that if every man, woman, and child in that state had signed the Sunday-closing petitions, the list would hav been swelled nearly four hundred thousand votes. The returns from Michigan are even worse than those from Ohio. Mr. Porter's census-takers found 2,093,889 people in that state, yet the petitions contain 4,050,518 names. This is a sad commentary upon closing the Fair on account of morality when Christian people will resort to such measures."

When the petitions are reckoned honestly the Sabbatarians appear small and few in a hill. Up to May 14th Secretary Dickinson could count about twenty thousand names in favor of closing the Fair, after all the hullabaloo the Christians hav made, while on the other side, and through the efforts of THE TRUTH SEEKER only, there are twelve thousand names. Added to these are petitions from the North American Turner Bund and assemblies of the American Federation of Labor. Then there are distinct labor unions who sign their names to petitions begging that the Fair be opened Sundays in order that the laboring people may hav a chance to stroll through the grounds when attendance will not cost loss of wages. The two hundred and twenty delegates to the international convention of the Machinists' Association of North America adopted at their meeting last Wednesday in Chicago a resolution asking that the Fair be kept open Sunday. These machinists were from labor organizations in Canada, the United States, and Mexico. Their action is a denial of the interest manifested in their welfare by the Sabbath-closing people. Many petitions also advance the idea that to close the Fair means to favor the grog-shops and leave the thousands of people in the city to amuse themselvs in questionable resorts rather than by a quiet Sunday at Jackson park viewing the big buildings, the beautiful canals, statuary, and landscape effects. And now, with the help of the Investigator there is no doubt that the Freethinkers can equal the Christians in numbers of signers, though we cannot equal them in lying as to the number of non-signers the petitions represent.

As a matter of fact the Fair is already open on Sundays, and the Christians will hav hard work to close it. The Tribune, of Chicago, reports that the attendance on Sundays is now about eight thousand. These people are local visitors, who desire to watch the progress of the work. When the exhibits arrive and are set forth the attendance must multiply wonderfully. The directory are having hard work raising the necessary funds, and to giv up such enormous gate receipts would be financial suicide. In this case Mammon is on the side of righteousness.

But let no Freethinker spare his effort to make sure that the Christians do not compass their iniquitous end, for it would be little short of iniquity to close those gates against the people on Sundays. Circulate the petitions—get good, honest lists—urge societies to pass resolutions in favor of Sunday opening, and be sure they are sent to the proper person.

The Center of Puritanism.

There was a time, says the Sun, when the people of the South used to pride themselvs upon their freedom from Puritanism, meaning by that the spirit of interference with the business and amusements of other people, and intolerance and severity in the regulation of the minor morals and habits. In the last few years, however, Prohibition has been widely preached in the South, and we find in the laws of the Mississippi legislature of 1892 traces of the old-fashioned Puritanism of Maine and Massachusetts. We had supposed that Southerners regarded a horse-race as the one master sport of the world, and we had not supposed that they would be inclined to be severe against the enthusiast who should accentuate his opinion of a horse by a wager. Read this from the work of the Mississippi sages:

"If any person shall bet on a horse-race, or yacht-race, or on a shooting match, he shall be fined not more than $500; and unless the fine and costs be immediately paid, he shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than five days nor more than twenty days."

The Mississippi liquor law is practically a severe Prohibitory law. Most of the towns in the state are small, yet licenses range from $1,200 to $600, which goes to the state, and each town may ask as much more. A liquor-dealer can do business only in the front part of his shop, and it is a misdemeanor for him to put up a screen. If he is convicted of selling adulterated liquor, he may be imprisoned from one year to five years. It will cost him $500 and six months in the penitentiary to allow a game of chance to be played in his shop; and indictments against him cannot be thrown out for defect of form.

From this, the Sun concludes that the present center of Puritanism is in Mississippi. In this, however, our glowing contemporary is mistaken. There are several states with laws equally impudent upon their statute-books, and one of them, pretty close to the great and enlightened and Tammany-ruled town of New York, is going to hav them enforced, somewhat against the will of those who inherit the Puritanical mantle of the original legislators. New Jersey says to her people that they shall not even "sing for merriment" on Sunday, nor ride in a wagon unless going to church or for the doctor or a midwife. Everything is prohibited, practically, except these items and preparing meals and eating them.

By a report in a daily paper we find that the grand jury proposes to put the old Blue laws in force, indicting all the tradesmen of Jersey City and Hoboken who sell a glass of beer, or a pound of sugar, or a box of candy or cigars, or run a horse-car, or do any manner of servil work. This proposition, it seems to us, puts New Jersey a little ahead of Mississippi in Puritanism.

But there are two more states which rival Mississippi in Puritanism—in fact, come closer to the real old-fashioned religious bigotry of our ancestors. It is well known that the object of the Puritan's most zealous hatred was a person who did not agree with him in religion. For such he had the stocks, the jail, the cart's-tail, the broad boards with which to squeeze him to death, and the gallows. Heresy, whether rational or scriptural, the Massachusetts Puritan would not abide. And he especially hated anybody who differed with him in his interpretation of the Bible. His nearest rivals of to-day—that is, just now—are found in Tennessee and Texas. In both of these states there is a sect called Seventh Day Adventists, who differ from the evangelical Christians about as the Baptists and Quakers differed from the Puritans. These Seventh Day Adventists hav been persecuted in numerous states, but just at present Texas and Tennessee are the battle-ground. In each state indictments against some twenty of these holders of a pestilential heresy hav been found, and it is proposed to make hideous examples of them by sending them to jail for observing Saturday as the Sabbath and following the Lord's command to labor on the other six days of the week. Stocks and broad, weighted boards and the gallows hav gone out of fashion for heretics, but the jail remains, and the evangelical Christians—good Methodist and Presbyterian and other orthodox brethren—desire to see it filled with their enemies. And as there are only about twenty-five thousand Seventh Day Adventists in the whole country they can, by exercising due diligence, soon get them all in limbo.

No, the center of Puritanism is not in Mississippi, but is to be found for the time being wherever there is an evangelical Christian who has the opportunity and courage to practice his religion.

Presbyterianism Going to Pieces.

Professor Briggs, of the Union Theological Seminary, and also of heretical fame, has gone to Portland, Oregon, to attend the Presbyterian general assembly and hav his alleged heresy passed upon by competent Presbyterian authority. He desires to be in full fellowship with his church, with the proviso, however, that his church agrees with him. His attitude in the matter is that of the penny-tosser who cries, Heads I win, tails you lose. If the decision is for him, well and good; if against, he will continue to teach in his seminary, being backed by all the trustees.

There is no reason why Dr. Briggs should not win, or, if he is condemned about two-thirds of the Presbyterian ministers should be condemned with him. The church of Calvin and Knox is no longer the cast-iron-creeded, hell-fire and hot-pitch organization it once was. It is getting to be a Universalist affair. Its preachers preach loose theology and ignore its principal dogmas. Once the Presbyterians held that church-going and church-joining was an essential requisit of salvation; that faith in the creed was paramount; that the Catechism was really a part of holy writ. All this, however, appears to hav gone by.

We hav before us a sermon preached in the Trinity Presbyterian church of Chestnut Hill. It is only a sermon, of course, but it was considered so clear an explanation of Presbyterianism that it has been printed for circulation in Sunday-schools, and is used as a sort of bait to bring people into the church. It endeavors to answer the question, What it means to join the church? and it answers it by declaring that a member of the Presbyterian church need not believe anything more than a Unitarian believes. "We hold," he says, "that every Christian is fit to be a member of our church, whatever he may think, whether he be a Calvinist or an Arminian." Joining the church "does not mean the adopting of any special creed or system of theology. This is a fact often misunderstood. The misapprehension of it has kept and is keeping some men out of the church of Christ. Our church lays great stress on sound doctrin. It has always stood for a positiv faith. It has definit church standards—the Confession of Faith, the Catechisms. It seems to put an especial emphasis on doctrin, on belief. Now many a man sees this and says, I cannot join that church because I do not hold to those beliefs; I do not believe all that the Westminster Confession says; it has hard things in it, hard to understand, hard to accept. There are some statements in it I plainly feel that I cannot accept. I would not even say I would accept it in general, or as a whole. It certainly lays down as positiv articles of faith many things I am content to say I do not know about, and perhaps never shall know. Many a man thinks in that way. And as he sees the importance placed by our church on right belief, the strictness and tenacity with which we cling to our creed, he very naturally says, I cannot join your church, for I do not accept your creed. Yes, sometimes he comes to us and says, as if it were a great reproach, I do not believe there is one in ten among your members who believes what he professes to believe, meaning by that the standards of the church.

"What shall we say to such a man? Just the simplest and most unanswerable reply, and that is—you do not hav to accept it. Our members do not profess to believe our creed. Our church never intends that only those should be members who accept all the doctrins of its creed, or who accept that creed in general. There are no doctrinal tests ever imposed for admission to our membership. I turn to the man who says, as one did say to me but a short time ago, 'I cannot join the church because I do not accept its creed,' and I say, that has nothing whatever to do with it. There are absolutely no doctrinal conditions of church membership; at any rate there are none in our church. You may not believe the Confession of Faith, you may not understand or accept all the Catechism, and yet you may be well qualified to be a member of the Presbyterian church. When you come forward to join us, you say, not—I am a Calvinist; you say, I am a Christian.

"I am not saying you could be a good Presbyterian minister, or elder, or teacher, or professor of theology, without assenting to the doctrins of the Presbyterian church. That is a different matter. But church membership has nothing to do with these; it implies no acceptance of any special creed. There are no doctrinal tests which can be lawfully imposed.

"You may not hav understood it in this way, but it is so—this is the only qualification for joining the church, that you believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and purpose to obey him; no alliance with one denomination against others; no creed, except the simple creed, I believe in Jesus as my teacher, my helper, and my master; that is all it implies."

What is that but practical Unitarianism, with the exception of the clause affecting ministers, elders, and teachers, and that is thrown in probably to save his own ministerial position from being assailed? Presbyterianism to-day is but a shadow of its former self—the people are too civilized to hav it otherwise. And this bid for membership shows that at least some of the churches know that their creed is too cold and too hot, too heartless and cruel, too repugnant to all the finer and more humane sentiments of the race, to find acceptance. So they discard it entirely, and rely upon the general sentiment in favor of Jesus among Christians to attract. And it is the wide diffusion of this progressiv thinking that makes Professor Briggs so bold and the directors of his seminary so firm in retaining him. They do not fear any boycott any presbyteries can put upon them. They can hold the trade and manufacture ministers, and these ministers can find positions, in spite of all the fogies in the church.

But, practically, the whole system of Christianity is overturned by the criticism of the Briggs party, which destroys the old dogma of the inspiration of the Bible. And if the ideas of the pastor of Trinity Presbyterian church of Chestnut Hill are adopted, the Presbyterian churches will become Unitarian strongholds. The logical progress of the Briggs school is to take away every fact upon which theology is now based. As a reviewer puts it, "everything will go, revelation, inspiration, the trinity, the incarnation, the very existence of a personal God. The movement, so defiantly commenced, can not stop short of downright pantheism." But we should say that, between Professor Briggs and the Chestnut Hill preacher, one destroying the foundation and the other the superstructure, about everything is gone already. When a man can join a Presbyterian church without believing the Bible or subscribing to the Confession of Faith the standards of Christianity would seem to be prone upon the ground.

In the East.

News and Notes.

However one may differ with Heywood as to his methods, it must be admitted that he has suffered an enormous wrong at the hands of the government, and that was the meaning of the banquet given to the intrepid pioneer on his release from prison. It was a protest against a tyranny based on church power and superstition-theology. His imprisonment was a disgrace to the American republic. It is to be noted that on his trial not a single person appeared to testify that he had been injured by any act of Mr. Heywood. It was the "parental" supervision of an ecclesiastical state that ordered his condemnation. As Beecher says, a "paternal" government is an "infernal" government.

However, the reception was genial. There were no revolutionary thunders, no lightnings of dynamite. It was simply sociable, but deeply meaning—a festivity amid whose flowers and happy thoughts was the spirit that would stand for liberty now and forever.

It was a delightful coincidence that Canada could send its chief representativ of Freethought to grace the occasion, and that he should be the outcome of the Puritan conscience, and, amidst the massiv defenses of orthodoxy, enriched with centuries of power, should giv the new voice for Freedom, more potent than any of the voices of the past. I wonder what the venerable Adams would think if he could look upon that sparkling occasion and hear his own son giv fearless utterance to ideas that will shake his beloved church to its very foundation.

Captain Adams touched the springs of good fellowship with felicitous address. We were present, he said, not simply to maintain our right to think, but the right of every other to think differently from ourselvs, and to express his honest thought. I guess none of those gathered around the table would agree as to methods and beliefs, but the very diversity of personal convictions would only emphasize what we did stand for—equal and impartial liberty the world over.

From Boston to Montreal is something of a journey; but Sunday morning, in company with Captain Adams, I was in this flourishing northern metropolis, where the ice-king reigns at times with merry wand, and summer follows with contrasting splendor. Montreal, like a queen, wears its diadem at the head of ocean navigation and flashes its proud eye of prosperity far along the St. Lawrence to the mighty lakes and the beaming harvest fields of the West. Even to Duluth some time will stretch the long line of freighted ships. Montreal is a handsome city. It has the modern magnificence mingled with the somber luster of the venerable past. One realizes the power of the church where its wealth and glory are so manifest. There are about two hundred churches in Montreal, and one of them is the largest on the continent, with the exception, perhaps, of one in Mexico. It holds thirteen thousand people. I went into it as into some gorgeous dungeon. It beams with wonderful ornaments, pictures, statues, crucifixes, altars, candles, colored windows. I was no longer in the nineteenth century. I was a dreamer, floating over the "dark backward and abysm of time." The church waved its mystic wand. How strong, how lasting, how imposing, how awful seemed its power—persistent, splendid still, amid the world's rushing tides! Not satisfied with this great and gilded structure, a beautiful chapel has just been added, at a cost of $100,000. Into this I penetrated, and a most dazzling array of luxurious appointments for worship environed me, as if upon the church's solemn history dawned a more brilliant future. I was saddened as I came into the sunshine again, but Captain Adams cheered me with the story of the man—quoting Victor Hugo—who held a little book in his fingers. Pointing to the massiv church, with its towers piercing the skies, its blazing windows, its glittering dome, its huge walls, he said: "Some day this little book will destroy that mighty building." This was a sudden illumination. Yes, the book, without gold, or jewels, or ornaments, or gilded crown, or shining vestment—the little book, with thought's eternal power, with poetry and music and light and splendor—will sweep away the gigantic temple. I will trust in the book, I said to myself, though the Bastiles do seem to grow bigger and stronger, and the multitude bow before the jeweled shrines.

As a relief I visited also the banks and business houses of Montreal, and the bright and bustling scenes declared that this world was of some importance after all in spite of man's terrific dreams of heaven and hell.

But the greatest delight was a trip with friends to the top of Mount Royal. If the devil had taken Jesus up here he might hav got the better of him. If I was offered possession of all I could see from this hight it would be an enormous temptation. There is nothing about Jerusalem that could equal it—and for grandeur and vastness and beauty and animation I do not think it could be surpassed in the world. Right at your feet is the brilliant and immense city, with its churches, its colleges, its palatial residences, its busy streets, its wharves, its factories. Then, beyond rolls the St. Lawrence, broad and luminous, as if in itself it were a flowing sea. Into the far horizon melts its glitter-flood. Beyond stretch the cultivated plains and wild forests, edged with shining hills, a hundred miles away, and dimly glorious against the blue skies are the Green mountains and the Adirondacks. It is a scene of infinit variety—the majesty of nature and the genius of man make blending pictures. Passing from this sublime outlook in a few minutes we come to the city of the dead, the Roman Catholic cemetery. Amid these multitudinous graves, with their gleaming shafts and elegant monuments, lies the body of Guibord, whom all the power of the church could not keep from this consecrated ground. He is buried there, with a massiv stone upon his coffined dust, and surely angel Gabriel will hav to giv an extra blast to awake him from his heretical sleep. There he lies, even in his death an eternal adversary of the church of Rome.

Alongside the highways are fourteen "stations," representing the trial and death of Jesus. At these stations the devout bend the knee and secure the blessing of heaven. At the end of the pious pilgrim's pathway are three lofty crosses, and upon these hang the crucified ones in ghastly prominence —Jesus and the two thieves. I like the look of the impenitent thief. There is a sort of glorious defiance about him. He lifts his arm with a superb energy, as if the blackness of death could not overcome his fierce spirit. The other figures hav a humble, despairing, submissiv look, and I do not admire them. I stand with the rebel and the minority in this case. I like his unflinching attitude.

The Protestant cemetery is also on Mount Royal, and thus the living and the dead—the emblems of religion and the magnificence of nature—the broad, bright world of beauty and delight, the pride of man, and the "narrow house"—mingle in tragical and beautiful aspects; and those who study humanity on the clear hights of science can discover in the midst of weakness and terror the elements of strength and progress.

Walter Adams, who has just graduated from the scientific course, opens for me the doors of McGill University and I hav an opportunity to see its varied resources. It is somewhat under the orthodox wing of Principal Dawson and others, but Freethinkers hav contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to its support, and it promises eventually to be a vast and Liberal institution. Church colleges are enrolled under its banner, but with these are also industrial schools, shops, machinery, and institutions of law and medicin, and I guess these noble elements will triumph in the long run. At any rate the Infidel has helped to make this university the splendid establishment that it is.

The Montreal Liberals were generous in their welcome. I gave two lectures, Sunday, the 15th, and the hall was full, and the greeting was all that my heart could wish. It is difficult amidst these two hundred churches to maintain the line of advance, but the friends here are stanch and true, and the flag will always float.

I must thank Captain Adams and his wife, and Walter Adams, for their delightful hospitality. Theirs is a home of Freethought indeed, of culture and humanity.

I enjoyed for the first time the companionship of George Martin, the former president of the club. I was gratified with the gift of his volume of poems, where the genius of romance shines, inspired by the history and scenery of Canada. My friend has the poetic insight, and his songs are musical, not only with nature's breath, but with the dreams and hopes of the lofty human heart.

Dr. Arthur Fisher, a veteran reformer, presents me with his "Popular Sociology," a pamphlet written years ago, but alive with the most progressiv thought of to-day.

Secretary Marcuss, Mr. and Mrs. Granville, Theo. Boas, Morris Michaels, and others, hav placed my work in Montreal among the things to be remembered. They giv the helping hand indeed, and the good word and the cheerful spirit. The same flag is above us, the flag of freedom and of humanity; the same stars are gleaming in its fields, the stars of hope and truth. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The Heywood Case.

The good account of the reception and banquet to Mr. Heywood upon his release from prison, and of the generous responses to Dr. Foote's call for a subscription for Mr. Heywood's benefit, which you giv your readers in your issue of the 21st inst., is very gratifying to me. As your readers know my relation to Mr. Heywood and to his alleged trial, I now write to say in your columns that after two years of deliberation I unqualifiedly approve Mr. Heywood's conduct and applaud him for it. What is more to the purpose, I am confident that Mr. Heywood's own conscience approves his acts. He has written

> Not one immoral or indecent thought;
> Not one line which, dying, he would wish to blot.

So far from having done anything deserving imprisonment, I consider that Mr. Heywood deserves a seat in Congress, and I am sure that, were he endowed with such a trust, he could be depended upon to maintain the foundation principles of American liberty, and that he would never swerve from his conviction of right through false pride or a vain desire to appear respectable, as has been done in this very matter by a Senator I might name.

While I feel keenly the reproach cast upon American jurisprudence by the imprisonment of Mr. Heywood, I feel also that I am as little responsible for it as was Erskine for the imprisonment of Mr. Wakefield or Wakeman for the imprisonment of Mr. Bennett.

With the exception of Hone's final glorious triumph there were many features about the pretended trial of Mr. Heywood closely resembling the so-called trial of William Hone for blasphemous and seditious libel. As Mr. Hone was singled out for prosecution from a great number of parodists, among whom were members of the very administration that were prosecuting him, so Mr. Heywood was chosen for a victim from a number of similar writers, among whom were his prosecutors. That Mr. Heywood was a thorn in the side of a prurient society as Mr. Hone was to a corrupt government, there can be no doubt, and as Mr. Hone's parodies were no more blasphemous than Canning's, so Mr. Heywood's publications were no more violations of law than the celebrated Vaseline pamphlet or "Our Suffering Sisters." As it was estimated that Mr. Hone's poverty would make him an easy prey to the powers of state, so without doubt Mr. Heywood was chosen for martyrdom because of his quiet, inoffensiv humility and moderate circumstances. The same persistent malignity apparent in Hone's case was manifested in Heywood's case in the eagerness to sweep aside all considerations of justice and to excite the prejudices of the jury. The charge in Heywood's case was as dishonest as that in Hone's case. It was as strong a demand for conviction as the prosecution could hav made. The jury were robbed of their functions and directed what to do, no issue in the case being left to them to decide. The judge exhibited no disposition to be honest nor any willingness to be fair. His sole anxiety seemed to be to comply with instructions from headquarters at Washington to "push Heywood." These instructions emanated from the same source as the attacks upon Walt Whitman and Count Tolstoi. Having surrendered his independence and obeyed orders, the judge must now look to his losses for his recompense, but I feel sure that my liberty-loving compatriots will remember and know the application of that couplet which accompanied a subscription for Mr. Hone's benefit:

> May Jeffries's Fame and Jeffries's Fate
> On every modern Jeffries wait.

And I doubt not the judge who brought himself into notoriety by blackguarding General Butler will fall into his due place in the estimation of the future historian. EDWARD W. CHAMBERLAIN.

New York, May 22, 1892.

W. S. Bell Lecturing in Oregon.

What a variety of experiences the Freethought lecturer has. No two places that he speaks in hav the same surroundings for his lecture. At one place he has a large audience, and at the next only a few; often he speaks to an overflowing hall, more than full, but in a very limited one, and the next speech, at another town, is to a handful scattered all over the Opera House. Sometimes the speaker will hav several crying babies in the audience which, like the canaries, start up their songs when the speaker is warming up to his subject. Occasionally a dog will give an accompanying howl to complete the chorus. Possibly about that time a Silurian, who has come to the meeting out of curiosity, takes advantage of a lull in the speaker's melodies to make a rapid retreat, murmuring, "Such blasphemies, such blasphemies!" The audience smiles audibly, the babies are hushed, and the dog is invited to retire, and the speaker resumes "the thread of his discourse." At Woodburn, Ore., I had two very large and attentiv audiences. The Association Hall in which I spoke is one of the most delightful halls in its acoustic properties of any hall in which I hav spoken during my fourteen years of lecturing. It was a great pleasure to speak under such favorable conditions, for the next places I visited hav inferior halls, and also had very small audiences. There are two activ and outspoken Liberals at Woodburn, W. M. Cline and his three daughters, and L. W. Guiss and his wife, two daughters, and son. I was quite kindly cared for by both families. At Canby I gave only one lecture to a small audience, and was entertained by Geo. Knight and family, and Herman Lee and family. Only one mile and a half from Canby is a new town, called Barlow, the home of W. W. Jesse, an old friend and Liberal standby. My lecture here was slimly attended, and shekels were few. W. S. BELL.

Portland, Ore.

Little Blasphemies.

Matches are made in heaven, but the friction of the earth is what tests their efficiency.

> "The wages of sin is death," they say,
> But most sinners will not kick
> If pay-day's postponed and with it their chance
> Of meeting his nibs—Old Nick.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Cincinnati, O.....	May 29	Kaysville, and
Ottumwa, Ia.....	June 1	Farmington, Utah	June 15
Blackhawk, Col...	" 3	Morgan City, Utah	" 16
Boulder City, Col.	" 4, 5	Echo, Utah.....	" 17
Georgetown, Col..	" 6	Reno, Nev.....	" 21
Denver, Col.....	" 7	Carson City, Nev.	" 22
Scofield, Utah.....	" 9, 10	Virginia City, Nev.	" 23
Salt Lake, Utah...	" 12, 19	Inyo county, Cal.	" 24–27
Provo, Utah.....	" 13	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash.....	July 3, 4
Murray, Utah.....	" 14

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

AFTER Mr. Albert Bach's lecture on "Lunacy" at the Manhattan Liberal Club, on the evening of April 29th, the annual business meeting for election of officers was held, with the following result: President, E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D.; vice-presidents, R. A. Gunn, M.D., Wilson McDonald, and Mrs. Emma Beckwith; secretary, Huldah A. Gunn, M.D.; treasurer, Miss Schachtel; librarian, Mrs. C. Leonard; trustees, E. W. Chamberlain, Dr. Julius Fehr, James Morris. The lecture appointments for May are as follows:

May 27th, "The Government of Cities," Dr. L. G. Janes.

Meetings will be discontinued during July, August, and September.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH's lecture appointments:

Angola, Ind.....May	30	Cleveland, O.....June	13, 15
Waterloo, Ind....June	4, 5, 6	Pittsburgh, Pa....	" 19
Butler, Ind.....	" 7, 8	Butler, Pa.....	" 20, 21
Columbus, O.....	" 12	Philadelphia, Pa.	" 26

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

W. S. BELL is now in Oregon, where he will lecture in May and June; afterward he goes to Washington. The following are his dates till June 12th:

Corvallis, Ore..May	27	Cathlamet, Wash..June	2–4
Silverton, " .. "	29	Skamokawa, " .. "	5, 6
Oswego, " .. "	28, 30	Deep River, " .. "	12
Stella, Wash.. "	31

PHILOSOPHICAL Association, Sundays at 3 P.M., Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D.—Lectures for May:

May 29th, closing service: Mr. H. Rowley, Review of the Season's Work.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, May 29th, at 3 o'clock, closing exercises of the Newark League will be addressed by the president, Mr. Henry Bird, and other members of the League, including a review of the season's work and plans for the future.

The Book of Many Meanings.

Uncle Billy recently developed a great deal of interest in religious matters, and it was observed with a good deal of surprise by several boat-owners that he was no longer ready and willing to take a hand at the work they offered him. One of the men who had depended a good deal on his services said:

"I'm sorry that you won't work any more."

"'Deed, sah, I is puffickly willin' to wuk; but I kain't wuk in yoh boat."

"Why not?"

"Kase she's a two-master."

"Why, that's no reason at all."

"Massa, ef you wants to 'peril yer own soul, 'tain' none ob my business; but de Good Book says plain as day, dat no man kain't sarbe two masters."—Washington Star.

THE civilization of Greece alone appears to hav been wholly or nearly free from this idea of the agency of demons in producing bodily ills; hence, Greece was the first of the ancient nations, and indeed the only one, so far as we know, in which a scientific idea of medicin was evolved. Five hundred years before Christ, in the great bloom period of thought, the period of Eschylus, Phidias, Pericles, Socrates, and Plato, Hippocrates appeared, and his is one of the greatest names in all history. Quietly but thoroughly he broke away from the old tradition, developed scientific thought, and laid the foundation of medical science upon experience, observation, and reason so deeply and broadly that his teaching remains to this hour among the most precious possessions of our race. His thought was passed on to the School of Alexandria, and there medical science was developed yet further, especially by such men as Hierophilus and Erasistratus. Under their lead studies in human anatomy began by dissection; the old prejudice which had weighed so long upon the human race, preventing that method of anatomical investigation without which there can be no real results, was cast aside apparently forever. But with the coming in of Christianity a great new chain of events was set in motion which modified most profoundly the further evolution of medical science.—Ex-president White of Cornell University.

That Church Picture.

To M. Raoul de Parabere, Captain Twentieth Cuirassiers, Paris, France, My Dear Boy and ex-Pupil: You remember, I am very sure, the numerous punishments I was forced to inflict upon you in your youthful days for your too pronounced taste for sketching, and sketching upon any and all things. Even my prayer-books were covered with outlines, not always as correct as they should hav been, that came from your pen. I also know that at St. Cyr this talent of yours had not its equal. Briefly, with these facts in mind, you are the man I want. But now to explain this preamble.

Since your school-days I hav become the curé of Avricourt, a small parish by no means rich and with a church decidedly shabby, weather-worn, and with one of the panels of the wall in a condition that truly afflicts me. It has a spot upon it produced by moisture—in fact, a former leak—some three meters long by as many high, and which I desire to conceal by a picture of the same dimensions. It has occurred to me that perhaps you could find this prize for me in Paris, at auction possibly or in some kindred establishment. But I must limit you as to price, since the committee who hav the settlement for the picture in charge will pay for same but five and fifty francs, frame included. Only select a biblical subject, from the Old or New Testament as suits you—for the rest I rely entirely upon you. Attend to this immediately, and may heaven keep you, my own dear lad. Your old and affectionate preceptor, Miguel, Curé of Avricourt.

To M. l'Abbé Miguel, Curé of Avricourt, Province of A——, France, My Dear Abbe: I will start the campaign at once, though a picture three meters square or thereabouts, at five and fifty francs, frame included, is not a very easy thing to find. However, I shall do my best; count upon me. Your old and grateful pupil, Parabere, Captain Twentieth Cuirassiers.

When Raoul de Parabère had written and sent off this short and somewhat laconic letter—he was a busy man with his garrison duties and had a limited number of hours in the day to devote to his own amusement—he sat himself down and began to reflect with seriousness upon the task before him.

"Simply a gigantic task!" he told himself. How the deuce was he to find a biblical picture of these huge dimensions, and how the deuce could he possibly spare a moment to hunt for it? He saw himself demanding from the commandant a leave of absence upon such a commission! He'd certainly send him to the right-about and to the devil besides.

But Raoul de Parabère, with all his faults, had an excellent heart. So the more he thought of the little church and its needs, the more he felt inclined to make the attempt; and as the curé, of whom he was really very fond, had written him to be in haste about it, he might as well start at once on his first essay.

And Parabère, leaping to his feet, dismissed his orderly and his waiting mount, hailed a passing fiacre and ran to the Hôtel de Ventes, the likeliest place he could think of at the moment, and where he found everything but what he sought—a biblical picture. And the next day, and the day after, and the day after that, between the hours of official duty and a few other things, Parabère followed precisely the same trail—in addition rummaged the bric-à-brac shops and the stalls for odds and ends—still without success.

He had really begun to despair, when he recalled the shop of a certain Mme. Lardêche, an old acquaintance of his, who knew where to put her finger, day or night, upon those charming trifles in Sèvres and those trinkets so necessary to bestow upon friends who of course love you for yourself alone.

In this marvelous collection of Mme. Lardêche's one always had a choice of pretty things that had an air of costing nothing at all till you came to pay for them—and then!

But what did that matter when every article in the establishment had a number, history, and genealogical tree to prove its antiquity?

"I shall certainly not find at her house my picture or any other picture at five and fifty francs, frame included," thought Parabère, disconsolately, "still it's the last chance, and if the price runs above the mark, parbleu! I'll make up the figure."

And he entered, to find Mme. Lardêche, as usual, like a gorgeous spider awaiting her prey, enthroned in a Mme. de Maintenon chair, and truly, not unlike that lady herself, with her touch of rouge upon the cheekbones, her patches, and her lust of gold.

"Ah, is it you, my captain?" she exclaimed on seeing him enter, "is it really you? and a whole month since you paid me a call? You've changed your mind, then, and decided to take that bit of Sèvres for Mlle. Regnier of the Gaîté? A lovely trifle!"

"No, my dear Mme. Lardêche, my errand to-day is a serious one. I am seeking a picture, a church picture—think of it!—some three to five meters square," and as Parabère talked on, unfolding to her the mission he was expected to fill, the face of Mme. Lardêche expanded, more and more, into a broad and unctuous smile.

"A providence!" she cried. "A providence in truth! I hav precisely what you want, above there," pointing to the loft—"a church picture, and by a great painter; but so huge, so very huge, that no one would ever buy it. I will sell it to you, M. de Parabère, for the merest song."

"Bravo! and this church picture represents——"

"I do not know, that is, exactly; something taken from sacred history; still, if you want a special subject——"

"No, not at all," said Parabère, alarmed lest the prize should slip through his fingers; "the subject is a matter of positiv indifference to me, provided it is biblical and the canvas of the requisit size."

"Three to five meters, you said? Oh, it's all of that! But, come, see it for yourself; it's here in the loft."

"The loft? No, thanks, I'm pressed for time as it is. I leave it to your judgment. What do you want for it?"

"Frame included? Eh, bien, fifty louis—dirt-cheap at that."

"I'll giv you thirty; boxing and expressage prepaid. Address the Abbé Miguel, curé of Avricourt, to be shipped immediately. Do you agree?"

Mme. Lardêche battled a moment. The picture was immense! the painting superb! the frame a veritable antique. Then—she yielded and the bargain was sealed.

Two hours later the worthy curé Miguel, at his frugal tea, received a message destined to set the parish wild with delight:

Picture purchased, superb, right size, five and fifty francs, frame included, boxed, expressed, and shipped.

Parabere.

It was but little after daylight the next morning when the curé Miguel gathered together the committees on funds and arrangements, and laid before them not only the good news of the picture's coming, but also, with a certain prideful pomp, the necessity for its proper reception. He could scarcely believe that that spot of humidity, which had so long distracted and divided his attention with his religious duties, was going to disappear at last, to actually pass from sight behind the radiant colors of a broad and glowing canvas—all for the insignificant sum of five and fifty francs!

To skip details, however, and the discussion that followed between the abbé and the committees—torn between a desire to greet the picture with all due honor and the natural economy of all church committees—it was finally decided that nothing short of a grand procession could fill the bill and still please all parties.

The abbé himself, as curé of the church, attended by his acolytes, the choir and chorister boys, was to lead the cortége and escort the box to the sacristy of the chapel, where it was to be opened in the presence of the assembled people; and Mme. la Duchesse de Precy-Brussac, the head of the reception committee, was to set to work immediately upon the fashioning of gorgeous garlands and the erection of a suitable and imposing reposoir.

A reposoir constructed from the park benches arranged in a square, decorated with colored streamers, all the available casts of holy saints to be borrowed in the neighborhood, a number of china vases, and a limitless quantity of trailing vines and potted flowers.

But, with all these preparations, it was fully 12 o'clock before the procession, which had swelled to a big one, was well under way, the participants walking two by two; the curé and the Little Sisters of the Poor, at the head of the line, under a beautiful banner of purple satin embroidered with gold. Next came the choir and the chorister boys, followed by the van from the police station, hung with white and wreathed with blossoms, thanks again to the taste of Mme. la Duchesse.

Flanking this chariot, and presenting a most martial aspect with their brass helmets sparkling and shining in the rays of the sun, marched the brave Captain Balligan and his corps of firemen. Behind the firemen came the beadle of the church, behind the beadle the greater part of the population of the village of Avricourt, among whom one saw, resplendent, the duke and duchess of Precy-Brussac, the distributor of contributions, and the lieutenant of gendarmerie. Only the maire, his assistant, and the schoolmaster, for the sake of example, had consented to stay at home.

And all along the route the choir sang psalms and praises, the choristers swung their censers; the station-master came a square to meet them to tell them the box had already arrived; and when the curé had blessed it and four of the firemen had lifted and shouldered it to its place in the wagon, the long procession faced about and returned majestically across the plain.

The incense mingled its intoxicating breath with the resinous odor of woods and fields, the voices of the singers rose and fell in soft and rhythmic cadence, repeated by the voice of the distant hills, and everywhere throughout the country the peasants, men and women, abandoned their work to stand with gaping mouths and uncovered heads as the great box passed on its way.

The curé had only one regret, that his dear lad, Raoul de Parabère, was absent and could not witness the crowning triumph of his efforts. But words fail me. Picture for yourself that fateful moment when, at last, the box was placed in the sacristy and the carpenter, old Père Virgile, on his knees beside it, made the nails leap from the planks that had shielded it on the way; while at his elbow, on her knees also, was the directress of the Little Sisters of the Poor, whom the worthy curé had selected from all that multitude for the final lifting of the veil. Picture for yourselvs, also, the amazement of the faithful, when the good Sœur Anne, folding back with eager fingers the baize that still curtained the face of the picture, dropped it again instantly, as if it burnt her, and with a cry that certainly sounded like a cry of horror.

"Well, well, my sister," cried the curé, impatiently, believing her, in his innocent soul, only bewildered by the beauty of the picture, "off with it, please; off with it!"

"Off with it? Pardon me, M. le Curé," and Sœur Anne rose up crimson as a poppy, "there is some mistake; I do not wish to unveil this picture!"

"You do not wish it?" repeated the curé, bewildered in his turn, "you do not wish to unveil the picture? So be it, Sœur Anne, so be it! Captain Balligan, will you oblige us?"

And the captain would and did—that is, to the extent of one corner; but though he gazed longer and with more admiration than the directress had done, the picture's face was not unveiled when the gallant fireman stumbled to his feet.

"I—I am not a judge," said he, with a defensiv air and an added redness upon his florid cheeks, "and if you please, M. le Curé——"

The captain got no farther in his little speech; the duc de Precy-Brussac, out of patience with so much humming, hawing, and delay, had stepped behind him, and in the twinkling of an eye the picture was seen by all.

By all! And what is more, it was seen by the men with "ohs" and "ahs;" by the women with cries and blushes; by the good Sœur Anne with a frantic bound and an activ wheeling of her youthful charges' faces to the wall.

"Bread and water and a week of penance to every one," she cried, "who dares to look around!"

The trouble?

The picture, of course! The picture of a nobly fashioned dame, reclining upon a couch, her costume that of an undraped artist's model, who retains by the hem of his garment (a coat of many colors) the equally noble figure of a struggling man, seeking with might and main to run away—an artist's rendering of a biblical story, Joseph and Mme. Potiphar, as the veriest child could see! But why go farther? The result was that the great church picture was closed in its box again, securely nailed, and the crowd dispersed; those on the outskirts, who had only had a passing and the briefest glimpse of this scandal, being even more indignant at the deprivation than the committee of payment over the loss of their five and fifty francs, while the good cure Miguel was positivly reduced to tears.

But the cure Miguel is heartbroken no longer; matters hav been happily arranged, and the picture now hangs in its place hiding the objectionable spot. Joseph, provided with a pair of wings, a gilded trumpet, and a belligerent expression, has become the angel Gabriel.

Mme. Potiphar—well, there is still some doubt as to what Mme. Potiphar has become. One thing is certain, her present draperies are most voluminously ample. She wears upon her brow a nimbus of clouds and golden stars, and the velvet of her scarlet petticoat covers about half the wall of the little church.—O'Monroy in Short Stories.

Colonel Ingersoll on Money.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: In your paper recently I read part of an interview of Colonel Ingersoll reported in the Chicago Tribune. In answer to the question, "How do you stand on the money question?" he is reported as saying: "I am with the Republican party on the question of money. I regard money as a commodity—something that cannot be created by law. I am also for the use of gold and silver both, but I want a dollar's worth of silver in a silver dollar. I do not believe in light money, or in cheap money, or in poor money. These are all contradictions in terms. Congress cannot fix the value of money. The most it can do is to fix its debt-paying power. It is beyond the power of any Congress to fix the purchasing value of what it may be pleased to call 'money.' Nobody knows, so far as I know, why people want gold. I do not know why people want silver. I do not know how gold came to be money." These are remarkable utterances to come from a man of his standing. It is financial "orthodoxy," dogmatic, unreasonable, and depending on prestige alone for authority.

When he says he "regards money as a commodity—something that cannot be created by law any more than wheat or corn," he flies in the face of both reason and authority—every authority of respectability—on the subject.

Aristotle said, "Money is a creation of law." Jeuly Tiffony, in his "Constitutional Law," says: "There is legally no such thing as gold or silver money or paper money. Money is the sovereign authority, impressed on that which is capable of taking and retaining the impression. The value is in the stamp and not in the metal or material."

The doctrin asserted by Colonel Ingersoll is the "intrinsic value," "honest," "hard" money orthodoxology of the Jewish and English usurers, who demand men shall accept their dogmatic assertions. They begin to meet the same inquiring spirit in this that scouts "orthodoxy," theology (Godology), or any other "ology" that cannot giv a reason for its faith. The truth is, that school of financiers do not care whether the dollar has more or less gold or silver in it, or is made of gold or silver at all. What they seek to maintain by their sophisms and assertions is a small volume of dollars, and as a consequence a scarce and a dear dollar. By confining the currency of the country to the two precious metals, or a currency based on and redeemable in coin, they hope, in the future as in the past, to contract the volume of the legal-tender money of the nation. And it is to the maintaining of this conspiracy against civilization and mankind that Colonel Ingersoll ignorantly or knowingly lends his name, when he indulges in the cheap twaddle about "cheap money" and "poor money." He declares "Congress cannot fix the value of money."

The Constitution declares "the Congress shall hav power to coin money, regulate the value thereof and of foreign coin." To "regulate the value" includes the power "to fix" it. He admits it can "fix its debt-paying power." He says "it is beyond the power of any Congress to fix the purchasing value of what it may be pleased to call 'money.'" It did it during the war. It made $16 in "greenbacks" to hav "the purchasing value" of a month's service of the common soldier, and Colonel Ingersoll knows it, and would treat every man as a deserter who refused to serve on the ground that his greenbacks were "depreciated" as compared to gold.

Yes, the Congress made laws to even draft him in many instances; took him, soul and body, with his ability to labor, all his capital, from his family, his hearthstone, put a musket in his hands, and stood him out to stop the steel and bullets of the invaders, and "fixed the value," "the purchasing value of money"—greenbacks—to pay, and made him take it. I am surprised that the man who has such a contempt for orthodoxy and theology and has so emphatically and distinctly pointed out the "mistakes of Moses" should be himself so tied hand and foot to the dogmatic sophistry of the Jew usury system of "finance." He says, "I do not know how gold came to be money." Does he know how clay came to be bricks? Does he not know that bricks are as much money as uncoined gold, or even our coined gold in England? If he owned both the bricks and our coined gold there, and wished to sell them, all he could do would be to count the bricks by the thousand and weigh the gold to them by the ounce. He asserts the old "specie basis," "resumption," Jew system of finance.

Again the colonel sets out to answer the question, "How do you stand on the money question?" Now, every person of information knows the bottom fact of the money question is whether the volume of the legal-tender money of the country shall be increased. The Farmers' Alliance and Knights of Labor and People's party desire an increase from the $7 to $10 now in circulation to $50 per capita, "or sufficient to do the business of the country on a cash basis." Mr. Foster, as United States treasurer and ex-officio pettifogger and special pleader for the banks, usurers, and Jew system of finance, thought that question of sufficient importance in the late Ohio campaign to publish a Republican campaign document at public expense, to show there is as much or more money now in existence in the country than ever before. But this "question" of the money question the colonel dodges. If he did it ignorantly, he shows himself a novice on the whole question, and no more worthy of our time and attention than a twelve-year-old boy., If he did it intentionally, it is not characteristic of him, indicates pressure from some quarter, and tends to shake our confidence in his sincerity. Garfield said, "Whosoever controls the volume of the currency is absolute master of the commerce and industries of the country." Take out "the commerce and industries" of this country and there is not much left to "control" but the banks, aristocratic usurers, lay and clergy, churchianity, and the Jew system of finance and its apostles.

U. S. Grant said: "The experience of the present panic has proven that currency based on the credit of the nation is the best money the world ever saw." So say all of us who demand the abolition of the national banking system and the issue of $50 per capita "based on the credit of the nation."

But Colonel Ingersoll says, "I am with the Republican party on the money question"—that is, a "currency based on and redeemable in coin"—and says there is now as much money as ever in existence in the country and enough to do its business, and opposes putting any more in circulation.

That is what he says if we giv him credit for saying anything on that vital issue of the money question. I hav used the term, "Jew system of finance." Let me explain what I mean by it. Under the Mosaic law the Jew was not permitted to loan money or anything else at usury—that is, interest—to a Jew, but he might to a gentile. When the Nazarene came, he and his disciples taught there were "no more Jew or gentile, bond or free;" that "the partition wall" of the Jew and gentile was broken down; and that "whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you that do ye also unto them."

This doctrin absolutely abolished the Jew's prerogativ of practicing usury or interest on the gentile. And every person acquainted with history knows the Christian church, or followers of the Nazarene, until the sixteenth century of the Christian era stood uncompromisingly on that position and absolutely refused to tolerate the practice of taking interest or usury. The Jew was persistent then as now in it—as much so as he is in his religion; and he was at times persecuted and robbed by the people he had thus robbed in all the different countries in Europe. But when the united churches and states of Europe and this continent began to tremble for fear the common people would secure their civil, religious, political, and industrial liberty, the priest, minister, noble and royalty, and the old Jew shylock entered into an un-"holy alliance" to keep them in subjection.

John Calvin was the first so-called Christian minister or priest who ever wrote in extenuation, excuse, or defense of the practice of taking interest or usury for money.

In brief, old shylock, the Jew, has converted what we usually call Christendom—clergy, noble, and state—over to his religion of mammon, usury, and churchianity. A more appropriate appellation of what used to be called Christendom would be Jewdom. The Jew who for eighteen hundred years has been destitute of a country and always has been and is devoid of patriotism; who has no faith in God or man—nothing but a handful or till-ful of gold or silver—he can grasp, lick with his tongue, and loan to the "gentile at usury"—formulated the first article of Colonel Ingersoll's orthodox creed of finance, "that gold is money," and nothing else can be. The establishment and maintenance of this first article of the creed entails, as a matter of course, the following results: 1. To make money scarce. 2. To make money scarce, makes money dear. 3. To make money dear, is only another name to make wages, labor, its products, plenty and cheap, and entail public and private debt; that is, (gentile) human flesh, brains, and blood plenty and most damnably cheap. Indeed, there seems of late to hav been such an overproduction of it in the "most Christian city" of London, that young unpolluted girls were only worth $25 ahead to minister to the lust of lords (?) temporal and spiritual(?).

The nations of Europe and this continent are all blanketed with "public debts," so few of them are doing anything but pay the annual interest.

This country is rolled in a spider's web of public and private debt of $20,000,000,000, or $320 per capita, or $1,600 per family of five persons; or at seven per cent per annum, $112 "hearth-money tax" if each voter pays his share. In the last twenty-five years' importation and engrafting this Jew system of "hard"-"honest"-scarce-money usury finance has done all this for us, and we awake to see 31,000 men the owners of more wealth than the 63,000,000. It is the orthodox system of election and millions for the millionaires, and reprobation and industrial damnation for the millions of "the common people." It is the Jew "John" religion of churchianity of the worshipers of mammon. Millions who believe the simple duties of man to man, of doing to others as you would they should do to you, taught by the Nazarene, do not believe in the churchianity of the worshipers of John Calvin, John Wesley, John Bull, and John Sherman.

But Colonel Ingersoll is an humble devotee at the shrine of the Jews' temple of mammon, a prater of the creed of the churchianity of the "Johns." If he will only button his collar behind and prate about Republican party finance after the manner of that interview he may well pass as Right Rev. Bishop Ingersoll, doctor of Jews' churchianity, or D.J.C. He says the government "can fix the values of money for paying debt." But he would not hav any more issued to enable the debt- and poverty-ridden, homeless masses to pay the spider's web of interminable, intolerable, eternal debt in which they are industrially entrammeled. He believes in a dear, hard, scarce dollar for the million, and a cheap plenty of overproduction of human brain, heart, flesh, blood, and labor for the millionaire. Where is the man who spoke the burning, soul-stirring words of the rights of "Man, Woman, and Child?"

The colonel scouts with contempt the orthodox theology of the same clergy and churches, concerning the next world, but hugs to his bosom the orthodox Jewology of finance of churchianity of this world. That is to say, the colonel and churchianity are a unit in religion so far as it affects us in this world; but he disputes with "the grave and reverend doctors" concerning our inheritance in the next. The "grave and reverend doctors" for and in consideration of having helped the Jew and usurer rob the common people of a mansion in this world, propose to enable them "to read their title clear to mansions in the skies." But the colonel disputes their title to even that mansion. The colonel ought to revise his creed, and climb up side by side by the "grave and reverend doctors" of the church press; he would then be still more with the Republican party on the question of money. Yes, he would then be fully prepared to take sacrament at the same table with the Right Rev. Joseph Cook, D.J.C., and "drink the shed blood" of the common people, mingled with their tears, and eat of their broken and dishonored bodies.

O. I. JONES.

Edina, Mo.

Is It Possible That Colonel Shepard Is a Hypocrit?

The pious Col. Elliot F. Shepard publishes a daily paper, and at the head of his editorial column daily appears a text of scripture.

Mr. Shepard is also building a big building.

Deacon Shepard is also president of the American Sabbath Union, which is against Sunday papers, Sunday labor, and Sunday recreation.

Understanding these things, the following from the Sun of May 16th makes entertaining reading:

A small group of wonder-stricken people stood in front of Col. Elliot F. Shepard's new building, in Fulton street, near Broadway, yesterday morning, watching a number of workmen who were laying tiles and polishing marble.

Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work.—Fourth Commandment.

"Is it a dream?" the beholders asked themselvs. No, there could be no mistake about it. It was the Mail and Express building, and while its proprietor was in church in Omaha, here in Fulton street the sound of scraping and hammering grated harshly on the quiet Sunday air.

All trades, manufactures, and mechanical employments upon the first day of the week are prohibited.—Section 266, Penal Code.

And this group stood and looked on and wondered and the marble-polishers polished and the tile-layers laid, and while they worked they whistled an air that was never heard in church. Then an elderly man advanced, smiled curiously, and said to one of the men:

"Does Colonel Shepard, of the American Sabbath committee, know you're working to-day?"

"'Tcher life," answered the man, with a grin. "He's payin' for it."

The group laughed, and another man asked:

"How many are there of you?"

"Oh, 'bout twenty. There's six uv us marble-workers, 'nd then there's a lot o' plumbers 'nd steam-fitters. This is the sixt' Sunday we're at it. Shep's in a sweat t' let the offices."

"But don't you think it's wrong to work on Sundays?" the first man was asked, gravely.

"We—ell, we get double pay for it. Y'see, ole Shep wants the buildin' up 'z soon 'z he kin. He's got a lot o' tenants in already, 'nd we can't work in the corrid'rs except on Sundays. See?"

One of the men in the group happened to hav a copy of Saturday's Mail and Express in his pocket.

He opened it to the editorial page, and then he read:

It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath.

The workman, who seemed to be a communicativ chap, went on:

"Shep, y' know, only pays half the extr' time. The contract'r pays the other half."

Just then there burst from the organ of St. Paul's church, on the other side of the street, a flood of sweet harmony that sounded soft and infinitly beautiful. The workmen stopped to listen, and the group was hushed. Louder came the strains, vibrant and clear, and then a sweeter melody as the choir began to sing. The music rose and fell and stopped.

"Phot the divvil 'r' yez loafin' there for?" came a voice from the other end of the corridor. The workmen picked up their tools, the polishers polished, the fitters fitted, the layers laid, and they whistled merrily.

Colonel Shepard started for Portland, Ore., on Wednesday last to attend the session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States to be held there. He had a whole drawing-room car to himself. The colonel is not a delegate this year, but last year he was chairman of a special committee of the assembly on Sabbath-observance. That committee passed and had the assembly adopt a red-hot resolution denouncing the proposition to keep the World's Fair open on Sunday, and protesting against it as a desecration of the Sabbath. In a report made to the general assembly on May 26, 1891, the colonel said:

The almost universal greed for gain continually invents new forms of Sabbath-desecration, compelling thousands to toil on the weekly rest-day on pain of dismissal, when no public or private necessity demands it.

English Notes.

What a wonderful country England is, to be sure! One cannot help noticing it as one rushes wildly from town to town, from north to south. In the north the land is covered with towns. The train leaves some great city, crosses over a few fields, and shoots through manufacturing towns as though they were so many hamlets. In the south it is far otherwise. There you ride through picturesque scenery mile after mile and only find a town just here and there.

Manchester itself is a little London. All round it, clustered thickly together, are large seats of industry. Tall smokestacks, colliery wheels, and fiery furnaces dot the horizon whichever way one looks; and among the sons of toil who labor in these places we find our most stalwart supporters. On labor questions these men hav long since made up their minds, and hav so far organized themselvs into trade societies that they hav been able to obtain most of the things they hav demanded. Now, as Freethinkers they are becoming alive to the fact that some such organization is necessary for obtaining religious as well as social rights. Under normal conditions money is not so much lacking here as interest. As men, they are fairly well occupied with labor, political, and social reforms. As yet they hav been slow to recognize that the church is the greatest barrier we hav to the equal freedom of thought and speech. Since writing my last notes I hav been very busy endeavoring to organize Freethought in the northeast of England. After Nottingham, written about last time, I went to Leeds, and found an earnest folk there, but wanting a leader. There is a capital hall available at a low rent. The population is large enough, and the town probably too large; for, though the population is much smaller than Liverpool, by reason of its being somewhat scattered the town covers as large an area as the famous Lancashire city. Our sympathizers accordingly find some difficulty in regularly attending the lectures. But where such a difficulty occurs there is always one sure remedy. If Mohammed won't go to the mountain, we can always carry the mountain to Mohammed, and so we tried an out-door lecture by way of experiment. The result was at once a good audience and somewhat amusing criticisms after. "What are they?" "Oh, they are Atheists." "What are Atheists?" "Why, they don't believe in any sort of God." "The devil they don't, then they'll go to hell, damned if they won't." The result of this one taste of out-door work is to make the Leeds folk want more of it, and there is every promis of a very activ Freethought revival in this beautiful town. That masterpiece of phonetic eccentricity, J. Greeoz Fisher, is one of the most lively spirits in Leeds, only I cannot make head or tail of his letters to me. Here is a specimen. "I sh be vy glad to akkompy y to do some talkg in open air." "Yes, we expakt y az our guest az arranged and aksepted by y." It is cruel.

After Leeds I betook me to Wigan, a colliery district, famed for being a rough place. Here I found Freethought in a fairly lively condition, but unorganized and confined to indoor meetings. It did not take long to coax the Secularists out of doors; and for the first time that anyone could remember, God was heartily blasphemed from the market cross. A goodly crowd assembled, but without throwing brickbats, as we had been led to expect. Pendlebury, another colliery town, has entered into the movement, so that we hav great hopes of giving Freethought such importance here as it has never yet had in Lancashire and Yorkshire.

Of course our Christian opponents still decry the movement. "It is all a sham," they say. "There is no reality in it, no backbone." Let them wait and see. Before this letter is in print we shall hav opened a Freethought publishing depot in Manchester to enable us to carry on a more activ distribution of Freethought literature. There is need of such a store. Last Sunday I spoke to two audiences under heaven's blue canopy. The first numbered fully five hundred, and the other half as many again; and yet there was not a single copy of the Freethinker or even a tract to giv to those who were anxious to buy. This new store will see that that does not occur again.

Meanwhile, in England the Anarchists are having a lively time in conjunction with their fellows on the continent. One journal, the Commonweal, is suppressed by the government, on account of an article which was thought to incite men to murder the home secretary. Anarchists are extremely lively in Manchester, and some of the views they advocate are good and acceptable; but when it comes to throwing bombshells and blowing up houses and innocent people one's sympathy for them and their movement is bound to die out. As elsewhere, next Sunday, May 1st, will be observed in Manchester as Labor day, and I hav advertised two open-air addresses on labor questions; but one cannot help but feel uneasy as to what may happen on that day. In London it is quite expected that bombs will be thrown into the midst of the monster labor-meeting to be held there, and we are none too certain that the same tactics will not be followed at the Anarchists' demonstration in Alexandra park, Manchester. Probably, dynamite being in the air just now, it will be dreaded at all meetings and experienced at none. So let it be. The cause that cannot make headway without disorganized murder cannot hav much in its favor; and in a movement such as our Secularism, which aims at liberty and love, there can be no room whatever for the use of this diabolical compound; nor can we side with those reformers who do make it part of their program.

I hav just mentioned Wigan, where I received so cordial a reception, and where an al-fresco lecture was listened to with attention by passers-by. Poor Bradlaugh's experience in this town was so contrary to my own as to form a grand example of the advance which Secularism is working in England even in places where it is not being persistently preached. It seems to be the natural thing, nowadays, instead of a mental aberration. Nearly forty years ago, when Charles Bradlaugh first went to Wigan, the local clergy set themselvs dead against the "Infidel." A rough, furious crowd filled the hall long before the lecturer himself had reached it. Outside, the people were pelting the windows with stones and other missils; through the ventilators in the roof came lime and water; and at the close of the address so rudely interrupted the young lecturer was buffeted from behind, hooted and pushed, while others amused themselvs by spitting in his face. Undaunted and alone he passed through the surging mob. That was the beginning: the end was its opposit. Long years before he died, the name of Charles Bradlaugh was revered by the inhabitants of Wigan as few other names are held in reverence; and to-day any man or woman who goes to speak upon Freethought subjects can feel certain of a cordial welcome.

It has been said that it is a good thing to be taught by our enemies. Well, if they teach us how not to do a thing, perhaps it is. In London there is a Christian Evidence Society established to counteract the work of the National Secular Society and to prove to the world that "true Christianity" and "doing unto all men as you would they should do unto you" means the most degrading scurrility and unprincipled lying that it ever entered into the heart of man to indulge in. The very contact with Christian Evidence lecturers, as such, is nauseating in the extreme. In Manchester, where a new branch has been formed for my especial benefit, different tactics is the order of the day. Men of the London pattern, or perhaps superior to them in gentlemanliness, hav been shelved in block as being unsuitable for the committee and hav had to take a very back seat, although they were the very men who brought the society into existence. The society's program is to be a kid-glove, drawing-room sort of affair. The wicked Atheists are not to be debated with, for such debates are unprofitable to the Christian champions. In place of opposition to our open-air work young people will be instructed in Christian Evidences in comfortable class-rooms. The society is to be thoroughly respectable and high-class and the Secularists are having things all their own way.

A long letter from an English soldier in Zululand, South Africa, coupled with another from a military veteran in Ireland, satisfies me that something ought to be done to bind together our converts in the army and navy. My Zululand correspondent says, "The idea of having army sections is a grand one and would just suit the present condition of the service admirably; but I would suggest (1) that they be regimental sections; (2) that the names of those who are 'centers of communication' be published from time to time in the Freethinker. My first suggestion, you will observe, implies that each regiment will hav a center of communication of its own. In garrison towns, of course, it wouldn't be difficult to find out the Freethinkers in each regiment. Once known there are Freethinkers in a regiment, it would be easy to find them out by writing to the regiment's center of communication. My experience has taught me that, as you hint in your letter to the Freethinker, forming branches of the National Secular Society in the army is a decided failure. It is almost a matter of pure impossibility for a private soldier to accomplish so much." Inclosed with the letter is a neat little book of rules, etc., of the National Secular Society's branch in Barbadoes, West Indies. I should be so glad to know, for practical purposes here, the experience of any old soldiers or sailors who hav emigrated to the "land of the free." Will they write me on the subject?

SAM STANDRING.

2 Morton street, C-on-M, Manchester, Eng.

A Voice from the West Indies.

There has been quite an agitation in religious matters lately around these parts, of which I shall enumerate a few instances.

Kingston, Jamaica, has been having quite a revival. There was a meeting of the Church of England synod; then the Wesleyans had a conference, missionary meetings, ordination services, 7 o'clock tea, etc., etc. In fact, the beetles had quite an enjoyable time of it.

A new departure has been started in the shape of "pleasant Sunday afternoons," something got up to reach a large amount of people who do not know the church door. The audiences comprise all sorts of men and women, and a good sprinkling of those whom it is intended to reach. The services open with the usual prayer, and the inauguration was preceded by an address by the mayor of the city. During the course of the remarks in which he explained the objects of the meeting, he said they were to be purely evangelical in their character and thoroughly unsectarian. One of the principal objects was to reach that class of the community who never attended any place of worship. The progress of Christianity in the city of Kingston during the past thirty years had, the mayor remarked, been obviously stationary, for during that period not a single extra place of worship of any account had been erected, despite the large increase of population. This bespeaks much for Secularism in these parts, as it shows that the people, as in other parts of the world, are indifferent to religion. Freedom of thought is at last dawning upon the people, and the sun of science is casting her beams with radiant splendor over the benighted inhabitants of these fair isles of the West.

In Barbadoes the revivalists and Salvation Army hav made their domicil there. The Salvation Army publish a War Cry, and the revivalists, to all accounts, hav been the cause of the enlargement of the lunatic asylum, from the frequent and constant admission of persons suffering from religio-mania. It is a pity that in Jamaica and Barbadoes there are none who will devote a little time in emancipating their brethren from the shackles which bind them to the old fetich-superstition.

In Trinidad both of the above-named parties hav made their appearance, but so far hav met with no encouragement. Thanks to the strenuous and persistent efforts of Freethought propaganda work.

In Demerara, British Guiana—a very religious place—they hav sown their seeds of discord, and backed by the Church of England, hav helped to earn for that place a name which is worthy of the church—the land of mud.

At a meeting of the Bible Society, held there some time ago, it was said by one of the theologians present that "During the eighty-five years of the existence of the society there had arisen what some would consider—some, indeed, had considered—a rival to the revelation of the gospel. Within the last few years there had been many educated men who had thought that the Bible must sooner or later giv way to a new gospel. They said there was no revelatio i but the revelation of science, and the revelation of science, they told us, was sufficient to meet all reasonable wishes. The revelation of science they told us was a gospel of fact. The revelation of science showed things as they really were, not as A dreamed they were, or B wished they were, or C thought they ought to be, but what they really were. He granted, so far as the material world was concerned, that was quite true. But beyond the material world there existed a spiritual world, the knowledge of which their society believed to lie within the scope of the revelation of the gospel of God rather than of the revelation of t e gospel of science."

What has this learned theologian said? He has simply stultified himself. What other world do we know anything about but the material world? The spiritual world we know nothing about, and the Bible pretends to treat not of things spiritual but of things material. Therefore, these good people who want to acknowledge the supremacy of science and yet at the same time assert the gospel of God do nothing else but make the intelligent portion of any civilized community laugh at them. E. S.

The Problem of Life.

The problem of life is one that mortal man has never solved, and nothing in this age of profound thought and mental commotion indicates that he ever will. The human race is constantly being annihilated and replenished by the forces of nature, with no purpose any more apparent than is seen in the creation and destruc ion ever going on in the animal and vegetable kingdoms. We come; we play our brief part in the drama of life; and we go as mysteriously as consciousness had birth and beginning. No explanation of why we come, of why we play our automatic part and pass away, has ever been found or presented that is satisfactory or convincing. This is a secret which nature retains, in spite of man's most earnest and persistent efforts to discover it; and the greatest minds that ever existed hav sought in vain to solve the mystery of the ages—the mystery of life and death.

Out from an eternity of the past springs an individual spark of consciousness which feels and knows its existence, only to lose it and be lost in the eternity of the future. Millions follow millions in the universal journey to the grave; "every moment dies a man, every moment one is born;" and life and death clasp hands in the fleeting scenes that characterize existence. Uncertainty and ceaseless changes confront the birth of every conscious entity, an the book of fate is a closed volume until events occur, when it opens only as history. The future is veiled from human sight; and the past reveals nothing but the records of a few centuries of transitory events, similar to those which now occur, as man blindly struggles for a continuity of life, in opposition to the forces of nature and the evils of society.

The greatest mind of the nineteenth century declares that "Nature creates man without purpose, and destroys him without regret;" and this declaration has weight and value because of its apparent truth—because facts accessible to all seem to sustain it. When conditions are right, nature creates; and when conditions are wrong or unfavorable, nature destroys just as readily; and who dares affirm that some power outside of nature creates the conditions under which all phenomena occur? As nature creates conditions and always works in accordance with them, it must be apparent to all who think that whether engaged in creation or destruction, her labors are never attended with approval or regrets—with pleasure or aversion; but always with sublime indifference. Man, her so-called highest handiwork, is wiped out of existence by the forces of nature as relentlessly as insect, serpent, or wild beast is destroyed; and woe be that which is exposed to her angry moods on sea or land. Said Victor Hugo: "No wild beast can compare with the sea for mangling its prey. The waves are full of talons. The north winds bite; the billows devour; the waves are the hungry jaws. The ocean strikes like a lion with its heavy paw, seizing and dismembering at the same moment. The logic of disaster at sea is beyond the grasp of human science." And so, we may further add, is the logic of life and death, for a conflict of forces is ever going on without intermission in the realms of nature; and one of these forces works to create, one to destroy, while both emanate from the same source and are ever manifesting "without purpose or regret."

Man is a creature of fate, and the products of fate are the results of inevitable necessity. A man is born because the forces of nature compel his birth, and his death results from the same cause. Between birth and death he is the helpless creature of conditions which he did not create and cannot control, and is simply an automaton in the hands of nature—his creator. A good man deserves no more credit for his goodness than a weather-vane does for revealing the direction of the wind. He is what he is from necessity, and never did mortal man perform an independent act. Consequently a bad man deserves no more censure than a good one does credit; both being what they are from necessity and the effect of conditions.

Never were truer words penned than these:

> Life is a riddle that none can guess;
> And whether it curse or whether it bless
> Depends on no endeavor;
> For the spider of Fate, with a thousand eyes,
> Sits weaving its web for human flies;
> And the flies buzz on forever!

That man never lived who knew what fate or necessity would introduce into his life twenty-four hours in advance; and every life journey is made with blinded eyes; while impulse and caution alternate in shaping the route to be traveled. Impulse is the propelling power to action in every living being, and every impulse that stirs the mind of man is involuntary; man does not create or set it in motion, and as all impulses are dependent on conditions, he is the perfect slave of conditions, without a vestige of free will. As "there is no accounting for tastes," neither is there for action; and constant surprises greet us in the lives of all. Unaccountable conduct is a common thing; and moods and impulses sway mankind as the wind stirs the leaves and branches of a tree. Historical events that affected races and nations were invariably the work of fate, and in the lives of nations as well as individuals, a destiny controled and shaped by nature alone is ever at work producing results. Men, races, and nations are simply puppets in her hands; and the greatest names in history are those of men who were simply the creatures of circumstances. Fate produced them, and fate made them conspicuous. It was the American Revolution that produced a George Washington; and the Great Rebellion that made fame and power possible to General Grant. The overruling power of fate or destiny is seen in all things, and no man does or can shape the course of human events; or history could be written in advance. Nations rise and fall, nations progress and retrograde, and never was progress seen or known that followed a straight line without end or interruption. As night follows day, and action is succeeded by a period of rest, so all progress seems at times to cease in human affairs, and the world of humanity rises only to fall and relapse, as history and the ruins of once populous empires testify. That civilization has prevailed on this globe in a higher state than any known to-day is no doubt true; and as nature sported with the "lost Atlantis," so may she again in her mysterious moods create similar or greater changes. Therefore, when we reflect on the vast and varied mutations, historic and prehistoric, which hav attended the birth and death of untold millions of human beings on this planet, well may we ask and wonder regarding the problem of life, and the object of nature in her efforts that seem without purpose.

Theosophy has lately risen to enlighten the world on the problem of life; but it has only one fact and a thousand theories to present. The fact is the present existence of a physical body, and the theories are as baseless as a dream. While Spiritualism has presented the world with some mysterious phenomena, that too is powerless to cope with the problem, and the world stands to-day, as it ever has, with no good and sufficient explanation of why "nature creates man without purpose and destroys him without regret." C. SEVERANCE.

Los Angeles, Cal.

Are We Civilized or Barbarian?

The realm of cause and effect is infinit in its jurisdiction. Human actions, good, bad, or indifferent, quantitativly and qualitativly, are only the necessary, legitimate, and unswerving results of existing causes adequate to their production; and from this conclusion I see no avenue of escape except by distorting self-evident truth.

In our commonwealth, some twenty-eight years ago, was born a moral monstrosity with insufficient intellect to direct, and no moral sense to govern, the abnormally preponderant sex-passion which he inherited. Under the goading and irresistible demand of this passion, he recently perpetrated a revolting and exasperating outrage against woman, and was promptly arrested and securely confined in our county jail. This culprit belonged to the genus homo Africanus, and had never professed to be anything more than an ignorant, depraved member of his race. The evidence against him was conclusiv, and the death penalty, as decreed by law, stared him in the face with a certainty that precluded all possibility of escape. Laws existed on the statute-book adequate to his conviction and punishment, and the paid ministers of justice stood ready and willing to execute them. The so-called sovereign state said to the culprit, I guarantee you a fair trial by a jury of your peers, and will hold you innocent until by legal process you are proven guilty.

Such was the condition of this prisoner, and the attitude of the state toward him. But the state reckoned without its host. Taking its citizens at their profession, it accepted them as civilized, when in fact they were only masked savages awaiting an opportunity to giv a revolting exhibition of their cruelty. Despite their professed fealty to law and order; despite their boasted schools, Young Men's Christian Association, and threescore of churches in this "Athens of the South," dedicated to their "meek, lowly, and loving Jesus," they proved that they were outlaws of the most pronounced type. They, against the protest of the governor and state officials, organized themselvs into a wild and howling mob numbering ten thousand strong, and filled with fiendish hate and revenge, in the broad light of day they forced the jail, and, violently seizing their half-witted, defenseless victim, furiously dragged him to the Cumberland bridge, kicking him and pricking and lacerating him with knives on the way, and then threw his bleeding and half-dead body over the bridge, where it hung as a ghastly evidence that the Christian masses of this city and vicinity are only barbarians of the most inhuman and cruel character. As a safety measure, we admit that this pitiful monstrosity deserved the extreme penalty of the law, and as he was in safe custody and certain to receive his just deserts, why this needless and uncalled-for exhibition of cruelty? It was simply a sentimental demonstration of the true status of the so-called Christian masses, and under all the circumstances, viewed from a strictly humanitarian standpoint, it was a foul blotch on the name of our civilization, and a disgrace to the age in which we liv. A mad dog on the street, jeopardizing the safety of human life, would hav been killed without demonstration of revenge; but the offender in this case was not a dog, but a "nigger." The Christian masses here reverence and worship Sam Jones, the theological slang-slinger, who said on July 4, 1890, in Boston, Mass.: "We kill the niggers in the South to prevent them from voting. You people in the North buy their votes. It is cheaper to kill the voter than to buy his vote." Sam's sentiment bears its legitimate fruit among his admirers here. It is all according to the laws of the eternal fitness of things. Sam will be here in a few days to dedicate his big tabernacle, and thousands of men who participated in this bloody-handed mob will flock to hear him enunciate the doctrin so soothing to savage ears, that "Jesus paid it all." They will all join in zealously singing:

> There is a fountain filled with blood,
> Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
> And sinners plunged beneath that flood
> Lose all their guilty stains.

And then they will return to their homes and before retiring at night they will invoke blessing from the God who wrote in thunders on Mount Sinai, "Thou shalt not kill;" after which they will fall to sleep and pleasantly dream about the blessings of their religion, and the cheap and convenient methods it provides to enable murderers to get rid of all their guilty stains.

But, then, these awful and cruel tragedies enacted by the Christian masses are only effects of their producing causes. In the examples of Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and David, all of whom were Jehovah's favorits, the Christian has an inciting cause to cruelty powerful in its effect; for the modern Bible-believer can commit no crime so revolting and cruel but he can find an example in the lives of one of these four Bible heroes to justify him. Then the standard doctrins of the orthodox church, that "Jesus paid it all," "And while the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return," are nothing short of a wholesale license to the evil-disposed to perpetrate crime, and are one of the encouraging causes that fill our penitentiaries with Christian convicts, and populate the penal colony in Canada with Christian forgers and defaulters.

ANTICHRISTIAN.

Little Blasphemies.

A trust in Providence, like earthly trusts, robs many men—of the pleasures of existence.

Satan's interests in the realms of night are doubtless protected by "deeds of darkness."

Letters of Friends.

Lecturer Wanted.

GRANITE, MONT., May 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If you hav one of your lecturers in this part of the country, it will pay him to come to Granite. This is a mining-camp, and the Liberal thought is much admired. Yours,

ALEX. E. KLEIN, Box 57.

Wants Accurate Information About the Heart.

ROYAL CENTER, IND., May 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As there is a great amount of talk about people's hearts, and what they hav done and are doing, I would like to ask, Does a heart think or reason? I hav heard a preacher talk and put in nearly a whole sermon telling about pure hearts, how necessary it was to hav a pure one; then tell about some one having a change of heart, and that his heart failed him when he came near doing a bad act. I hav an idea that a good heart is a good thing in its place. If I was undecided about a difficult matter, I should as soon ask my big toe as my heart, and I would get no answer from either.

GEORGE HENDEE.

Freethinkers, Come Out.

GRANT'S PASS, ORE., May 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We hav had Mr. W. S. Bell deliver us two lectures, which were very interesting and instructiv, to very good houses. We hav also organized a Secular Union, with sixteen members to start with, which we hope to greatly increase soon. We hav quite a number of Freethinkers in and around this place, if they will only come out. We meet on the 21st inst. We hav no definit place to meet as yet; shall try to secure a suitable place as soon as possible. The following persons were elected: president, W. H. Richards; secretary, W. O. Ridgway; treasurer, J. G. Abbott. Your paper suits us and we enjoy it hugely. Success to you.

W. O. RIDGWAY, Secretary, Box 18.

Wants the Warp-Brained Priests Answered.

SHELLWOOD, ORE., April 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I read the jargon of that irate Catholic priest Lambert, and Young, both. I think some of our able writers could giv those priests a lift which would let out a little of their gas. Look at Alf Young comparing the God of Russia's famin with Abe Lincoln calling for troops to defend the United States against the rebels! You see, Lambert wrote "Notes on Ingersoll," in which he shows how mad he is at the great colonel, and it seems that Lambert had imagined that he had shut up the mouth of the great man because he did not reply, and now he stands on his little hip like another bantam rooster calling for a fight.

Send me a few catalogs.

H. L. LINDELEAF.

Cosmopolitan Sentiments.

DENVER, COL., April 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav succeeded in getting a new subscriber. The West is full of Freethinkers, but I am sorry to say that they do not organize. There are hundreds of Freethinkers in Denver, and with a good man in the lead we ought to effect a strong organization.

I am glad to note the advance of Freethought in Sweden, as well as all over the world. I am a Swede by birth, but an American citizen and a follower of the great Thomas Paine, who said, "The world is my home, to do good my religion." I do not think oceans wide enough to divide Freethinkers, and wherever a person chooses to eke out an existence he has a perfect right to do so, as no person can be responsible for his birthplace.

I hope your journal will be read by the millions, and admire your fight for progress. Yours for human emancipation,

GUS. ECKWALL.

They Morally Advise Him To Be a Hypocrit.

SUMNER, CAL., April 11, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1.50 for the best paper ever printed, THE TRUTH SEEKER. By the next time my subscription expires I will be able to order a few books and maybe send two or three subscribers. I will try my best for them, at least. There are quite a number in this place who when I am talking to them profess to be sound Freethinkers, but when the priest or some other pious flunkey is present they are as dumb as a door-nail. One of them said to me only last night, "You will never succeed in business, young man, unless you keep your mouth shut." I told him that I was no hypocrit; I had always spoken my honest opinion, no matter who might happen to be present. I tell them all the same story—but not the story of Jesus and his love, Mr. Editor, no! no!

Wishing success to you and THE TRUTH SEEKER, I am,

Yours for everlasting truth,

D. H. BROOKS.

Paine Turned Loose in the Lamb-Pens.

LONE ROCK, April 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $1, for which send one Bible Picture Book to the friend's address inclosed. And may God bless it on its mission. You see, I hav received my $10 worth of books I sent to you for, and this is the result of showing my Picture Book. I think the first picture in it did the work. It is so natural. I know I shall know old Father Adam when I meet him in kingdom-come, by that photograph. He appears to be receiving Nepsha in good, cold earnest, and then behold how it transforms him into a full-fledged ballroom dude. I received my books all right, and hav turned "Tom" Paine loose in the lamb-pens and he is making the wool fly.

With a word of love and greeting to all the writers for and readers of the dear, noble TRUTH SEEKER, I will close by wishing you and Brother Heston eternal life. Yours for Liberalism in every sense of the word. MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

Abominable Sentiment of a Congressman.

DAVENPORT, Feb. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4.25—$3 to renew my subscription on your most valuable paper, $1 for the Bible Picture Book, and twenty-five cents for "The Strike of a Sex." Also send a few printed letters to Congressmen, which I will try to get somebody to sign, although I expect very little help to our cause from our Congressman. In a letter of protest against the opening of the Fair on Sundays to Commissioner Rucker, he said, among many foolish things, that he considered the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday a step backward to heathendom and barbarism.

I would like to help THE TRUTH SEEKER in its noble work for mental freedom by getting some new subscribers, but I find it very difficult here in this locality, as there is not more than one Freethinker here besides me, and I cannot induce any of the rest to read the paper, pictures or no pictures. Yours for truth,

ANTON JOHNSON.

In Over-Legislation Lurks Our Greatest Foe.

PENACOOK, N. H., April 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As my husband is about to renew his subscription, I wanted to say a word for our noble cause.

We like the new way with the pictures. We send away nearly all our papers, and think in some cases they might be read a little more graciously if not for them. However, do not think we are against them. We think them fine, and that they must set many to thinking. But they are not always best to be introduced till one has had a little previous light let on gradually, so to speak.

I am particularly pleased with the part you take in regard to politics or legislation. They slip in so many bills that the people do not understand till after a generation or so, and by that time they hav taken such strong root it is difficult to kill them out. In them lies our greatest foe, and it is not a sleepy one either.

We do so very little ourselvs, that I feel it out of place to say much about the apathy of Freethinkers generally. I hope the time will come when we shall be more liberal with our money as well as our minds.

If anyone doubts the vileness of the clergy, they would better read the first article in the March number of the Popular Science Monthly, Chapters on the Warfare of Science, by Andrew Dixon White.

With kind wishes to all our family, I am,

Truly thine, ETTA MARDEN.

Effect of Reading the Bible.

LIVERMORE, CAL., Feb. 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will inclose $4 for THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Bible Picture Book. I think Heston's illustrations are "the boss." I giv my papers away as soon as I read them, for I want them to do all the good they can by opening people's eyes. I hav been a strong Infidel ever since I was a boy of twelve years. I now am forty-three years old, and expect to stand up for personal liberty as long as I liv. The reason why there are not more Infidels is because there is not half of the people that ever read the Bible. I was raised by a Christian family, and they had me read the Bible through on winter evenings, and I hav been an Infidel ever since.

You may send me anything you wish to hav distributed that will advance Liberalism, and I will see that it drops in the right place.

I think THE TRUTH SEEKER is the best paper I ever read, and will hav it as long as I can raise the money to pay for it. Long life to THE TRUTH SEEKER and its supporters. Yours for liberty,

CHAS. GINGER.

How Were These Things Found Out By Finite Man?

PACIFIC, MO., May 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: How can it be true? How is it ascertained?

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 30th, in answer to J. Hacker as to Mr. D. M. Bennett's belief in another life, you quote his own saying, a saying and assertion as made by many others—viz., That that which has no end could hav no beginning, and that it is an axiomatic truth that that which had a beginning must hav an end. How is that ascertained by man, a finite entity? Do present conditions warrant such a conclusion? Is evolution true—from the simple to the complex state? If the whole of the first and primary condition or state—that is, its law—has ended, or always was, what could constitute the next or higher law and order of co-existing natures or objects as we see and hear them? When and where did the sun begin, the moon, the earth, and all the other myriads of worlds? Where are the signs of their end? Did man begin? How long has he been? Has thought begun? Will thought end? When will life end? Who knows of its beginning? AUG. H. KRUGER.

The "Do-Something" Policy.

LOS NIETOS, CAL., May 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I send you herewith inclosed the names of three hundred and fifty-seven petitioners against closing the World's Fair on Sundays, with compliments of the Norwalk Freethought Club. We hav also distributed about one hundred of the printed letters to Congressmen; and hav received a favorable reply from the Congressman from our district, A. K. Coward; and J. C. Pesham, of Norwalk, and James Hay, of Artesia, deserve especial mention. You will also find inclosed $9, for which please send me THE TRUTH SEEKER for another year, the Bible Picture Book, and Ingersoll's "Prose Poems" bound in half morocco, gilt edges. I inclose another dollar for Edgar C. Beall's book, "Brain and the Bible." I admire the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, because it has a "do-something" policy. I am also one of the cranks who believe that an ounce of "do-something" is worth more than a pound of "talk-about-what-ought-to-be-done,-and-do-nothing." And Heston—all that one has to do to know that he is filled to overflowing with the spirit of Freethought is to study his pictures. It is entirely unnecessary for him to be "born again;" the first time was a success. I wonder if our orthodox friends never see what kind of a sign they hang out when they admit the necessity of their being "born again." I think perhaps I will send you a few more names to another anti-Sunday-closing petition soon. ELMER HOLLOWAY.

The Weak-kneed Braced by an Example.

SILVER PLUME, COL., Feb. 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I forward $6. Three are for renewal; one for Bible Pictures; one for H. Gardener's book, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" seventy-five cents for "The Truth Seeker Collection of Hymns and Forms;" twenty-five cents for Saladin's book, "Did Jesus Rise from the Dead?" Send me petitions and letters to Congress and Senate on World's Fair.

An aged and outspoken Freethinker died here on January 21st, aged seventy-one years, ten months, and seven days. He was born in Anglaise, North Wales, England. He was raised a very strict Calvinist, but at an early age his humanity revolted against the dogmas of eternal punishment and original sin. For many years he was an Atheist. His last request was to be buried as he had lived, a Freethinker. All honor to his noble family, they respected their father's last wishes. The funeral service was at the grave. C. S. Desch sang a funeral ode composed for the occasion. Joseph Gallagher delivered the address. The funeral was very large. Nearly one-half the people turned out to see the services over a man that had no use for the preachers and to pay their last tribute to a loved fellow-citizen.

This was the first Secular funeral in this part of the country. It has done more to brace up the weak-kneed that were afraid to speak for fear of the church influence than anything else could hav done. His memory will ever remain green in the hearts of the Freethinkers of this place that knew him so well. The Christians, as usual, started the report that he was converted, but the funeral gave the lie to that. JOSEPH GALLAGHER.

Church News.

PAINTED POST, N. Y., April 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $5—$3 for subscription, $1 for the new Bible Picture Book, and $1 for D. M. Bennett's "Semitic Gods and the Bible."

I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER and Freethinker's Magazine for a number of years, and find pleasure and benefit in reading them.

I am the only outspoken Freethinker in town. Our town numbers nine or ten hundred inhabitants. We hav three churches—Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist. I hav counted the attendance of the three on two occasions when the weather was favorable for a large attendance. The number that came from the Presbyterian church was about sixty-five, counting in the children; from the Methodist church came ninety-six, counting the children; from the Baptist came twenty-eight. The Baptists used to number more than either of the other churches, but they hav decreased so much that they cannot maintain a minister but hav one come from Corning and giv a sermon in the afternoon. In counting the attenders they averaged three females to one male.

I am now seventy-four years of age. I hav always worked hard, and hav for years spent my evenings in reading history and scientific works. Some of the clergy here, especially one D.D., attacked me some years ago on my attendance at the Freethinkers' convention at Hornellsville. I found, although older than myself, I could beat him in quoting the Bible. The ministers always treat me politely and are careful to shun any contest on the Bible or religion. I never use any abusiv terms in my arguments.

Wishing success to THE TRUTH SEEKER, I remain, R. C. WOOD.

Christian Persecutions.

CHILLICOTHE, MO., March 2, E.S. 292.

DEAR TRUTH SEEKER FRIENDS: I am a stranger in a strange land, and want to get away from here. There are a few brave truth seekers here, and we are a "thorn in the side" of the Christian bigots, but they are too many for us and make our lives a "hard road to travel," by their old tactics, lies, slanders, and abuse. We are fighting the good fight by never losing an opportunity to "beard the tiger," but the odds are too great, so they hav got us "dead to rights," or at least they hav me so. I came to this state three years ago with the hope of earning an honest living at my trades—painter and carpenter. I secured a contract and completed one job, to the entire satisfaction of all. Then the bigots "got on to me" and I was immediately boycotted. I cannot get a day's work from any Christian, so I hav been compelled to hunt for a living, but the Christian persecutions followed me and I could not sell my game. So in my despair I almost gave up, but an old weak-kneed Liberal gave me a job of chopping cordwood, and I hav barely kept the wolf from the door by chopping for the last year. Now, I fear my tale of woe is tiresome, but I must tell it to show the power of the Christian's love for his enemy. (Brother Macdonald, please bear with me, I pray thee, for the burden of thy servant is very heavy.) I want to hear of a place where I can go and be free from persecutions, where I can make an honest living by honest labor, which is no disgrace. I want Liberals in Liberal communities to write to me. I want to hear from Washington and Oregon especially. I am a young man of twenty-eight years; married, with one child; college education; carpenter and painter by trade; Infidel in belief. Friends, please address, Your persecuted brother, C. E. JONES, JR., Chillicothe, Mo.

Free Land.

KISSIMMEE, FLA., May 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The land law of the United States is at the root of all evil in this government as it is. The value of money is founded on it. Slavery is founded on it. Isms are founded on it. Power of officers is founded on it. Law is founded on it. Secret orders are founded on it. In fact, all things are founded on it but Labor and Science, which need to be advanced, as those two things create all things that are beneficial to all honorable beings. To put all human beings on an equality, all that is needed is to liberate the land and let every person hav all the land he can occupy and no more. To remedy evils is to get at the root of them, and to do that let the land be as free as the water to mankind. That will check the money power, and that checked all other evils are checked. If there is no real estate, where is the security for money to hold its value, on nothing but personal property, which takes labor to create? And if the laborers stop putting their labor in land the money power is abridged to such an extent that it no more governs the government, and when it loses that hold it has no more power than any other property. It matters not what kind of money we hav, or how much or little, if the homes of the people are not affected by it. If all human beings can hav homes if they will erect and occupy them, then they are happy. There would be no selling of land except actual occupation. All things will regulate themselvs, as there is no chattel slavery. If chattel slavery existed, then the land should be in title for the money men to work their slaves on. If the United States had liberated the land and not the slaves, then there would hav been no use of liberating the slaves, for the land would hav fallen in the hands of actual settlers, and the slaveholders would not be entitled to more land than they would hire help to occupy. E. W. SIGSBEE.

More Money, Less Interest.

GLOBE VILLAGE, MASS., May 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: With reference to Mr. Darrow's communication in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 6th, I would say: Money is simply evidence of debt to the holder for value received, whether that evidence (the government stamp) is on metal or paper, and money is, or should be, by law, a full legal tender for all debts public or private. The value of the material on which money units are stamped has nothing whatever to do with the value of those units. The government stamp of one dollar for value received is the same whether stamped on ten cents' worth of silver, five cents' worth of gold, two cents' worth of copper, or one-eighth of a cent's worth of paper. The dollar in every case is worth the value that was given for it, whether in labor or material, and the whole people are bound to protect the holder in that amount of value for which it was given. The idea that a dollar must be stamped on some material that is in itself worth a dollar, is barbarous, absurd, and very foolish. Or that every dollar should be backed by some one material (gold, silver, or what not) in which it must be redeemed, is equally barbarous and foolish. The paper credits of the Bank of Venice, which were not redeemable in gold or silver, but were given for value received, and were full legal tender for all debts public and private, stood at premium above gold and silver for over six hundred years. Is not six hundred years long enough to demonstrate what can be done with a paper money irredeemable in gold or silver? The Bank of Venice has demonstrated that a paper money given for value received and made a full legal tender and not redeemable in gold or silver is far superior to gold or silver as money. And what has been done in this direction can be done again. The treasury notes of the United States given out to the people freely, for value received, and made a full legal tender and not redeemable in gold or silver, to the amount of $75 or $100 per capita, would stand at a premium in the money markets of the world over gold and silver, as did the paper credits of the Bank of Venice.

It is time that men, of common sense at least, hav outgrown the narrow, absurd, and pernicious prejudices that hav for so many centuries been instilled into their minds by shylocks and despots. The people should demand a volume of money sufficient for convenience of exchange, and the entire abolition of interest for its use.

F. H. MARSH.

Refused Communication.

NEWARK, N. J., April 25, 1892.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS, Sir: I inclose an account of two persons being excommunicated for marrying Protestant heretics:

The Rev. H. P. Fleming, rector of St. John's Catholic church, Orange, made his annual talk to his people yesterday on the evils of mixed marriages. He said that John J. Cullen and Mary E. Campbell had been excommunicated from the church because they had married Protestants and been married by Protestant clergymen. He pointed out that they could never get back into the church without making public atonement at the altar. Father Fleming then entered upon a general talk about the evils of mixed marriages, asserting that they are seldom happy ones, to say nothing of their being against the laws of the church.

Miss Campbell was married to Arthur W. Bayes, of East Orange. They were married on March 30th by the Rev. Dr. George S. Bishop, of the First Dutch Reformed church, committing the double offense of being married in Lent and by a Protestant clergyman.

John J. Cullen was married on February 22d to Miss Josephine Sparr, the marriage taking place at the house of Dr. Henry M. Storrs, of the First Presbyterian church, who performed the ceremony.

Both of those young people were God's children. They both were christened by Nature's tears in entering this beautiful world. Our common father was no sectarian God, and his children came by natural laws, and this excommunicated lady and her husband were true to those laws By uniting in the holy bonds of wedlock, therefore, they hav committed no crime. No person in this world can persuade Nature by prayers to alter her laws, and sectarians who set themselvs up and attempt to set aside those laws only make clowns of themselvs for intelligent people to enjoy a hearty laugh at. Why not excommunicate God for making the pagan before the Jew, or the Jew before the Christian? He did not forbid either of those to marry, and if he did I doubt very much if his children would obey such an unreasonable request—more than they would His Holiness Pope Pecci, who sits in a palace at Rome. And His Reverence, and cardinals, and bishops, and priests are dependent upon those laws for their very existence, and if any one of these violates those laws, Nature will most assuredly punish them as she does the humblest of her creatures, for Nature is no respecter of persons.

W. W. MORRIS.

[This communication was rejected by the editor of the News.—W. W. M.]

Argues That Free Trade Would Fraternize Nations.

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of the 19th of March is a well-written article from Mr. Robert Gunther, to which I fully agree. In regard to our prosperity against Europe's, he left out, or forgot to mention, one principal cause for it. Germany, France, Austria, and Italy are nations of but about half of our population, but hav to maintain immense armies and navies. Several millions of the healthiest, hardiest young men, the flower of the people, are picked out and from producers turned into consumers, for whom the rest of the people are so much more taxed. Besides this, how much more cost the royal (!) families than our president. Is it a wonder that under such conditions people can prosper?

On the same page appears an article for protection from Mr. Richard Lechner, full of absurdities and contradictions, which begin right with his second paragraph: "I am aware, however, of the reluctance of the generally biased editor of a Freethought journal to print anything derogatory to the doctrin of free trade, under the erroneous conception that free trade and free thought are virtually synonymous terms. An advocate of the latter, to be consistent, must necessarily also be an advocate of the former." Here the second sentence contradicts the former, and he himself, as he is not consistent, a free trader, if he professes to be a Freethinker. A Freethinker will hear both sides.

"No," he calls out, "we strenuously object to lowering the present condition of our working classes to the peasant life of starving, agricultural Russia, to the pauper labor of Europe." This threadbare phrase is false, and only got up to catch gulls. One can find all the "pauper labor" wanted here by the thousands, and the tramps, besides. What hypocrits these Protectionists are! How they keep the laborer's welfare at heart! What would the laborers' present condition be if they themselvs did not combine into unions? That protection helps the manufacturer no one will dispute, but is it right that all others should be extra taxed to fill his pocket? Let every tub stand on its own bottom. In my opinion, the government has no business to help the manufacturers, the bankers, and the railroad capitalists. It is a shame that it allows them to water stock. In a civilized society, if any class is to be helped it is the poor, uneducated downtrodden which needs aid, and not the rich. Fifty years ago tramps were unknown, but we had then also very few millionaires, but a contented people all around. The Republican party is the founder of this system, which fosters trusts to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. And such a state of society can not endure. Sooner or later a revolution will uproot it.

Mr. Lechner asserts that the foreigner pays the tariff tax—the old Protectionists' phrase. Just take the latest article, sugar, put on the free list. We buy it now two cents a pound cheaper than under the old tariff. How then can anyone so foolishly and falsely assert that the foreigner paid the tax?

Protectionism leads naturally to narrow-mindedness, egotism, illiberalism, hate, and ignorance. Let us work to beat down all barriers against free intercourse in trade and travel with other nations and countries, until all humanity becomes one brotherhood, and we can say with the illustrious Thomas Paine, "The world is my country!" Yours for progress,

FREDERICK KOEZLY.

Historical Poem.

NATIONAL HOME D. V. S.,
MILWAUKEE, WIS., Feb. 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I thought it was about time an accurate statement was made about the great Jehovah and his family, his true crown-prince, and other legitimate heirs; especially because lately so many pretenders hav put forward their false claims who hav not a drop of Jewish blood in their veins. CYRUS WHEELOCK.

A RELIGIO - PHILOSOPHICO - METAPHYSICO - SARCASTICO-POETICO - HISTORICAL ESSAY ON THE RISE OF THE GREAT JEHOVAH, HIS TWO BOYS, AND ONE CUB.

In ancient years when goddesses were crowned
As well as gods, and used to skirmish round
The earth for worshipers, then female grace
Redeemed the scowl on great Jehovah's face;
While saints and bigots at a discount stood,
Or were made over for the public good.
Almighty Zeus was a fair old god,
Who sealed his edicts with a royal nod.
Of all the gods that ever rolled a world,
Revolved a planet, or a system whirled,
He was the greatest and the most supreme,
And wore a tunic built without a seam.
He dwelt contented in ambrosial shades
Among a bevy of celestial maids,
Till great Jehovah came upon the scene,
And brought a Jewess for the little queen,
Which soon raised hell. For Zeus scornful scowled
Upon the Jewess, when Jehovah howled
With rage terrific, and betwixt the eyes
Knocked Zeus headlong from the lofty skies,
Heels over hellward; and thereafter reigned
O'er earth and heaven and the crown obtained.
His great ambition and tremendous need
Was that his queen and royal spouse should breed
An earth-made son from his divine embrace
To pose as savior for the mortal race,
By name, Christ Jesus, who was crucified
To save his father, when he up and died.
This crime outrageous of a reigning god
Was used conjointly with his victim's blood
To crown his virtues, and o'er earth extol
The matchless mercy of his mighty soul
For every people, and the world surprise
With his sublime and awful sacrifice.
That he received the profit of the crime,
And son the torture, was indeed sublime.
This same Jehovah many years ago
In cleft of granit made a holy show.
But ages after he became more wise
And less eccentric; when he left the skies,
And in concealment, so the record runs,
He dwelt with priests and holy monks and nuns.
Sometimes with love his sacred bowels thrilled,
When he the people with amazement filled
By sly intrigues and gallant escapades,
And not infrequent kissed the Jewish maids,
Or younger wives of aged patriarchs,
Whose eyes he dazzled with especial marks
Of royal favor, and the spouse deceived
With tales of wondrous miracles achieved.
His shabby treatment of his boyhood's chum,
Unhappy Satan, when they used to bum
Around the heavens, whom to hell he sent,
As king to measure out the punishment
For unbelievers, and the sinners turn
To make them howl and giv a proper burn,
Was most pathetic; and throughout displayed
A friend's devoted confidence betrayed.
Which stained the glory of his sacred crown
And him dishonored, for he trampled down
The tried companion of his early youth,
At least his equal in his love for truth.
When time sealed in the buffet that it bears
Near nineteen hundred rapid-rushing years,
He brought a Schweinforth. With a grunt of joy
It claimed distinction as God's second boy.
But as the shoat, that stalks about its pen
In search of food and early breakfast when
Awakes the dawn, unconscious kinks its tail,
So this great Schweinforth, when it sought to vail
Its cunning project from a doubting world,
The fraud unconscious to mankind unfurled
By mask transparent, and secured at most
A sort of harem for its Holy Ghost.
Where, sure enough, the fair and blooming maid
With mystic breeding from a holy shade
The world astonished, when with infant cries
Was heard the rustle in surrounding skies
Of angel wings, while every breed of swine
With grunts acknowledged the prophetic sign.
Now kiss its dupes this sacred cub, and groan
Their loud amens with sanctimonious tone;
Then once again the little cuss they hug,
And think they see Jehovah's holy mug.
Amen, CYRUS WHEELOCK.

MORAL.

(Displaying the pure Christian spirit.)
Ye and your readers by these lines enticed
May yet be tempted to believe in Christ.
But if ye never will return to Jesus,
Who's always waiting of our sins to ease us,
Or if ye still are stubborn and refuse us,
Then go to hell, that ye may there amuse us. Again, Amen! CY.

P.S.—What is this cub anyway? A little god, or a little goddess? Damned if I know, although I am a surveyor by profession. C. W.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Floy's Brother Ray.

We's dot a baby at our house
Wee as a mouse.
Mamma says he tumed from the sties,
An' how he c'ies!
I sint it's jes' too awful bad
An' very sad
To send him 'way off down here,
Poor 'ittle dear;
An' I b'lieve it's jes' as I said:
That he's so red
'Tause the sun burnt him on the way
Wiv its hot ray.
I don't sint that man Dod is dood,
Betause he tould
Not treat in such a truel way
My brother Ray
If he was a dood Man an' tind,
But he would mind
And send an angel, who, if told,
I know would hold
A sunshade over him, or fold,
If it was cold,
Around him a blanket or shawl,
An' he'd not fall
In such an awfully hot day,
All the long way
Into mamma's arms from the sties.
Wonder he c'ies?
I don't, nor that mamma is sict
A sindle bit.
Wonder it didn't till her, an' him too—
Now, do not 'ou?
I don't sint mans knows so well now
As womens how
To tate dood tare of 'ittle tots,
An' love 'em lots;
An' Dod don't hav a wife, I dess,
An' mates a mess
Tarin' for babies; an' the boys
Mate so much noise,
And det their noses brote, or mad,
While dirls is dlad;
But so sorry Dod don't marry
An' not tarry,
As I heard did Mr. Devil mans,
An' hav the bans
Read in every town to-day.
When Brother Ray
Would be the last to fall so far,
From sties or star.

SADIE ATHENA MAGOON.

Talks on Political Economy.

"Ethel!" exclaimed Isabella in surprise, as coming out of the school one beautiful afternoon in June, she encountered that young person rather unexpectedly upon the broad steps. "Isabella!" exclaimed the other, equally surprised, "where are you going?" "I scarcely know, myself," replied Isabella, smiling and drawing on her gloves, "but I am at perfect liberty to do whatever I please, for this afternoon at least. Miss Vincent has given me a brief vacation." "Oh, bliss!" exclaimed the enthusiastic Ethel. "'What larks,' as Harry would say, for Miss Lovell in due admiration of my talents and ingenuity has given me a leave of absence, too. We can hav lots of fun, Belle." "Yes," returned Isabella as she descended the steps, a frown marring her pretty face, "we will hav lots of fun, if we can find anything to do. But that is just what we cannot do. Where in the world will we manage to stow ourselvs this long afternoon?" "I know," said Ethel, who was never at loss what to do with herself, and when people felt ill and "out of sorts" always proved better than a dose of medicin; "we will take a row on the lake." "But where can we get our boat?" asked Isabella, still disposed to take a gloomy view of the position. "The gardener that Miss Leslie, the principal of the school, employs for the lawns, promised to lend me his little boat, 'The Mary Jane.' His cottage is not far from the grounds; come, Belle." Isabella walked somewhat silently beside her companion, for she had not yet recovered her cheerfulness. But Ethel, as though to make up for her companion's silence, chatted away serenely, never offended when her questions remained unanswered, until Isabella, beginning to be ashamed of herself, exclaimed contritely: "You are an angel, Ethel, and I am a horrid cross thing. But I believe I got up wrong this morning, for despite the lovely day and the vacation I feel irritable and cross."

The boat was soon procured, and it did not take the girls long to reach a beautiful little nook far up the lake that they took a fancy to, and climbing up the bank, found a pretty rustic bench in the midst of the beautiful wild nook that looked as though it was never inhabited by anyone except the birds and other children of nature. Ethel immediately claimed it, and declared that it was placed there for her especial benefit. Isabella rather timidly followed her more adventuresome friend's example, but soon, absorbed in gazing at the fair scene, forgot her fears. Ethel drew a deep breath of appreciation and delight. "How beautiful!" she exclaimed; "I feel more like quoting Byron than talking political economy. But business is business; go on, Belle." Miss Lloyd raised her eyebrows in interrogativ surprise, and asked, "Who said anything about political economy?" "I did," answered Ethel, picking up a piece of slate and making it skim across the lake; "I asked you to tell me some more about 'the wealth of nations.'" "Well, really," said Miss Lloyd, rather pettishly, "you seem so well advanced in the study that I thought you would not require any more explanation. Can't you possibly remember anything more that I said except that it was 'the wealth of nations?'" Ethel smiled; and now, abandoning her former pursuit of skimming stones, was busily engaged in pulling a daisy to pieces, for she always had to be busy at something. "You would not expect anyone to keep trigonometry, geometry, four languages, science of ethnology, say nothing of the higher mathematics, ethics, and that painfully apparent science of economics, all in one's poor cranium together, would you?" she was asking calmly, when Isabella stopped her with an imploring gesture, and to silence her companion more effectually dashed into the subject without more ado. "Well, I hav said that political economy treats of the wealth of nations," she began glibly, as though she was reciting an exercise in her French grammar. "But in order to hav you more thoroughly understand me, it will be necessary to speak of the production of wealth. There was originally two requisits; from these springs a third. Land and labor, then capital. Land in political economy means natural agent, raw material; labor, human exertion. A union of these produces a third factor, capital. The savage gathering fruits or roots for his dinner is the simplest conception of the first or primary requisits, land and labor. But when he gathers these things and stores them while he employs his time making a bow and arrow, he is working upon capital. His food, when gathered to simply satisfy his wants, is wealth. When eaten while engaged upon his bow, it becomes capital. His bow and arrow is wealth; when used to procure game, it becomes capital. Do you perceive the analogy?" asked Isabella, inclining her sunny head to one side questioningly. "Yes," replied Ethel, giving her friend a glance of mock admiration. "What a logician you are to be sure. Here, take this for your invincible logic," and she playfully flung a wild sweet-briar rose in her lap.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Papa Sang "Bye-Low."

There died not long ago the little daughter of a New York lawyer, who approached the dark river with a composure that was as pathetic as it was unusual. She was the second in the family connection to succumb to diphtheria. A few weeks before she sickened she had known of the illness and death of a young cousin and playmate, and, though not allowed at the bedside or funeral, had been much impressed, and had asked questions which showed that the dismal features of the last rites were full of horror to her.

When she was taken ill it was carefully concealed from her that she had diphtheria, lest she should be frightened. It was a malignant attack, and it ran its course quickly, says the New York Times. The crisis approached, and all hope was abandoned. Her father sat by her side, watching her pale face take on a graver pallor that had only one meaning. The little girl's eyes were closed, and in her father's hand her own nerveless fingers were held. A tear wrung from his agony dropped upon them. The child opened her eyes wide.

"Are you crying, papa?" she said, as well as she could speak; "am I so sick, papa? Am I going to die?"

The question was earnest, and the eyes searched his face for hope, but she saw there was none. For a long minute she watched him closely. Who shall say what that look contained? Fear, entreaty, affection, and finally renunciation—for at length, with a little weary sigh, she turned away, putting her face toward the wall, but leaving her hand still fast in his.

"Papa," she said again, after a brief silence, and in the tone there was a touching resignation, "sing 'Bye-low'"—which was a nursery lullaby she had never outgrown.

Although choking with grief, the stricken father complied, and so, holding his hand, with her face still to the wall, and in her ears the crooning familiar melody, the little girl quietly met her death.

Chats With Correspondents.

"PAXTON."—"Elm trees" received and will appear soon. We thank you very much for your kindness. Your little lessons are interesting and impressiv.

WM. L. PALEN.—Thanks for article on "Gold Mines." Anything from your facil pen with which you may favor the Corner, is acceptable.

SADIE ATHENA MAGOON.—Congratulations on prospects changed for the better. May the new home be always the new paradise, and may the happy family liv long to enjoy it. You are sure of this home anyway, while the mansion in the skies is too much in the mist to be of any profit and advantage.

LAURA S. P.—Never mind the rudeness of the ignorant. You can afford to pass it by in silence. Be true to yourself, and true to your honest convictions.

JOHN D.—Yes, it is certainly wrong and very cruel to rob birds' nests or disturb them in any way. How would you like if some powerful creature should come and destroy your home, tear down the house, and kill the children? Take the case home, and put yourself in the bird's place—how would you feel about it? You should care tenderly for the birds, for you are strong and they are weak. Besides, how lovely they make all Nature with their sweet and cheerful songs. They do the best they can, and so should you.

Mr. James Warburton told the other day of a nightingale and its mate who came and built their nest in a grove near Warrington, England. A policeman was appointed to guard the birds, and trains of cars were run to the spot that the people might go and hear the charming song of the nightingale.

Every boy should feel himself an appointed policeman to guard the birds and their young.

Correspondence.

NAPLES, S. D., May 10, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will write and let you know that we hav had a snow-storm. Our school is out. I am ten years old. Papa is making arrangements with Mr. J. D. Shaw to come here to lecture. He had Mr. John E. Remsburg to lecture at Henry twice while we lived there. I would like for some little Liberal girl to write to me. I hope this will not go to the waste-basket. I will close for this time.

Yours respectfully,
MAUD S. SHORT.

ATTLEBORO, May 12, 1892.

DEAR EDITOR: I send you my first and last attempt at rhyming. It is an epitaph on McGinty, the late popular idol of the day.

MC'GINTY.

McGinty is drowned
At the bottom of the sea.
And the public is glad
As 'tis fitting it should be.
They put him in a bag,
Then they piled on the stones,
For thus to keep him down
And to smash all his bones.
Then down, down, down went he.

His relativs were there
The pictures of despair,
All clad in black array,
Because he'd passed away,
And they mourned,
And they cried,
To think that he had died
In a bag at the bottom of the sea.

MIRIAM.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., May 11, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav just finished reading the Children's Corner, and I thought the letters very pleasant to read.

My sister and I go to school. I am in B Grammar, two from the highest. You cannot leave this class till you pass in Geography. I hope to pass in June.

We went to hear Anthony Comstock preach in the Methodist church, and he read something from a paper about himself and Colonel Ingersoll, but he only said "Colonel," and said he could not mention his name in the "house of God." Of course I knew who it was, and we all smiled, and then he wanted a collection.

The church was crowded, because they closed all the other churches and all the people had to come to the Methodist church.

Portia, my sister, is twelve, and I am fourteen. I remain,

Your friend,
GERALDINE BROADBELT.

P.S.—Mamma would be so pleased to see you this summer if you come our way.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW, WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

LIQUOR DRINKING

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents.

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

News of the Week.

In Russia scurvy is following upon typhus and small-pox. Multitudes of the sick go without food or nursing till death ends their misery.

A Catholic organ says: "When the Fair is over, if Leo XIII. desires a home in the land of the free, Chicago will present him with the exhibition palaces."

The Platte, Missouri, Mississippi, and other rivers hav flooded large sections of the Western states, demolishing buildings, ruining farms, and drowning live stock and over a hundred persons.

The Vatican has again declared that our present schools must be changed into denominational ones receiving state support. "The duty of the hour, therefore," says our leading Catholic organ, "for all the Catholics of the United States, is to get together, and putting out of sight all past controversies, to build up the school system from which God is not banished."

Of the Parliament of Religions to be held in connection with the World's Fair, its manager says: "We believe that the view expressed by Cardinal Gibbons will be realized; that the expectations of the most sanguin will be dwarfed by the gigantic realities; that the Congresses of Religion that shall meet in 1893 will be so noteworthy as to make an epoch in history."

Of Deeming, the murderer of his two wives and four children, who was hanged at Melbourne, Aus., on the 23d, it is related that on a voyage just before his arrest he attracted notice by his frequent exclamations on the sinfulness of the sailors' profanity. His last hours were devoted largely to praying for forgivness and reading in the Bible, especially in Revelation. His last words were, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."

Rev. Dr. Cutter, of New York, has sent a letter to the members of the police, exhorting them to go to Sunday-school, worship God, and become Christians. Most of the police are Catholics anyway, but Inspector Williams, who perhaps is not very religious, took offense, and said, "Take 3,500 ministers and 3,500 police and put them side by side and you will find a deal more sin on the ministers' side than on ours."

Some New York preachers recommend that a Protestant congress be held at Chicago during the Fair, to offset the influence of the Catholic congress there. The Catholic church, they say, has planned the capture of the Fair, and has already acquired the domination of several committees and begun manipulating them in its interests. It has "so planned as to convey to the people in the Western world that Romanism has been the top, bottom, and sides of the civilization and progress of this country."

Among the memories of our early history which the Columbian celebration causes to be recalled numerously, Catholics bring forward the fact that Washington forbid the celebration of "Pope Day" in the army. On this day, November 5th, every year, it had been customary to parade effigies of the pope and the devil through Boston streets amid jeers of Protestants, and finally to burn them with execrations. Washington apprehended that this would disunite Catholics from our cause in the struggle against England.

Archbishop Katzer has decreed for the archdiocese of Milwaukee: "Masons, Carbonari, Odd Fellows, Sons of Temperance, unless they hav in act left the secret society, are to be deprived of ecclesiastical burial." As to other societies: "We forbid their members, 'in a body,' or with badges and regalia, to be present, march, or perform any rites or ceremonies at the funeral, with the exception perhaps of the union known as 'the Grand Army of the Republic,' because this society is considered rather as a military and patriotic society. In this case, even, all rites and ceremonies must be excluded that are not military."

Mgr. O'Reilly, the priest of the New York church where the relic of the Virgin Mary's mother has been on exhibition, lately gave his congregation a history of it. He said that immediately after the crucifixion there was a violent persecution of all who had followed Jesus, and especially of all who were related to him. Even the dead were not safe. And as the body of St. Anna, the mother of the Virgin, was the most precious body of all, it was taken away for safety. It was carefully guarded and brought to Constantinople, and from there to Apt, where it is now buried in the great cathedral. The popes ordered an arm to be taken from this body, and that was carried to Rome. From this arm came the relic. "The proof that this is part of the body of St. Anna," said Mgr. O'Reilly, "is the fact that miracles are performed through it."

Can Infidels Be Saved?

Whatever their lot may be in the uncertain "world to come," the following letters show that in this world they can be saved to many years of usefulness, and saved from unnecessary tortures by applied science.

An old, true, and tried standard-bearer of Liberalism, Mr. C. B. Reynolds, consents to the publication of the following letter:

Fremont, Wash., April 16, 1892.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr., My dear, good friend: I am rejoiced to be able to report that your help has been most efficacious. From a sad condition of the worst form of chronic dyspepsia, and acute rheumatism in my right shoulder that made it very painful to write and next to impossible to raise my right hand to my head, having exhausted hope and patience in trying sure remedies, your generous help and skill hav rescued me and given me a new lease of life with comfort. Doubtless I should have made better headway in recovery only my duties were such that I could not conveniently take the remedies with regularity. Only your generous, kindly interest in me prompted me to persevere. I am free from the demon dyspepsia, and have but slight inconvenience from lingering rheumatism.

Mrs. Reynolds and Gertie join in grateful thanks for your restoring my health, and I add, for all the kind interest you hav evinced in my work, and the cheer, help and encouragement you have afforded me.

Your grateful friend and faithful coworker for Reason, Right and Truth,

C. B. Reynolds.

A budding Infidel, C. W. Cockrell, Jr., of Salmon City. Ida., as he was left, crippled and helpless, by the grip.

His father's letter to The Truth Seeker, as published over a year ago:

Salmon City, Ida., March 1, 1891.

Mr. Editor: We have had a great deal of sickness in our family within the last year, and Christians have had the audacity to tell us it is all on account of our belief. Our little boy has not walked for a year, on account of sickness, only by the aid of crutches, and he could not do that well until we treated him under Dr. E. B. Foote, of New York city. I think in another month our son will be able to walk about without the aid of any crutches or cane. Now, if the Christians' God afflicted our son in this way because his parents did not believe in that old Jewish history of wholesale murder, robbery, and rapine, why does he idle around and let Dr. Foote outgeneral him in one of his most pleasant pastimes, that of visiting the sins of the parents on their children? Truly Dr. Foote is a wonderful man. And if what the so-called Christians say is true, he, Dr. Foote, is more wonderful than ever. I would advise anyone in bad health or disabled in any way to advise with Dr. Foote. He will do just what he tells you he can do. If God knows all things, past, present, and future, he knew such men as Dr. Foote would exist. Why did he allow such grand, great, and good men as he to spring up and down his mighty work of revenge? The fact is, it is all a fable, and no thinking man or woman that pretends to believe it does actually believe it. We see occurrences every day that refute that old book of riddles and falsehoods. If God made something out of nothing, he might have been thoughtful enough to procure a patent-right on the invention and sell out to some energetic man that could carry on the work after our mighty maker chose to retire from this little globe, so that many persons in the United States, and in fact, all over the world, would not be in a suffering condition, and helpless. But instead of doing so, he retired from this sphere, perched himself upon his magnificent throne of luxury, and peeps down upon this world of failure and destitution without ever one look of sympathy.

C. W. Cockrell.

The mother's letter six months after the above:

Oct. 20, 1891.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Dear Sir: Kindest of friends, for such you have been to me and mine. One year ago to-day my son took his first dose of medicine under your treatment. At that time he was paralyzed from his hips down; his feet were drawn up to the body; it required all my strength to pull one of his legs out straight, and it caused him great pain to do so. He suffered all the time but about every three days he would have a day of more acute suffering. We expected his death at any hour. His weight was fifty pounds. He could not creep or move one inch either way when put on rugs on the floor, and had to be carried about like a babe.

Fifteen months ago he was given up to die by our doctors, who thought his case was hopeless. As a last resort we procured treatment from you, and to the great joy and surprise of both myself and family, he soon began to improve. He gradually grew better, and after two months of the treatment he began to move about and try to creep. We had made for him a pair of crutches that were fifteen inches long. Think how glad I, his mother, was the day he could slide around on those crutches, sitting flat down on the floor. We made new crutches at different times, each pair a little longer, until he had eight pair—and one cane. He has now discarded all and walks without the aid of anything.

His general health is good. He weighs seventy-two pounds—the most he ever weighed. He is now going to school. We procured altogether nine months' treatment. His case was considered a very remarkable one and was known by hundreds of people in this state, who regard his recovery as hardly less than a miracle. In this limited space I cannot of course go into details. I might write on and on for days and weeks and could not tell you how grateful I feel to you. Words are meaningless in trying to pen them and have you read and understand me.

I am perfectly happy now, as though a great dark cloud were lifted from my path. To think of traveling down life's dreary road with a cripled and afflicted child, one that every passer-by looked upon as a pitiful object, was a bitter thought, I tell you. How changed things are now! everything looks so much brighter. My child is in good health, has resumed his studies, and I have every hope of his being a well, strong man. Wishing you and everyone under your care every prosperity, I am, sincerely,

May Cockrell.

HOW IT WAS DONE.

Abridging the letter by the omission of much unnecessary fulsome praise of the doctor, we have quoted enough of it to show how gradual the process of recovery was. In this age of physiological science and the medical arts we do not look for miraculous cures. To make a cripple walk with a word of the mouth or a wave of the hand is the method of miraculous cures. Not possessing supernatural powers the physician of to-day must be content with helping nature to bring about a gradual recovery by means of rational treatment employed in accordance with rather than in contravention of natural law. In the treatment of this boy's case is illustrated the value of our ideas, for the result justified the means and the means were entirely in accord with our theory as to autotoxæmia. Remedies were first directed to cleanse the stomach and bowels (the twenty-five feet of alimentary canal) to remove one great source of impurity by substituting digestion for fermentation or decay, so that there should be produced therein more true food substance and less stercoræmic poisons. At the same time mild measures were prescribed to arouse the skin and kidney functions, to coax these organs to quicken their work of casting out poisons which were causing sick headaches, heart spasms, rheumatism, and contracted muscles. As the work of elimination was slowly increased, so that the poisons began to be cast out faster than they were formed, these symptoms gradually lessened until they disappeared entirely. If the boy had been daily subjected to a hypodermic injection of strychnine sufficient to tetanize him, he would have been no more certainly the victim of poison than he was when through the complicated disorder of his own blood-making processes, the blood became so overstocked with home-made poisons as to be more of an irritant than a nutrient wherever it went. The blood thus poisoned beclouded the brain and brought on sick headaches; it goaded the heart's muscles to agonizing spasms, and so twisted the muscles of the limbs with painful spasms that they became contracted and would not relax. The indications of the case were simply to cleanse the blood as already described. Fortunately the latent energies of the boy were not exhausted, his own recuperative power responded slowly and surely, all his vital functions were coaxed to better action, and as they learned to work together again harmoniously, the balance was again restored, which we call health or wholeness; the digestion became good, the elimination regular and sufficient, the blood clean, the muscles limber, the nerves comfortable, and the brain ready for resuming school work.

Dr. Foote continues the practice that he adopted thirty years ago, of carefully examining all cases presented for his opinion, in person or by mail, free of charge. The sick in all parts of the United States, and out of the United States, who have difficult diseases of any description, are invited to write. A list of printed questions to be answered by the invalid sent by mail or furnished in the office on application. Also a pamphlet containing nearly one hundred pages of evidences of Dr. Foote's success in the treatment of supposed incurable diseases, managed by letter and express, mailed free. Thousands are suffering who can enjoy health if they will but resort to rational means of cure. Write and find out all about it, inclosing postage-stamp, to Dr. E. B. Foote, author of "Plain Home Talk," "Medical Common Sense," "Science in Story," etc., etc., 120 Lexington avenue, New York.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place. New York.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, care of Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

SUPPLIES COMPLETE NUTRITION. Palatable to the most DELICATE TASTE. The only pre-digested FOOD TONIC on the market that is Endorsed by Physicians everywhere.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By B. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

THE Christian, nstead of being "a man of one book," and that a compilation of the traditions of a credulous age, will become a student of the volumes of nature, and learning its facts will discover its laws. —Adams.

THERE is not a good code of laws in any single country. The reason is obvious: laws hav been made for particular purposes, according to time, place, exigencies, and not with general and systematic views. —Voltaire.

LIKE the wife of Ulysses, who undid at night what her industrious fingers had wrought by day, Nature amuses herself with an eternal building-up and destroying, the beginning of which is like its end, and the end like the beginning.—Büchner.

IT can no longer be doubtful that the world progresses in a manner that has no resemblance to human design; nay, that its essential method is such that, measured by the standard of human reason, it can only be regarded as the blindest chance.—Lange.

THE relations of human life are too complicated to be accurately and clearly understood, and, as a consequence, rules of action vary from age to age. The ideas of right and wrong change with the experience of the race, and this change is wrought by the gradual ascertaining of consequences—of results. For this reason the religion of one age fails to meet the standard of another, precisely as the laws that satisfied our ancestors are repealed by us; so that, in spite of all efforts, religion itself is subject to gradual and perpetual change.—Ingersoll.

IF there be any ill in the universe from mere chance, then a designing principle or mind, whether good or bad, cannot be the cause of all things; and consequently, if there be supposed a designing principle, who is the cause only of good, but cannot prevent the ill which happens from chance, or from a contrary ill design, then there can be supposed in reality no such thing as a superior good design, or mind, other than what is impotent and defectiv; for not to correct or totally exclude that ill of chance, or of a contrary ill design, must proceed either from impotency or ill-will. —Shaftesbury.

IT is not the Bible and the pretensions it makes for itself that I assail; it is the Bible and the pretensions in regard to it put forth by Protestant Christianity. Taken for what it really is—a collection of more or less connected tracts belonging to times more or less remote, and reflecting as it does the deed and motiv of ages and races that are no more—it is a deeply-interesting antiquarian study. But here its use and its merit end. That there is anything divine and supernatural about it more than there are about the Vedas and the Koran and the Times newspaper is an utterly untenable hypothesis. When, a century or two hence, the student looks back upon it, all the warping prejudices in its favor forgotten, it will be to him all but incredible that such a bundle of heterogeneous tracts was ever regarded as one homogeneous volume, upon which a definit religious system could be founded. It will appear to him that the impudence and ingenuity which could find a religious system in such a mass of self-contradicting platitude and exploded absurdity could hav found a religious system in a wheelbarrow or in a bag of nails.—Saladin in God and His Book.

THE age of the world is great enough for our imaginations, even according to the Mosaic account, without borrowing any years from the geologist. From Adam and Eve at one sheer leap down to the deluge, and then through the ancient monarchies, through Babylon and Thebes, Brahma and Abraham, to Greece and the Argonauts; whence we might start again with Orpheus and the Trojan war, the Pyramids and the Olympic games and Homer and Athens, for our stages; and after a breathing-space at the building of Rome, continue our journey down through Christ to—America. It is a wearisome while. And yet the lives of but sixty old women, such as liv under the hill, say of a century each, strung together, are sufficient to reach over the whole ground. Taking hold of hands they would span the interval from Eve to my own mother. A respectable tea-party merely—whose gossip would be Universal History. The fourth old woman from myself suckled Columbus—the ninth was nurse to the Norman Conqueror—the nineteenth was the Virgin Mary—the twenty-fourth the Cumæan Sibyl—the thirtieth was at the Trojan war and Helen her name—the thirty-eighth was Queen Semiramis—the sixtieth was Eve the mother of mankind So much for the Old woman that livs under the hill,

And if she's not gone she livs there still.

It will not take a very great-grandmother of hers to be in at the death of Time.—Thoreau.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $4.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,
Immortality of Matter,
Immortality of Force,
Infinity of Matter,
Value of Matter,
Motion,
Form,
Immutability of Natural Laws,
Universality of Natural Laws,
The Heavens,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,
Original Generation,
Secular Generation,
The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Man,
Brain and Mind,
Thought,
Consciousness,
Seat of the Soul,
Innate Ideas,
The Idea of God,
Personal Continuance,
Vital Force,
The Soul of Brutes,
Free Will,
Morality,
Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.
Testimonial
To Walt Whitman.
BY
ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.
With a Portrait of Whitman.
AUTHORIZED EDITION.
Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.
Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.
The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel
(Mark iv, 21); or,
1,306 Questions to the Clergy:
And for the Consideration of Others.
Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.
BY WILLIAM HART.
Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN.
Priest and Man.
A NOVEL.
By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

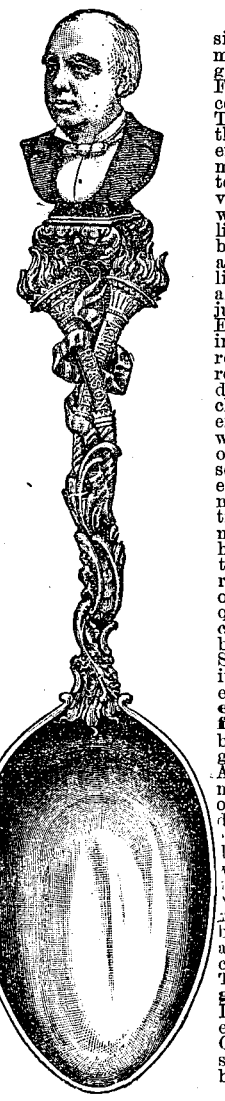
An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.
1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery
Takes hold in this order:
Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,
Driving everything before it that ought to be out.
You know whether you need it or not.
Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.
Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.
Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.
The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.
Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.
Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.
Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.
Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.
Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.
Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.
The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.
Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.
Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER



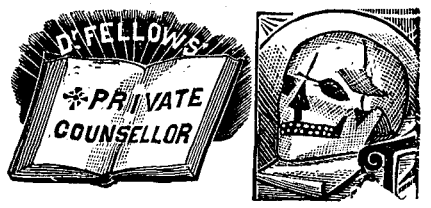
SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,
OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.
By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.
Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.
ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate
ON CHRISTIANITY.
Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.
Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

The Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR
THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.
THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.



Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"
and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"
I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.
Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.
ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ISAIAH'S JOSS IS FULL.

To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts, and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats.—Isa. i, 11.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theolog . Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait. Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents, singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

—144—

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 23. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 4, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TAXED HOMES OF THE POOR AND THE UNTAXED TEMPLES OF SUPERSTITION.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,
Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 899pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Trnth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF
ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price. cloth. 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.: 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp.; clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C Blanchard. Pap., 40c; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1 50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap, 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc, with Life of Paine and steel port $1 50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery. Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper. 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard. by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper. 25c.: cloth. 50c

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper. 50 cents: cloth. 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 590 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 23. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 4, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 4, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Sunday Deviltry.

That the Sunday question is the most important matter for present consideration it needs but a glance through the papers of but a week to determin. The reasons for this are plain enough. The attempt of the pharisaical bigots to close the World's Fair precipitated the discussion, but back of that lies the fact that the clergy consider the enforced keeping of the day necessary to their religious existence, and consequently are prepared to go all lengths to prevent their business from being destroyed, and the other fact that the people are leaving Puritanism behind them and are rightly beginning to consider Sunday laws as tyranny. For many months now the question has been agitated and the excitement is increasing instead of abating.

Down in Tennessee, on the 26th of last month, five Seventh Day Adventists were arraigned for working on Sunday. What the court did with them we hav not yet learned.

Over in Hudson county, N. J., there is a Sunday-closing association, in league with the ministers, which is working vigorously for closing the stores as well as the saloons on Sunday. Circular letters hav been sent to all the pastors in Jersey City and Hoboken with the request that they be read from the pulpits on Sunday. The circulars state that in this movement the association desires to enlist the sympathy and coöperation of all pastors. The circular was read from most of the pulpits last Sunday and the pastors spoke vigorously in commendation of the movement.

In the District of Columbia the Sabbatarians are working for the enactment by Congress of

"A BILL

"Prohibiting the delivery and sale of ice within the District of Columbia on the Sabbath day, commonly known as Sunday.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representativs of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful to sell or deliver ice in any quantity or quantities, by means of wagons or other vehicles, on the public streets or thoroughfares or at depots or offices within the District of Columbia on the Sabbath day, commonly known as Sunday.

"Section 2. That any person or corporation violating the provisions of this act shall be liable to a penalty of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offense, upon conviction in the police court of the District of Columbia.

"Sec. 3. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be, and the same are hereby repealed."

In Chicago the clothing clerks and the clergy are in league. They want everybody boycotted who sells or buys anything on Sunday. Steps were taken at a recent meeting to affiliate the clerks with the Trades and Labor assembly of Chicago and to apply the methods of the great Central Labor organization to the problem of Sunday closing. At this meeting addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Withrow, of the Third Presbyterian church; Rev. Dr. Lawrence, of the Second Baptist church, and Rev. A. H. Henry. Resolutions were adopted condemning the practice of employers in opening their shops at all on Sunday, and appointing a committee of ten to request clothing-dealers to conform with the desire of the meeting.

At Mount Pleasant, Tex., as referred to last week, charges hav been preferred against twenty Seventh Day Adventists for Sunday labor.

Through the efforts of the Sabbatarians nine states hav decided to close their exhibits at the World's Fair on Sunday. Iowa is the only state which has acted on the question and decided for right and liberty.

The Pittsburgh presbytery of the Reformed Presbyterian church recently made this utterance: "The Sunday newspapers stand convicted before the people of this commonwealth of lawlessness—taken repeatedly in the very act. They hav strenuously denied this charge heretofore, but they can deny it no longer without outdoing Ananias. Always a moral nuisance and an insidious corrupter of morals, the Sunday newspaper is now a legal nuisance as well. Having no regard for the divine law of the fourth Commandment, it is but natural that it should treat the civil law with equal contempt. We heartily commend the Pittsburgh Law and Order League for its courageous efforts to suppress the Sunday newspaper, and we urge upon all the people under the care of this presbytery to giv to the movement hearty moral and financial support. And we further recommend them not to patronize any paper that issues a Sunday edition. We take great pleasure in commending the manly utterances of the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette in favor of the maintenance of the Sabbath and of the present Sabbath law of this commonwealth. The presbytery also adopted the following:

"Resolved, That all pastors be directed to preach upon the subject of the Sunday newspaper, and that the sessions of the various congregations throughout western Pennsylvania shall act as committees to secure funds to aid the Law and Order League."

Similar resolutions hav been passed by the Methodist preachers and by the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian preachers at this seat of the Sunday newspaper war, and some twenty informations for violation of the Sunday law of Pennsylvania hav been lodged against newsdealers by the Law and Order League. The owners of a steamer making Sunday excursions having been prosecuted by the League hav sold the vessel "because of the Blue laws."

In welcoming Archbishop Ireland at a reception given him by the National Temperance Society, Dr. Cuyler said: "We remember, my dear sir, how the Catholic Sheridan and the Protestant Grant led together our hosts to victory. So now opposition to a common foe enlists us in a common conflict. Let us coöperate with Catholics in temperance and Sabbath reform, even though we must contend against them in regard to education and religion."

The Central presbytery of Dakota is reported as having memorialized the Presbyterian general assembly, which meets at Portland, Ore., that "in case the gates should be opened on Sunday the assembly should earnestly request all its ministers and people to absent themselvs from the Fair."

The Sunday Observance Committee of Keyport, N. J., held a meeting recently, at which reports from various committees were listened to. The committee to wait upon Mr. Cornell, of the Keyport Steamboat Company, to ask him not to run his boat to New York on Sunday during the summer, reported that Mr. Cornell claimed that the Sabbath committee should see the farmers in reference to the receiving and shipping of produce on Sunday. The committee resolved to enforce the law upon those who had their places of business open on the previous Sunday.

These are but a few of the hundreds of instances of Sunday deviltry which one sees who reads a considerable number of daily and weekly newspapers. New York city is tolerably free from this intolerance, but the police court records show that the laws are still used to harass small storekeepers who strive to get along in the world by selling goods on Constantine's day. A policeman two weeks ago arrested a man for selling him a glass of milk. The justice promptly discharged the hideous criminal. If we had preserved all the records of such cases for the past six months, the bare mention of them would fill pages of THE TRUTH SEEKER. No other phase of religious news would hav taken so much space, except perhaps the records of "ministerial conduct."

This Sunday deviltry has been greatly helped along by the decision of Judge Brewer of the United States Supreme Court in the case of the Church of the Holy Trinity. This church had been found guilty by a lower court of violating the law against imported contract labor by hiring the Rev. E. Walpole Warren from London. Judge Brewer reversed the decision, writing also an opinion which has cheered the Sabbatarians greatly. This decision comes, they say, "just in time to checkmate the fallacies of the old Tripoli treaty and the postmaster-general's sophistries of 1829, which are being industriously used to prevent Congress from closing the World's Fair on the Sabbath. This document outranks and so outlaws them both as to the relation of Christianity to our civil government. It is, therefore, legitimate to close the Exposition gates, not only because of the Sunday toil and traffic and turmoil the opening would cause, but also because 'this is a Christian nation.' This decision enables National Reformers to say anew, with fresh force, that if 'this is a Christian nation,' it should call itself so in its Constitution."

In this, we believe, they argue wrongly, for treaties are by the Constitution a part of the supreme law of the land, and no judge can upset them by an obiter dictum judgment in a case violating statute only. But the opinion handed down with the decision is of great interest, as showing how easily a churchman can twist matters to the advantage of his church. He begins by affirming that the citizens of the United States are a "religious people." Of this he satisfies himself by saying that "from the discovery of this continent to the present hour there is a single voice making this affirmation. The commission to Christopher Columbus, prior to his sail westward, is from 'Ferdinand and Isabella, by the grace of God king and queen of Castile,' and recites that 'it is hoped that by God's assistance some of the continents and islands of the ocean will be discovered.'" After quoting the pious outrages of the colonial grants and charters (and he might just as well hav quoted also the language of the old bills of lading), the deistical parts of the Declaration of Independence, and referring to the clauses recognizing "God" in many of the state constitutions, he says:

"There is no dissonance in these declarations. There is a universal language pervading them all, having one meaning; they affirm and reaffirm that this is a religious nation. These are not individual sayings, declarations of private persons; they are organic utterances; they speak the voice of the entire people. While because of a general recognition of this truth the question has seldom been presented to the courts, yet we find that in Updegraph v. The Commonwealth (11 Serg. & Rawle, 394, 400) it was decided that 'Christianity, general Christianity, is, and always has been, a part of the common law of Pennsylvania; . . . not Christianity with an established church, and tithes, and spiritual courts; but Christianity with liberty of conscience to all men.' And in The People v. Ruggles (8 Johns. 290, 294, 295), Chancellor Kent, the great commentator on American law, speaking as chief justice of the supreme court of New York, said: 'The people of this state, in common with the people of this country, profess the general doctrins of Christianity as the rule of their faith and practice; and to scandalize the author of these doctrins is not only, in a religious point of view, extremely impious, but, even in respect to the obligations due to society, is a gross violation of decency and good order. . . . The free, equal, and undisturbed enjoyment of religious opinion, whatever it may be, and free and decent discussions on any religious subject, is granted and secured; but to revile, with malicious and blasphemous contempt, the religion professed by almost the whole community, is an abuse of that right. Nor are we bound, by any expressions in the Constitution, as some hav strangely supposed, either not to punish at all, or to punish indiscriminately, the like attacks upon the religion of Mohammed or of the Grand Lama; and for this plain reason, that the case assumes that we are a Christian people, and the morality of the country is deeply ingrafted upon Christianity, and not upon the doctrins or worship of those impostors.' And in the famous case of Vidal v. Girard's Executors (2 How. 127, 198), this court, while sustaining the will of Mr. Girard, with its provision for the creation of a college into which no minister should be permitted to enter, observed: 'It is also said, and truly, that the Christian religion is a part of the common law of Pennsylvania.'

"If we pass beyond these matters to a view of American life as expressed by its laws, its business, its customs, and its society, we find everywhere a clear recognition of the same truth. Among other matters note the following: The form of oath universally prevailing, concluding with an appeal to the almighty; the custom of opening sessions of all deliberativ bodies and most conventions with prayer; the prefatory words of all wills, 'In the name of God, amen;' the laws respecting the observance of the Sabbath; with the general cessation of all secular business, and the closing of courts, legislatures, and other similar public assemblies on that day; the churches and church organizations which abound in every city, town, and hamlet; the multitude of charitable organizations existing everywhere under Christian auspices; the gigantic missionary associations, with general support, and aiming to establish Christian missions in every quarter of the globe. These, and many other matters which might be noticed, add a volume of unofficial declarations to the mass of organic utterances that this is a Christian nation. In the face of all these facts, shall it be believed that a Congress of the United States intended to make it a misdemeanor for a church of this country to contract for the services of a Christian minister residing in another nation?

"Suppose in the Congress that passed this act some member had offered a bill which in terms declared that, if any Roman Catholic church in this country should contract with Cardinal Manning to come to this country and enter into its service as pastor and priest; or any Episcopal church should enter into a like contract with Canon Farrar; or any Baptist church should make similar arrangements with Rev. Mr. Spurgeon; or any Jewish synagog with some eminent rabbi, such contract should be adjudged unlawful and void, and the church making it be subject to prosecution and punishment, can it be believed that it would hav received a minute of approving thought or a single vote? Yet it is contended that such was in effect the meaning of the statute. The construction invoked cannot be accepted as correct. It is a case where there was presented a definit evil, in view of which the legislature used general terms with the purpose of reaching all phases of that evil, and thereafter, unexpectedly, it is developed that the general language thus employed is broad enough to reach cases and acts, which the whole history and life of the country affirm could not hav been intentionally legislated against. It is the duty of the courts, under those circumstances, to say that, however broad the language of the statute may be, the act, although within the letter, is not within the intention of the legislature, and therefore cannot be within the statute.

"The judgment will be reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion."

Leaving it to the lawyers to deal with his quibbles seriatim, it can readily be seen even by a layman that he is wrong in taking the expressions of a few men for the sentiment of others; for of all things plain in the organization, or federation, of the states, it is that the intent of the founders of the general government was to avoid the impression that this is a "Christian" government in any sense; that while all were to be protected in their right to freedom of worship, no one religion—not no one sectarianism—was to be elevated above another. The Christian was not to use the federal government to persecute the Mohammedan simply because he was a follower of Mohammed any more than the follower of the false prophet was to imprison the disciple of the Nazarene fanatic. The founders of this republic, permeated with the philosophy of the French Encyclopedists, intelligent men who knew the history of the various religions and the bloody wars between their devotees, strove to make this a purely secular government. To stimulate them they had the hundreds of sectarian quarrels fresh in mind. They knew what had been done by the Puritans, and they knew the nature of the religion which prompted the infamous deeds. Many of these founders were only deists, like Washington, Franklin, and Paine, and at least one of the most influential of their number, Thomas Jefferson, was what the church even now calls an Infidel—a Materialist. Judge Brewer's opinion, therefore, is absurd, being wholly out of line with the facts. Nevertheless, it affords the Sabbatarians great comfort, and they are using it industriously to further their legal Sunday deviltry.

If the Liberals could form local societies sufficiently numerous to combat these tyrannous acts in all towns it would be the proper thing to do. As the case seems to stand, however, the best that can be done is to work against the closing of the World's Fair, as that is a national enterprise and all citizens hav an equal interest in it. If, too, the Sabbatarians can be defeated in this matter, it will hav a tremendous influence in other places, even though the rule for that could not affect state and municipal laws. But considering the activity of the revivified Puritans, no efforts should be spared to overcome them in the one case on which above all others they hav concentrated their devilish talents. An open Fair in 1893 means a great deal more liberty in the future than the churchmen hav allowed us in the past.

The Work Cut Out for the Priests.

The Roman authorities at Rome hav supplemented their decision in the Faribault and Stillwater cases by another letter addressed to each bishop in the United States. The points of the letter are only two in number. The first is that the "holy see," by its decision, has put an end to the discussion; the second is that the bishops must, at the first opportunity, consider how to deal with "the many Catholic children who, according to trustworthy statistics, attend the public schools in preference to parochial schools."

This amounts practically to what would be described in expressiv American language as a command to the bishops to shut up, say nothing, and saw wood. The Roman authorities know that at present it is no time for bickering, because the church is making progress which might be retarded by internal dissensions. The authorities also know that in spite of this progress the church is losing a good many young victims by reason of their attendance of the public schools. To save these, add to them by getting the children of Protestants into schools controled or taught by ecclesiastics, and keep their grip in politics, is the work to which the energies of the priests of all degrees must be bent. Performing it is what the letter-writers call a "union of intellect and energy," to be "the more consolidated and safeguarded, insomuch as at the present time more errors than ever are abroad, and there are many enemies to combat and numerous obstacles and difficulties continually arising which it is necessary to vanquish."

It is safe to say that there will be no more schools patterned after the one at Faribault, but that the building of parochial schools will continue, as will also the effort to divide the school funds among the various religious sects which maintain so-called secular schools.

The Government Exhibit to Be Closed on Sundays.

It is lamentable to know that there are enough bigots in the House of Representativs to propose a law that the national government's exhibition at the World's Fair shall be closed on Sundays, and enough hypocrits among the Congressmen to pass it.

But it is encouraging to know that the Sabbatarians who brought the pressure to bear upon the lawmakers obtained only a small portion of their outrageous demand, which was that the government should giv the Fair no money at all unless the managers signed an agreement that the whole exhibition should be shut up on Sundays. Of this attempted bulldozing the Times says: "It would be hard to surpass such an exhibition of a meanly tyrannical spirit as this amendment. It is a threat to prevent the representation of the government of the United States at the World's Fair unless the managers of the Fair shall conform to the notions of propriety entertained by the majority of the House of Representativs, which has no sort of responsibility in the premises, and not even entertained by these legislators, but supposed by them to be entertained by their constituents." Of the debate on the matter and the final resolution to close the government exhibit the same paper says: "There is something ignoble in the tone of the debate in the House upon the appropriation for the World's Fair. It is really not to be supposed that the members who took part in it would be especially grieved or wounded if the Exhibition were opened to the public on Sunday. That is a matter which may very safely be left to the managers of the Fair. An individual exhibitor who stipulates that his exhibit shall not be shown when other exhibits are shown would be regarded as a churl, or, if he put his refusal upon religious grounds, as a bigot. It is only a very small proportion of Christians who are so rigid Sabbatarians as the Jews. The orthodox Jews in every country make considerable sacrifices, eager for money as they are supposed to be, in order to observe their Sabbath. Yet no Jewish exhibitor at a World's Fair that we know of has refused to allow his exhibit to be shown along with the rest on Saturdays. It is a matter of common civility and propriety for every exhibitor to submit to whatever rules are adopted by the governing body of the Fair. Of course, if a man thinks he is imperiling his salvation, or anybody else's, by allowing his wares to be exhibited on Sunday, it is his duty to refuse permission. But does anybody suppose that the majority of the House of Representativs was actuated by a respect for the fourth Commandment and a belief in its binding force upon Christians in coupling an appropriation for the representation of the government with a condition that the exhibit should not be opened to the public on Sunday? They were simply 'pandering to the better element' and pretending scruples that they did not feel."

In the East.

News and Notes.

Larchmont extends delightful visions along the pathway of the Secular Pilgrim. Bunyan's Pilgrim as he approached the gates of heaven looked not on anything more enchanting, be it when the sunshine fills the air or the silver rain is dropping. The sea is before you. You hear its music on the soft sands and rocky shore. Against the distant sky the hills are glimmering in blue and gold. The expanse of waters rolls its burden of a thousand ships. The red light of the Boston steamers flares like a comet—then fades in the misty deep. An ever-changing panorama of land and ocean, with splendid color and charming form, givs exhilaration to each moment.

On a slope by the ever-singing waters, with a beautiful grove in front through whose interlacing green the blue sea flashes, Dr. Foote, Sr., enjoys the life that now is, mingling with labor the leisure of ample years. A varied home circle radiates amidst nature's loveliest scenes. Here I find myself on Wednesday evening, quitting the city's enormous roar, reveling in a delicious quiet, and drinking in to my heart's core the beauty of the exquisit sunset and gorgeously approaching night. Then from the "cool moon's uncertain shower" and darkening clouds and thunders of the unresting tide we pass to the sparkling fireside, the comforts of home—and music's noble cheer, and thought's unquenchable hope.

On Thursday morning, the luminous clouds still flinging in soft and misty splendor the fruitful rain, the doctor and myself drive over to the Paine farm, and the monument which still looms by the roadside like some gray hermit of unconquerable spirit, who speaks of martyrdom of liberty, of the shining years

When humanity shall be
Good and great and joyous, beautiful and free.

We wander to the house upon the hill, the old house where Paine himself lived. We enter the little room where he wrote, a room with one window through which crashed the bullet of the enemy, as the legend says, but which reached not the heart of the illustrious patriot.

This farm will some day become a part of the vast metropolis itself. It is excellently situated on the gently rolling "Quaker hills," and fine residences will eventually environ the humble homestead of the mighty philosopher. Civilization sweeps on, but may this landmark be preserved, and with it the unpretentious but priceless monument.

It has been rumored that the farm, which consists of about two hundred acres, has been sold to a Western syndicate for stock-raising purposes, etc. But this is not true. The farm is still in possession of Mr. See, who has lived here for twenty-seven years. The land, however, is in market. Would it not be a good idea to form a Liberal syndicate, purchase this farm, reserve the homestead, and finally on that eminence, overlooking the spacious city and far-encircling sea, build a memorial hall to the lofty genius who first breathed in words that burn the spirit of American Liberty? I hope that this will be done—that here can be a home for Liberalism—a shrine more noble than ever was built by church or king.

On Thursday afternoon I journey to the beautiful orthodox town of Meriden—a real Yankee town—where thrift and enterprise prevail and the church bell peals.

After much tribulation I at last shake hands with N. F. Griswold, our stanch worker here, than whom no one has done more for the Liberal cause throughout the country. He is well known for his generous assistance to many a struggling effort. He is one of the prominent business men of the place; has lived here for over thirty years and built up an immense establishment. I had long corresponded with him, and had expected to meet him before this, but fate seemed determined that we should not join forces. But we did at last, and we put forth our level best to shake the orthodox bones. It rained, however, on the night of the lecture, Thursday. Besides, the orthodox churches held their prayer-meetings on that evening; and other things made it difficult to secure an audience such as we desired and expected. However, we made the campaign, and I guess it will count for something in the long run. But Meriden is not a promising field. The church element is potent. The old-time Connecticut theology remains, and the Liberals are indifferent. They hav an idea that it "does not pay" to do anything. Perhaps a few earthquakes like what we hav in California might stir up these staid New England towns to the fact that the world moves and that we must move with it, or "go under."

However, friend Griswold doesn't find himself all alone. There are TRUTH SEEKER subscribers here—Mr. Morse and others—and they are ready to help. I presume that under more favorable circumstances a larger audience could be got together, and Freethought made welcome in this large and prosperous city, where the modern spirit is by no means at a discount. It will take time and patience, that is all, to win the victory.

One could not, anyway, be discouraged with such a hospitable ally as Mr. Griswold, and Mrs. Griswold also—a genial and cultivated lady, who is not afraid to do her part in the world's reform. I was welcomed in their beautiful home—and with all the ups and downs of the pioneer service, Meriden will be to me a delightful memory. I cannot but hope some future day the colors will fly brilliantly. With such generous companions the camp-fires will not go out.

From orthodox New England I go to orthodox Canada, to Toronto, where the horse-cars go not on Sunday, where there are two hundred and four churches, three hundred policemen, and seventy millions of untaxed church property, in a population of about two hundred thousand. However, it is well known that the Secularists hav made a stanch fight here, and perhaps in no city in the world hav more results been attained. Mr. Chas. Watts did an excellent work here. Large audiences greeted him from Sunday to Sunday. Since he has taken his departure for England the labor has not been suspended, although the loss of Mr. Watts has been severely felt. But the Secular element of Toronto is of quite a solid nature, and has a momentum of its own, and there is to be no cessation of the glorious struggle upon which it has entered. In regard to the cars running on Sunday, at a popular election ten thousand votes were cast in favor to fourteen thousand against. At another election undoubtedly the Liberal party will triumph.

Toronto has grown wonderfully since I saw it last, about eight years ago. It is a magnificent city, and has a great future, being situated so as to command a vast portion of the trade of Canada and of the West. As a commercial center it stands in the front rank.

I received a warm greeting from the Liberals of this place. On Sunday evening the hall was packed to its utmost capacity. Mr. J. A. Risser presided in the afternoon, and Mr. A. F. Jury in the evening, introducing the speaker with words of comradeship and cheer. I felt that I was indeed among old friends, and I hav not anywhere had a more enthusiastic welcome.

The Toronto Society cultivates the social element with decided success. It is continually enlarging its sphere; young people are joining and becoming interested in Secular principles. There is growth in Toronto. The Secularists hav a record of which they may well be proud. The reading-room is open every evening, and the Literary and Debating Club meets every Sunday afternoon. Public lectures are given every Sunday evening. The movement is thus self-sustaining. It is the center of the powerful influence in the community.

Mr. C. W. Price, president of the society; Frank Anthony, Jas. Coutts, J. C. Frazer, Fred Denton, Wm. Christie, etc., are among the leading spirits here, with Risser, Jury, Harrison, Stewart, and other "old-timers" whom I met when I first came to Canada. I was pleased to make acquaintance with J. Spencer Ellis, of the Secular Thought, who with C. M. Ellis is so gallantly striving to maintain this excellent journal. It was really inspiring to mingle with this pioneer corps of Toronto, who against such almost overwhelming odds hav advanced step by step, who hav won an assured position, and who mean to keep it. Certainly from "across the line" there is splendid cheer.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Boulder City, Col.,	June 4, 5	Morgan City, Utah,	June 16
Georgetown, Col..	" 6	Echo, Utah.....	" 17
Denver, Col.....	" 7	Reno, Nev.....	" 21
Scofield, Utah.....	" 9, 10	Carson City, Nev.	" 22
Salt Lake, Utah...	" 12, 19	Virginia City, Nev.	" 23
Provo, Utah.....	" 13	Inyo county, Cal.	" 24–27
Murray, Utah.....	" 14	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash.....	July 3, 4
Kaysville, and Farmington, Utah	" 15

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Waterloo, Ind....	June 4,5,6	Pittsburgh, Pa....	June 19
Butler, Ind.....	" 7, 8	Butler, Pa.....	" 20, 21
Columbus, O.....	" 12	Philadelphia, Pa.	" 26
Cleveland, O.....	" 13, 15

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

LECTURES for June of the Manhattan Liberal Club:

June 3d, "The New National Party," Dr. Charles Stuart Welles.

June 10th, "Rev. Parkhurst and His Methods," T. B. Wakeman.

June 17th, "Reincarnation," Eliza Orchard Connor.

June 24th, Last meeting till October; lecture to be announced later.

W. S. BELL is now in Oregon, where he will lecture in May and June; afterward he goes to Washington. The following are his dates till June 12th:

Cathlamet, Wash..	June 2-4	Deep River, Wash..	June 12
Skamokawa, " ..	" 5, 6

THE next meeting of the Syrian Society will be held at the house of William M. McLaury, M.D., 244 West 42d street, on Thursday, June 2d, at 8 P.M.

How the Russian Relief Ship Was Received.

From the Lowell, Mass., Times.

The Times is permitted to make extracts from a private letter received in Lowell from Capt. R. W. Sargent of the steamship Indiana, which carried Philadelphia's magnificent offering of grain to the starving peasants of Russia. His graphic description of his reception is much better reading than any newspaper account. He says:

"We had a very bad passage out; the men said it was because we were prayed over so much before we started. One of my men was thrown across the deck by the sea and killed in a heavy gale off Rockall. The bad weather and head winds lasted me to the Butt of Lewis (north point of the Hebrides). From there until we got through the Pentland frith had fine weather. Plenty of the scenery William Black writes about, but as everything was white with snow there was not much to it. Passed Norway in a blinding snowstorm, but had good, clear weather in the Kattegat. In the sound and Baltic had snow and fog, clearing just as we got to Libau. So you see we hav not seen much of the beauties of nature. Holy island, Skye, and all that was worth seeing.

"Was four days at Libau, and between working the ship and being entertained, the time was well filled up. We were made very welcome and everyone behaved well, did not disgrace the flag on the ship. Drink was much more plenty than water, but somehow even the sailors and firemen did not get drunk. They went wild over me and I hav been thrown in the air and kissed and hugged—by the men—until I really felt sorry for the waste. They at a dinner gave me a silver loving-cup, and a swell changed watches with me. Mine was a good $100 watch with a silk guard, his a stop, center second repeater, with a double chain that weighs twenty sovereigns. Just as I was about sailing the Russian minister telegraphed, the ship was detained by the czar's orders, as he wished to send me a present. I could do nothing with the police minister, who is the big man in every Russian city, or our consul-general, as they would not take the risk, so I, with good American "gall," telegraphed him, asking him to get me permission to go at once, as I had to sail from Liverpool the 30th with passengers, and every day I was detained would cost the Russian relief fund one thousand roubles; the present could follow. At 5:30 P.M. I got a dispatch telling me I could go, and the police minister got another. I may lose my present by it, but I was not sent there for presents.

"I hav never seen any such drinking as I hav seen in Libau, and never expect to again. The famin work was well done, though. The entertaining was by Libau, which is two thousand miles from the famin district. We began cargo work at 4 P.M., Wednesday; at 8 P.M., Thursday, the first train started for Samora with twenty-seven cars, with through right of way over all trains, including passengers, dressed with American and Russian flags. Sunday evening, the 20th, before the Indiana was out of the harbor, the last pound of her cargo had started by train for the famin district. The director-general of the Russian railways was in Libau, Count Brobinsky, of the czarewitch relief fund; and the consul-general of the United States, Crawford; as well as the United States consul at Riga, P. Bomholdt, who was worth them all, as he is a shipping merchant with houses in St. Petersburg, Riga, and Libau. He is the sort of man to represent the United States. He gave his service while we were there, and as an American, took the cargo from where it was in the ship and put it on the cars as his contribution, say $3,000. He, I think, was the proudest man in Libau when the ship came in the harbor.

"We hav had plenty of religion mixed up with it all. When we got to the dock, the swells were let on board, and two 'popes' had service on the quarter-deck. They blessed the ship and the cargo, then took me, blessed me, took a little broom, sprinkled me pretty well all over with water and oil, held me out the crucifix to kiss (which of course I did). Then the ship was thrown open to the crowd. Sunday I went to the Greek church with the police minister, in state, and had a new mat to stand on. After service I was blessed again, and given a message to my own church in America, 'The Russian church in Libau has prayed for the church in Kittery and sends love and greeting, from the oldest church to the youngest, feeling they are one in the worship of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.'

"From this I was driven to the farewell reception and dinner, from 12 M. to 5:30 P.M. This was simply the grandest and wildest drinking bout I hav ever seen. When we were ready to haul the gangway ashore, the head pope prayed, blessed the ship and me, kissed me on both cheeks, and it was over. The ladies at the ship gave me "bread and salt"—with a pretty little speech. I hope from this letter and the papers you may get a fair idea of the 'circus.'"

The Columbian Exposition Should Not Be Closed on Sundays.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: With your kind permission I will giv the public a few thoughts on this subject, which is causing much discussion and is of much importance as a principle.

Christians generally are making great exertions in favor of the closing of the great Fair on Sunday, which promises to be the greatest and grandest known in the history of the world. And as all nations are invited to exhibit and enjoy the occasion, there should not be any regulations pertaining to preferences in regard to opinions or beliefs in religion, politics, or forms of government. All should feel that each has equal rights in every respect.

As the founders of our government declared that all men were "created equal," and by our Constitution prohibited any preference on account of religious opinions, the same principle should be recognized in all things pertaining to the great Exposition.

Sunday Christians should not ask or be conceded any rights that Jews, Adventists, Seventh Day Baptists, or any other religionists, may not possess.

But Sunday Christians seem determined to control this matter and compel the closing on Sunday. They manifest a disposition to boycott members of Congress, business men, and others who favor opening the Exposition on Sunday. They ask too much, and are hardly honorable or respectful in their manner of asking. It is said by as good authority as the Detroit Free Press that a greater number of names are attached to petitions from Michigan than the whole population of the state. A recent letter to me from our member of Congress from this (third) district says that petitions are being received by the wagonload, and they are laid away to must and rot. But intelligent men are not frightened by boycott threats. A strong effort is being made to prevent any further appropriation by Congress unless the bill contains a provision for Sunday closing.

If Congress shall deem a further appropriation just and necessary, it should be made without regard to this question.

In the past, legislators, politicians, and the public press, generally, hav been very timid in regard to expressing opinions contrary to what was thought to be the current of popular opinion in matters pertaining to religion. What Mother Grundy would say was, and still is, a deterrent force much regarded by many who should set an example in all matters of justice, morality, and truth. But thanks to the progressiv spirit of the age, a change for the better is evidently gaining, and there is a more independent spirit asserting itself on all such questions.

As to the authority for Sunday, instead of Saturday, being the Sabbath, Catholics hav stronger grounds for their position than Protestant Christians. The former are sustained by what they consider the infallible authority of the mother church; while the latter, who also claim the Bible as an in allible guide, cannot find in it one sentence, or word even, making Sunday the Sabbath, or a holy day. In this respect Protestants—to put it mildly—are very inconsistent. And yet they are the most determined in their efforts to hav the Exposition closed on Sunday. The Methodist Episcopal conference, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and other organizations, seem determined to accomplish the closing of the Fair on Sunday, and their methods are not altogether honorable. Although they claim to be truly good and honest, some of their acts savor of "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain."

An old adage says that "politics make strange bedfellows;" but more strange is the fellowship existing between the clergy and the distillers, brewers, saloon men, and liquor-dealers generally, especially in Chicago, on this question. All favor Sunday closing, and each for their own special pecuniary benefit.

Sunday as a day of rest should be observed, and laws for the observance of morality and good order should be made and enforced; and it should be a holiday for all who choose to hav it such, but under our form of government no laws should be passed making Sunday a holy day. It is not in accord with the liberal trend of thought manifested when the United States became a nation.

People of true Liberal ideas should concede to others what they claim for themselvs—the right of opinion on all matters of belief in religion, politics, etc.

Some of our so-called Freethought people are as intolerant as the most bigoted religionist, and in being so are doing themselvs and the cause they advocate a great wrong, and instead of advancing are retarding the cause they would support. A cause is seldom strengthened by compulsory words or acts. Calm, convincing arguments will win when boisterous language and severe measures fail. Show your cause to be truthful, right, and just, if you wish to hav it win. "If you convince a man against his will, he oft remains the same opinion still."

Signatures to petitions on almost any question may be obtained ad libitum. Therefore I would suggest that those interested in having the Exposition open on Sunday keep this matter before the people by writing short articles for the public press, giving their best thoughts in a concise form, using mild language devoid of epithets, because epithets are generally resorted to by those who lack arguments of forcible reason, therefore epithets are resorted to for the want of something better. The commissioners who are appointed to make rules and regulations for the Exposition should, and probably will, decide this question; therefore write to them, directing to the secretary, John T. Dickinson, Chicago. The commission will consider the question the 6th of October next.

Converse Close.

Grattan, Mich., May 16, 1892.

What Is Real Liberalism?

The definition of the term Liberalism, in its common conception, appears not only erroneous but generally obscure and contradictory.

It is an indisputable fact that many, if not a large majority, of those who are professedly Liberal in religion are confessedly illiberal in politics and sociology. This, I maintain, is both an inconsistency and a perversion. A given individual of Liberal pretensions is either wholly Liberal or partially Liberal; and, if only partly so, he is not fairly entitled to so broad a distinction.

In almost every contribution to avowedly Liberal journals, there appears one or more expressions of illiberal ideas or the advocacy of illiberal policies.

An advocate of "protection" in a recent tariff discussion, maintains that while an implied Liberal, he yet favors a "protectiv" policy, for the sole and selfish reason that said system is beneficial to Americans! The inference that whatever protectiv enactment is beneficial to one nation is in proportion detrimental to others, is too obvious for comment. Such a cause of action is patriotic; but patriotism and Liberalism are mutually antagonistic.

Respecting the question of female suffrage as a Liberal, my espousal of the cause of equal rights is undoubtedly an obligation; while, as a Secularist, I must object on the grounds of the subjection of women in general to the rapacity and tyranny of ecclesiasticism.

Whether this latter course of action is Liberal or illiberal, I am at a loss to decide; but I am of the opinion that, being merely a choice of the lesser of two gigantic evils, it involves the principles of neither.

As a man of Liberal sympathies, I certainly favor free trade; as an American citizen, I indorse protection; and to this extent I am deficient in the totality of those attributes which constitute a pure Liberal. When once a resident of California, I approved of Chinese exclusion, from motivs of a solely egoistic nature; and until my sympathies, now only partly Liberal, hav become sufficiently comprehensiv to embrace humanity as a whole, I certainly do not merit the appellation of Liberal. I hav Liberal sympathies, Liberal ideas, Liberal tendencies; but behind these are the opposing influences of prejudice, favoritism, and egotism, imparted by nature's almost inflexible law, adaptation to environment; and these counter-influences impede the free and proper action of the superior and acquired tendencies. I am only drifting toward Liberalism; I am not yet a Liberal, but I hope I may flatter myself so much as to say that I hav the Liberal virtue, candor, to admit it.

Certain contributors, not strangers to The Truth Seeker, after affirming themselvs unqualified Liberals, declare for the Democratic or Republican party. This, I contend, is not only not Liberal, but the reverse of Liberalism. Party-spirit is possible only where prejudice predominates over intelligence, and savors much more of bigotry than Liberalism. I hav used the term "pure Liberal;" let me not be understood to imply, by this loose expression, that impure Liberalism is not a contradiction in terms.

Gladstone, for example, a professed Liberal in both politics and religion, is decidedly illiberal in both. He maintains the inspiration (truth) of the Pentateuch and supports the traditional order of creation when both assumptions are controverted by the inherent discrepancies in the legends themselvs, to say nothing of the unanimous negations of science.

In politics his Liberalism (!) is of a similar tenor. He temporizes with the monarchy when he should oppose it and recommend a republican form of government, as the only Liberal English statesman ever did—Bradlaugh.

I hold that one not a cosmopolitan is not a Liberal; and since the decease of the great British Secularist, we hav only Ingersoll as an exemplary perfect Liberal. Strange as it may seem to many over-zealous Secularists, there is also such a thing as illiberalism in anti-theological opposition. Religion has not a monopoly of fanaticism, though it has the larger proportion.

It is admitted that superstition and Liberalism are incompatible; and, in this connection, it may be pertinent to note that many eminent and intelligent men who profess to oppose superstition are themselvs victims of superstition. Voltaire and Paine were superstitious to the extent of postulating a deity and maintaining the immortality of the "soul," contrary to experience, at variance with science, and impossible of logical demonstration. The god of Thomas Paine was invoked to suppress British tyranny, though he never ventured to speculate on the probable causes of the abeyance of "divine justice" during the tyrannies of the Dark Ages. Both Paine and Voltaire persisted in endowing an imaginary idol with attributes, the exercise of the powers of which is wholly at variance with the existing conditions of human affairs; and whatever is thus unscientific and unphilosophic is, in my estimation, not Liberal.

Aside from the question of reality or unreality, as a Liberal, I exclaim, damn the God who invented the torture of damnation; and damn the God who permits damnation here on earth when it lies within his power to avert it.

I will admit that it is difficult, if not impossible, to clearly and abruptly draw the line of demarkation between Liberalism and illiberalism. An approximation alone is practicable; and this, being a mere matter of individual opinion, will slightly vary in any given instance.

Where justice ends and injustice begins, is not a geometrical problem; but in the absence of a perfect standard, an imperfect and provisional one must suffice.

M. L. Salter.

Bachula, Miss.

The Materialist Is Not a Freethinker.

Because his mind is on a level with his heel. His ideas are not in harmony with nature's laws. I deeply regret to find him with a mind uncultivated, unfit to reason, unable to demonstrate truth as it exists in nature. His five senses are lame. His thoughts are limited to the present existence. He is unacquainted with a former as well as with a future life.

He imagins a sneer at Spiritualism saves him from living a life in the future. He is not aware that Spiritualism is a science, a knowledge, equal to, if not better than, that which drove Kepler from the university for giving the fundamental principle of astronomy. We know that the advocates of truth and science throughout all ages hav suffered loss of liberty and life. Why should Spiritualists be exempted? No one should sneer at the science because it is beyond their conception. What about our former life? Are you prepared to deny it? What about our existence that preceded the day of our birth? Are you prepared to deny it? Why hav we no desire to inhabit again that world which we inhabited a day that preceded our birthday? We begin life not at our birth, but in time that preceded it. Why not reinhabit the former world which we inhabited in days that preceded our birth. If you will call that existence up to memory, as soon as you remember your birthday, you not only confess an existence of the past, but that you hav lived a life in the future ever since. We hav not only evidence here of a future life, but the footprints of our past life are deeply set along the highway we hav traveled. Any person who endeavors to make me believe that he is a man of truth or an advocate of the truth by denying an existence in time that preceded his birth and a life that he has lived ever since, is in my estimation an ignoramus, a lunatic, or a liar. Why should we consider the present life valid and true, and our subsequent life, or a life that preceded our birth, invalid and untrue?

Why should a Freethinker consult a Materialist on a former or future life when he has confessed to know nothing of such state of existence? If the universe has laws; if it has existed at all ages; if we hav in the universe existed at all ages, why should our life end and cease with our present state of existence? If it did not cease at birth or before birth, why should it cease now?

The Materialist is like the Second Adventist. One predicts the end of the world year after year, the other insists that life ceases with the end of the present existence. Neither has a good mind. Neither can reason nor observe or demonstrate the truth in nature. Of what benefit is the immense space in the universe to human beings of which astronomy teaches us, if it cannot be inhabited? When we see a human body decaying, returning to the dust of mother earth, we ask, what has become of the occupant? If we believe in the existence of invisible beings, why not in the existence of invisible worlds?

If it be true that such immense space exists in the universe, why should it be vacant instead of being full of invisible worlds? Why should these invisible worlds be vacant instead of being inhabited by former earth-inhabitants? The human mind does not originate from mother earth. Nor does it depend for its growth and subsistence upon vegetable, mineral, or animal products of mother earth. They only giv strength to the body, but not to the mind.

The laws of nature are composed of power and of intelligence. The human mind is a part thereof. It borrows its intellect from the father of the universe. It is no longer subject after death to the laws of mother earth. It vacates the body like an image that passes out of a mirror, and renews the battle of life on a higher and moral plane. The body, as it is composed of mother earth, is doomed to decay and return to the dust from whence it came. The method by which the laws of nature permit our birth and our consciousness and growth, and as we hav acquired the knowledge of one world allow us to pass out into another one, is a plan as beautiful as beautiful can be.

Respectfully, AUGUST BUESING.

Still More Economic Opinions.

Your correspondent L. A. Gleason refutes very neatly and completely some of the grand mistakes which are attributed to that grand man, Robert G. Ingersoll, while doubting that so able a man could ever make himself responsible for such absurdities. Mr. Gleason does not remember that no man can possibly be able or grand enough to make it absolutely safe to tie to him in all cases, because even these whose ability the world recognizes and whose integrity is beyond suspicion, are liable to hav their judgment warped by the influences of their early education. So able a man as Gladstone, for instance, occupies some of his time in attempts to shore up the crumbling edifice of theology, impelled thereto, no doubt, by the early teachings of some "sainted" ancestor, instilled into his unreflecting juvenil mind. Mr. Ingersoll probably imbibed his protectionism at a time when he was not much inclined to indulge in reflection, and has since failed to analyze the arguments which—to the uncritical—seem to uphold the system. This hypothesis takes on all the appearances of certainty when it is remembered that this question is the only one on which Mr. Ingersoll is not inclined to argue. He will dogmatize till the warmest place we ever heard of congeals into a skating-rink but of reasons he will giv you none. He will tell you, for instance, that raw material raisers are always poor and ignorant, and that diversified industries are necessary to render a nation rich and intelligent, but he will not attempt to show how protection changes a nation of agriculturists and miners into a nation of manufacturers, nor indeed will he stop to think that the intelligence that he so much admires must precede the diversification of industries he considers desirable. He will say at one time that importation should be restricted to those things that we cannot possibly make, and at another he will remark, with quite as great an air of conviction, that nations are in great danger of becoming, and must become, provincial unless they exchange commodities, and Philip was apparently sober on both occasions. In speaking recently about the World's Fair our favorit said, "So it is of the greatest importance that the inventions of the world should be brought beneath one roof," and never stopped to think that his policy of prohibition against anything we can make here, would prevent us from taking advantage of any invention which can produce at less cost than the machinery we use. He will speak and write the most glowing tributes to liberty and never suspect that "protection" denies the right of a man to dispose of the product of his labor in any market he chooses, and that therefore liberty with a big L can never take up her abode in any country that fosters that inveterate enemy of liberty that is miscalled protection, because the first requisit of a state of freedom is that a man shall hav a right to himself, and this right he never can hav so long as tariffs of any kind prevail.

The object of this paper, however, was not to criticise the protection utterances of Mr. Ingersoll, but to clear the brain of Mr. Gleason of some of the financial cobwebs which seem to obstruct its operations. He says, "If money is not created by law I am at a loss to know how it is created. If you were to place a gold-piece on an anvil and deface the superscription, though in quantity it were not one whit less, its money value is gone."

Money is undoubtedly generally created by law. but the essential thing about money of any kind is value, and over this law has but little effect, for it is regulated by commerce. His defaced gold-piece, if it were of full weight, would hav the same value as money that it had before it was battered, among those who had the means at hand to decide the fineness and weight of the gold contained in the piece, and who knew the market value of that metal. Its value as money would be largely reduced because so few could satisfy themselvs—not having the facilities—in regard to these particulars, that is all. The government stamp as to weight and fineness has been proved by long experience to be reliable and accurate, therefore anyone is willing to accept a coin bearing the proper imprint. That is all the difference. Law, however, does not create all money, for there is no doubt but that every country had money before it had any law. Money is first established by custom, and law is used to confirm it, by regulating the size and shape of the pieces and by indorsing on them the guarantee of the government that the law regulating their coinage has been complied with. In this sense only can money be said to be created by law. Take California, for instance, in '49 and some few years after. They had no coins, yet they had money in the shape of gold-dust. and all transactions were completed at such places as had facilities for testing and weighing this dust, but it was money all the same. The gentleman says the "value of a dollar is its compulsory debt-paying quality, and Congress can and does fix that value." The value of any dollar than one of gold, is just the value of the metal gold that can be obtained in exchange for it. Or if we speak of the present financial situation in this country, it is just the value of a gold dollar, for one will be given for an equal amount in any other kind of money upon application. Therefore its most material function—purchasing power—is beyond the reach of Congress to adjust. If our money had only debt-paying power we should soon stop business, because no one would be able to contract any debts unless sellers would consent to accept the debased money in payment for commodities, which they would not consent to do. Congressional power stops when it has ordained that any given kind of dollar shall hav power to discharge a debt already contracted in a better or poorer dollar; therefore in a general sense Congress cannot giv value to the money it creates. This fact the gentleman states in about the same words I hav used. He follows it up, however, by saying that "to speak of a dollar's worth of silver in a silver dollar without stating a unit of measure, is purest nonsense." The "unit of measure" is so well understood as being gold that it does not need to be stated. Therefore a dollar's worth of silver would be the quantity of silver that a gold dollar would buy, and that should be the weight of a silver dollar, and any other kind is "light, cheap, and poor."

"To sum up all," Mr. Gleason continues, "value is an ideal quality and is regulated by the owner or the one who desires a thing." This may apply to some values but not to that of money having its base on gold, for gold has a real value which is regulated by the demand for that metal for mechanical purposes and the supply which is at hand to meet it. The gentleman further says that "since 1857 the value of foreign coins in this country is nothing." Here he makes the same mistake which occurred when he hammered the twenty-dollar gold-piece, for people who are acquainted with the value of foreign coins will accept them in payment for commodities at but a small discount from their face value.

In conclusion, Mr. Gleason is alarmed lest our money shall work too hard, since "the ratio of increase in our money is infinitesimally small, considering all things." But so long as money can always be had, if one has money's worth to offer as collateral security, there would seem to be no immediate need for apprehension on that score. Besides which, we are, at the present time, increasing the value of our currency at the rate of about four per cent a year (unwisely it would seem) which is certainly no less than the proportion of increase in our population. If Mr. Gleason will consider that money-makers, no less than world-makers, require something more tangible than nothing to make something out of, he will shortly conclude that the governmental fiat is quite as powerless to giv permanent value as the pronunciamento of the alleged creator, "Let there be light," would be to establish an electric light plant.

E. O. ROSCOE.

Our London Letter.

The self-denial week dodge as practiced by the great Booth is seen to be such a profitable business, that it is being imitated by the older established sects, with more or less success; the London Missionary Society had a try recently and netted just on £10,000, so it will no doubt be a recognized matter of plundering the faithful, who generally hav more money than sense. This nice little haul is considered fairly satisfactory for the first year, and the promoter, a Congregational beetle, hopes to do better next time. It is satisfactory to them that the missionary business is rather popular with young gospel-grinders, and the supply can always be well assured, provided the funds are forthcoming, but only in that event taking place.

Notwithstanding all the attractions of a secular nature held out, it appears that the Young Men's Christian Association is steadily on the wane, and this is attributed by the religious correspondent to a daily paper to the very strict confession of faith demanded of all candidates applying for membership. The unfortunate wretch who wishes to join the society has to pass both a written and a viva voce examination, and he must be either a rogue or a fool to be able to gain access to the charmed circle.

The Workingmen's Lord's Day Rest Association is rather in a corner. The secretary has been challenged to giv addresses of any trades-unions or workingmen's clubs known to be opposed to the opening of the national collections on Sunday, so that they may be invited to send delegates to the demonstrations shortly to be held on the subject. So far I hav not heard that they hav supplied the required information.

The Established Church of England always poses as the friend of the poor, though it is rather difficult for the outsider to see where the friendship comes in, unless systematic plundering can be considered in that light. The ecclesiastical commissioners are about the largest public-house-owners in the country, and are the largest leviers of coal royalties in the county of Durham, where they drew an amount of £240,000 last year, for which they gave nothing in return. It is scarcely to be wondered at that the miners are not a religious body of men.

The dispute as to the Northampton candidates is still unsettled. Mr. Robertson still maintains his position, and Mr. Mansfield will not giv way. The only wonder about the matter is that a sensible man should hav any desire to enjoy the questionable honor or privilege to sit in the House of Commons.

The May-meetings are now in full sway, but no one except those immediately interested takes any notice of the proceedings. The same old lies are told with all the appearance of truth, the hat goes merrily round, and the opportunity is a good one for country people to enjoy a few days in London sight-seeing, and so they are all satisfied with having successfully served both God and devil at the same time.

Thomas Cooper, formerly Chartist and Secularist lecturer, has not done so badly by his change of coat. Failing to make a decent living out of the former occupations, he shrewdly allowed himself to be converted and went into the Christian Evidence line of business on strictly Paleyan proofs, and has found it altogether a paying game. A Tory minister has given him £200 out of the taxes, and if he still keeps steadfast to his new friends he will no doubt hav a further donation when that is exhausted. Converts from Secularism are much sought after, and find conversion a satisfactory and paying game if worked properly.

The Presbyterian church is in a more satisfactory condition than the Church of England as far as regards the salaries of the shepherds. The lowest paid appointment being worth £133, a sum many curates would greatly rejoice in receiving, and the highest upward of £1,000 per annum. The other dissenting sects are a little bit jealous at hearing of such good things, and would no doubt all become Presbyterian parsons, but it is rather difficult to get a job in this somewhat close corporation.

The Berlin newspaper Das Echo records the interesting case of one Moritz Guttmann, who, although only nineteen years of age, has been converted and baptized thirty-six times, sometimes as a Protestant and sometimes as a Roman Catholic. He appears to beat the record up to the present, and would no doubt hav scored a higher number still, but unfortunately his career has been closed for a time, and he is in retreat for five years in the House of Correction for robbing a woman of her ornaments. It seems a pity that such a chosen vessel of grace should be so persecuted by mere worldlings, but the righteous are often chastised as a trial of their faith.

J. D.

The Cause in Washington.

The annual convention and election of officers of the Washington Secular Union will be held at the Fremont Opera House, Seattle, on June 5 and 6, 1892.

Meeting at 10:30 A.M., Sunday, June 5th.—Social visit among those attending the convention, forming new and renewing old acquaintances; delegates to hand in credentials to the secretary, etc.; at 2 P.M. session of conference; evening at 8, public lecture. Monday, June 6th, at 2 P.M.—Session of conference and election of officers; evening at 8, public lecture; conference to close with ball on Tuesday night, or with ball or lecture on Monday night, as may be determined by the members in attendance at the conference.

The experience so cogently expressed by Mrs. Todd, secretary Oregon Secular Union, in her recent letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER, is, alas, an o'ertrue recital of discouragements encountered by nearly all the real, activ workers. Despair has many times during the past year gained the ascendency on account of the apathy of avowed Liberals of the state, but I am especially favored of fortune, for in response to appeals for attendance and material aid for the convention, I hav received a very large number of letters containing assurances of appreciation of my labors, and words of cheer and encouragement.

Walla Walla is still to the front, and as usual was the very first to respond with words of hope and the material to inspire it, a draft for $25. With such stanch and tried defenders of the faith as Albert Rosenow, Dr. A. W. Calder, Robert Bauer, Marsh, Martin, Arthur Venn, and kindred spirits to lead in every good word and work of the Walla Walla Liberal Club, there can be no retrocession of the Washington Secular Union.

Stella has proved a bright star of hope with Jas. Jarrel, H. Lawson, and that brave old veteran F. C. Scharnhorst in the lead. The following list was the result of good Father Scharnhorst's efforts: F. C. Scharnhorst, $2; W. M. Anderson, $3; A. Herring, $1; Edward Anderson, $1; Chas. Clark, $1.

From Teanaway, Tumwater, Olympia, Ellensburgh, Davenport, Willipa, Montesano, Everett, Snohomish, Eagle Harbor, Waldron, Roeder, Buckley, East Sound, North Yakima, Kangley, Blaine, and Whatcom I hav received promises of attendance and material aid. Everything looks most promising for a large and most enthusiastic and successful convention.

I solicit indulgence of friends whose letters are unanswered, and certificates of membership slow of arrival. The interest at Tacoma severely taxes my time. I hope to catch up in a few days.

Words of appreciation, cheer, and material help hav not been confined to this state. That noble, generous old veteran in the cause of human liberty and progress, Samos Parsons, of California, despite the infirmities of age, has taken pains to write me letters of cheer and encouragement, and promoted me to the front rank among his list of annual beneficiaries.

I am under obligations to the well-known New York philanthropist and physician Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr. In every time of trouble, gloom, and overburden he has proved the friend, counselor, and helper. His skill as a physician has given me a new lease of life. Chronic dyspepsia—to cure which all remedies had failed, so that life was shrouded in the gloomy darkness of the pessimist—he has dispelled; my digestion is now equal to my appetite, and both are excellent. The tortures of rheumatism in my right shoulder that for so long made writing a suffering almost unbearable, he has entirely cured. His wise and cheering counsel and words of appreciation and genuin help hav many times during the past year dispelled despair and prompted to perseverance and redoubled zeal.

At Duwamish, Kings county, Mr. J. W. Maple, of Duwamish, has erected and dedicated a hall to the service of Liberty, Freethought, and human progress. By his indomitable energy and generous self-sacrifice he provided for a series of seven lectures there that hav aroused great interest. Mrs. Reynolds delivered three and I four. The friends are now arranging for another course of lectures in the vicinity, at South Seattle.

At Tacoma, the city of orthodoxy, some four weeks ago, Mills, the evangelist, commenced revival meetings in a tabernacle, a mammoth barn erected expressly for the occasion, capable of holding three thousand people. For three weeks, each night it was crowded. Mills claims he made two thousand converts. (As evidence of the great good accomplished by such revivals in awakening to a higher sense of duty, inciting to greater benevolence, enlarging the sympathies, and inspiring the converts with desire to promote human happiness and do to others as they would be done by: The mayor called a meeting of the citizens in behalf of the destitute and grief-stricken widows and orphans at Roslyn mines. Time and place were especially to suit the ministers—namely, the Tabernacle, where the vast number of conversions were made. What was the result? Thousands of dollars for superstition but not one cent for the agonized widows and hungry, helpless little orphans. Only little more than three hundred persons present, and fully one-half of them people who never even attended any church. The two thousand converts had given liberally to save their souls, but had not a cent to save the bodies of widows and little orphan children from starvation. And of such is the kingdom of heaven.)

On learning of the revival craze I urged the Liberals of Tacoma to make effort to counteract the pernicious influence, and under the energetic lead of that young Liberal and genuin humanitarian, George Leon, and the dauntless and popular Dr. Angus, a lecture was arranged for at Wheeler's Hall, Sunday, May 1st. It was the last night of the Mills meetings. The most sanguin Liberal hardly hoped for a large attendance. Long before the hour named for the lecture the hall was densely packed; more than three hundred persons were turned away; the stairway was crowded. A general demand was made for another lecture in a larger hall, and the next Sunday evening the Germania Hall was engaged. It has a seating capacity of about twelve hundred. Gallery, aisles, every available space, were occupied. The greatest interest was manifested. Last Sunday, 15th inst., the crowd was, if possible, greater. After the lecture permission was given to ask the lecturer questions, and for one hour and a half this was kept up, and the most earnest attention given. The questions asked evinced deep interest and an honest spirit of investigation, the answers being sometimes received with rapturous applause. Next Sunday, the 22d, our subject will be "The Bible, Its Origin, Authenticity, and Influence." There is the greatest excitement and interest throughout the city.

The Tacoma Secular Union is organized and has most enthusiastic meetings every Tuesday evening at Wheeler Hall, Pacific avenue. Quite a large number of ladies hav joined the Union, and are zealous members.

Let every Liberal of the state take new courage and see to it that each and all do what they can toward helping the good work and maintaining the young giant state of Washington in her proud preeminence as the banner state for Liberalism.

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

My Second Campaign.

The basket-picnic held by the Freethinkers of Strasburg resulted in a brilliant success. The weather was all that could be desired, and nature herself seemed to participate in the proceedings.

Through the efforts of Dr. A. York, who had labored unceasingly to make these meetings a success, the interior of our place of meeting had been handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, which gave the place a very interesting appearance. The services were opened out with a rendition from the choir of our beautiful national anthem, "America," after which they gave another one, entitled, "The Village Bells." The choir, consisting of Misses Pearl York, Minnie Simmers, Mrs. Purleigh, Mr. Bernhard and his two daughters, and Dr. York's son, sang splendidly together, and their selections were largely enjoyed and appreciated by the audience. Then came my lecture, followed by more singing and music.

It was indeed a pleasant gathering here among the perfumed breezes of spring, upon the green, velvety sward, listening to the rapture of the birds' songs as they soar upward in the sun's rays. The delight of the beasts in the vigor of their early life, the innocent gambols of the little children, and the merry laughter of those who gathered together in this rustic grove bespoke a glad and joyous welcome to May.

The time had now arrived for lunch. Those who had come from a distance took down their baskets and spread out before them on the ground an appetizing repast.

The time that intervened between the morning and afternoon meetings was spent in dancing by the young folks, and by the older people in pleasant recreation.

Promptly at 2:30 we reopened the proceedings with more vocal and instrumental music, followed by another lecture. This time, however, an additional attraction was given to the meeting by way of a little discussion betwen myself and the Rev. J. R. Spainhouer, a Baptist preacher, who had favored us with his presence. Of course the reverend gentleman had to take issue with what I had said. An invitation being extended to him to occupy our platform, he at once accepted, and made an attempt to criticise my lecture. This brought on a somewhat wild, though lively, discussion, which the audience thoroughly enjoyed.

After the discussion one of our friends asked a lady member of the Baptist church, one who had lately joined and who is in her own estimation very religious and orthodox, what she thought of my lecture. Her reply was that she liked the lecture very well, but would hav thought better of it if that s—— o— a b—— (myself) had not lied. I thought her remarks extremely rich for one a church-member and just converted.

An attempt had been made for the past few months to arrange a joint debate between Mr. Spainhouer and myself, and which should hav taken place at the end of this month, but evidently the reverend gentleman did not feel equal to the occasion, and consequently it had to be given up; although he himself challenged me to a debate December last, which I accepted and which he managed to shuffle out of. Four or five different propositions had been suggested, but nothing satisfactory could be arrived at, consequently the intended debate fell through.

A few more vocal selections were rendered by the choir and the proceedings were brought to a happy and pleasant termination about 5 o'clock. The meeting then dispersed and all wended their way to their respectiv homes.

There being no lecture in the evening, we accepted an invitation given us by the Baptist preacher to attend his church and hear him discourse upon "Proofs for the Existence of God Outside the Bible." So, promptly as the church-bell began to toll forth its dismal notes, calling forth the "dearly beloved" to receive the "bread of life," buttered on both sides, and then to drop their shekels in the baskets, the Freethinkers could be seen following in the wake of the "holy" procession and entering the church. Nearly every Freethinker in the town was present, and for the first time in more than eight years I entered the portals of a church-door and took my seat among the flocks. The preacher, no doubt, congratulated himself upon being favored with such distinguished visitors, and I thought that here was a splendid opportunity for the Lord to utilize the missionary power expended in his behalf, and put religion into the hearts of some of these obdurate heretics. What a fine kettle of fish there would hav been could the preacher only succeed in getting one of his visitors to renounce his wicked skepticism and turn to Jesus. But as yet no converts hav been made.

Of course, the parson prayed; and what a prayer! I thoroughly enjoyed it, and listened to it attentivly. It was a prayer arranged specially for the occasion, but still the reverend gentleman appeared somewhat mixed; doubtless he was fully cognizant of the critical minds he had before him, and he tried hard to infuse as much common sense into it as such a ridiculous proceeding would allow.

At last came the address, which represented a patchwork quilt, a little being taken from Paley, a little more from Butler in his "Analogy," and a small portion from Father Burke. The old watch argument was brought into requisition, the mechanism of the human eye, Burke's steam-engin, and even a first cause was found, as the reverend gentleman said, "somewhere at the beginning," and all of which, he assured us, with a wave of the hand, showed conclusivly that there was design in nature; and design being proved, there must of a necessity be a designer.

Probably the reverend gentleman did not know that these arguments had been refuted over and over again, and in putting them forward he did not realize that he was half a century behind the age. During his discourse he assured his hearers that he knew a "little" of astronomy, and could quote it "right smart" if he wished. Perhaps he did not wish to exhaust himself upon the subject—although he told us something that I had never learned before. Speaking of the motion of the planets in their orbits, he said, "Some of them move within a hair's breadth of each other;" then added, "What would the consequences be should one of them get an inch out of place?" After his delivering himself of this peroration, I looked around the church, and I believe that some of the school-children actually smiled. When I heard the above statement fall from his lips, I felt convinced that the reverend gentleman had indeed spoken the truth when he said that he knew a "little" of astronomy. I had anticipated that the same courtesy would be extended toward me that we had shown toward him in the afternoon, but I had reckoned without my host. No invitation was given to me to say anything in reply; and so, realizing the hurried manner in which he was about to bring the meeting to a close, I instantly rose to my feet and asked that permission should be given to me to say a few words in reply. But vain was the hope. The pulpit has been well stigmatized as the "coward's castle," and the clergy seem in no hurry to remove the name.

At first I thought that my hopes would be realized; but after the preacher had whispered something into the deacon's ear, I was coldly informed that my request could not be granted; the excuse being that it looked so much like rain, and the members wished to get home. This excuse had a show of truth in it, for it certainly did look like rain; for immediately after the meeting a terrific thunderstorm set in, and upon the sequel to this hangs a tale. When I made the request to be allowed to speak in the church, a young lady, who was rehearsing vocal and instrumental music for her home in the skies, cried out with a shrill voice, "I say no!" with the accent on the "no." But I am of the opinion that it would hav been far better for her health and personal comfort had I succeeded in obtaining the privilege that I had desired.

As soon as the meeting was over, this young lady entered her carriage to return home. The storm now broke out in all its fury. There came several severe flashes of lightning in rapid succession. Evidently G. Hovah was mad. Somebody had got to suffer for the sacrilege that had just been perpetrated. One of these flashes scared the horse in this lady's carriage, causing it to bolt. The lady herself was thrown violently from her carriage, breaking one arm, and running some sharp instrument in the other, which penetrated to the bone, and made a wound on her head three or four inches long. The injuries she sustained brought her to such a critical condition that the physicians in attendance almost despaired of her life.

Now, had my request been granted, I would hav detained them just about twenty minutes, in which time the storm would hav been over, and the lady would hav reached home in safety. If G. Hovah meant that for one of us, he must hav been a poor marksman not to come within a quarter of a mile. Perhaps he was in a passion, and being blinded with rage, he did not discover where he had smitten until it was too late, and then he doubtless thought it best to say nothing about it, for he did not even hav sufficient manners to make an apology.

It is perhaps consoling to the lady to know that "the Lord loveth whom he chasteneth," though I hav no special desire to attract his love toward me.

In a conversation I had with the preacher next day, when talking about the accident I suggested that it might hav been a judgment for not allowing me to speak in the church. The reverend gentleman said nothing, but smiled a sickly smile, and went on.

It does seem strange that our meetings should terminate so pleasantly and successfully, and that, too, without the help of God, while they who had been singing his praises in verse, with rhymes tagged on for effect, should meet with such a disaster. If there be a God, this should show conclusivly whose side he is on.

On Monday afternoon, I was driven to Ash Grove, a neighboring little hamlet, about five miles from Strasburg, where arrangements had been made for a lecture in a little hall belonging to the Farmers' Mutual Association.

The clergy, hearing of my intended visit, regarded me as a pestilence coming among them, so special choir practices were arranged to keep the people away; and one of them even had the audacity to write an announcement upon a board in our place of meeting, but it did no harm, so we let it stay. It did not in the least affect our meeting, for we succeeded in getting a pretty fair audience considering how sparsely settled the district was.

It was the first time that these people had ever heard a Freethought lecture, and they listened with evident relish.

Like Oliver Twist, they wanted some more, and I hope that in the near future their wants will be gratified.

The drive out here was splendid, the weather was delightful, and everything terminated in such a manner as to bring gladness to the hearts of all.

Two double carriage-loads went from Strasburg to hear the lecture, and others came on horseback, which speaks for itself regarding the enthusiasm of the Freethinkers in this part of the country, and shows plainly the growing interest in our cause and givs us hope and courage to work for our future success.

Returning to Strasburg, I delivered another lecture on Tuesday evening, by special request, in answer to the discourse given by the Baptist preacher in his church on Sunday.

When the announcements were made that I should answer the reverend gentleman, enthusiasm went up to its highest pitch, and by 8 o'clock the hall was entirely filled; then for one hour and forty-five minutes the audience patiently sat and listened with rapt attention to my criticisms of his sermon.

Our friends were so pleased with my reply that they hav requested me to hav it printed in pamphlet form.

Orthodoxy has received such a shaking-up in this little town within the past few months that it will take them some time to recover from the shock, if they ever do; such onslaughts must hav their effects, if not immediately—they cannot fail to accomplish some good, even if we must wait to see it realized. Soon after my arrival, Miss Minnie Simmers, a young and talented lady, who is the local correspondent to the press, brought me a postal-card, which had been addressed to her, it is thought by a preacher in a neighboring town. The card ran as follows, and I giv it in its original orthography:

MISS MINNIE SIMMERS, Correspondence of the Clipper, Strasburg: A Reader of the Clipper, asks you or any of Charlesworth's the Infidel's Apostel, to tell him not to forget to preach to his Audience, those words which Thomas Paine said to his Daughter when on his dieing bed, I think they would do you all some good, if he is a truthseeker let him tell the truth.

A READER OF THE CLIPPER.

Upon reading the above, I could scarcely suppress a smile to see what fictitious stories the clergy can invent for the glorification of God; however, I immediately penned the following reply, which Miss Simmers promised to send in her next letter to the press:

MISS MINNIE SIMMERS, Strasburg, Ill., Dear Miss Simmers: I am in receipt of a postal addressed to you by a "Reader of the Clipper," who desires that I shall not forget to preach my audience those words which Thomas Paine said to his daughter when on his dying bed. The writer appears to think that such a story would do us all some good.

I only wish to say in reply that the "Reader of the Clipper" appears to be a little mixed, for I was not aware that Thomas Paine ever had a "daughter." I can assure your correspondent that I am a Truthseeker, and as such I could not preach to my audience that which I know to be false.

My advice to the "Reader of the Clipper" is to make perfectly sure that Thomas Paine had a "daughter" before he or she repeats such advice. "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

Respectfully yours, JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Strasburg is certainly coming to the front. Woman suffrage is very popular here, and through the energy and enthusiasm of the talented young correspondent of the Clipper, they came within ten votes of electing a lady as county superintendent of schools, and success would hav been certain had it not been for the violent opposition of the church people. The churchmen promised their wives new spring dresses, bonnets, and the like, to bribe them to record their votes against the lady candidate, and then they hav the audacity to tell woman that the church is her best friend. Oh, how long will woman continue to worship these phantoms of darkness! When will she recognize that her best and truest friends are outside the pale of any church or creed? How much longer will she be content to remain a slave of the ignorant and barbaric past?

During my stay here I was once more the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Bernhard, where everything was done to add to my comfort and to cheer the heart of the wanderer.

I take leave of our Strasburg friends rejoicing over the newly won conquests, and with many kind wishes for my future success I start off again for other diggings. On Wednesday I take a fond farewell and leave for Des Moines, where I shall spend a few days with our young friend, Franklin Steiner, and lecture in that city on the 8th inst.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Secretary Ohio State Secular Union.
154 N. High street, Columbus, O.

A Bombastic Ass.

Immediately following Colonel Ingersoll's lecture on "Myths and Miracles" in Cincinnati, a few weeks ago, a challenge to debate was issued by M. C. Lockwood, pastor of the First Baptist church, of that city. Of course Colonel Ingersoll has no time to devote to such amusement, and for that reason the Ohio Liberal Society, of Cincinnati, through its secretary, Andrew Hogg, wrote the said Lockwood a letter agreeing to furnish a debater in place of Colonel Ingersoll, that personage to be J. L. Treuthart, president of the Portsmouth, O., Secular Union. The society proposed to hav the debate on the question, "Is the Bible divinely inspired?" or on any other subject agreeable to Lockwood. He was also to be accorded the privilege of choosing time and place. This letter from the pen of Mr. Hogg was replied to by Lockwood as follows:

MR. ANDREW P. HOGG, Dear Sir: Yours of the 16th received. I hav no objection to lecturing for your society, provided they are liberal enough to endure anything which may not agree with their opinions.

Such a debate as you request cannot be of much higher order of interest than that which attaches to a cock-fight, and I am not in the lists, especially as I do not know Mr. Treuthart. If he can say anything worth answering let him say it, and if the public hears it I will answer. I am glad you hav found such a Goliath; send him out and let us look at his armor.

My desire to criticise unbelievers is due entirely to their assuming to be themselvs critics, especially when they are not equipped for criticism.

A word as to the subject of "Inspiration of the Scriptures." In order to debate it a definition would be necessary. A definition is a debated question among theologians; the whole subject is one of speculativ opinion, and does not belong to the experimental facts of the Christian system. To debate it would be useless and profitless. Suppose he challenges the world to debate "Resolved, That the Ten Commandments should be abolished," or "Resolved, That it would improve the world to forsake its tendency toward the practice of the Sermon on the Mount"—some question of practical religion. If your champion will only say something that has real merit in it along that line I will respond to him. To magnify the importance of some person or persons would not be good policy, as I suspect you can understand. I hav no doubt he is a very worthy gentleman as far as his mistaken notions permit him to be.

M. C. LOCKWOOD.

The Hon. George Light, of Cincinnati, replied to the above and in his characteristic way. He wrote these words:

REV. M. C. LOCKWOOD, Pastor of First Baptist Church, Dear Sir: I this day read your letter addressed to Mr. Andrew Hogg, secretary of the Ohio Liberal Society, and I was mortified to see the tactics that you resort to to escape honest discussion.

You speak of "no higher order of interest than that which attaches to a cock-fight." Now, this is exceedingly pueril.

"Such critics," Dean Swift aptly describes, "are like dogs at feasts whose thoughts and stomachs are wholly set upon what the guests fling away, and are apt to snarl most when there are fewest bones."

For you, a minister of the gospel, a supposed mouthpiece of the Lord God, to write such a letter, shows your moral cowardice.

Mr. Treuthart is not a "divine," but an honest man. Not a drone in the hive of industry, a corruption to the body politic, or a clog to the wheel of progress. He is a producer and does not spend his time in hunting fallacious arguments to down common sense and reason. He has looked into the laws of nature, and has truth on his side; and is not afraid to express his honest convictions.

For you—you, a representativ of the crucified God—to back out of an honest discussion is to me surprisingly surprising. "Whosoever shall confess me," etc. (Matt. x, 32, 33). "Be ready always to giv an answer" (1 Peter iii, 15).

"Am I a soldier of the cross,
A follower of the lamb,
And shall I fear to own his cause,
Or blush to speak his name?"

Reason is the lamp of the soul, and it is acknowledged that investigation is the friend of truth.

Your refusal to debate with those holding opposit views indicates either the weakness of your cause or your moral cowardice in refusing to defend it, notwithstanding you proclaim, "Believe, be baptized, or be damned!"

You resort to subterfuge and want definitions of common words and terms. Why not stand up like a man?

You state, "A definition is a debated question among theologians." What is theology? Webster says it is "that branch of heathen theology which taught the genealogy of their deities." Do you class yourself a heathen?

Again you state, "My desire to criticise unbelievers is due entirely to their assuming to be themselvs critics, especially when they are not equipped for criticism." Hide thy face, O man, in the shelter of darkness! Your bumps of self-conceit and assumption retard the rotation of the wheels that revolve in the vacuum that exists where there should be brains. For a champion of the "Lord Jesus Christ and him crucified" you are, in my estimation, as a dummy in front of a tailor-shop. "O to be nothing, nothing!"

Now your lines of lunacy, "Resolved, That it would improve the world to forsake the tendency toward the practice of the Sermon on the Mount." Do you not know that this sermon was copied word for word from the writings of Confucius some five hundred years before him who said, "Slaves, be subject to your masters?"

Again, you state, "To magnify the importance of some person or persons would not be good policy." Surely this is comical. You hav endeavored to "break into the papers" and pose before this community as the great John L. Sullivan in the theological arena. As yet you hav never met any but "men of straw." Your talk of debating with Colonel Ingersoll is nonsense and intended only as a means to get your name in the paper and pose for notoriety. The people of Cincinnati hav a good idea of your mental caliber, as is demonstrated by the empty pews you address. Hide thyself, O man, in the eternal darkness of thine own shadow! Rest in oblivion! Do not parade before the public as a debater to down the honest Ingersoll and run away from a country newsdealer. "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good."

Yours for truth, GEORGE E. LIGHT.

From the above Lockwood seems fit for a Jesuit, a member of the brotherhood of Loyola. To be plain, he is a bombastic ass, and as such should don the "holy" regimentals—scapulary, mass-book, rosary, and cross. And yet I wish him joy.

WILL S. ANDRES.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

Hear What This Man Would Introduce in Sunday-Schools.

INGLENOOK, CAL., March 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Illustrated Bible received. It is highly appreciated. Every Sunday-school in the land ought to be supplied with it. That, with Heston's automatic praying-machine, or chaplain, would simplify "preachin'" wonderfully.

Yours for mental liberty,
A. L. HARVEY.

A Missionary Starts for Heathen Wilds.

LORAINE, ILL., May 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. J. E. Remsburg, of Oak Mills, Kan., was here on the 5th of March last, and delivered one lecture and left a good impression for a successful call next fall. I want to canvass the country and call upon the great and small for patronage of your valuable paper and all tracts, etc. Send me a good copy, and I may succeed in good work for my cause.

R. H. WILTZ.

The People Want the Fair Open.

LEONIDAS, MICH., May 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav lived in southern Michigan over fifty years, and I feel confident that a large majority of the people are Secular in their opinions, and do not want the World's Exhibition closed on Sunday.

I hav been a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for about two years. I find much of the reading-matter interesting and the pictures very illustrativ. Heston is a most wonderful genius. D. MILLARD.

Close of a Worthy Life.

ALMA, COL., May 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Your former subscriber and my esteemed friend, John Sullivan, departed from this life on the 22d of April, at St. Luke's Hospital, Denver, Col. The deceased was kind and generous to a fault, forgetting himself in the efforts to relieve the suffering of others. He was activ in the resistance of error and the spreading of the truth. In belief he was a Materialist. In his youth he was a Roman Catholic, having been sent to their school. His parents were Catholics. He fought in the late war, enlisting in an Iowa company in 1862 and serving until 1865.

Respectfully, JEREMY MACKEY.

Giv to Freethought, Not to Churches.

CLEVELAND, O., May 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1, for which you will please send me the Bible Picture Book.

In perusing the columns of "Letters of Friends," I see a letter from Brother White, of Columbus, in which he states, "If our Liberal friends would only giv as much to the cause of Freethought as they did to the churches they used to attend, Freethinkers would not hav to take a back seat as they do now." I wish to say that Brother White is right when he says that. It seems to me that that was, and is, the great drawback to the Freethinkers, and unless they take hold of it in a better way than they hav done so far, they certainly will not, and cannot, make headway. I therefore appeal to every Freethinker in Cleveland to become a member of the Cleveland Secular Union and help Brother Charlesworth to make this the grandest move that ever has been brought to the attention of the people. I am,

Yours in liberty and Freethought,
J. ROSENBERG.

Show Up the Church at the Fair.

TYLER, WASH., April 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hand you herewith $8.70, for which send two copies of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" and other books as herein mentioned.

I like the idea expressed in many letters written THE TRUTH SEEKER, that we should show up the progress of religion (Christianity) at the World's Fair, with life-size figures of Science and Progress burning at the stake, and with all other instruments of torture used by Christians for Christ's sake; also plenty of Freethought literature, especially plenty of Heston's picture books. Count me in for aid.

There are many Liberals in our community, but, like most of their numbers, they are contented with their belief and keep quiet, and smile on or pity, as the case demands, the many dupes of Christianity among us. There has been quite a strife between the two Methodist churches in our little town, one Free and the other not Free, to see which could gather in the most contributions to Christ; but as usual, the funds had to pass through the hands of Christ's agents, and if the agents do not embezzle the funds Christ has done well in those parts. But the naughty serpent of old has visited our garden, and—from reports—has tempted Eve, and she did partake of the forbidden fruit, and gave to Adam (one of our nice young reverends) and he did partake thereof. At least, Eve's mother (our Eve has a mother) says Adam must marry her Eve. I think Brother Heston's plan a great aid in bringing darkness unto light; and with THE TRUTH SEEKER, a grand epistle.

Yours for liberty, P. K. SPENCER.

Has Had No Time to "Throw Away" on God.

PARKERSBURG, ORE., April 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a subscriber for many years, and by the grace of God, and nothing else intervening to prevent, I expect to be a subscriber for many years to come. Though I am sixty-nine years old now, I am in splendid condition, and I partly account for my good health as the effects of a contented mind, which comes, I think, from reading THE TRUTH SEEKER. Those long articles on science, religion, politics, Spiritualism, and almost every other subject worth a thought, ought to be food sufficient to satisfy any mind to contentment.

I hav had great experiences during my life. I was born of Methodist parents, when camp-meetings and revivals were "all the go," but I never took to the business very kindly. And in the "year of our Lord" 1846 I enlisted in the Mounted Rifle Regiment, U. S. Army; went to the Mexican war, came home in 1848; started to California January, 1849—hence I was a pioneer to the Golden state; in 1856 came to Oregon; located my home on this beautiful river Coquille in 1857; brought my wife to Oregon, and hav remained here ever since, and raised a family, the youngest of which is twenty-one years old the 6th of this month. When I first came here neighbors were fifty miles apart, and I was fifteen years on my place before it was surveyed. Now you can plainly see that I hav had very little time to throw away on my knees asking God for favors, or begging him to giv the other fellows hell. I hav stood square on the platform, One world at the time. This country has settled up and improved wonderfully since I hav been here. Towns, mills, and all kinds of business enterprises hav sprung up. Thirty-six years ago we paddled our own canoes; now we hav daily mails carried on good, comfortable steamers, and a large fleet of schooners in the lumber trade. Preachers are in every hole and corner, but they make very little headway for God's sake.

Hoping THE TRUTH SEEKER and its Editor may liv forever, I am,

Fraternally yours, D. JNO. LOWE.

Complains of State Meddling.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., May 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Last Wednesday night, May 11th, I delivered a public lecture on Phrenology in the Opera House at Atchison, Kan., and on the Saturday following I was arrested and fined $20, because I had not taken out a license of $5 for delivering said lecture. I was not asked to pay any license or notified that a license was required, but was set upon in the street by a couple of villainous cutthroats and ruffians belonging to the police department. I was taken before the chief of this gang of highway robbers and blackmailers and hurried through a farce of a trial lasting four minutes, and then I was taken into a back-room where a long-faced, pious Christian pickpocket deftly went through my clothes and robbed me of everything I had—even my lead pencil and handkerchief and all my private papers and letters, and then they locked me up in a dirty cell, and asked if I wanted to wire my friends for aid. They kept me there until they were satisfied that I would not send for any money, then they turned me loose, but kept all my money but $2. They took $22 away from me when they held me up. I consulted three of the ablest lawyers in Atchison about taking the matter up to the higher courts, but all of these attorneys assured me that it would be useless, as the courts were merely a farce and a travesty on justice, and would not redress any wrong.

I send you these facts so that they may be published broadcast to the world, and show what a plague-spot Atchison and the whole state of Kansas is. It is nearly the same all over the state. Kansas is the most religion-cursed, bigoted, fanatical state in the Union, and is also the most poverty-stricken and debt-ridden. Kansas is by far the best state in the world to keep away from. The state is overburdened with an immense army of lazy, worthless official pimps who hold the people up and rob them with "ordinances" and alleged "laws" instead of six-shooters. Fully forty per cent of all the buildings in Kansas are empty, because the taxes are so outrageous and the laws are so bigoted and unjust that everyone who can has left the state.

Last December I was ordered out of a public hotel at El Dorado, Kan., for playing a game of solitaire by myself in my own room on Sunday.

The people of Kansas hav gone stark mad on religion, and such a state of intolerance, bigotry, persecution, ignorance, and pious and legalized blackmailing and brigandage, it is hard to imagin. The press of the state is completely subsidized and controled by the fanatic Christians and dishonest politicians, so that the outside world does not know anything about the terrible and shameful state of affairs now in Kansas. The Christians and politicians do not hesitate to send to the pen or murder all whom they cannot control or suppress.

For the inclosed dollar send me the "Bible Stories Comically Illustrated." Send it to Omaha, Neb.

Yours for liberty and justice,
DR. C. W. MAK.

In Mormonism Religion Reaches Its Acme of Evil.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, May 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of the 7th I saw under the heading, "The Mormons Less Intolerant to Infidels Than the Evangelicals," an article signed by B. S. Jones, of Cisne, Ill. The learned gentleman discusses Mormon belief, and gets it in very fair shape as I hav heard it preached here for many years, but he does not get it all in. As I know it from such brilliant lights as the editor of the Deseret News of this city, Elder Charles W. Penrose (for years an exile on account of marrying too much), and from others, the Mormon doctrin is that there is no eternal damnation for anybody except apostates and murderers. All others will be saved in a measure—that is, they will get a certain degree of exaltation—but only those who hav gone into polygamy, men and women who hav gone into matrimony to the extent of one man with three women, will ever attain supreme exaltation, which means reaching the seventh and last degree.

The last pamphlet on blood atonement was issued by Brother Penrose in 1884, and he then stated in that document that it would not do to practice it or even to teach it, because the sentiment of the country was against it.

Mr. Jones writes from a town in Illinois. I wonder how old he is? Did he ever read Ford's History of Illinois? Does he know why the saints felt compelled to get out of Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois within a period of fifteen years, before polygamy ever became a tenet of their faith? Has he ever investigated the peculiar conditions under which Utah is governed and as it has been for years—the territory having been deprived of the privilege of local self-government to an extent unparalleled in this country or any British dependency, except possibly India? Does he know that these people, unlike members of other churches in the states, and of course Freethinkers, and all others, assume the right to be governed by themselvs through their priesthood—to get revelations through that authority from day to day—which even the fanatical, bigoted Catholics do not assert a claim to, and that such government covers everything in life, social, business, political, as well as religious, in nature?

The humbuggery of religion reached its climax in Mormonism. The other religious humbugs do not maintain that they get revelations now or that they hav had any for the past eighteen hundred years; it is only the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints that may through its priesthood any day get a revelation on polygamy or anything else and suspend (or abolish) practice of the former, for instance, because according to the testimony of one of its apostles in the church less than two years ago, sixty-five million people are too much for the deity.

Let Brother Jones fire into all religious humbuggery all he may choose to do, but let him remember, in the language of a distinguished journalist here, that polygamy is a mere side-show in the structure of Mormonism—it is merely the nasty cement that has tended to upbuild it; that without polygamy the Mormons felt compelled to get out of three states, and that the fifty thousand gentiles of Utah hav only been able to get a foothold here by the presence of the United States soldiery in sight of our city and a system of local government inaugurated by Uncle Sam akin to that prevalent in a Russian province. HENRY AMES.

From a Clergyman's Daughter.

LA PRAIRIE, MINN., April 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We hav been watching Mr. Putnam's progress across the continent with much interest. We would like very much to hav him come here away up in Itasca county, near the source of the mighty Mississippi, but the place is not large enough at present, and there is not any hall suitable, so we must forego that pleasure until a later date.

I hav often thought I would like to say a few words as to "the conspiracy of silence" which is the present policy of most of the churches. Your readers may remember, some years ago, that Professor Jamieson wrote to THE TRUTH SEEKER that Rev. J. M. Pryse was the ablest defender of Christianity that he had ever met. Many years ago, Professor Jamieson and my father (the clergyman complimented) met in friendly debate at Prescott, Wis. The debate was conducted with such courtesy on both sides, yet with such intellectual vigor, that it is still remembered with pleasure by all the fair-minded persons who attended. At the close of the debate some Methodists, who were not satisfied with the courteous and gentlemanly conduct of my father, imported the Rev. Mr. Haddock, who was afterward killed in Iowa I can say nothing of the merits of this debate, as, being but a young girl, I was not permitted to attend, on account of the scurrilous and indecent methods of the Rev. Mr. Haddock. I hav often thought that it was small matter of surprise that his life was taken, and that he was fit material to manufacture a Prohibition martyr from. My father died last year, but had read and appreciated Professor Jamieson's compliment. After the debates he held with Professor Jamieson, he was not encouraged by his brother ministers to meet in open, honorable warfare, but was told to "let those fellows alone," to ignore them, as paying any attention to them only brought them into notice. So father was compelled to "silence" and also to obscurity.

One of the most brilliant and brainy men of the Presbyterian church, he was the pastor of a small church when he died, and his obituary notice was written by a Freethinker, Mr. B. F. Gibble, who was his warm and devoted friend and admirer. Fifty years of devoted work for that church and such was his reward.

Of his eight children but three can be called orthodox. The two sons who proudly wear the name of J. M. Pryse (one James M., and the other John M.) both are Theosophists, one working in London with Mrs. Besant and the other with Mr. Judge in New York. An article appearing nót long ago in THE TRUTH SEEKER was written by one and edited by the other.

As for myself, I hav been a Freethinker ever since the imprisonment of D. M. Bennett, and on account of diligent perusal of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

An old saying that ministers' children turn out bad will maybe take on new meaning when "bad" is construed into meaning Freethought. They see so much of the underhand and unscrupulous methods in vogue in church, so much hypocrisy and lying, that they become disgusted; and if fortunate enough to come in contact with intelligent, upright Freethinkers, they eagerly listen, then begin to read and think, then abandon the religion of emotion for reason and common sense.

Both Mr. Hawkins and I hav had the honor of addressing the Freethinkers of Los Angeles and Phœnix, and miss much the companionship of Liberal meetings and friends, but keep track of them all, through the dear old TRUTH SEEKER.

Pardon this rather personal letter, but I felt like informing you of these facts, thinking they might be of interest as showing how even ministers' children are leaving the fold.

For my father's memory I hav every respect, for his church nothing but disgust.

LIZZIE PRYSE HAWKINS.

Interesting Problem—The Golden Rule Declared Worthless.

CONCORDIA, KAN., May 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: To the Golden Rule again. Your correspondent in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 14th fires entirely over the mark. He does not grasp the thought. His argument—if such it may be called—when synthesized into a theorem would read about as follows:

"If we are just, equitable, and right the Golden Rule will prove beneficent."

My point is that the Golden Rule, per se, possesses no value. He says: "In the righteous administration of any law, it is presumed that justice, equity, and fairness are to govern our actions—be the soul of our motivs. Otherwise the law itself would be a stumbling-block to the very object of existence, as it is even now too often made by the carping technicalities of unscrupulous attorneys and the unheroic methods of an accommodating judiciary." Now, the latter part of the passage quoted has the ring of youthful inexperience, and is utterly pointless. How anyone could write the first half and not see the worthlessness of the Golden Rule is a mystery beyond my comprehension. Your correspondent virtually admits that the Rule would be worthless, yea, and a stumbling-block, if we did not possess within ourselvs certain sterling qualities!

That concedes my entire claim. For it is not then the "Rule" that makes one good, but the virtue which he himself possesses. What can be plainer?

The hit at lawyers and the judiciary may afford pleasure to those who hav felt their sting, but is not in point.

The same extreme lack of point appears in his asking us to consider the wish of a man whose horse was stolen as well as that of the thief. Now, it ought to be obvious that if the judge hav in mind the one who wants him to affirm, and that other one who says deny, then his order escapes the influence of both, does it not? Not the Golden Rule then, but his conscience, is the motiv power.

The last two-thirds of the argument of your correspondent is so far-fetched, and manifests such bitterness against our judicial system, that I am forced to think he was not thinking of the Rule when he penned it. It is so common to hear a brother Infidel speak of the Golden Rule as originating with Confucius that I beg leave to enter my protest. As ancient a writer as Eschylus, and even others, hav intimated theories which would reduce to the same barbaric idea. My chief objection to the assumption that this barbaric adopted child of Christianity is the crystallization of all morality, is simply that it is false. An exact parallel is found in the argument that this rule must be divine because it is in the good book, and when you reply, "But it existed without the book," they answer, "Does that affect its value?" No amount of pettifogging can torture this rule into a scheme of morality. All such statements as, that we hav no absolute standard of right or wrong, are pebbles thrown at the Golden Rule; they do not sustain it.

Fraternally,

B. R. ANDERSON.

Plain Words.

VERA CRUZ, MO., April 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please send me a list of your publications? Also please send me one dozen letters to be sent to the World's Fair directors. We hav a few good, honest Liberals here, and a few of the most contemptible, hidebound, superstitious, hypocritical ignoramuses you ever saw. The only thing that keeps them from following in the line of their ancestral church bigots and burning me at the stake is the fear of the law—that the advancements of morality and science hav made in spite of the driveling, contemptible reign of terror the robbing, murdering, sanctimonious saints hav been trying to hold over the poor miserable dupes of the world that they might the more easily hold them while they fleece them. I love the right, the good, the true, and I love a noble specimen of humanity; but I hate with the venom of the most poisonous fangs the big-mouthed and long-faced brute who will take the form of charity and love for all men and at the same time sneer at, insult, berate, and abuse everything that does not come under him and listen at and believe his contemptible, damnable lies. It is not a want of brain-power that keeps this miserable Bible-and-God stuff in the minds of the people, but a want of honesty and principle. Men and women will not even be honest with themselvs, let alone being honest to those who, a hyena ought to know, should hav the privilege of the same rights they wish to enjoy themselvs. People living at the present day and age of the world hav no excuse for holding their minds in such stultifying, ignominious, God-worshiping conditions. The avenues of investigation are open to every man, woman, and child in the land. Not only are they open for investigation, but people are urged to think and look at the blasting conditions the priests and the preachers are holding over them while they (the priests and the preachers) liv high, wear fine clothes, hav fine houses and furniture, revel in luxury, and lounge in idleness or secret debauchery; and the poor dupes who sit and gape with their mouths wide and believe all that is told them to be sacred truth hav the blessed privilege of paying for it all. And a blessed privilege it is, too. Now, poor dupes of creation, hunt up the other gods of the world and see if yours is any better than they are. Or hunt for your own God and see if you can find him. See if you can find where he is or what he is. Do not come fool on it and say he always was, for that is something you know nothing about. Hunt up the other bibles of the world and see if they are not as good as yours, or some of them even better. And do not tell us, with a sainted air, of the beauties of the Christian religion, while history and your filthy old Bible both show that it has stained every path in its course with blood, rapin, persecution, and debauchery. Be men and grant to every other human being the same privileges. You wish to enjoy yourself. Use your brains or else beat the blasted things out of your head on the first rock you come to, and do not be gulled by a set of loafers simply because they tell you it is blasphemy or wrong to think. Do not be afraid of their lying, murdering, venomous old God, for he will not hurt you himself. But look out for his servants; they are the fellows to watch. Do not be afraid of the hell these fellows talk about or the devil they hold over you. It is all stuff and heathenish nonsense.

Yours for advancement,

S. B. DAVIS.

A Lady's Interesting Personal Experience.

GRAHAMSVILLE, FLA., March 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We are delighted with the "Pictorial Text-Book," and consider it well worth $5 instead of the small sum of $2, postage paid. I am quite sure I would not sell the one I hav for less than $5 if by so doing I must liv without one in the house. I value many of the cartoons at twenty-five cents each, and especially the one, Fishing, and the poem on the opposit side; for, even though the poem is good enough, there is still "more truth than poetry" in it. I think this fishing a mean piece of business anyhow. If the parsons would fish only from the pulpit it would do very well; but it is not so. Neither are they content to be "fishers of men."

They visit the ladies to do them good,
As every generous pastor should.

Although here in the South I think they are more reserved than in my nativ state, Massachusetts. There I was bored by parsons. Some of the fishing was rather agreeable, for parsons hav so little to do and fare so sumptuously, they are full of magnetism; their warm and prolonged handshakes, combined with their neatness and pleasant smiles, act as narcotics. The parsons and parson's daughter fished in vain for me. Hell I could not believe in; "the goodness of God in creating us and prolonging our lives" I took no interest in, for I felt confident that my parents gave me my life and sustained it until I could sustain myself and did not pray or call on God for aid. At the age of seventeen, the death of my god, my mother, left me anxious to know where her spirit was, or if I was totally without a mother. The parson took advantage of my dilemma, and pressed my hand longer while he talked of my "need of the savior." A few years later a new parson came to preach in our town. And he was in earnest; he gave my mind little rest. I was now a wife and mother. He came when my husband was away and reasoned and urged till I knelt in prayer with him. If I walked out he would manage to meet me, even when I crossed the street to avoid him. I could not be caught until my babe died and I was worn down physically by care and worry and a desire to meet not only my mother but my babe. By this time I had become so weary of his entreaties that I "confessed the savior." It took but about two months for me to see the folly and understand the "fishing" art. This is why I am especially pleased with the cartoon on page 100, and the poem, "How the Devil Catcheth the Parson." "Crimes of Preachers" givs us much proof of how easily parsons are caught, and yet that book only givs a portion of what might be told. I hav not listened to a religious sermon, not even at a funeral, for about sixteen years, and yet I now and then hear how the fishing is going on and how the fish are kept on the hook or in "the blood of Christ." The parson says, "It is easier to be converted than to remain so; you must not read Ingersoll's works or Thomas Paine's—if you do you will be surely lost."

If Spiritualism is not true I hav no faith or hope in a continuation of consciousness after death: and yet I hav been baptized by immersion. I am fully convinced people are just fooled by the parsons.

A few days since, I sat at work on a Sunday, when a Christian said to me, "Did your mother bring you up to work on Sunday?" I replied, "Yes, and I feel grateful to her that she did."

Long may THE TRUTH SEEKER liv and the "Pictorial Text-Book" flourish, is the wish of

J. A. DOANE.

"The Irresponsible License" of God.

May 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The following is from the Christian Advocate of Feb. 5, 1891:

Q. 3355. Who is this Colonel Ingersoll of whom we hear so much? How old is he, and where did he get his title?

A. He is a lawyer, fifty-seven years old August last. His father was a Congregational minister "with such broad views as frequently to cause dissension between himself and his parish." He studied law, settled in Illinois, ran for Congress in 1860 on the Democratic ticket and was defeated; was colonel of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry in the late war in 1862, and was once attorney-general of Illinois. In 1877 he refused the post of minister to Germany, and now livs in New York. A great talker, a bitter foe of Christianity, who does his worst to break down faith in God and the Bible without giving anything but the cold stones of Agnosticism and the serpents of irresponsibility and license in its place.

That is right, Dr. Buckley—keep barking at what you know nothing about and then call it the cold stones of Agnosticism and the serpents of irresponsibility. That miserable method of advocating Methodist Christianity will go further than any other effort toward breaking it in fragments. When misrepresenting other people is the main resort of an advocate it shows that the client has a bad cause in court, or else his case has fallen into flimsy hands. The cold stones of Agnosticism make a much better bed than the hot embers of hell, of which it has been hymned:

When we've been there ten thousand years
The end will be no nigher;
We've no less days to burn and blaze
In that eternal fire.

And the serpents of irresponsible license are lambs of purity in comparison to the beastly and devilish commands of an irresponsible God as written in the Bible.

But Colonel Ingersoll is not offering nothing but the cold stones of Agnosticism and the serpents of irresponsibility and license in place of God and the Bible. If showing what the Bible, and its and the creed's notion of God, are, breaks down faith, then faith ought to be broken down, and he who destroys an error by turning on the light of common sense has conferred a favor, if he does not offer other ideas in its place. As an advocate of justice for man, woman, and child, the justice that confers liberty not to be hoodwinked by priests nor cabletowed by police, but to exercise the highest law, that of nature, which gave them birth, he is the farthest possible from offering either irresponsibility or license, and he would like to hav Methodists and all other holy humbugs stop their license of lying in their God-houses and assume the responsibility of paying taxes on their factories of superstition instead of singing:

Jesus died and paid it all,
All the debt I owe.

On the subject of justice and responsibility I commend to Buckley what he prints from Bleckley in the same issue:

THE PASTOR'S SALARY MUST BE PAID.

Chief-Justice Bleckley of Georgia believes that a religious society which fails to pay its pastor's salary should be made to do so, even though it be necessary to sell the church building and site in order to raise the money. In his opinion in a recent case he says:

"If any debt ought to be paid, it is one contracted for the health of souls—for pious ministrations and holy services. If any class of servants ought to pay, as matter of moral as well as legal duty, the good people of a Christian church are that class. No church can hav any higher obligation resting upon it than that of being just. The study of justice for more than forty years has impressed me with the supreme importance of this grand and noble virtue. Some of the virtues are in the nature of moral luxuries; but this is an absolute necessity of social life. It is the hog and hominy, the bacon and beans of morality, public and private. It is the exact virtue, being mathematical in its nature. Mercy, pity, charity, gratitude, generosity, magnanimity, etc., are the liberal virtues. They flourish partly on voluntary concessions made by the exact virtue, but they hav no right to extort from it any unwilling concession. They can only supplicate or persuade. A man cannot giv in charity, or from pity, hospitality, or magnanimity, the smallest part of what is necessary to enable him to satisfy the demands of justice. It is ignoble to indulge any of the liberal virtues by leaving undischarged any of these imperativ demands against us. On the credit side of justice we can make any sacrifice of it that we will, but on the debit side we can make none whatever. I may burn as an offering my own bull or lamb, but not that which rightfully belongs to another owner. There is nothing more exalted than a strict duty and its performance. What we freely giv cannot be better bestowed than what we pay in the discharge of perfect obligation. The law grants exemption of property to families, but none to private corporations, or collectiv bodies, lay or ecclesiastical. These must pay their debts if they can. All their property, legal and equitable, is subject. We think a court may well constrain this church to do justice. In contemplation of law, justice is not only the cardinal but the pontifical virtue. It is certainly an energetic measure to sell the church to pay the preacher, nor would it be allowable to do so if other means of satisfying the debt were within reach."

By the same token, the gospel-shop should be the first to pay their taxes.

J. P. GUILD.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Twenty Years.

So long, and yet it seems but yesterday,
That thou wert with us here in living clay.
I see thy face, thy speaking lips, and eyes
In whose clear depths shone strength of human ties.

I hear thy footfall on the floor and stair,
Yet all the house is of thy presence bare.
But years the happy past cannot efface,
Nor part thee from the old remembered place.

Still twenty years hav rolled their billows o'er
That day, when thou, dear heart, couldst speak no more.

What changes strange hav marked the time that's flown!
How many dear ones since hav come and gone!
Like birds of passage, lingering but a night—
While yet I looked, they vanished from my sight.

Soon speeding Time will pin the curtain down
Upon the garment I hav worn—life's gown;
And I shall tread the misty way thou went,
When for thee toil and trial all were spent.

In that mysterious, silent city
Comes no harmful thing or need of pity.
Sweetly the glowing stars their vigils keep
Above their placid dust who calmly sleep.

And if, from out all pain or stress of death,
My Ego rise to higher, purer breath,
Wherever I shall find myself to be,
That place is heaven if but shared with thee.

But if thy face I nevermore may see,
'Tis better far to sleep eternally.

—Susan H. Wixon in Christian Register.

Talks on Political Economy.

Isabella fastened it in her hair, and then resumed condescendingly, "Very good. It is thus we see that all capital is wealth, but all wealth is not capital. All production is the result of these three factors. Now, as these three factors produce wealth, each should receive its share, and such is the case." Emphatically: "We may as well quarrel with astronomy or mathematics in hopes of altering the facts of these sciences as quarrel with political economy. It is simply the result of natural law. As there are but three factors, there should be but three products, rent, wages, and interest. These terms in general usage are hopelessly mixed, and it requires a close study to separate and follow the course of each. This should be the aim of every student of political economy. Factors may produce many and varied combinations, but in themselvs are never interchangeable. Land and labor should never be confounded with capital, and it should be the same with rent, interest, wages. In the division of wealth, the landowner's share is interest, and the laborer's share is wages. Now, if we bear in mind that wages is the reward of human exertion, rent the reward or compensation due the landowner, and interest the reward or compensation due the owner of capital, we arrive at the principle of the science. When the capitalist invests his own capital, and conducts his own business, he receives, aside from the interest of his capital, a compensation for his labor. This is called in political economy wages of superintendence. And aside from this he should receive a compensation for the risk he runs in investing his capital. When he owns the land on which his business is established and the building which his capital has erected, his profits include wages, rent, interest, and compensation for risks. Hence the great apparent inequality in the distribution of wealth. I say apparent, for it is more apparent than real. Nature is full of inequality, and what is true of wealth is also true of health. If people neglect to take advantage, or improve their opportunities, they cannot expect to be well or wealthy. Capital is the result of saving. If the savage man is content to merely satisfy his hunger for the time being, he will always remain a savage. The earnings of labor saved form capital. Of course, to be of much use to its possessor it must be supplemented by intelligence and capability.

"Political economy would aid this by informing us how the various factors work, nd why the result?" Here Isabella paused, and looking at Ethel in a patronizing manner, asked, as if she were addressing a child, "Do you understand, dear?" "Yes," answered Ethel, and looking up mischievously, asked, "Can I ask questions?" "Yes," replied Isabella, gravely, "you may. I believe in children asking questions, for everything is new, and they should receive truthful answers." Ethel smiled, and then becoming earnest, grew warm and eloquent. "You say, land is any natural agent, raw material; and labor applied to this forms wealth, and the wealth, when used to produce more wealth, forms capital, and other profits arising from the use of capital form interest; and rent is the pay due the owner of land. Now, what I wished to ask you is, how can land, that is a natural agent, yield a profit?" Isabella was for a moment nonplused, for she had expected the question to be a little different. But after a moment's thought she answered, readily enough, "Why, by the owner's acquiring a title." "But how can he acquire a title over a natural agent?" asked Ethel. "In various ways," was the answer; "by purchase, a free gift, or inheritance." "You said there were only three factors in the production of wealth," Ethel said, raising her eyebrows, "and here you hav introduced three more?" "But, my dear child," remonstrated Isabella, smiling, "receiving wealth is not producing it." "Well," replied Ethel, "if there be any hindrance to the application of labor to land, that hindrance must constitute a factor, an agent, opposing the natural order. It is very easy to see how the savage may create wealth and form capital, but it is not so easy for civilized man. You speak of the former as acting under natural law, but the latter cannot. Do you perceive the analogy?" asked Ethel in turn, and as Isabella only continued to look at her in amazement, she laughed softly and continued: "In civilized countries land is the property of individual corporations or governments. The laborer is not on an equality with the savage, because the latter receives the full fruits of his labor, and the former has to yield the larger share to capital. I now begin to see some propriety in the name 'political economy.' The law of the land can mean nothing but the edict of politicians, and when I consider the advantage capital has over labor, I can readily see the economy for the capitalist. Labor feeds upon land, and capital upon both. The capitalist reminds me of a fable I once read, and it illustrates the point well. It was about an alligator who gave a dinner, and arranged his invited guests so that each was the foe of the other. The duck ate the frog, and was eaten by the fox, who became the prey of the wolf, and he was eaten by the lion, who in turn was devoured by the crocodile. And, like 'The Yarn of the Nancy Bell,' he had eaten them all. I remember the last lines very well.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Elm-Trees.

The elm is one of the most magnificent of the northern trees. It has all the hardiness of the oak combined with the modesty of the willow. Many trees cannot exhibit these powers of prominence in the forest. They must not be crowded. They want room for expansion. The elm is one of these. It does not wish to be crowded.

The particular tree I wish to write about is an elm that grew on the bottom-land of the Nashua. It was very large, at least fourteen feet in circumference, shading over a large area of ground in the sun's course through the long summer's day. It was known as the Big Elm. Many is the time we hav thrown our weary boyish limbs under the shade of this elm to partake of the lunch prepared for the haymakers at the house. Our fathers and grandfathers had done the same before us. Did they realize the supreme pleasure we did? It was our heaven—our only true god—a god we could see—one we could love and not fear, hence the more love. It would stand between us and the sun; and when Dame Nature thought she had caught us from the house and would giv us a soaking it would shelter us.

There are two varieties of elm, the white and the red. The slippery is found in each, as is also the weeping elm.

One day in the harvest time a laborer assisting us, while eating his lunch, claimed the Big Elm to be a slippery elm. We could not believe it, but on trial we found it true. This man, who spent his leisure time in roaming the forest or fishing in the stream, without education from books was an expert in all things connected with nature. Slippery elm was seldom found in that region. It was highly prized for its medicinal qualities and its exquisit and peculiar flavor when chewing. Doctors, ministers, schoolmasters, and lawyers had searched far and near in that vicinity for years for slippery elm, and would bring up when exhausted and lie down under the big elm and wonder where they could find slippery elm.

Later in life we found there were large forests of slippery elms in St. Lawrence and Franklin counties, in northern New York. We planted an elm sixty-three years since at the forks of the road in our nativ village. We learn it has become quite a tree at this time. It is our wish that, when we surrender up that vitality we never sought, the debris, in pure ashes, may lie below the roots of this tree, that we may appear in summer in its green foliage, sheltered in winter amid the encircling folds of its roots, to reappear each succeeding summer in a more beautiful edition.

Good-bye, children of the Corner. To be learning all we can is nice, and this is the world to study and learn.

OLD MAN PAXTON.

[The elm is indeed a lovely tree, and our friend has written above a very interesting account of certain trees known to him. The elm is historic. On July 3, 1775, Washington took command of the American army beneath an elm-tree that stood on Cambridge common, and for aught we know is still standing. It was alive a few years ago. The famous "Liberty Tree" that stood in Essex street, near Washington street, Boston, is believed to hav been an elm. A tablet marks the spot where once it stood and proudly faced the storm or basked in the glorious sunshine. This tree was planted in 1646 and dedicated to Liberty. There was an old English elm that once stood on Boston common. It is said that Mary Dyer was hanged from a limb of that tree for preaching Quaker doctrins. In 1766 it was pruned by order of the Sons of Liberty.

On the 30th of April last, Arbor day in Massachusetts, the Women's Educational and Industrial Society in Fall River, of which the editor of the Corner has the honor to be president, planted an elm tree in the South park. The society met at the spot designated and there was singing, and also speech-making, by the ladies and invited friends. Then the tree was dedicated to Liberty—the liberty of man, woman, and child. The eldest honorary member of the society, a gentleman of seventy-six, put in the first spadeful of earth, and then the members of the society each followed with a spadeful of earth, and the last one to throw upon the roots a handful of earth was little Nettie Williams, only five years old. She attends the regular meetings of the society and feels that she is a member. She gravely remarked, "I plant a tree; I hope 'twill liv."

This elm was planted in the name and behalf of "Education, Industry, and Independence," which is the motto of the society. It is taking root nicely, and is known as the "Woman's Liberty Tree." —ED. C. C.]

Correspondence.

MCMINNVILLE, ORE., April 3, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND LITTLE FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: I thought I would write to you again, as Vina and I are all alone to-day and hav nothing else to do. We are going to school now, and I am studying Fourth reader, arithmetic, grammar, spelling, and writing.

We are having some rain at present. It has rained by showers for three or four weeks, and has been wet and muddy, which is very disagreeable to the little ones that go out of doors, and the big ones too.

We hav some little ducks, which are very pretty, and also two little calves, which we think very much of. We hav a big romp and play every evening with them. The color of one of them is jet black and the other one is white.

We had speaking at our school yesterday and I spoke a piece. The title of it was "Little Prue's Opinion." It was in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Feb. 6, 1892.

The teacher said it was a nice piece.

I like to speak pieces that are in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Well, as my letter is long enough, I will close. Your Liberal friend,

ELIZA A. FARMER.

[Glad to hear from Eliza again.—ED. C. C.]

MCMINNVILLE, ORE., May 3, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND LITTLE CORNER FRIENDS: I again take the pleasure of writing to the Corner.

My sister and I are going to school now.

I study Fifth reader, arithmetic, grammar, history, geography, physiology, writing, and spelling. We hav a good teacher.

There has been lots of rain this spring. The people that hav lived here thirty or forty years say there was more rain here this winter and spring than has been for many years. But the last two or three days it has been very nice.

The fruit trees are blooming out and the trees are all getting new dresses of green again. The blossoms and flowers fill the air with sweet smells. The little birds of many kinds are flying about from branch to branch and tree to tree, seeking for a place to build their nests.

It may surprise you to hear that we had two inches of snow here the 25th of April, but it is true. We hav had considerable frost this spring, but I do not think any of the fruit is killed by it.

The wild strawberries are getting ripe in the valley, and if you were here we would go and pick all that we could eat, for they are very nice indeed.

The other day I received two letters, one from Kentucky and the other from Iowa.

I never knew or saw the ones who wrote them.

I am going to persuade some of my friends to write to the Children's Corner, for I tell them it is very nice to read their own letters, and also many other nice letters from the boys and girls.

Eliza and I are sisters to J. M. Farmer, who takes that grand paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER. I think the piece in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 23d, "Talks on Political Economy," by Ida A. Ballou, was quite good.

I read the death of Walt Whitman, and think it was very sad to hear, or at least I was sorry to hear of his death.

This fall I am going to send and get two of your books, "The Story Hour" and "Apples of Gold." I think I would like them very much.

Well, as my letter has grown quite long, I will hasten to a close.

Your Freethinker friend,

LOU VINA FARMER.

P.S.—

May your life be long and happy;
May your enemies be few;
May your friends be just as many
As the drops of sparkling dew.

[It is pleasant to receive such good wishes, and we reciprocate them and trust Vina's life may always be as happy and cheerful as it is now. Wild strawberries! The thought takes me back to childhood days.—ED. C. C.]

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

News of the Week.

THE will of Wm. Livingston, of Newark, N.J., is being contested on the grounds that he was addicted to morphine and a believer in Spiritualism.

DURING the last twelve months 150 negroes hav been lynched in the United States, 7 burnt alive, 1 has been flayed alive, and 1 disjointed.

GOLDWIN SMITH reveals that a few weeks ago England came very near declaring war against the United States on the Behring sea question.

ON the 17th ult. a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated in Havana for the repose of the souls of the victims of the great fire two years ago.

MAYOR EMMICK of Toledo, O., is being denounced by preachers for having said that he favors Sunday baseball as it would keep young men out of saloons.

THE relic of St. Anna, the Virgin Mary's mother, which is to remain at the church of St. Jean Baptiste permanently in place of the one sent to Quebec, will arrive in a few days.

THE general conference of the Methodist Protestant church at Westminster, Md., on the 27th ult., by a vote of 35 to 26 expunged the word "obey" from the marriage service.

IT is thought that Blaine will accept the nomination if pressed. The vice-president on his ticket may be Gresham or Robert Lincoln. Harrison is the only rival who has been advanced openly.

A NUN who was ill treated in the Santa Maria convent at Orta, Italy, has escaped and taken refuge in the home of one of the convent pupils. Ecclesiastics hav requested the police to recapture her, but the latter refuse.

PILGRIMAGES of the Catholics of Germany to Fulda, for the adoration of St. Boniface, will begin June 7th. The chief object of prayer will be the liberation of "the Prisoner of the Vatican" from his "oppression."

INSPECTOR WILLIAMS of the New York police, who resented Rev. Dr. Cutter's request to the police to become Christians, has been asked, "Suppose Dr. Cutter sends a missionary?" He replied, "Well, if the missionary doesn't smoke or chew tobacco he will taste very nice."

ON the 26th ult. the costly steeple of the Baptist church at Bordentown, N. J., was demolished by lightning. The loss is $25,000. The church took fire and threatened neighboring buildings, but by the labors of the fire departments of surrounding towns the untaxed edifice was saved.

ON the night of the 27th ult. a tornado and cloudburst struck Wellington, Kan. Hundreds of buildings were destroyed and many lives lost. The Salvation Army barracks, in which services were being held, was blown away and its inmates were scattered in all directions; two were picked up dying and more dangerously injured.

AT the trial of Confectioner Antonelli at Keyport, N. J., for selling a glass of soda water on Sunday, the charge being brought by Deacon Prall, Lawyer Reilly remarked that he had known hymn-books and prayer-books to be sold on Sundays at churches. The deacon's chief witness was caught in perjury, and the jury decided, "Not guilty."

REPORTERS in disguise hav been visiting Father Adams, the Williamsburgh, N. Y., priest who works miraculous cures by prayer and rubbing with relics. One said that he had no money, and was told never to show his face there again. The next had only twenty-six cents, which the priest demanded. All who go are requested to "make an offering to the priest."

FURTHER news of Deeming's execution reports words muttered by him through the black cap, "Lord, hav mercy upon my soul." A few minutes before execution he kneeled and cried, "Lord, forgiv me for dispatching my wife and family without warning." He left a letter in which he says: "I am dying a fully penitent sinner and Christian." He also left a poem entitled, "To God I Call."

THE United States minister to Russia writes: "The area over which the Russian famin prevails is ten times as large as the state of New York, and contains a population of more than thirty millions. One-half of this vast population . . . is without food or the means of getting it. Add to this the ravages of disease, the sufferings from an especially rigorous winter, the decimation of stock and destruction of material, and the consequent difficulties of recuperation."

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions
And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP.
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION.
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,

AND

OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, care of Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

NURSING MOTHERS USE

ALE AND BEEF

"Peptonized."

Because it generates a full supply of rich milk. It is a genuine nourishment—a health-giving food.

YOUR DRUGGIST SELLS IT.

THE ALE & BEEF CO., Dayton, O., U. S. A.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Brnno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

SINCE man, a material being, actually thinks, matter enjoys the power of thinking.—Holbach.

No priest should possess authority to deprive a citizen even of the smallest of his privileges.—Voltaire.

HE is the rich man, and enjoys the fruit of riches, who summer and winter forever can find delight in his own thoughts.—Thoreau.

IT is beautiful when prosperity is present with intellect, and when sailing, as it were, with a prosperous wind, actions are performed looking to virtue; just as a pilot looks to the motions of the stars.—Plato.

WE must admit that we hav never seen a miracle ourselvs, and we must admit that according to our experience, there are no miracles. If we hav mingled with the world, we are compelled to say that we hav known a vast number of persons—including ourselvs—to be mistaken, and many others who hav failed to tell the exact truth. The probabilities are on the side of our experience, and, consequently, against the miraculous.—Ingersoll.

LIFE is only a particular kind of mechanics; it is, in point of fact, the most complicated form thereof, it is that in which the ordinary mechanical laws are brought into play under the most unusual and varied conditions: hence, the final results are separated from the beginnings of the chain by so great a number of swiftly subsiding, intermediate links, that we can find the connection only with the very greatest difficulty.—Virchow.

DOUBTS, always doubts,
And dangers ever,
Both while life lasts.
Yet virtue's rigid way
Aye tread, tread aye
In faith, with hope,
Through light and dark,
The straight yet devious way,
The thorny, flowery way,
The narrow way
Along the precipice.
—Sacred Writings of Buddhism.

IF the theory of eternal salvation through another's sufferings be abandoned, the fact of the possibility of the present salvation of men through their own efforts remains. Perhaps laziness and selfishness hav had something to do with putting salvation upon God instead of upon our own labors, just as Sydney Smith described English benevolence, saying, "When A sees B in distress, he has a strong desire to compel C to help him." It is easier to say, "God help you," than to lend a hand to a suffering brother. We may all be saviors, offering up ourselvs daily for the good of others; and, by another law of nature, we shall find that such offering blesses him who givs.—Robt. C. Adams.

JULES SOURY clearly considers Christ to hav been insane. But, most likely, a mad sinner required a mad savior. Man is so irreclaimably mad that no sane deity would hav taken the trouble to hav redeemed him. The redemption is as insane as the redeemer. Nobody knows for certain whether it was for all the world or only for the elect. Nobody knows exactly what they are to be redeemed from, for hell is altering its name and changing its temperature and getting pretty well exploded. Although the world is every day becoming more sure that there is no hell and ought to be none, to keep men out of this sheol they pay many millions a year to hundreds of thousands of professional impostors and chartered necromancers. A sane man is not at home in this world. He is lost among the fools, like a grain of corn in a bushel of chaff. For ages the world burnt or hanged all its wise men; now it neglects and starves them.—Saladin in God and His Book.

IF religion be a fallacy, it is a fallacy pregnant with mischief. It excites fears that are without foundation; it fosters feelings of separation between the believer and the unbeliever; it consumes valuable time, that can never be recalled, and valuable talents, that ought to be better employed; it draws money from our pockets to support a deception; it teaches the elect to look upon their less fortunate fellowmen as heathen and castaways, living in sin here, and destined to perdition hereafter; it awakens harassing doubts, gloomy despondency, and fitful melancholy; it turns our thoughts from the things of the world, where alone true knowledge is to be found; it speaks of temporal misery and temporal pleasures as less than nothing and vanity, and thus fosters indifference to the causes of the weal and woe of mankind; worse than all, it chains us down to antiquated orthodoxy, and forbids the free discussion of those very subjects which it most concerns us to discuss. If religion be a fallacy, its votaries are slaves.—R. D. Owen.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Laud of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

234 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY
ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:
And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

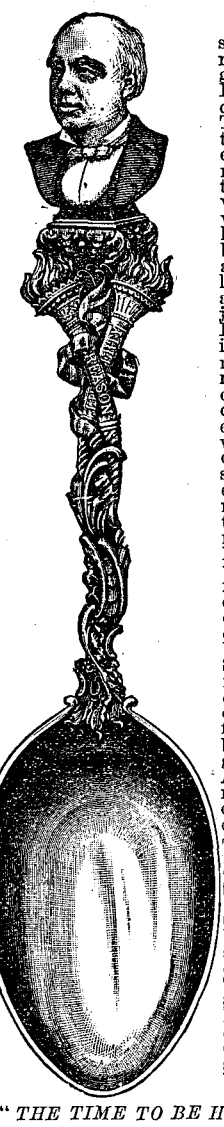
Boards. - - - - - 40 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate
ON CHRISTIANITY.



Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

The Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

WATER OR LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ISAIAH'S JOSS IS DISGUSTED WITH SABBATHS, SOLEMN MEETINGS, NEW MOONS, ETC.

Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to hear them.—Isa. i, 13, 14.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

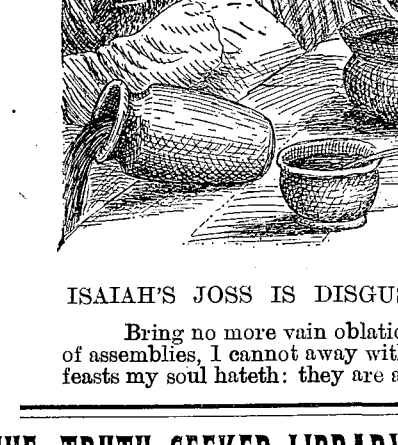
Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY —and— RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

John E. Remsburg's Books

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

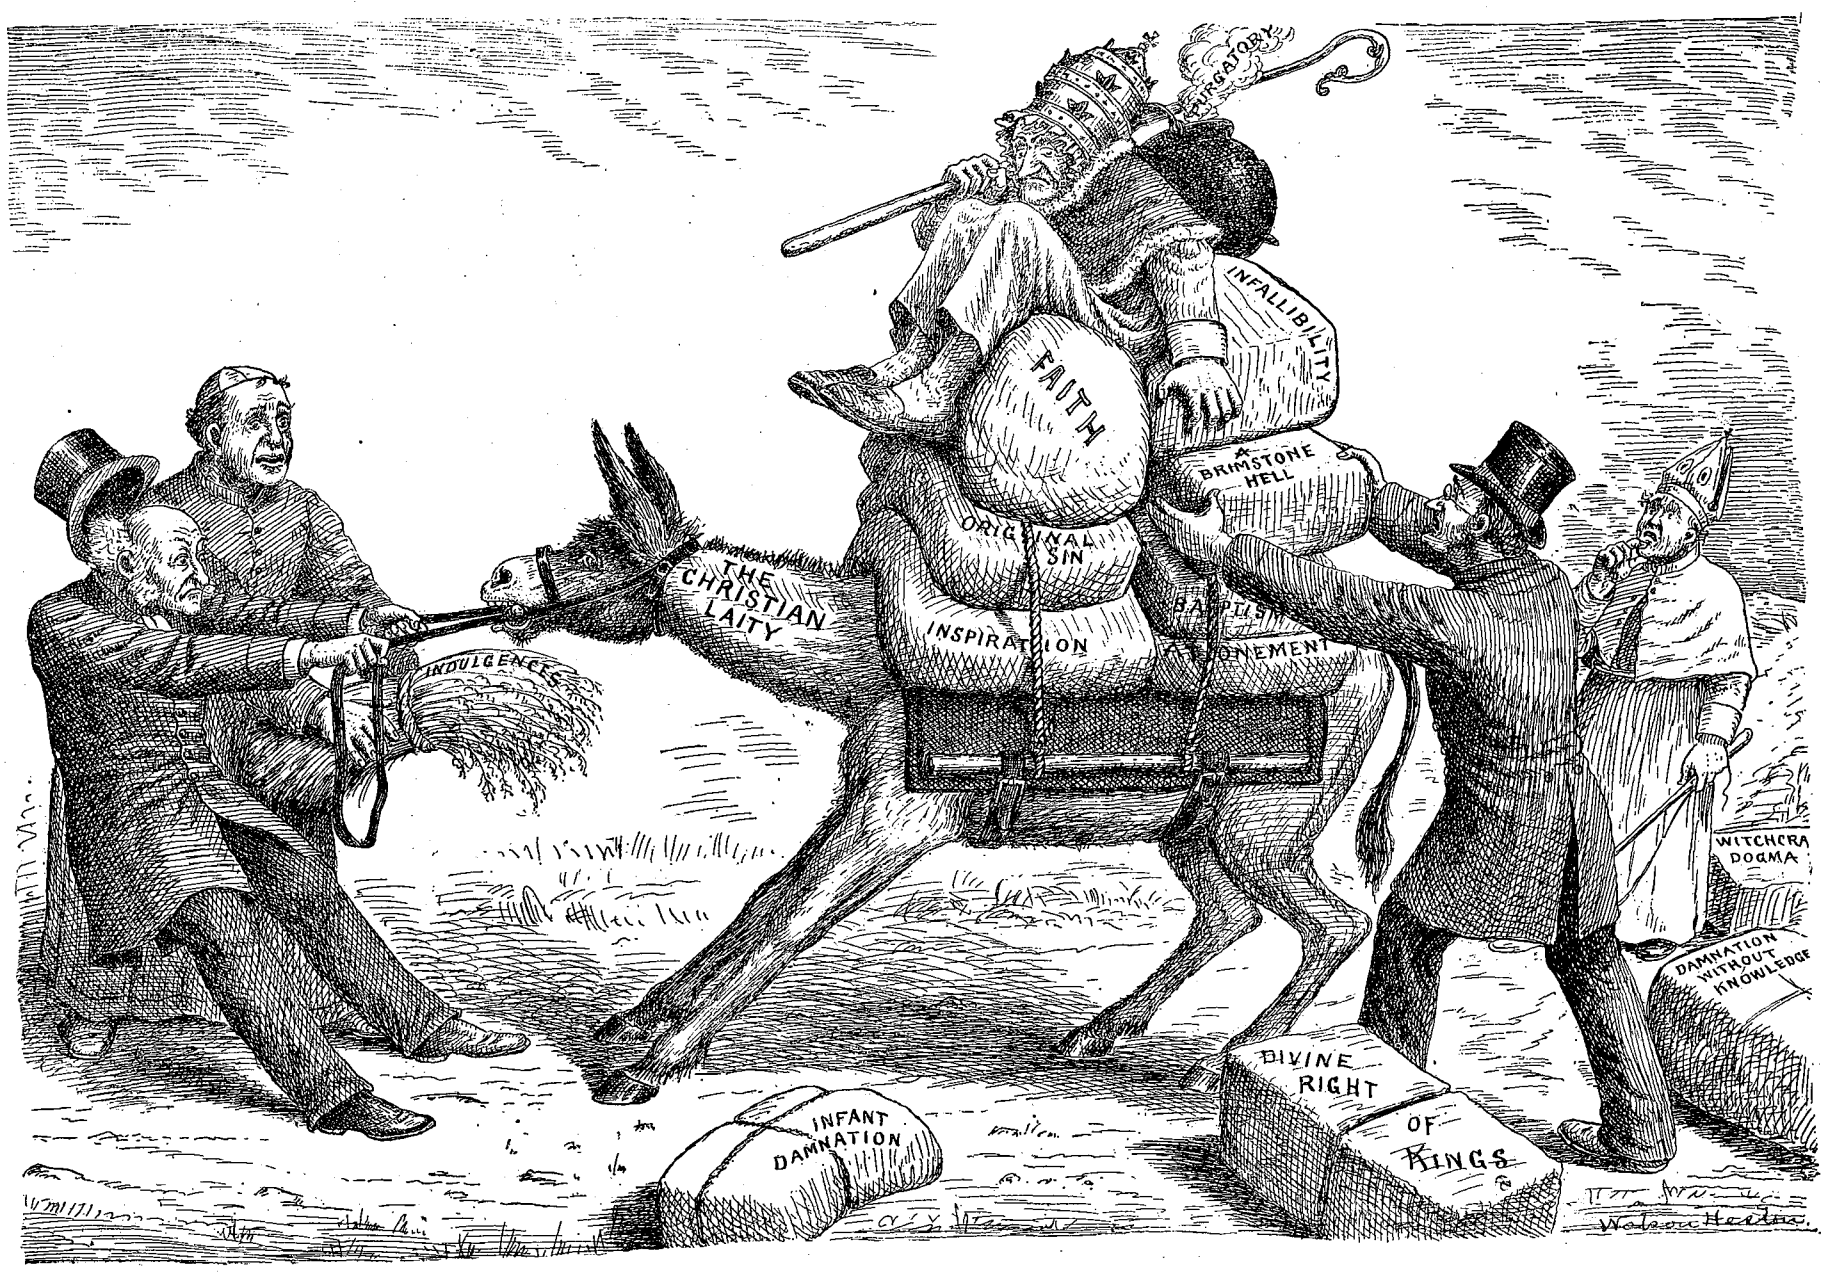
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 24. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 11, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

NO GO—THE CLERICAL COMBINATION FORCED TO LIGHTEN THE LOAD.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1 50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.]

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 24. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 11, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 11, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Reforming Folks.

The crusade of Dr. Parkhurst against the dens of vice in this city has resulted in bringing out other ministers who desire to share in his notoriety. Only two of them, however, hav succeeded in impressing the public with their schemes of reformation.

Dr. De Costa advances the old idea that the way to reform the world is to preach the gospel to it. He would go into these places and pray with the inmates, bring them to Jesus and the paths of sobriety and virtue. Dr. De Costa's method is not novel, and in view of the fact that the inmates of such places are already religious and superstitious, his method would seem also to be very ineffectiv. So far, at least, it has not worked the regeneration of the world.

The other would-be reformer is an Episcopalian by the name of W. S. Rainsford. His branch of the reforming business is the saloons, and these places he would reform by putting them under the control of the church. He wants resorts established where men may meet and drink without "evil associations," where the "environments are pleasant and attractiv" and "viciousness is not taught." He would banish rum and the stronger liquors in favor of beer, light wines, coffee, tea, chocolate, etc., and he would not hav immoderate drinking encouraged. He concedes that men hav "the right to drink," and declares that it is not "sinful to drink" nor to "conduct a drinking resort," provided men are not urged to "drink to excess." If he could "close all the saloons" in New York he would not. He would simply "wipe out the bad saloons" by "elevating them" to a higher "plane." He would, we suppose, hav deacons for bartenders, pretty Sunday-school teachers for waiters, and a sermon thrown in. The scheme is a great one.

Unfortunately for Dr. Rainsford, however, it is impracticable. There are now many just such resorts where beer and light wines are the principal alcoholic beverages sold. Tea, coffee, and chocolate will never become popular drinks, because there is no enthusiasm in them. A tea party is an unconscionably dull affair except for the flirtations. Beer and wine answer the purpose better, and to obtain them there is no need for the church to start saloons. The present German gardens of the better class are almost identical with Dr. Rainsford's ideal, but if anybody thinks that the frequenters of these would stand preaching he greatly mistakes the temper of the people. They want music, life, and light, instead of sermons and moralizing. They resort to these places to make merry, and they would object to having the shadow of hell cast over them by the presence of church officials with solemn faces.

The church has met this plan with determined opposition, and the people whom Dr. Rainsford would "save" would probably oppose it as vigorously, even could a capitalist be found to invest his money in such enterprises. "His propositions," says the Independent, "will not find an echo in our evangelical Christianity." They will be received with surprise and regret, and denounced as wild, chimerical, and impossible. It is hard to deal with them patiently. A church in the saloon business, open six days of the week and not closed entirely on the seventh, would be such a church as his Satanic majesty would willingly be archbishop of. We denounce the saloon in its business and its whole influence, and we denounce the new and astonishing proposition of Dr. Rainsford as one which would surely result in evil to the church and to the world."

We fear our Christian friends, particularly the ministers, will hav great trouble in their attempts to directly or indirectly make the world conform to their ideas of what is good for the inhabitants of this sphere. There is an obstinate streak in human nature which makes them desire to do as they please. And it is this streak which has given us all our liberty, and which makes the church's efforts of so little avail. Let the preachers profit by the past and change their tactics. The Forcible Reformers like Dr. Parkhurst and the Doing Goods like Dr. Rainsford are equally repellent to self-respecting individuals.

But, if they will permit us to make one suggestion, we would urge them to teach people the evils attendant upon drinking alcohol and frequenting places of vice; convince them that both are unnecessary to happiness—and then see how the world wags.

A Fine Censor of Morals.

In San Francisco there is a Society for the Suppression of Vice. It is a branch of Comstock and Colgate's New York organization, and its activ agent, C. R. Bennett, is a New York friend of Comstock who went out there to take charge of it. His methods and work are the same as Comstock's, and he has earned many commendations from his New York friend.

This is the girl's mother's story, as found in the Morning Call:

"Mrs. Gray told the whole story of her daughter's dishonor, stating in substance that in 1888 she and her daughter joined the Christian church, of which Rev. Dr. Sweeney is pastor, and there Bennett was a leading member, a singer in the choir, and activ in all the affairs of the church. Her daughter, she says, met him, and, he representing himself to be a single man, she became infatuated with him.

"Bennett often came to the house with her and seemed to take a great interest in her. She didn't hav any other gentleman caller. She said her daughter was sick for a short time, but she did not know until lately that it was on account of a criminal operation.

"'The first intimation I had that there was anything wrong in the intimacy between my daughter and Mr. Bennett,' said Mrs. Gray, 'was one day when his wife came to see me. She told me an awful story, for which I was little prepared, I can assure you. 'You don't know my husband,' said Mrs. Bennett. 'He is a base villain, and has been guilty of most atrocious crimes. When we were living in New York he betrayed an orphan girl who lived with us. Mrs. Gray, you hav no idea what I hav to put up with. I am sure he is only designing to ruin your daughter, if he has not already done so.'

"'The next day Mrs. Bennett called upon me again, and said that she told her husband of her visit to me and what he had said. He thereupon struck her in the face, cutting her lip severely. She showed me the wound in evidence of her statement.

"'Meantime I had told my daughter what I had learned about Bennett and questioned her as to their relations. She broke down at once and confessed everything. Several months before she said Bennett had betrayed her in San Francisco. He used to meet my girl on the boat and follow her about everywhere.

"'I asked Ella why she had not trusted her troubles to me before. She replied that Bennett told her that if she ever mentioned it to her parents he would brand it as a lie and prove her a public woman. He said he had the power and could prove anything he wanted.

"'Ella was in a dreadful state of mind and did not know how to get out of Bennett's clutches.

"'The next time he called at the house I charged him with having ruined my daughter. He boldly denied the charge. Then I ordered him to leave my house and never darken our door again with his evil presence.

"'I wanted to protect my daughter's name, so I kept the matter quiet. We did not see Bennett again for over a year.

"'A short time ago my daughter secured a position as typewriter for Mr. and Mrs. Heap in the office of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society.

"'As soon as Bennett learned she was there he began to make frequent trips to the office. Ella refused to hav anything to do with him, but he persisted and hounded her in every way possible.

"'One day he came into the office and handed Ella a vile letter. Ella threw it on the floor in the presence of Mr. Heap. Then Bennett declared she had better read it, as it was for her own good. At the request of Mr. Heap my daughter opened and began to read the letter. When she came to a passage where Bennett accused her of an assignation with a San Francisco gambler she could read no further and handed it to Mr. Heap.

"'Then the poor girl came home and declared that if there was no way out of Bennett's clutches she wanted to die.

"'All of this time my husband did not even know of our trouble and I only brought myself to tell him when I thought he might save our daughter's life.'

"Mr. Gray corroborated this story in every detail, though he told it more vigorously and interpolated such remarks as 'villain,' 'scoundrel,' 'blackleg,' and other fitting terms frequently."

The Call adds to this that while Bennett makes great pretensions to piety he has been before a police court and fined a hundred dollars, and that those best acquainted with him laughed when they heard he had taken a contract from Comstock to put down vice.

Private detectivs and detectivs employed by private societies are usually disreputable people, for the reason that no reputable man will undertake the work. From detecting to blackmailing is an easy transition. It is commonly believed in this city, and in one or two instances proof is at hand, that the "agents" of these societies to prevent or suppress crime or vice are miserable scamps, who ought to be in prison, and Mr. Bennett, of San Francisco, seems to be able to hold his own with them.

A Rebound from Puritanism.

In the good old days when Massachusetts was a colony of Christians the people were great churchgoers. In fact, they were forced to be because the absentee was fined unless he could allege sickness of himself or family, or some other equally severe affliction, as an excuse. The ministers then were important personages in the community, and a church was about the first building erected in a new community.

The Congregational Association of that state has just received a report from its committee on statistics. The report sets forth that for years churchgoing has steadily declined, and that at present two-fifths of the population are non-churchgoers, giving as reasons for it that these two-fifths disbelieve the creeds, dislike the church, and desire to make Sunday a holiday instead of a holy day. But the Springfield Republican holds that the committee's estimate is too low, and that less than three-fifths of the grown people of Massachusetts are churchgoers, and points to Springfield itself, a specimen city of the state, in support of its assertions. Between these two estimates it is probably fair to conclude that at least one-half of the Puritans' descendants hav backslid, as the phrase goes up there.

This condition is a natural result of the ancient régime. The tighter the bowstring is drawn the farther and stronger will it rebound. If the Puritans had been decent people, and if their descendants who still hold their religion were decently liberal, the church would get more respect from the world's people. The Puritans were too rigid, and the present generation cannot be forced into the church, even though so large a city as Boston put on a puritanical air on the first day of the week. The oldtime ecclesiastics milked the business too dry.

Considering the figures reported by the Congregational Association and the Springfield Republican, a journal of this city asks: "Under these circumstances how can the Massachusetts churches be kept up? how long must the ministers preach to empty pews? and how shall religion hold its ground against the inroads of Agnosticism and indifferentism? Can the old order of things be brought back, and what can be done to bring it back?"

We should say that, under the circumstances, and considering the causes, and taking also into account the greater knowledge regarding Christianity possessed by the present generation, the old order of things can never be brought back, and that ultimately the preachers will hav to go to work and earn their own living.

The Puritans.

The Rev. George P. Fisher, of Yale, who valiantly "answered" Colonel Ingersoll's annihilation of Judge Black on the condition that Colonel Ingersoll was not to be allowed by the North American Review editor to answer him, has written a book on "The Colonial Era." It deals with the English colonies down to 1756, covering the history of the Puritans. A New England man himself, and pious to boot, Mr. Fisher naturally has great reverence for his ancestors. He is all the more to be commended, therefore, for his honest expressions regarding the Puritans, who hav been so greatly, and so erroneously, extolled as defenders of religious freedom. One of the first acts of the Puritans when Boston was established was to discard the English Prayer Book. Considering the matter and the discussion ensuing Mr. Fisher says:

"What has been done, however, was consistent with instructions of the Company. It was intended that there should be uniformity in worship in the settlement. There was no idea of establishing a colony where diverse forms of faith and modes of worship should subsist side by side. Whatever judgment may be passed upon the founders of Massachusetts in this matter, it is clear enough that a struggle for predominance between the rival sects, if such sects had been allowed, would hav immediately ensued.

"Obviously the difficulty back of all such conflicts in those days, whether in England or America, was that, in the absence of a commonly accepted principle of religious liberty, each party, in case its opponent should get the power, had nothing to look for but subjugation. For one party to giv ecclesiastical freedom to its adversary was to forge an instrument for its own destruction."

Of the religious feeling in Connecticut and Massachusetts he says:

"As early as May, 1631, it was determined that none should be admitted to the exercise of political privileges except members of churches. The motiv assigned was that the body of 'the commons may be possessed of good and honest men.' It was a kind of theocratic system of rule.

"The settlers of Massachusetts, in common with Calvinists generally, while they denied to the state the power to control the church within its own province, nevertheless ascribed to the civil authority the right and obligation to promote the unity and well-being of the churches, repress ecclesiastical disorder, and protect orthodox doctrin against heretical assaults.

"While the extravagance of the Quakers had the effect to sharpen the weapons used against them, it must here be always kept in mind that, with the Puritans, to prevent the propagation of what they considered hurtful religious errors was held to be an obligation of civil society."

The Puritanic idea of religious liberty may be gathered from these expressions collated by Mr. Fisher:

"'I look upon toleration,' said President Oakes of Harvard College, in the election sermon in 1673, 'as the first-born of all abominations.' 'It was toleration,' Cotton said, 'that made the world anti-Christian.' Nathaniel Ward, of Ipswich, in that quaint specimen of Puritan humor, 'The Simple Cobbler of Agawam,' writes: 'He that is willing to tolerate any unsound opinion that his own may be tolerated though never so sound, will for a need hang God's Bible at the devil's girdle.'"

By and by, we hope, the effect of too much religion upon our Puritan ancestors will be fully known, and when it is it will be conceded that this country owes nothing to them for the religious liberty we now enjoy. They were narrow and stern and cruel sectarians, intolerably bigoted and fanatical, of no culture, with no broad ideas either in philosophy or politics. Whatever greatness New England has achieved has been in spite of them instead of because of them.

History Repeating Itself.

The South American republics continue to be good models of what all Western European countries were when the Catholic church had power, and the church organization was subsidized by the state. Venezuela is the latest. For some weeks that country has been enjoying a revolution with the odds in favor of the party the church dislikes. One of this party, Palacio, having proclaimed himself dictator, endeavored to stop the strife and restore good order. In this, however, he met the opposition of the church, which did not desire good order with a dictator who regarded the church only as a political force, and not with the reverence of a devotee. So the priests went among the people preaching against the government and urging them to still further rebellion.

Like other zealots, however, the priests hav overdone the thing, and if they persist, as it is to be hoped they will, the union of church and state is likely to be dissolved, as the dictator has threatened the archbishop to that effect, and intimated besides that cells in prison could be easily found for belligerent churchmen. Already one particularly obnoxious priest has been so silenced.

Thus history is ever repeating itself. Every country, without exception, which has maintained a union of church and state has had trouble between the secular and religious forces. The ministers of God claim everything—the right to control their own business and the business of everybody else. That they should do this is inevitable, because they think they are the proclaimers of God's will, which is above all else on earth. It requires many rebuffs and hard knocks to disabuse their minds of this notion. We hope the priests of Venezuela will get these in large quantities.

A Converted Jew.

The contention of the respectable Jews of this city that those of their faith who yield to the solicitations of the Jew-converters are worthless scamps who would do almost anything for money is pretty well established as truth. Such fellows make a business of being converted so soon as they find the Christians willing to pay—and the "missionaries" are nowise backward about offering money, under the pretense of aiding them.

Besides the numerous cases shown up in this city we find in the London National Reformer an account of a young Jew who made a business of being baptized, always with good financial results, and had he not taken to stealing might still be swindling the various Christian societies. During the past few years he has been baptized no less than thirty-six times, sometimes as a Catholic, and sometimes in the Protestant religion. He appears to hav been received with such open arms by both the Catholic and the Protestant church that within a short space of time he has made ten thousand francs by his rapid religious changes. Guttmann was apparently rendered reckless by his extraordinary success, and at his last baptism as a Catholic was not content with the present of money which the lady who stood as his sponsor gave him, but took the opportunity when he was left alone in her room to steal some of his patroness's jewelry. This enterprising youth has just been sentenced to five years' imprisonment with hard labor.

It will be difficult for any of Mr. Freshman's converts to excel this Morris Guttmann, who is only nineteen years of age, but some of them push him hard, as he numbers one forger and a few common swindlers and gamblers among his converted flock. None of these, however, hav taken quite so much money out of his mission as Guttmann received. That may be because Mr. Freshman is himself a Jew and knows how to drive close bargains.

The Kentucky Catholics evidently do not intend to be behind their New York and Canadian brethren in the matter of miraculous manifestations. They hav got a woman in Louisville who daily falls into a trance lasting from 3 to 6 P.M., during which time red crosses appear upon her forehead and the letters "I. H. S." on her shoulder. When she is in the trance nothing arouses her to consciousness but a word from her confessor. When he speaks she smiles. "And the world laughs with her."

The legislature of Mississippi is very pious or else the members thereof intend to go into the tract-peddling business. In a list of the "privilege taxes" imposed by that Christian body we find this about book agents: "On each book agent for each county, $5. But the tax on book agents shall not apply to any agent or colporteur of a religious publishing house or Bible society, if books of no other nature than religious books, tracts, and other religious literature be sold by said agents." Five dollars is not much of a subsidy, but everything counts to the agents of the Lord.

The trouble between the Chinese and the missionaries is not yet over. In a Shanghai journal a writer says the Antichristian Chinamen who were executed for rioting are religious martyrs. The Chinese national faith, he urges, has as much right to defend itself and resent arrogant invasion as had the Protestants of the Middle Ages. The same plea of "disturbing public peace," was raised by the Jewish elders before Pontius Pilate against the Christians, and by the Roman Catholics later against the heretics. The forcing of a foreign religion on the nativs by means of imperial edicts and gunboats—for such really is the Chinese view of the situation—is an unreasonable measure, opposed to all principles of religion and international law, and can never succeed. The writer explains that the Christian religion is grossly misrepresented by the missionaries themselvs, through presuming to address the people with a ridiculously imperfect knowledge of the language, whence arise serious misconceptions.

When the Eastern editors were visiting Los Angeles, Cal., the churches of the place were holding revivals, and "the religious excitement ran high." The common council, which seems to hav become infected, requested Mayor Hazzard to proclaim a holiday that the people might attend the religious services and get crazed. He refused the request, telling the councilmen that they would do better to entertain the editors first and attend to religion afterward. In his message he made these sensible remarks: "As a result of the editors' visit to our city our people are making every effort to entertain them to-morrow, and this entertainment does not include religious observances; and to issue the proclamation requested would be an act inconsistent with our duties as officials of the city having in charge the entertainment of our guests. Under the charter of our city nearly every city official is required to devote his entire time to the duties of his office and is paid therefor, and certainly we, as the legislativ and executiv branches, would not be performing ours in requesting these officials to abandon their offices on that day and devote themselvs to other things not provided for by law and, in my judgment, inhibited by the fundamental law of our land. No matter how praiseworthy the act might be, it is manifestly unfair to request that we officially recognize the work of any church or combination of churches, no matter how numerous, as it involves a violation and neglect of duty and the establishment of an unwise precedent."

In the West.

News and Notes.

Cincinnati is coming grandly to the front. Several years ago it was found pretty difficult to gather an audience, but now the people come flowing in like the waves of the sea. The hall was not only full on Sunday evening, May 29th, but many went away because there was not even standing-room. It was a very appreciativ throng, and the wide scope of subject upon which I entered in the lecture, "Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Infidelity," found hearty welcome. The Spiritualist and the Materialist were there, and the Theosophist and the opposit poles of thought did not "grate harsh discord." The object of this lecture is to survey the world of ideas radiating from the domain of facts, or supposed facts, and to unfold the harmony of the deepest intellectual conclusions of modern times. Through different pathways we may reach the same broad, general conceptions of man and the universe. After the lecture there was a rippling discussion of half an hour, each speaker being allowed five minutes. The various opinions were amply represented, and even the church had its defender. It was an interesting debate and supplemented the lecture with a quite brilliant array of talent. There was a general agreement as to the points made by the speaker of the evening.

The Ohio Liberal Society is a marked success. It started without any flourish of trumpets, and has rapidly won a commanding position in the community. President Ward, Vice-president Geo. E. Light, Andrew Hogg, secretary; Dr. Wilson, and many others hav taken hold of the matter with the courage of their convictions, and are determined that Liberalism shall occupy its real position in the world as the exponent of modern progress.

The platform of the society is broad. There is no creed. There is room for every advanced thinker. Its course of lectures during the past season has covered a vast deal of ground. Cincinnati is fortunate in having a wealth of local talent, and it does nct depend upon speakers from abroad for the success of its meetings.

The friends here are legion. I cannot mention them all. The oldtime veterans, Warren, Harrington, etc., were on hand to greet me, and rejoice in the progress of Freethought. It was a gala occasion indeed, this gathering of so many ardent for the cause. The comradeship of these generous friends of Cincinnati was inspiring. It givs one hope for the future, and labor is made a splendid enjoyment. Long life to this noble battalion carrying our colors on so bravely!

Prof. Edgar Beal, author of one of our most noted books, "The Brain and the Bible," is still the same genial philosopher and keen critic. With him on Sunday afternoon I took a trip over the suburbs of Cincinnati, to Mount Auburn, etc., and truly it was a magnificent panorama that from the vast hights unfolded upon the view as we swept up the sides of the steep incline. The city lay almost at our feet. The broad Ohio rolled along sparkling beneath the massiv arches. The hills were crowned with elegant homes and splendid public buildings. Cincinnati has a population of three hundred thousand people, and has by no means reached the limit of its abounding prosperity.

I am glad to report that the women are side by side with men in the ranks of reform, and adorn it with their genius. Mrs. E. P. Foster, of the Golden Rule, touches with a woman's quick perception the questions of the hour, and bravely speaks, especially for those who toil and suffer. Also Miss Louise M. Downtain, of Covington, Ky., who with the pulses of Freethought enters upon the field of journalism —where to-day woman is winning such glowing honors—and whose poetic contributions breathe with the spirit of the times, the music of this world, of joy here and now and not hereafter.

I hav thus found Cincinnati to be not merely one of the art-centers of the world, whose festivals are among the most brilliant events of the year, but to be a grand Freethought home of genial spirits, of cultivated men and women, who, with earnest purpose, are making the flowers and fruit shine in this world, to adorn the pathway of toilers, to giv hope in the place of the oldtime despair, and splendor for the future over the darkness of the past. All hail to the Ohio Liberal Society! It has entered, I am sure, upon a noble career, and our friends at this point may well be proud of the advance which has been made. In spite of many defeats, this is a victory which will giv cheer all along the line.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTHSEEKERS: Since writing my last batch of notes I hav had considerable running about in an endeavor to awaken some interest in our movement. It is so difficult, when once branches hav fallen asleep, to get them out of their lethargy. Some people think that under Mr. Bradlaugh the Freethought party was admirably organized and that these new efforts to reach the masses are but so many slurs upon his memory. Well, for the life of me, I can't see it. By sheer personal attraction Mr. Bradlaugh held thousands of people together whom we hav not yet reached and who dropped out of the movement with the old leader's death. If organization it were, it was but the organization of a number of tin tacks which one can cluster adhesivly to a magnetized bar; but break the current or remove the nearest from the magnet and all drop away as easily as lying. So it was with Mr. Bradlaugh's popularity. The working classes loved their leader, but they never fully entered into the missionary spirit which Mr. Foote and his colleagues are to-day inspiring throughout the kingdom. Of this anon.

Sunday week found me recalled to Nottingham, this time to be introduced to Mr. Charlesworth's good lady; and a very pleasant lady she is too. As before, there is a good deal of life in Nottingham; but it just shows the necessity for sweeping reforms in our administration when I say that no effort whatever had been made to announce my coming to the public and poor audiences of course ensued. Propagandism is business and must be conducted on business lines. Just fancy a go-ahead American city engaging a special lecturer at considerable expense and not telling the public about it! And yet they say, "It doesn't pay to hav special lecturers down." I should think not, going about it as they do; but where branches advertise their lectures audiences naturally enough are gotten together.

During the week I explored some towns where no Freethought agency is in existence, but where I felt confident that Freethinking and Freethinkers were not dead.

Judging from experience, I should say the whole of your colliery and manufacturing districts are ready for a vast development of missionary zeal. In the three towns to which I directed my attention I knew of no single Freethinker that I could go to, so I bethought me to raise the question in the train as I journeyed. Conversation was easily raised with my companion in travel and the question was bluntly enough put to him, "Hav you any Freethinkers in Mexbro?" He looked at me with a puzzled air, apparently wondering whether I was a Spanish Inquisitor or a miserable Infidel. Anyhow, he seemed to think it was all right and gave me a most important introduction, with other directions how to set about the work. They all loved Charles Bradlaugh and would like to see the work go on, but since his death they had fallen to pieces somehow.

From Mexbro I came to Barnsley and had the good fortune to travel with a railway man who was evidently acquainted with the local collieries, so I put the same question to him and asked him if he knew the friend I had met at Mexbro.

He did. So I took him to a place where we lunched together, and from him I got some useful hints about Barnsley, the home of a veteran worker in the cause, and promis of considerable personal help. Thus encouraged, I trained again to Penistone, once more attacking a stray passenger. At the very sound of "Freethinker" he seemed to jump for joy, and pressed me to go down and giv them some lectures—weekday or Sunday—and he would do all he could to press on the work. Now, if these three Yorkshire towns are teeming with disorganized truthseekers, probably all the others are in a similar condition; and the question comes home with painful force, What can we do to strengthen the work here? Money can be got, but educated, judicious, and attractiv speakers are as scarce as comets.

In Epworth, the Lincolnshire town where John Wesley was born, I distributed a number of tracts dealing with some Wesleyan ministers who hav given up the dogma of biblical inspiration. Honeycombed though it is with Methodism there was still a little band of twenty workingmen who assembled most evenings to discuss political, theological, and other subjects in a rude sort of way.

Well, I fear these details will not be so interesting to you as they are to us; and yet there is a twofold inducement to write them. In America, thousands of our best men and women hav found happy homes. The good old TRUTH SEEKER finds its way into all sorts of American towns, and maybe some of its readers will be glad to know how things are going on in the old island. Then again, truth-seeking, Freethinking, Secularism, or whatever you like to call it, is not a local institution. It is coextensiv with humanity; and it does us all good, whatever the geographical description of our birthplace, to feel that true hearts the world through are beating in loving sympathy with each other and are taking interest in what each other does. Secularists are no chosen people, no divinely protected race; they are men and women of all colors and all climes, who are trying their hardest to do their best for the present day and generation. That being so, every new place to which the light is carried or in which smoldering embers are rekindled must be a source of joy to all.

I see our old friend's daughter, Miss Mabel Emily Besant, was married to Mr. Ernest Scott, of London, last Saturday. Her brother, Digby Besant, gave the bride away. Miss Besant wore a gown of rich soft silk, plainly made with semi-train, and a "picture" hat of white straw ornamented with ostrich plumes. I don't know much about these sort of things, being an old bachelor, but I dare say the ladies do. There were no bridesmaids, but Miss Agnes Dyke attended the bride. Among those present at the wedding were Mr. Jacob Bright, M.P., and Mrs. Bright. We all wish the young couple every happiness in their new life. Mrs. Scott is a worthy daughter of her mother and will make an excellent wife. I am told that they start at once for Australia, to Mrs. Besant's great sorrow, for her daughter is the pride of her eye; and, after so many years of cruel separation, which our Christian laws enforced because of the mother's Atheism, it does seem a bit hard that they should now be parted for life. It is said that Mr. Scott has had a literary appointment in either Melbourne or Sydney, I forget which, but believe it is Melbourne.

Yours fraternally, SAM STANDRING.

Manchester, May 17, 1892.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Salt Lake, Utah.	June	12,19	Inyo county, Cal.	June	24–27
Provo, Utah.....	"	13	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash...	July	3, 4
Murray, Utah....	"	14	Woodburn, " ...	"	5
Kaysville, and Farmington, Utah	"	15	Barlow, " ...	"	6
Morgan City, Utah,	"	16	Canby, " ...	"	7
Echo, Utah.....	"	17	Sheridan, " ...	"	8
Reno, Nev.....	"	21	Scappoose, " ...	"	9
Carson City, Nev.	"	22	Tacoma, " ...	"	10
Virginia City, Nev.	"	23

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

JOHN PRESCOTT GUILD'S present address is No. 6 East Main street, Meriden, Conn. His many friends among THE TRUTH SEEKER readers, and those desiring his services as a speaker or wishing his pamphlets, "The Flag We Float" and "Gospel According to Garfield," will take notice. He has several small volumes in manuscript which he wishes to bring out soon, and would like to hav any who are interested in his philosophy let him receive an encouraging word from them.

ON Sunday, June 26th, John R. Charlesworth will lecture for Friendship Liberal League, Broad and Wood streets, Philadelphia, at 2:30 P.M.: subject, "The Evil Effects of the Bible on Morality." 7:30 P.M.: subject, "The Philosophy of Secularism." Liberals throughout the state are cordially invited to come and hear this brilliant young orator.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Columbus, O.....	June	12	Butler, Pa.....	June	20, 21
Cleveland, O.....	"	13, 15	Philadelphia, Pa.	"	26
Pittsburgh, Pa....	"	19

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

LECTURES for June of the Manhattan Liberal Club:

June 10th, "Rev. Parkhurst and His Methods," T. B. Wakeman.

June 17th, "Reincarnation," Eliza Orchard Connor.

June 24th, Last meeting till October; lecture to be announced later.

My Second Campaign.

When the poet made his beautiful lines on spring, he certainly had more favorable circumstances surrounding him than those that greet the ear of the traveler at this season around here. Rain, rain, rain, and still raining; it seems as if old Yahveh had got angry again and forgotten his promis to Noah. All the lowlands are covered with water. The mighty Mississippi has overflowed its banks, levees are washed away, towns and villages are flooded, and traveling on the railroads is rendered extremely unsafe.

Upon leaving Strasburg for Des Moines, I encountered some o the most unpleasant experiences of my life. Riding all day, we did not reach a resting-place until 12 o'clock at night, when we arrived at Keokuk, Ia. Here we found the town flooded, and rain still falling as though some mighty Niagara had burst its banks; and, to make matters worse, no place to sleep in could be found in the whole town. The hotels were filled with guests, most of whom were unable to resume their journey owing to the dangerous condition of the tracks. I had to pass that night on two chairs in the ladies' parlor of a hotel.

Early next morning an attempt was made to resume our journey westward under great difficulties and exceedingly unpleasant conditions. Within the first sixteen miles we encountered three washouts, and were compelled to carry a gang of section-hands on board the train, prepared to dig us out wherever these washouts occurred. Danger signals were flying on every section, warning the engineer to proceed with caution. Red flags were seen in such abundance as would hav infuriated le mâle de la vache or hav raised the ire of a Chicago policeman. At one point along the route the track had been rendered so unsafe where the water had washed the soil from under the ties that the passengers crowded out upon the platforms ready to jump off, expecting every moment that the train would be thrown down the embankment.

We reached Ottumwa in safety, although we were nearly half a day behind time, and here we were side-tracked for several hours; the trains from the east and the west were all delayed, and the news was very meager concerning their safety; when we were informed that we might make ourselvs as comfortable as possible, for the probabilities were that we should hav to stay there all day.

Fortunately for me, we were but a short distance from the town, so I secured my grips, obtained a pass-over check, and made my way to more comfortable quarters at the Ballingall Hotel, where for the next two days I remained a guest of our young friend John W. Dayton.

I soon found myself in more congenial circumstances, surrounded by good friends, with whom I decided to stay until the railroads were in a better condition and made more safe.

Mr. Dayton and Mr. A. L. Eaton gave me a cordial welcome to Ottumwa. A substantial repast and a regaling of the inner man soon restored my drooping spirits.

On Friday evening I went, in company with Mr. Eaton, to a concert given by a local musical society, where I had the pleasure of hearing his wife render some excellent vocal compositions. Mrs. Eaton is designated the Adelina Patti of Ottumwa, a title which she richly deserves. She is fortunate in the possession of a rich soprano voice, which, by careful training and cultivation, she uses with splendid effect, and the citizens of Ottumwa are justly proud of her and appreciate her vocal abilities.

Saturday I resumed my journey to Des Moines. The storms had somewhat abated, although rain still continued to fall, and I reached my destination without further mishap. Here I found Franklin Steiner and Mr. Youmans on hand to welcome me to the capital of Iowa.

Our young advocate, Steiner, it is needless to say, is the very life of the Freethinkers of Des Moines. Without him they seem lost, and without his assistance very little Freethought work would be done in this city. All the work of arranging my lectures had been thrown upon him, a task which he nobly performed, and did everything possible to make them a success.

There are many Freethinkers here, but even the enthusiasm of Steiner seems unable to rouse them from their apathy; and yet they seem earnest enough in our cause and appear eager to keep the ball rolling.

Mr. Caldbeck is an avowed Freethinker and one who has not hesitated to make his opinions known. The same may be said of Mr. and Mrs. Zediker, Mr. Youmans, Mr. Teigeins, Mr. Lunt, Mrs. Cross, and several others. Would these few but take courage and show a determination to make our movement a success here, a great deal might be accomplished; for six people with the determination to work will accomplish more than sixty who are indifferent about it. However, the war of intellect still goes on, and it must never cease. It is a necessary war, it is a just war, and one that neither all the churches nor the powers of state can stop. It has been truly said, "When a nation's sword is sheathed its tongue is loose, and when the tongue is tied the pen is engaged."

Then let the great and mighty war of intellect rage; its desolations, its conquests, its results, will prove glories to the people.

On Sunday evening I delivered a lecture before a fair audience in the Grant Club rooms. My audience had undoubtedly been affected by the atmospheric conditions, for rain was still falling, and it was certainly encouraging to see so many who had come to hear my lecture in the face of such unfavorable circumstances. A good discussion followed the lecture, in which Professor Lomas, an ex-Methodist preacher, and Mr. J. Wilcox, a local attorney, criticised what I had said. The debate was kept up until a late hour and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The meeting terminated very pleasantly indeed—although the latter gentleman lost his temper and made an exhibition of exceedingly bad taste. Some people cannot bear to hear the truth, and when it is given to them pointedly are very apt to get mad at it; but they should certainly learn that it is best not to show it.

The few days that I spent here were spent as the guest of Franklin Steiner, and his kind attentions toward me hav endeared him to my memory. Erelong he will be upon the Freethought rostrum himself, and he will undoubtedly be a valuable acquisition to the ranks of our lecturers. Diligent study and a fearless advocacy of truth are the chief qualifications for such an undertaking, and to say that our young friend possesses both would be to say the least about him. And it is to be hoped that when he makes his advent upon our platform he will receive the assistance and encouragement he richly deserves. It is gratifying indeed to find that there are young men preparing themselvs for battling in the cause of human freedom. One by one the heroes of Freethought are passing away and we must hav some one to try and fill the void.

On Wednesday evening we spend a few hours very pleasantly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Zediker. Mrs. Cross is present with us, who, by her sharp wit and pleasant conversation, enables us to pass away the time to advantage. Our friends tried their utmost to giv me a pleasant impression of the city, but I am afraid that the condition of the streets, which seemed like rivers of mud, will hav a tendency to detract a little from that and will make lasting impressions upon my mind of struggling with rain and mud when trying to cross the streets, only to be removed by another visit to Des Moines under more favorable circumstances—although the many kind attentions I received from the Freethought friends of Des Moines will form another of those happy episodes in my career never to be forgotten.

Early Thursday morning I commence my return trip to the East and leave for Ottumwa. Steiner accompanies me to the depot, and the train steams out amid tender words of farewell and kind wishes for future success.

Arriving in the democratic city of Ottumwa, I repair once more to the Ballingall Hotel, which is undoubtedly the finest hotel in the state of Iowa. Here the genial smiles of Z. L. Frazier greet the traveler by day and words of good cheer from the merry and humorous John Dayton by night.

At this time the G. A. R. is holding an annual convention in the city and in consequence of this the hotel is crowded, but the business tact of those in charge makes them equal to the emergency. Hence, there is an absence of that confusion which usually characterizes such occasions. Between four and five hundred guests are amply housed and fed in this spacious building, and are well cared for by a staff of able attendants, which reflects great credit upon the management.

Bands of music are parading the streets, accompanied by the martial tread of the boys in blue, the houses and stores are gaily decorated with national emblems, and the Ballingall, with its abundant display of decorations, with songs and music, presents a very inviting appearance and makes one forget the cares and sorrows of daily life. In the evening speeches are made from the balconies, and at the request of the proprietor our young friend, Mr. Dayton, made a remarkable display of oratorical ability and welcomed the guests of the house.

On Sunday, May the 15th, I gave two lectures in the courthouse, before large and enthusiastic audiences. In the evening not an empty seat could be found, and the people lined the room at the rear end of the hall. Dr. Davis, one of the Spiritualist friends, presided at both meetings.

There was one face, however, that I missed from my audience, a face that shall nevermore grace our gatherings, having gone upon that long voyage from whence no traveler returns. It was with sorrow that I learned of the death of Mr. McCarrol, one of Ottumwa's most respected citizens. Although a Spiritualist, he was an earnest Liberal, and never hesitated to assist the glorious cause of Freethought, ever eager to assist in the fight against orthodoxy. He has gone, but Mrs. McCarrol and family still follow on the pathway he has made and favored me with their presence at my lectures.

I was pleased to meet with Mr. Tilton, the postmaster, who, by the way, is an old schoolmate of Samuel P. Putnam, and is looking forward to Mr. Putnam's visit to Ottumwa, on the 1st of June. I was pleased to meet once more with Mr. Joseph Wagg, Dr. Wilkinson, Mr. Winn, Mr. Wilson, Miss Pepper, and Miss Henry, and above all our two young friends who are the life and soul of our cause in Ottumwa, John W. Dayton and A. L. Eaton.

Sunday evening I take supper at the home of Miss Pepper, where the time is very pleasantly passed away until the evening creeps upon us, and we repair once more to the field of labor.

The conditions that surround the Freethought lecturers of to-day form a vivid and striking contrast to the treatment they received but a few generations ago. We certainly liv in better times than did our forefathers—times of more enlightenment and public candor in examining into the claims and discoveries of scientists and reformers.

It is sorrowful to reflect upon the sufferings endured in older times by the world's thinkers, for bringing to the public understanding those natural gifts which now command so much admiration. Roger Bacon was forbidden to lecture by an arrogant and tyrannical priesthood, and at the age of sixty-four was thrust into a prison for ten years, for the heinous crime of making concave and convex glasses, the camera obscura, and burning glasses.

Guttenbourg and Faust, the inventors of the art of printing, were looked upon as having sold themselvs to Satan, and were regarded with suspicion and apprehension. Shakspere says:

> In religion, what damned error but some sober brow
> Will bless it and approve it with a text?

And what crime has been too black, but what these despots of faith would not hesitate to perpetrate in the name of God?

But now large audiences greet and applaud the defenders and expounders of Secular truths, honor and adulation encourages them in their work and inspires them with hope for the future.

It is always a pleasure to speak before such audiences as meet the Freethought lecturer in Ottumwa. Intelligence, moral culture, and refinement are stamped indelibly upon them, which givs a luster of glory to the occasion, and givs us the assurance that we are bound to conquer the devotees of superstition in the struggle that is now taking place. Principles and minds are struggling for predominance, and although the drift of the present age is perhaps difficult to prognosticate, still of one thing we are certain, viz., the decay of priestly power. And this grand fact the clericals themselvs are not slow to recognize, as may be instanced by the following quotation from a Presbyterian paper, the Christian Instructor, of April 28th:

> It is not without reason that secular papers are to-day calling attention to the decay of the power of the modern pulpit. They see that many ministers are the creatures of the wealthy patrons of their congregations, who use their money in selfish and luxurious living; that they set themselvs to do as they wish, preach smooth things and prophesy deceits and bribe the humbler classes by the intoxication of fine display and various excitements. The bearing of a minister toward the gay and the rich and the fashionable has become one of the severest tests of his character, and that many fail miserably under it is clear enough. There are few Nehemiahs that will not even take what is justly their due. Ministers often persuade themselvs by a system of false reasoning that it is right to honor the rich above the poor, that they may induce them to turn their money into the treasury of the church, because money wields a powerful influence in building churches and endowing them, etc. But these are the ways of death. Catholic Rome grasped her power in the same way. None ought to be more jealous of putting themselvs into compromising relation with the rich than clergymen, because it disarms them of the veto power when the crucial time comes, when the unrivaled opportunity comes of being faithful in reproving, rebuking, and exhorting with all long-suffering and doctrin.
>
> When the doctrins of God's holy word should shine forth resplendent as they were intended by the divine author, where do we find very many of the modern clergy to-day? Sadly we write it; but it is true, they are running after sensational music and sensational methods; bowing to the vulgarity of bank-stocks and diamonds, when they could far more effectivly than any other class warn and control without the suspicion of insincerity.

The clergy hav long considered themselvs at an elevated distance above the people, and the degradation of the latter has been made the wealth and grandeur of the former. The ignorance of the one was held as proof of the wisdom of the other. But who gave them the right of governing their fellows? From whence do they derive their veto power, or even to warn and control? How is it possible then that a system having its origin in such errors could escape the immoralities which this writer so deeply laments, but makes no serious attempts to remove?

But day by day their influence over the people wanes the more, for as the people become more enlightened by science and a genuin knowledge of the operations of nature, they will strike off in a tangent from the gloomy and lurid orbs round which they once moved in passiv obedience. Whilst societies are thus founded upon the fluctuating waves of an unsound public opinion or the fleeting notions of faith, with passions latent but unsubdued, how can they escape the death that awaits them? Whilst Christian associations, then, are but trading conspiracies, every dictate and sympathy of humanity is either torn or held up to the scorn of self-lauding pride. Usurpations then take place, and the basest of men are exalted upon the pinnacle of fame. Vice is triumphant, prosperous, and happy, while virtue is neglected and trampled in the mire. Vice sits with crowns of gold upon its brow, wins adulation and renown, while virtue lies bleeding in the dust.

Thus the clergy are, by their own confession, simply interested in the accumulation of wealth and riches, but what care they for the poor, spirit-broken man? We do not ask them so much to do good, but simply to abstain from harm. We do not ask them by charity or benevolence to bless the world, but to refrain from cursing it. We do ask them, though, not to make our little pleasures less and to leave off striving to convert this world into a miserable hell and then threatening us with another elsewhere.

So far this trip has been far more successful than my previous venture, which is very encouraging for my future success.

From Ottumwa I resume my journey once more and make my way to Manchester, where I am down for three lectures. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Secretary Ohio State Secular Union.
154 N. High street, Columbus, O.

Lot's Wife and the Dead Sea.

Mounts, forests, lakes, were in the. dim past scenes of divers wonders and miracles wrought by their ghostly denizens; and but few of the present generations of men are completely freed from belief in them. The legends of Mt. Sinai, of Mt. Ararat, of the Dead sea, etc., still convey to timid minds a celestial halo. Primitiv man surrounded himself with supernatural folk—good or bad spirits. And he saw supernatural anger in the lightning, heard a dread warning in the howling wind, and felt a demon within him whenever he had the stomach-ache. The imagination of the untutored mind saw angels skipping in the clouds and armies marshaling in the heavens. A rift in the earth's surface caused by an earthquake, from which escaped a sulphurous odor, suggested the idea of a fiery monster beneath. Having as yet no knowledge of natural law, he attributed everything in the least degree unusual to supernatural agency. St. Paul was never out of the phantom world; he had the air filled with spirits—mostly bad ones. There is not a word of his to show that he knew there was any such thing as a natural law. But the still more primitiv man invested tree, streamlet, etc., with suggestiv spirits. He had gods or demons in everything, everywhere. And there are many primitiv folks still breathing.

Pictures drawn by the imagination are poetry. Every child is a poet. To it the doll is a real mother, or a baby that must be properly nursed. The hobby-horse is endowed with life and hears and understands what is said to it. And child-poetry continues with uneducated man. The names and description of things common with our nativ Indians are wonderfully poetic. The banshees of Ireland, the fairies of Scotland, the beautiful legends of Germany that furnish the life of "Faust" and other operas, are all childlike myths. Homer did not originate the Grecian gods and goddesses; but he clothed them in beauty and grandeur, marshaled them in order and action, and gave them most eloquent if not divine speech. The Arabian Nights' Entertainment stories are full of magic, enchantment, and transformations—nothing realistic; and so of the story of Job and many others in the Bible. There is little myth or poetry in demonstrated facts.

Now, the Jew is of the same race as the Arab, and he has appropriated many of the latter's fables. The story of Lot's wife is evidently Arabian. The Dead sea is about twelve miles southeast from Jerusalem, and its south end is just about on the Arabian border. Mount Sinai is a little farther south—in Arabia altogether. The land of Palestine, comprising an extent of territory equal to about that of one of our smallest states, is the scene of many marvels conjured in the mind of the poetic Arab, whose stories of magic are believed to hav been real and true by many credulous persons of to-day. In Arabic the Dead sea is termed Sea of Lot—a conclusiv proof that the Lot story is Arabian. This Dead sea is the very center of myths and miracles that furnish everlasting fodder to sustain the priest. Many inspired theologians hav declared it to be a mouth of hell into which Sodom and Gomorrah were cast.

From the time when Christianity was firmly established by the help and authority of the emperor Constantine, on through the dark ages of a thousand years of Christian domination, no old miracle was more relied on as proof of Bible inspiration than that of Lot's wife in salt. It was something visible—go and see it! Along the centuries thousands of the devoted made pilgrimages to see with their own eyes this clear testimony of holy writ, and many Christian affidavits were filed in the sanctuaries affirming the pillar or statue to be standing "to this day." Writings on the sacred subject are innumerable; which shows how important it was thought to be.

On the southern shore of the Dead sea, which is generally low and marshy, is an irregular ridge of rock on which, whenever there is a strong wind, the salt spray falls and forms a coating of salt. In process of time this coating of salt becomes quite thick and portions of it will break off, so that the configurations are constantly changing and sometimes resemble the human form. These changes in form and position were taken by believers as proof that the soul of Lot's wife was still there in conscious existence, that she had a limited power of locomotion, and that she sometimes performed certain physical functions it were impolite to describe.

Until within the present century all Christians, Catholic and Protestant alike, felt that in the pillar of salt standing from Gen. xix "unto this day" as the "monument of an unbelieving soul," they had a divine witness that no Infidel science could confute. But now, when it is clearly shown how the salt columns or stalagmites are formed, and how they are constantly changing in form, size, and number through natural causes, no intelligent person believes there is any more miracle in the concretions of salt than there is in the surrounding mud.

The surface of the Dead sea is lower than that of any other body of water known—being more than thirteen hundred feet below the Mediterranean sea; and its water is eight times as salt as that of the ocean. It has no outlet, and yet receives Jordan's swelling flood and Kedron's brook from the cesspools of Jerusalem. It holds the accumulated filth of ages washed from the sacred mounts near by. Its excessiv saltness prevents fermentation and putrefaction. It is still attractiv to believers in fables.

The Mohammedan has his holy city—Mecca—where Adam first worshiped God after his expulsion from paradise; where this God revealed to the prophet his manner of doing business in this world and in some others; where the devoted pilgrim goes for heavenly favors, etc. The Jew and the Christian likewise hav their holy city—Jerusalem—where, after allowing such holy and wise men as David and Solomon to manage his affairs, God, in a peculiar way, came himself to take an account of stock. St. John expresses an opinion that were all the doings of this God written up the world could not contain the books. If John prospectivly included all that has been done, said, written, and imagined about the Holy Land, his calculation was not much of an exaggeration. Christendom is glutted with the stale pious trash. Through the dark centuries of ignorance and superstition millions of Christians blistered their feet in going to their holy city, with the same object and the same result as attended the pilgrims to Mecca. And the Christian pilgrim of to-day hopes to find on the barren hills near Jerusalem a preserved footprint of his God. The priest who goes there on his vacation brings back an interminable thread of small talk.

Some two years ago our own Talmage played the pilgrim—went basking on Jordan's odorous banks and baptizing himself in its holy water. Doubtless he dirtied the water still more and then drank some of it for inspiration. In fact, no preacher of the gospel is fully equipped for the business who has not seen this Holy Land with his own distended eyes, who has not fervently hugged to his heaving bosom a sacred cedar of Lebanon, reverently entered and left his card in a cave miraculously formed to screen a prophet or a robber, taken a sniff at some rat-hole teeming with musty miracles and saints' bones, and who has not in ecstasy kissed the true boulder from which Elijah sprang when he went up higher than a kite. L. G. REED.

They Want It Closed.

Chicago saloonkeepers are in favor of having the World's Fair closed on Sunday. This is one of the things the good people hav overlooked.—Grand Rapids Gazette.

Chicago saloonkeepers are earnestly advocating that the World's Fair should be closed on Sundays. Of course that would put money into their tills. But a great many men would be better engaged in examining the exhibits at the Fair than in loafing around in the city bar-rooms.—Rochester Herald.

With the gates closed, thousands of men will throng the saloons who would otherwise be on the grounds, and a corresponding volume of drunkenness, disorder, and crime could be expected. But what does the Christian public say to the proposal? Will it side with the saloonkeepers or favor giving the masses the educational opportunities of the Fair on Sundays?—Troy Press.

It is amusing enough to read that the saloon men of Chicago are enthusiastic in their support of the movement to close the World's Fair on Sunday. With the big show out of the way their harvest on the Lord's day from the tens of thousands of strangers would be something colossal. The pious people who are working to close the show will not moderate their zeal a jot, however, on account of the strange allies they hav made, for 'tis not their nature to.—Pioneer Press.

The Chicago saloonkeepers are united in favor of having the World's Fair closed on Sundays. It must not be supposed, however, that they favor Sunday closing from any high moral standpoint. On the contrary, they know that if the Fair is closed and the sidedoors to their saloons are open, as they undoubtedly will be if the front ones are not, they will fill their tills each Sunday. It would be very much better to hav the great Exposition open on Sundays than to hav the saloons crowded on that day.—Philadelphia Call.

Apollonius of Tyana.

The life of Apollonius of Tyana, purporting to hav been written by Philostratus about the year 210, is probably one of the multitude of Benedictine fabrications after the revival of learning. The numerous geographical, historical, and chronological blunders of the author are incompatible with the integrity and antiquity of the book. It describes with great particularity an alleged journey of Apollonius to India via Antioch, Nineveh, and Babylon about the middle of the first century. But the learned Asiatic scholar Wilford, who died in 1822, says that Apollonius had no knowledge of the Indian language, nor is it on the whole credible that he was ever in India or Ethiopia, or even at Babylon (Life of Apollonius, Berwick's translation, book iii, chap. xv).

At the ancient city of Ninus, i. e., Nineveh, Apollonius met with Damis, a Ninevite, who, being fond of traveling, offered himself as a guide to Babylon, saying that he knew all the towns and villages on the way, and was acquainted with the languages of the barbarians, viz., the Armenians, Medes, and Persians. "But, my friend," said Apollonius, "I know them all myself, though I never learned them." And while Damis stood amazed at this, Apollonius added: "Do not be surprised at my knowing all tongues, for I know the very thoughts of men, even what they do not say." When Damis heard this he adored him, considering him as a demon. He then became a proselyte and traveling companion to Apollonius, keeping an exact account of all that passed, which appeared in a book he wrote called Apolloniana (book i, chapter xix).

The translator in a note says that the city of Ninus here referred to could not hav been the Nineveh which stood on the banks of the Tigris and was destroyed 700 years B.C., but must hav been another town of that name on the Euphrates; and he quotes a passage from Ammonius Marcellinus to prove the existence of another ancient Nineveh (vetere Nineve) in Syria, which he believes was the nativ city of Damis "the Ninevite." But Philostratus distinctly calls Damis an "Assyrian." And Marcellinus elsewhere mentions the great Nineveh which possessed a portion of Persia.

The writings of Marcellinus we believe to be modern forgeries like the Annals of Tacitus, the Letters of Pliny, and probably the greater part of what purports to be ancient and classical Latin literature. Blunders in geography, chronology, and ancient history would inevitably be made by the learned monks of the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth centuries, who profited by finding, that is to say, forging, ancient Latin and Greek manuscripts. "So extremely slight," says Mr. Charles Leslie, "is the authority on which Philostratus has introduced his history, that some learned men hav, not without reason, doubted whether there ever was such a man as Apollonius." And after a critical examination of the book we, too, discredit his existence. But even if such a person did liv in the first century, we regard the notion entertained by some as chimerical, that he answers either to Paul of Tarsus or Jesus of Nazareth, both of whom, as we hav discovered and proved, lived and died before the beginning of the Christian era. ANTICHRIST.

The Topolobampo Colony.

A BRIEF EXPLANATION OF THE SITUATION OF THE TOPOLOBAMPO INTEGRAL COÖPERATIV COLONY SITUATED IN SINALOA, MEXICO, BY ONE WHO HAS SPENT FIFTEEN OF THE HAPPIEST MONTHS OF HIS LIFE AMONG HER PEOPLE.

Forasmuch as many hav taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are practiced by and believed in amongst us, it seems good to me also, having gained some knowledge from personal observation, to write unto thee, most excellent Macdonald, that thou and THE TRUTH SEEKER family mightst know for a certainty about those things concerning us that are being talked about so much. I came to this colony a year ago last December to observe its workings and report the facts; and if the colony was what might be expected from a band of men and women who had lost faith in God, Christ, and the devil, to remain among them. I find here more than I expected. I hav usually found the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER correct, but I am inclined to think you are a little off when you say this is not a Freethought but a Socialistic colony. Everyone here is a Freethinker and believes in individual liberty for man, woman, and child. There is not one theological cremationist among us. We are Infidels and Spiritualists, about half and half, with perhaps twenty Atheists thrown in. There is no dispute among us on religion or politics, but each enjoys his own religion in his own happy way. St. John appeared and danced a jig, and the spirit of a white horse was called up, but we Materialists were of too gross a nature to see these beautiful manifestations. We discuss economics and methods, and propose to see what men and women can do without the assistance of God and J. Christ. I will tell you and THE TRUTH SEEKER family of some things we hav done since I came here: We hav cut a ditch seven miles in length from the river to our patch of land of two hundred thousand acres. This ditch has cost us $185,000, and none of us ever asked God to assist us, but to stand back and watch the dirt fly. We hav built a beautiful wharf at the bay, which is the finest harbor on the coast, and a fine frame storage building top of it. We hav just finished a fine granit custom-house for the government of Mexico, which the colonists get $5,000 for building, and now our port will be open to foreign commerce. We hav kept a corps of surveyors and engineers constantly in the field surveying our land and mapping out the coast, taking soundings and putting in buoys. We hav sent a man to Oregon for four hundred thousand feet of lumber to build us some better houses, burnt several brickkilns, and done some work on the railroad, and more than all we hav demonstrated the fallacy of gold and silver coin as the only medium of exchange, for all this has been done on a basis of a service for a service. All the debts of the individual colonists are settled by the credit-and-debit plan as lined out by Clark Irvine in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Feb. 27, 1892, the general accountant settling in clearing-house style all the accounts. We hav also demonstrated that Freethinkers can organize, and that the moral sentiment can be developed in a much better way than by making prohibitory laws.

The people of Sinaloa hav learned to stand erect, in noble, manly self-respect, unled by priests, uncursed by creeds; their manhood proved by their deeds. Now, the real truth is, God's holy and inspired damnationists hav about come to the conclusion that we Infidels are a-going to demonstrate to the world that it is possible for mankind to liv happy and moral without God, Bibles, churches, holy beads, little sips of wine or little square pieces of bread, holy crosses or wafers, or bones of saints. The gold bugs hav about come to the conclusion, too, that we are about to demonstrate to the world the fallacy of their money system, and so they delight in publishing lies about the starving colonists. THE TRUTH SEEKER was all right when it advised Freethinkers to be careful about investing their money down here; that is what the company wants—for everyone to be careful, study us, study our plans; and if it is so you can come down and see us, I think every one of you will find that we hav adopted nearly all the reforms advocated by the ablest economic writers that hav ever written. Here, in our colony, not one individual owes another a cent. There is not one paying rent; not one ever paid one cent of tax, no one makes a profit in any way. Women help to make the laws that govern them, and get the same wages that men get, and hav the same right to hold office, etc. We hav adopted the eight-hour system, public control of public utilities, free land, and many other reforms, and we are here to stay. What is called profits return to the operativs instead of some capitalist. Long life to the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. A. BUTTERFIELD.

How Angels Got Religion.

"Never heard how we got religion to Angels, stranger? I thought, uv course, everybody 'd heerd that yarn. Tell yer? Why, sure; but let's licker again and I'll reminisce.

"Yer see, 'twas afore Angels got to be sech a big camp as 'twas later on, but it was a rich camp and a mighty wicked one. There were lots uv chaps there who'd jest as soon die in their boots as eat; and every other house was a dance-house, or a saloon, or a gambling-hell. Pretty Pete and his pardner, Five-Ace Bob, was reckoned the wickedest men in the state; and Old Bill Jones, what kept the Golden West Hotel, had a national reputation for cussin'. The idea of a parson striking the camp was never thought uv; but one day I was playing bank into Pete's game when Five-Ace came a-runnin' in 'n' sez: 'Boys, I'll be ——, but there's an ornery cuss of a parson jest rid up to Jones's. He's got a pardner with him, and he 'lows he's goin' to convert the camp.' 'The —— he is,' sez Pete. 'I'll finish the deal and go down and see about that.'

"So we all walked down to Jones', and thar, sure 'nuff, in the bar, talking with Old Bill, wuz the parson, black coat and white tie 'n' all. He was a big, squar'-shouldered chap, with a black beard, and keen gray eyes that looked right through yer. His pardner was only a boy of twenty or so, with yeller, curly ha'r, pink and white gal's face, and big blue eyes. We all walked in, 'n' Pete he stands to the bar 'n' shouts fer all hands ter drink; 'n' to our surprise the parson 'n' the kid both stepped up and called for red licker 'n' drank it. After the drink was finished, the parson sez: 'Gents, as yer see, I'm a minister of the gospel; but I see no harm in any man drinking ez long ez he ain't no drunkard. I drank just now because I want you to see that I am not ashamed to do before yer face what I'd do behind yer back.' 'Right ye are, parson,' sez Pete; 'put it thar;' 'n' they shook hands, and then Pete he up and called off the hull gang—Five-Ace 'n' Lucky Barnes 'n' Dirty Smith 'n' one 'n' all the rest uv 'em. The parson shook hands with all uv us, and sed he was going to hav a meetin' in Shifty Sal's dance-house that night, ez 'twas the biggest room in camp, 'n' ast us all to come, 'n' we sed we would.

"When we got outside Pete sez, 'Boys, you mind me, that devil-dodger 'll capture the camp;' 'n' he did. That night we all went along down to Shifty's, and found the parson and the kid on the platform where the fiddlers ust to sit; and every man in camp wuz in the audience. The parson spoke first. He sed: 'Gents, I want to tell yer first off I don't want any uv yer dust. I've got enuff fer myself and my young friend, 'n' there won't be no rake-off in this yer meetin'-house, 'n' I'm not here to preach against any man's way o' makin' a livin'. I will preach ag'in' drunkenness, and I shall speak privately with the gamblers; but I want to keep you men in mind uv yer homes, 'n' yer mothers, 'n' yer wives, 'n' yer sweethearts, and get yer to lead cleaner lives, so 's when yer meet 'em ag'in yer'll not hav to be 'shamed;' and then he sed we'd hav a song, 'n' the youngster he started in 'n' played a concertina, and sang, 'Yes, We Will Gather at the River;' 'n' there wuzn't one uv us that it didn't remind uv how our mothers ust to dress us up Sundays 'n' and send us to Sunday-school, and stand at the door to watch us down street, and call us back to ast us if we were sure we had our clean pocket-handkerchur; 'n' I tell yer, mister, thar wuzn't a man with dry eyes in the crowd when he'd finished. That young feller had a v'ice like a angel. Pete he sed it wuz a tenner v'ice, but Five-Ace offered to bet him a hundred to fifty it wuz more like a fifteener or a twenty. Pete told Five-Ace he wuz a —— old fool 'n' didn't know what he wuz talkin' about.

"Well, things run along for about a week, 'n' one day Pete come to me and sez: 'Look here, Ralters, this yere camp ain't no jay camp, 'n' we've got to hev a church fer the parson. He's a jim-dandy, and won't ast for nothing. He'd jest natchelly go on prayin' and preachin' 'n' tryin' ter save a couple uv old whisky-soaked souls like yourn and Bill Jones' which ain't wuth powder to blow 'em to ——, 'n' you'd let him go on doin' it in that old shack of Sal's 'n' never make a move. Now, I'm goin' to rustle 'round 'n' dig up dust enuff from the boys, and we'll jest build him a meetin'-house as'll be a credit to the camp;' 'n' in a few days the boys hed a good log meetin'-house built, floored, 'n' benches in it, 'n' everythin'.

"The parson was tickled most to death. Next they built him a house, 'n' he 'n' his pardner moved into it. Then Pete said the gals must go; sed it wuz a dead, rank, snide game to work on the parson ter hev to go down street 'n' be guyed by them hussies ('n' they did guy him awful sometimes, too); so the gals they went. Then Pete sed the church had to be properly organized; hed to hev deacons 'n' church wardens 'n' sextons 'n' things; so Old Bill Jones 'n' Alabam 'n' me wuz made deacons, 'n' Pete 'n' Five-Ace was churchwardens.

"In a month every last man in camp wuz worryin' 'bout his future state. Old Bill Jones came into meetin' one night with his face 'n' hands washed 'n' an old black suit on, 'n' sot down on the anxious bench and ast to be prayed fer. The parson knelt down 'n' put his arm around him, 'n' how he did pray! Before he got through Lucky Barnes, Alabam, 'n' me wuz on the bench, too, 'n' Pete shoved his Chinaman up the aisle by the collar 'n' sot him down 'longside o' me. Pete said he was a high-toned Christian gentleman himself, hed been born 'n' raised a Christian, 'n' wuz a senior churchwarden to boot, and that he'd make a Christian of Ah Foo or spoil a Chinaman.

"That parson prayed most powerful that night. As a off-hand, rough 'n' tumble, free 'n' easy prayer, I never see his beat; he hed the whole aujience in tears, 'n' you might hev heard Pete's amens 'n' glory halleluyers off to Bullet's Flat. Old Jones wuz a-rolling around on the floor 'n' hollering fer to be saved from the devil before the parson were half finished, 'n' he made so much noise that Pete hed to fire a bucket uv water over him to quiet him down. That meetin' wuz so plum full uv the spirit (ez the parson called it) that it never broke up till 12 o'clock, 'n' wouldn't hev broke up then only Pete sed he'd hev to quit, ez his shift to deal faro begun at 12.

"There wuz over twenty perfesses that night, not countin' Pete's Chinaman, 'n' next Sunday we hed a big baptizm in the crick, 'n' forty uv us wuz put through. Pete sed he reckoned Ah Foo hed better be put through every day for a week or so, sence he'd always bin a dod-gasted heathen, but the parson 'lowed onc't wuz enuff, but he giv' him an extra dip jest fer luck; 'n' I never see a more ornery lookin' cuss in my life than that Chinese were when he came out.

"The Chinese laundrymen were ast to jine the church, but they wouldn't savey, 'n' so Pete 'n' Five-Ace, Old Bill 'n' me 'n' Alabam we waited on 'em 'n' told 'em to git, 'n' took 'em down to the crick 'n' baptized 'em jest fer luck. Pete said if they stayed Ah Foo 'ud git to backslidin' fust thing he knowed, 'n' then where'd his reputation be.

"Waal, stranger, things run along nice 'n' smooth fer a couple uv months er so till Chris'mus come nigh. The boys hed been a-keepin' mighty straight; there wasn't a man in camp that drunked more'n wuz hullsome fer him; there hedn't bin a shootin' scrape fer weeks. Pete said things wuz gittin' so all-fired ca'm 'n' peaceful that he wouldn't be at all surprized to git up sum fine day 'n' find Ah Foo with wings 'n' feathers on his legs like a Bramah hen. Nary a man packed a gun, 'n' when a gent 'ud forgit 'n' drop a cuss word he'd beg parding. The parson was thick with all the boys. He writ letters for us, advised us about all our biznus, 'n' knew all about everybody's affairs. Lots uv 'em gave him their dust-sack to keep fer 'em, 'n' he knowed where every man hed his cached.

"Along jest afore Chris'mus cum, Pete called a meetin' uv the deacons 'n' church wardens down to his place, 'n' after the sexton, Ah Foo, hed brought in a round of drinks he said: 'Gents, ez chairman ex-officer in this yer layout, I move that we giv the parson a little present fer Chris'mus. Yer know he won't take a durn cent from us, 'n' never has. Uv course he has taken a few thousand from time to time to send to orfings 'n' things uv that kind, but not a red for himself or pard; 'n' I move that we make him a little present on Chris'mus day, 'n' it needn't be so —— little, either. Gents in favor 'll say so, and gents wot ain't kin keep mum. Carried, 'n' that settles it. Five-Ace 'n' me 'll take in contributions, 'n' we won't take any less than fifty cases.'

"That wuz two days afore Chris'mus day, 'n' when it cum Pete 'n' Five-Ace hed about five thousand in dust 'n' nuggets fer the parson's present.

Pete assessed Ah Foo a month's pay, 'n' he kicked hard accordin', but 'twer'n't no use.

"The day was bright 'n' clear, 'n' at 'leven o'clock every man in camp wuz at church. The little buildin' looked mighty tasty—all fixed off with pine tassels 'n' red berries we'd got in the woods, 'n' every man wuz dressed out in his best duds. At 'leven exact the parson 'n' the kid, who hed bin standin' at the door shakin' hands 'n' wishin' everybody what cum in merry Chris'mus, cum in 'n' took their seats on the platform. Pete 'n' Five-Ace 'n' Bill Jones 'n' Alabam 'n' me sot on a bench jest in front o' the platform. We wuz all togged out in our best fixin's, 'n' Pete 'n' Five-Ace they sported dimons till yer couldn't rest. Waal, ez usual, the perceedin's opened up with er prayer from the parson; 'n' then we hed singin', 'n' it seemed ter me ez if I never hed heerd sich singin' in all my life afore ez that kid let out o' him that day.

"Then the parson he started in ter jaw, 'n' I must ellow he giv us a great discourse. I never see him so long-winded afore, tho', 'n' Pete was beginnin' to get mighty restless 'n' oneasy, when all uv a suddint we heerd the door open 'n' shet quick 'n' sharp, 'n' everyone turned round to find a great big black-bearded cuss at the door a coverin' the hull gang uv us with a double-bar'led shotgun, 'n' jest a standin' thar cool 'n' silent. 'Face round here, yer —— —— fools,' yelled somebody in a sharp, quick, biznus-meanin' v'ice, 'n' all hands faced round to find the parson holding 'em up with another shotgun—own brother to the one the other cuss hed. 'I don't want a word out er yer,' he sed. 'Yer see my game now, don't yer? Thar ain't a gun in the house 'cept the ones you see, 'n' if any gent makes any row in this yer meetin' I'll fill his hide so plum full o' holes 't won't hold his bones. The kid will now take up the collection, 'n' ez it's the first one we ever hev taken up yer must make it a liber'l one, see?' The kid started out with a gunnysack, 'n' went through the very last man in the crowd. He took everything, even to the rings on our fingers. The parson hed the drop, 'n' we knew it 'n' never kicked, but jest giv' up our stuff like lambs.

"After the kid hed finished, he took the sack outside, 'n' thet's the last we ever seed o' him. Then the parson he sez: ''N' now, gents, I must say adoo, ez I must be a-travelin', for I hev another meetin' to attend this eve'. I want to say, tho', afore I go, thet you're the orneriest gang of —— —— fools I ever played fur suckers. A few friends uv mine hev taken the liberty, while yer've been to meetin' this blessed Chris'mus day, uv goin' through yer cabins 'n' diggin' up yer little caches uv dust 'n' uther val'ables. Yer stock hez all been stampeded, 'n' yer guns yer'll find somewhar at the bottom uv the crick. My friend at the door will hold yer level while I walk out, 'n' we will then keep yer quiet fer a few minutes longer through ther winder jest so 's we can git a nice cumf'table start;' 'n' so they did. What c'u'd we do? The parson walked out, grinning all over himself, 'n' he 'n' his pals they nailed up the door 'n' winders (thar wuz only two), 'n' very soon after they hed finished we heerd the clatter o' huffs 'n' knowed they wuz gone.

"I must draw a veil over the rest uv thet day's purceedin's, stranger. Ther langwidge used by ther boys wuz too awful to repeat; but 'twaz jest ez this parson sed, when we got out o' thet meetin'-house we found every animal on the location gone, 'n' the only arms left wuz knives 'n' clubs; yet we'd hev gone after 'em with nothin' but our hands, but we couldn't follow afoot. How much did they get? I don't rightly know, but not fur frum fifty thousand. The hull camp wuz stone-broke, all excep' Ah Foo, 'n' he wuz the only one uv us as hed sense enuff not to tell thet durned parson whar he cached his stuff. Pete 'n' Five-Ace wuz so everlastin' hurt at the hull biznus that they shut up the 'Bird o' Prey,' borrowed Ah Foo's sack, 'n' left for the bay to try 'n' find thet parson; but they never did find him, 'n' no one ever heard uv him again."—George Brooke in Short Stories.

The Danger of the German People.

In a paper in the Open Court on the new course of German Politics and the purport of its world-conceptions, Ernst Haeckel says:

Canossa is the watchword at Berlin. The first step taken by the Prussian government in ushering in the new counter reformation is the plan of the new public school bill which the cabinet of Caprivi proposed in January, 1892, to the Prussian parliament. As generally known now, its vital point lies in this, that the public school, which is the basis of national education, shall be withdrawn from the control of science and be surrendered to the papistic hierarchy. Objections might be made that Prussia is a state in which Catholics and Protestants enjoy equal rights, and that they will both exercise their separate authority over the schools, but Protestantism of whatever color it may be lacks entirely, and necessarily must lack, that great hierarchic organization which has given power to the Roman Catholic church for more than a millennium, and which givs her an unparalleled power in our civilization at the present day. Therefore Roman Catholicism, or briefly, papism, will conquer in the struggle for dominion any other church that stands with it on equal rights, and as it pretends to be the only saving church, will also claim absolute control over the state. We need only compare the triumphant rejoicings of ultramontane journals with the heavy anxiety of all independent papers in order to know what grave meaning has the new public school bill.

"Christianity or Atheism," that is the surprising alternativ which the new world-conception proposes. What Christianity was meant to be can be learned from the explanation subsequently made. The new Prussian Christianity, which it is hoped will save her present civilization and protect her from the dangers of Social Democracy, is not that purified morality which has greatly developed in the course of nineteen centuries from the simple doctrins of original Christianity. On the contrary it is the naked belief in miracles, its stubborn dogmatism, and its blind faith in traditional legends and in supernatural events of so-called holy history, the historical reality of which has been long disproved by an impartial scientific criticism.

The remarkable progress of natural philosophy has led the intellectual and spiritual life of civilized nations into entirely new paths. Shall now the fanaticism of different colliding dogmas be reintroduced into our public schools? It almost appears as though the Crusades and the Thirty Years' war were to reappear in a new Prussian edition. But among all these confusions there is a widely separate opinion propounded with noteworthy ingenuousness, that Christian faith will be the best weapon against Social Democracy. The pure original and unadulterated Christianity, however, is most ominously interwoven with Socialistic doctrins, and its first congregations cultivated pure Communism. The fathers hav developed those Communistic ideas so clearly, that we are only astonished that the Social Democracy of to-day does not claim the authority and sanction of these primitiv Christian institutions. The true and really useful weapons in the struggle against the errors of Social Democracy are not found in Christian dogmas but in rational science, and especially its latest and most promising offspring, the modern doctrin of evolution. If the Socialistic leaders attempt to base their Utopian theories upon the doctrin of evolution, and especially upon Darwinism, the theory of selection appears in the light of impartial criticism as an aristocratic principle. It is based upon the selection of the best. The division of labor upon which more than upon anything else the progressiv development of the organized world rests, necessarily produces a constantly increasing diversity of character, a constantly increasing inequality of the individuals, of their education, their activities, and their conditions. Human civilization the higher it rises makes the various classes of workers which coöperate in the complex machinery of society appear the more different and diversified. Communism and that equality of conditions and of work which is aimed at by Social Democracy would be equivalent to a return to barbarism and the brutal primordial state of rude savages. The strange views which Caprivi's cabinet hav propounded stand in decided opposition to the results of modern science; they found their strongest expression in the surprising alternativ of Christianity or Atheism. The late chancellor confesses in childlike simplicity to embrace the "Christian" world-conception of the papistic leaders of the center with whom "he feels in perfect agreement." He has the conviction that religion cannot be taught without dogma; even more, he says, we can hav no other dogmas than those which exist.

What shall philosophy, the queen among the sciences, say concerning this confession! According to the theory of the new course all the serious labor performed by the greatest minds of three thousand years has been done in vain. According to that all the philosophy which ought to be allowed to be taught, is that of the Christian fathers, yet it will be difficult for the government to say which of the many conflicting and irrational opinions shall in the future be considered as the only canon of philosophy.

All the great results of modern science are therewith doomed. Doomed are also all the miserable men who attempted to solve the great problems of existence, not through blind faith, but with the assistance of that divine goddess, reason. We should feel disconsolate over the loss of our temporal and eternal salvation if we had not fortunately come into good company. Goethe, Lessing, Kant, Spinoza, Shakspere, Newton, Humboldt, Darwin, Frederick the II. of the Hohenzollerns, and Frederick the II. of the Hohenstauffens, they all roast eternally in the hell of helpless Atheism. And here we pass over in silence all those non-Christian philosophers and scientists of other civilized nations to whom we look up with reverence as stars of the first magnitude. But more still, even Moses and the prophets, and also Buddha, Confucius, Zoroaster, Mohammed, in brief all the God-inspired founders of non-Christian religions, they also are all miserable Atheists, for the historical phrase of Caprivi, "Either Christians or Atheists," applies to them also.

The public school bill has been withdrawn. But the danger that threatened our educational system is not yet passed, and uncertainty prevails as to what the future will bring, and our souls are still full of anxiety and expectation.

Isis Unveiled.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Dr. Alexander Wilder, Dear Sir: When "Isis Unveiled" was published in 1877 I corresponded with Madam H. P. Blavatsky and paid her for a copy of the book. She was a learned woman—could write Greek and Hebrew—but in one of her letters she said: "My only curse is that I know English so imperfectly. I am going to study it now that I hav nothing better to do."

I then inferred and believed that she had an editor for "Isis Unveiled." Recently I hav been credibly informed that you were the editor, and further, that you did not believe that she was the real author of the work, but that she came in possession of some manuscripts of Baron Palm, a learned Russian, who had died in New York and was cremated.

I now beg you to state what you know or believe in regard to the authorship of the book.

Respectfully, W. H. Burr.

Washington, D. C., May 26, 1892.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Washington, D. C., May 25, 1892.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Respected Sir: Many years ago, when I was a sincere Presbyterian, I never saw a preacher with even side-whiskers, nor a layman with a mustache or full beard. A Unitarian was regarded as no better than an Infidel. And an orthodox preacher who would hav dared to animadvert on the character of the Old Testament saints as sinful, would hav been in danger of deposition.

I attended a meeting at the church of the Covenant the other night in this city. Prayer was offered by a Unitarian, followed by a written discourse delivered by an unshaven Presbyterian, who was frequently applauded, and you made your hearers laugh outright when you spoke of sinful Solomon, libidinous David, and tricky Jacob.

Verily "the sun do move," and so do the Presbyterians. But I moved too fast long ago to remain in the bonds of orthodoxy.

Admiring your courage in fighting the Tammany tiger, I nevertheless do not approve of Jesuitical tactics as a means of moral reform.

Respectfully, W. H. Burr.

While the inherited ideas of church leaders were thus unfavorable to any proper development of medical science, there were two bodies of men outside the church who, though largely fettered by superstition, were far less so than the monks and students of ecclesiastical schools: these were the Jews and the Mohammedans. . . . As to the Arabians, we find them from the tenth to the fourteenth century, especially in Spain, giving much thought to medicin, and to chemistry as subsidiary to it. About the beginning of the ninth century, when the greater Christian writers were supporting fetich by theology, Almamon, the Moslem, declared, "They are the elect of God, his best and most useful servants, whose lives are devoted to the improvement of their rational faculties." The influence of Avicenna, the translator of the works of Aristotle, from the beginning of the eleventh century extended throughout all Europe. The Arabians were indeed much fettered by tradition in medical science, but their translations of Hippocrates and Galen preserved to the world the best thus far developed in medicin, and still better were their contributions to pharmacy; these remain of value to the present hour.—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

A Question as Unsettleable as Theology.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., May 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 30th, Mr. Wm. B. Lewis says that chess always comes from wheat, and that it is incapable of propagating its species.

Chess and wheat are entirely distinct plants. The scientific name of chess is Bromus secalinus; that of wheat, Triticum vulgare. Chess livs from one to two years, while wheat never livs more than one. In chess the head is open and spreading as in oats, while in wheat it is a dense spike and somewhat four-sided.

The seed of chess retains its vitality a long time and this will account for its appearing where wheat has been trampled down, eaten off, etc., thus giving it a chance to grow.

Some one spoke through these columns of having seen wheat and chess on the same stalk. This was probably a case where some of the pollen from a chess plant had fertilized some of the flowers of a wheat plant, or vice versa, thus producing a cross or hybrid. Some of the grains on the stalk would be pure wheat or chess, as the case might be, while the others would be crosses between the two.

If Mr. Lewis will send me some pure chess that he is sure grew from a wheat stalk, I will send him some chess that will grow; or I will send him some anyway if he will send me an addressed envelope.

Yours for science and truth,

GEO. H. GIBSON.

"Can Freethinkers Organize?"

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of May 7th you make rather an elaborate effort editorially upon the text, "Can Freethinkers organize?" and to my mind entirely unnecessary, for this reason. The press and literature to-day are teeming with writings from the pens of many noble men and women advocating Freethought, then why tie down men to any particular creed, sect, or faction? So soon as you do this you are working against your own interests as a Freethinker.

The nucleus for such has been formed long, long ago, and yet man has deliberately left of his own accord, in traveling the musty old roads of theology. You hav had Shaksperes, Galileos, Brunos, Paines, Ingersolls, Licks, Girards, etc., and thousands of others, whose great thoughts go still traveling on down the roads of time; such men held practical views, and do more good for the dissemination of ideas than all your Freethinkers' (so called) organized efforts combined.

Question: are the theologians supported by men? I say, no, but by a great lot of hypocrits. The "wherewith" is donated to these theologians thoughtlessly, and without any aim at all. So what good does it do in the end?

It is true these things cost money, but that does not buy brains, and to my view the application of "the survival of the fittest" comes in here as conveniently as on anything else, and human mental slavery becomes a thing of the past.

S. P. Putnam, W. S. Bell, John Charlesworth, Wakeman, Ingersoll, etc.—such grand masters of language do more than all else of organized "sectism" to propagate the idea, as we are living now in an age of transcendentalism. Respectfully,

HENRY E. JUERGENS.

Pointed Talk on the World's Fair.

OMEGA, NEB., March 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As a great many Liberals of the country are in favor of making our cause known at the World's Fair, and hav stated their willingness to furnish a share of the needed cash, by contribution, let us see what we can do.

I will propose a plan of action. Let every interested person visit his Liberal friends and get them to guarantee all they feel able to giv for an exhibit, and then add all he can giv; then write the amount on a postal card and send it to me. I will make a statement of all amounts sent to me, and forward the same to THE TRUTH SEEKER for publication. Let the work commence at once. Send in all you can positivly guarantee will be paid when wanted.

If it is more convenient for a person willing to donate to make two payments, let one be made, say Sept. 1, 1892, and the other Feb. 1, 1893.

Send no money to me, only the amount you will giv when called upon. Then if we can raise enough let us appoint a committee to take charge of the work to be done, and of the funds as paid in.

I will make a weekly statement after I receive the first card, until May 1st. Then if we find we can go ahead with a fair show of success let us do so by all means.

Let us at least build a good lecture-hall and reading-room, and hang up a few pictures and erect a few statues in honor of those who hav struck for Mental Liberty. Employ some good speakers and let the world know that we mean business in an honorable way, and are not ashamed of our cause.

Now, fellow-Freethinkers, as I see no one else who has confidence that we can pull together, I impose this task of finding out on myself. Let us go to the World's Fair with our colors flying, and a place of our own to go into and escape the howls of the sky-pilots who will be there spouting "vocal fumes of sheol" into the ears of all who can hear.

Now, to use a schoolboy phrase, let us "put up" and come out as brave men for our cause, "or shut up," and hang our heads, giv the road all to him who will defend it (the sky-pilot), and swear we are neither men nor Freethinkers.

I will pledge $20, in two payments, for the cause of Mental Liberty. Let us act!

Very truly, E. E. WISNER.

History of an Evolution from Christianity.

GROVE, TEX., Feb. 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I want the Picture Book, and will send next month for it.

I want to tell the story of my conversion to Liberalism, if it will not take up too much space of your valuable paper.

My father is a Methodist. My mother was a Campbellite. My first religious belief was that of my mother. I thought it was my duty, in order to get the crown and harp, to be put under the water—and, by the way, that was done before my mustache had grown. I read, "He that believes and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believes not shall be damned." But after a while I asked myself, Believe what? The answer of course is, Believe the Ghost was Christ's father, and his mother was a virgin after his birth; that he was killed and buried and in about twenty-nine hours rose out of the grave and ascended, or went in some direction, to heaven. Well, I tried to believe it, or rather I tried to exercise no reason on this point. After a while I began to think. They told me God had certain attributes, viz., mercy, power, knowledge, and wisdom, and was infinit in all of these. I thought if he was all-powerful he could make us and giv us such attributes and surround us with such conditions as to make our eternal happiness certain. His infinit mercy would hinder his making any other place for his children than a place of happiness, and his wisdom would enable him to make no blunders in fixing our environments. I reasoned that our free agency amounted to nothing, as it only came too late to do us any good—just after the deity had exercised his free will in fixing our environments without having consulted us in the least. Then, I thought that we should be left in no doubt as to what our conditions would be in the next life in heaven. At the same time I began to find many Bible contradictions and absurdities, as I thought, and still think.

I had adopted the Agnostic's creed before I saw it formulated. I hav tried to enthrone my reason above all churches, creeds, and Gods in the universe.

I am the only avowed Agnostic in my neighborhood. I teach, and am continually, when not in school, debating with orthodox friends. But by the thoughts I hav gathered from the literature of Freethought, they are no match for me.

They sometimes tell me that it would not do for people to believe there was no hell, as they would not care to perpetrate all kinds of crime. I tell them I think the person's character very base if he does good only because he is afraid of punishment, and the church people degrade their deity in making him accept such homage.

Though I differ with my neighbors on religious beliefs and tell them flatly I do not believe in any power higher than nature, they respect me and call me a competent teacher.

I was amused when I read Talmage's sermon of last week. He did not hav the manhood to own that the miserable deformities of orthodox Christianity were so completely exposed by Colonel Ingersoll in his Christmas Sermon and the answer to the attacks made by the critics, that it was now necessary to remodel, or build anew, the whole structure of the Presbyterian creed. Your Liberal friend and admirer,

A. A. BRADLEY.

Some Theological Follies Spitted On a Lance of Logic.

GOLDEN, IA., Jan. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I herewith inclose $5—$3 for a renewal of my subscription to that grand exponent of Freethought and advocate of intellectual freedom, THE TRUTH SEEKER; $1 for the Bible Picture Book, and $1 for Volney's "Ruins."

As Pat would say, "I am troubled in my mind"—especially when thinking on theological matters. I went to church—common sense forgiv me—and listened to a preacher who is a physical and theological bantam, and therefore pugnacious, and who took as a text, "Whatsoever ye ask in my name, in faith believing, it shall be done unto you." He proved that this was true by quoting other passages from the same source, very much as one would prove that a cabbage is a rose, by reiterating the statement in other words. After he had proved, to his satisfaction, that beyond all doubt or cavil this was a glorious and divine truth, and told his hearers to always remember that "Whatsoever ye will," etc., he asked the deacon to pass round a subscription paper to get money to insure the church against fire and lightning, and such is the obtuseness of my mind that I could not perceive the connection. I could not see how the text applied—could not make the preaching consistent with the practice. Certainly it was not improper to ask the Lord to protect his own property. I know but one way out of the difficulty. It is this: I hav only been born once, and the pious solemnly assure me that it is necessary to be born at least twice before one can grasp divine truths.

We hav a pious doctor who, as a member of an orthodox church, professes to believe that the lives of all men are in the keeping of God, yet he administers drugs and advises hygienic practices to lengthen out the span, and attributes his escape from death by lightning to a rubber coat which he wore during a thunder-storm. If that was the end of his allotted time couldn't the Lord hit him coat or no coat?

Either my head is wrong or Christians are inconsistent.

It seems to me that no one need be deceived by the priests, for all religions—so-called—are admittedly false in this: all seek the accomplishment of certain natural ends through supernatural agencies.

Nature is sufficient for the attainment of all natural objects, and there is not in all history a well-authenticated case where any natural end was ever gained without her aid.

Yours for natural helps, hopes, hearts, and minds, and natural rights for all mankind, R. N. HOWE.

We Mustn't "Monkey With" God's Business.

COOK, NEB., May 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The fools are not all dead yet, as the following will show. Standing a few days ago on the corner of the street with several others, discussing weather probabilities—we were having so much rain—a gentleman remarked that he believed the Lord was sending the rain as a judgment upon the people for meddling with his (the Lord's) business. "Congress," says he, "has appropriated thousands of dollars to experiment in rain-making where the Lord does not want rain, and now the Lord is going to send rain till the people get enough, so they will not monkey with the Lord's business any more." I afterward learned that the gentleman was a clergyman by the name of Thompson. What a terrible nightmare of superstition! Will the people ever outgrow it? So many apparently intelligent beings, and yet so ignorant, so easily frightened away from any form of investigation that might open their eyes to the real.

When Mrs. Drake opened up the first oil well in Pennsylvania an old lady said, "What are we coming to? Here God has stored away this oil for the purpose of burning up the world, and now it will be all used up, and God's plans will come to naught." And then the old "gal" fell to crying as though her heart would break. The old lady was as sincere as any God-worshiper could be. She actually believed that God intended to get up a grand exhibition at some future time, and one of the acts in the program was to burn up the world, and all this oil was held in store for that purpose. Sympathy for her God's prospectiv failure in carrying out his designs was too great a strain on her nerves, so her sorrow found relief in her tears.

Surely there hav been mysteries enough solved to satisfy all thinkers that there is no such thing as mystery; that all is governed by law and without law there is nothing, so all we hav to do is to discover the law and knowledge takes the place of belief, facts crowd out mystery, the ghost-dancers' (priests') occupation is gone. This the priests cannot endure, so they will continue to deceive; and the deceived will continue to shield the deceivers, because their intellect is too weak to stand alone, and it is easier to worship the fetich they hav than to seek out another or to free themselvs from all forms of fetichism and worship Truth.

Both the Picture Books are "dandies." But there are people who tremble for fear of God's wrath if they but look at them for a moment. One lady is so afraid of God she shakes like an aspen if you speak to her about them. Her son-in-law took them to her house. W. P. BROOKS.

Lying Preachers and Woman-Oppressing Bible.

NORTH BENTON, O., March 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I cannot liv without THE TRUTH SEEKER, and the cartoons are the banner to the regiment.

I attended a funeral a few days ago of what they call a sanctified Christian, and was present when the subject died. She died in great agony. At the funeral the preacher extolled the subject to the third heaven. That is where they say perfection rests. During his remarks he told of a circumstance that took place when one of the doctors of divinity was going to one of his appointments. He heard of a sick Infidel, and thought he would stop and see him. He called and made his errand known. The Infidel gave him a cordial reception, and told him he was welcome to his hospitality; he did not wish to hav religious subjects talked of, but he was welcome to all the hospitalities of the house as a friend. The doctor sat down and told the Infidel he was going to preach to a large congregation, and asked him if he should preach Christ and him crucified to his congregation or preach Infidelity. He said the Infidel commenced sniffling and crying, and during his sobs said, "Preach Christ and him crucified to the congregation." The preacher's name is Ringsberry, and he livs in Mount Union, Stark county, O., and preaches for the Methodist people. I wrote to him, stating the case as above, and asked him to please giv me the address of the doctor and also the address of the Infidel, and if he could not do that, giv me the post-office where the thing occurred as near as possible, inclosing stamp to pay return charges; but so far hav received no answer. I presume he is hunting up the place.

Will you please tell us why it becomes necessary to tell such stories as that to substantiate a thing already proved to be a fact, as they claim?

A religious conference at Akron, O., by an almost unanimous vote declared that women had no right to take part in the government of the church or vote on church government. About the next resolution was an exhortation for mothers to instruct their children and see that they brought their tribute in the shape of a penny or more to Sunday-school and other purposes. The ladies are good enough to contribute to the Lord's embassadors and get them up good meals, but hav not sense enough to take part in church government. If that is not taxation without representation I do not know what is.

A short time ago it was proposed to prepare a Bible for women, or a woman's Bible. It was suggested that all passages which refer to or deal with women in any way whatsoever should be printed in the order in which they come in the Bible, thus giving woman an opportunity to read in a few pages her whole Bible—all which applies directly to her. The compilers had gone only a very little way when they discovered that the book when finished would be very small, but that it would be excluded from the United States mail on the ground of obscenity. Almost without exception the direct messages from Jehovah to or for or about women are of such a nature that they are to-day considered too indecent to transmit through the post-office. This is the God woman is asked to worship as divine. It is simply monstrous. There is, however, not a Christian woman in a thousand who knows what the Bible teaches for her. They do not read it. Certain chapters or verses they go over frequently, which are substituted for the whole book. They do not know that it teaches slavery for women and sale of daughters by fathers for the vilest purposes.

Yours truly, CHESTER BEDELL.

Why Christians Outnumber Freethinkers.

ASTORIA, ORE., May 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am so much pleased with your excellent paper that I wish to hav my subscription extended. I feel that you are doing what Jesus endeavored to do eighteen hundred years ago, i. e., trying to better the condition of mankind; only you are trying in the more enlightened age and way. Jesus, as Mr. Ingersoll said, was a noble character. He was earnest and honest. His name should not be ridiculed; neither should his pronoun be written with a capital letter any more than that of George Washington. We should remember that eighteen hundred years hav passed since he lived, and that man should hav learned something in that time. Under the light of art and science you hav a better chance to seek for and advocate the truth than they had who lived in the dark days of ignorance. Can we blame them for making mistakes when they were tools in the iron grasp of ignorance? Since the beginning men, both Christian and Infidel, hav had a rough time shinning it up the bare trunk of the tree of knowledge; we are just grasping the first limbs, and should and will make more rapid progress in the future.

In my opinion, creeds were the pioneers of truth; they were a necessary stage to the advancement of knowledge. Their advocates were enthusiastic and earnest; they struggled, suffered, and did the best they knew. They hav been great factors in civilizing nations. They hav filled their niche, and will fade away before reason and truth as darkness fades into light before the brightness of the sun.

Should the Freethinker ridicule Christians for their inability to break from the strong chains of superstition that bind them? Should we not giv them full credit for the good they hav done, and be more generous and rational than they, who would punish forever and ever the errors of ignorance?

I hope that no Freethinker will ever use that unjust weapon, ridicule, but earnestly use the salt of reason until all are saved from the effect of mistakes—for mistakes will produce mistakes as surely as the seeds of weeds will produce weeds. Good reasoning is to the brain of man what a well-tuned instrument is to music, or perfectly cut stone and timbers are to architecture. Ridicule a man's honest opinion and he feels that you hav wronged him, and is very apt to think, at least, that the perpetrator lacks one factor of being a gentleman—that of gentleness.

Not one word of ridicule do I find in that lecture of Helen Gardener's, "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle"—not one word that is not fair, and just, and true as truth itself. Would that all mothers on earth might read, understand, and believe it, that they might teach their children truth and ideas that would not "shock their minds," instead of mistakes that were written eighteen hundred years ago. Well do Christians know what they are doing when they follow the teaching of Jesus, "Suffer little children to come unto me," etc. Jesus, I think, simply knew that childhood was the time to impress what he no doubt thought to be the true path to walk in through life. With Miss Gardener's permission, Freethinkers all over the land should endeavor to hav the lecture published in every county paper, and by subscription, if necessary, pay a fair price for it. Then mothers would read, and recognize, such argument from so gifted, noble, worthy a champion of their rights and freedom.

I heard a good story the other day which I think illustrates why there are not more Freethinkers. A worthy doctor and a quack were practicing in the same village. They met on the street, and the worthy doctor asked of the quack why it was that he—the quack—received nearly all the calls for medical assistance. "Come," said the quack, "to this doorway and closely observe ten people as they pass. Now," said he, "how many do you pronounce well read and posted on human nature?" Answer: "Oh, not more than one." Quack: "There is the answer to your first question—you get one and I get nine. See?" Moral: If Christians would read THE TRUTH SEEKER they would be better posted on truth and the Bible.

P. F. HALFERTY.

Foregleams of the Radiant Future.

SALINA, UTAH, May 12, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR: Thus far I hav kept silent about writing to my friends through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER, but take a great pleasure in reading the letters of those who are numbered with the reformers of this age. Mr. Heston, I must say, is an artist in all that the word implies. And when I peruse the Freethought journals of the day—and I am a subscriber to three—my heart swells with the vivid hopes that I may yet grasp the hand of Colonel Ingersoll and Heston. May the animating powers of nature support and buoy them up until Freethought will be as popular in the enlightened nations of earth as superstition has been in the past.

I kindly solicit space in the columns of your paper that I may present a few thoughts and personal experiences. I was born and raised in the Christian religion; to comply with the earnest requests of my parents I was baptized when eleven years of age. At the age of twelve, one night just before the opening of prayer-meeting, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (?) sat in front of me with the holy book open on his lap. All at once the "spirit" moved him, and arising to his feet he laid his hands upon my head and said: "Brother Charles, you hav embraced the only true and everlasting gospel in these, the last days. If you continue faithful in the gospel you've embraced, you will in the future become one of the great men of the nation and church, and be the instrument in the hands of God in bringing souls to the folds of Christ." There arose in my mind a great desire to know for myself whether or not I was in the only true church, and as yet to me there had been no evidence of the Holy Spirit that other members of the church talked so much about and of which they claimed a knowledge. So I asked my father one day, "If I go to God in faith and fervently implore him to answer my petitions, will I receive any answer?" He says, "I promis you, my son, in the name of Israel's God, you will." I prayed, and continued to do so for about three years, from two to five times daily, in private and in family invocations; kept good company; did not profane his holy name; was temperate as much as it was possible to be at that age; was a faithful attendant at church. But alas! of no avail. I did not receive a word, not even a sign of any kind. If there be a God and his ears are closed to the humble, fervent, and innocent implorations of a child who desires to know and do his will, it would be of little use for case-hardened sinners to approach him. If I am damned to eternal torture for unbelief, I will ever censure God for my condemnation. Since then scores of penitent prayers hav been wafted toward the Great Unknown Quantity in my behalf, beseeching his oblivious majesty to persuade me to flee from the wrath to come.

But I thank nature's god that my existence occurred at this period of intellectual enlightenment and scientific progress—that the environments are such that although idolatry and superstition inhabit the minds of many, we are permitted to manifest the product of our reason.

Superstition is a knavish monster incubated in the credulous minds of ancient barbarians, fostered by the clergy for the mercenary emoluments obtained from pious dupes and some, to all appearance, non compos mentis. It dethrones reason, stultifies the intellect, checks investigation, and impedes progress.

But we can see dawning in the twilight of the future universal mental emancipation from the servil thraldom of the dogmas and creeds of the past, and with pride view the gem of our adoration, Freethought. It is the paramount desire of my heart to witness the day Infidelity will usurp superstition's influence in the minds of all the civilized world; reason and logic be our master and guide; investigation the magnetic power inviting every soul to search for Truth.

By making others happy we ourselvs will be happy; this life will be a celestial existence; death in every sense will be deprived of its terrors. We who strive to conform to the aspiring precepts of Freethought and ethical culture can stand at the threshold of eternity with the consolation that our mundane life has not been a failure. As ever,

Yours in the glorious bonds of Freethought, C. E. WEST, M.D.

Anti-Protection.

EUREKA, CAL., April 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I see in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 16th that one Richard Lechner has taken it upon himself to defend Colonel Ingersoll. How deeply the colonel feels himself indebted to him I know not, but of all writers I know of, Colonel Ingersoll is certainly the most able to defend himself; and to see a dwarf defend a giant is a somewhat ludicrous sight. Yet, as Mr. Lechner is evidently sincere, I hope Mr. Ingersoll will not be offended at him. But allow me to set Mr. Lechner right on some points.

Mr. Lechner confounds protection with a tariff for revenue. Few people, perhaps, would object to a tariff for revenue. The government must be supported by taxation either direct or indirect. Direct taxation seems always more burdensome than indirect, as we see nothing coming back for the money we pay out; therefore it would seem best to support government by a tariff rather than by direct taxation. But this is not all. In all nations there is a class of people who reap the benefits of government who, if taxes were levied directly for its support, would pay nothing toward it; but an indirect tax reaches all. A tariff for revenue then may be considered just; but humanity demands that such a tariff should fall upon the poorer classes as lightly as possible, while a tariff for protection acts in the opposit way; it takes the bread out of the poor men's mouth and givs it to the millionaires. A protectiv tariff means to put such an outrageous amount of duty upon a certain article of commerce as to prevent its being imported, in order to protect the manufacturer of that article at home. This looks well on the surface, but it will not stand inspection. If the protected article costs more labor to produce it in the United States than elsewhere, the extra labor so spent is wasted, and Mr. Groh's calculations are right. If the facilities of production are equal, then our manufacturers need no protection, as they save the freight and handling incident to importation; but if our facilities to produce an article are better than elsewhere, and such is the case with most protected articles, our manufacturers will derive an immense profit from the sale of those articles as they hav a monopoly of selling them, foreign goods being in a measure prohibited on account of the protectiv tariff.

Right here lies the trouble in our republic; right here lies the cause of so many millionaires springing up in our midst during our protectiv policy; right here lies the germ of a few shrewd men gathering up the wealth of the country while countless thousands lack the necessaries of life. The laborer is not, cannot be protected, as labor depends upon supply and demand. Yet, while the laborer must always remain unprotected, he is obliged to pay to the manufacturers of articles he cannot do without an enormous price, which without protection he could procure almost for half the amount.

That our iron industries hav increased enormously of late years I freely concede, but that proves nothing in favor of Mr. Lechner's theory, as they would hav increased as much without protection, the only difference being while with protection the money has found its way into the pockets of a few individuals, without protection it would hav remained among the laboring classes. I know no country in the world that has better facilities to produce iron and steel than the United States; and if nature has favored a nation in such a way that it can produce a certain article of commerce cheaper than any other nation, no government can stop the production of that article; the people would rebel if they were not allowed to produce it. But goverment can, by a protectiv tariff, direct the profits of that industry so as to flow into the pockets of a certain class; and this the government is doing.

Mr. Lechner says that English farmers want our cereals taxed. If so, it proves nothing but that English farmers are as big bloodsuckers as our protected monopolists. But does he consider who would pay the tax? The tax would be paid by the poor laborer and mechanic in the advanced price of the bread he eats, and the farmer would not pay his hired help one penny more on account of his acquired monopoly.

Mr. Lechner's fears are likewise ungrounded when he predicts that but for protection we would lose our home market. There is no danger of mechanics turning farmers, although I hav been fool enough to do so. There is no class of people who work harder for what they get than the farmers; therefore, most people shun the farm, and since mechanics must eat, protection or none, there will always be a certain amount of home consumption.

Finally, Mr. Lechner winds up with lamenting that we do not hav to pay about $5 for a pair of overalls. These are not his words, but that is about what they mean. If England can buy our raw cotton, ship it to England, manufacture it into cloth, and return it to the United States as cotton goods, pay duty on them, pay the freight twice across the ocean, take the risk of shipwreck, pay for all the handling, and still make a profit, then there is something rotten in the United States. And right here I will draw attention to one of Mr. Ingersoll's mistakes. He claims that protection improves the intellect of those who are protected. The very fact that England does buy our raw cotton, and returns it to us in manufactured goods, notwithstanding all the drawbacks I hav enumerated, shows that the English manufacturer is more intelligent than the American. So Mr. Ingersoll must be wrong on that point.

In conclusion, I would say: Tariff for revenue is justifiable, since the government must be supported in some way, but tariff for protection is a political trap to catch the unwary, and a curse to the nation. Liberals ought not to be dupes of politicians any more than of preachers. Before an election we are told by either party that unless its candidates are elected the nation is ruined. But no matter which party wins, after election everything goes on as usual and we never know the difference. It is the same with the tariff. If the protectiv tariff was abolished we would not notice the difference for a while, as the tariff is an indirect tax, but in course of a few years we would find the laboring classes better off, since the millions which under our protectiv system go to the manufacturers would remain in the pockets of the working classes.

ROBERT GUNTHER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Hodge, the Cat.

Burly and big his books among
Good Samuel Johnson sat,
With frowning brows and wig askew,
His snuff-strewn waistcoat far from new;
So stern and menacing his air
That neither "Black Sam" nor the maid
To knock or interrupt him dare—
Yet close beside him, unafraid,
Sat Hodge, the cat.

"This participle," the doctor wrote,
"The modern scholar cavils at,
But"—even as he penned the word
A soft protesting note was heard.
The doctor fumbled with his pen,
The dawning thought took wings and flew.
The sound repeated came again—
It was a faint reminding "mew!"
From Hodge, the cat.

"Poor Pussy!" said the learned man,
Giving the glossy fur a pat,
"It is your dinner-time, I know,
And—well, perhaps I ought to go;
For if Sam every day were sent
Off from his work your fish to buy,
Why—men are men—he might resent,
And starve or kick you on the sly—
Eh! Hodge, my cat?"

The dictionary was laid down—
The doctor tied his vast cravat,
And down the buzzing street he strode,
Taking an often-trodden road,
And halted at a well-known stall;
"Fishmonger," spoke the doctor gruff,
"Giv me six oysters—that is all;
Hodge knows when he has had enough—
Hodge is my cat."

Then home; Puss dined, and while in sleep
He chased a visionary rat,
His master sat him down again,
Rewrote his page, renibbed his pen:
Each i was dotted, each t was crossed;
He labored on for all to read,
Nor deemed that time was waste or lost
Spent in supplying the small need
Of Hodge, the cat.

That dear old doctor! fierce of mien,
Untidy, arbitrary, fat,
What gentle thoughts his name enfold!
So generous of his scanty gold,
So quick to love, so hot to scorn,
Kind to all sufferers under heaven—
A tenderer despot ne'er was born;
His big heart held a corner even
For Hodge, the cat.

—Susan Coolidge.

Visit to a Gold Mine.

Up among the clouds, on the very crest of the Rockies, nine thousand feet above the sea, is situated what is known as the "Little Kingdom of Gilpin," one of the best-known mining camps in the world.

This camp is reached from Denver by a narrow-gage railroad, which winds in and out through a canyon for over thirty miles. The scenery along this railroad is some of the grandest in the world. The road is built along the banks of a creek which flows through the canyon. In places the road is built on trestle-work, as the space between the creek and the upright walls of granit is too narrow for even a narrow-gage road. Having reached Black Hawk, after a three hours' ride up grade, we see all around us great mountains towering to the sky; here and there we see small buildings built on their sloping sides, and near each building we see a pile of refuse rock. These are all the external evidences of the mines which exist below. The buildings are shaft-houses, in which is placed the machinery with which the ore is raised to the surface of the earth. The pile of rock is composed of rock and other refuse which has been taken out of the mine before they could get at the paying ore.

There are two kinds of mining; one is known as placer mining, the other as lode mining. Placer mining consists in washing gold-bearing dirt by means of water, whereby they obtain the particles of gold which the dirt contained. Lode mining is the digging out of the gold-bearing ore which lies imbedded in the mountains. After a great deal of hard climbing we reach one of the shaft-houses, and having first obtained permission from the mining boss, we prepared to descend into the bowels of the earth. The mine we visited is the deepest mine in this mining district; the incline is over eighteen hundred feet long. The shaft or incline is about six feet high and varies in width from three to five feet; a track is laid in the shaft, on which the miniature cars are run in which the ore is hauled to the surface. In going down into the mine we had to lie on our sides, as the cars reach so near the roof that there is not space enough for us to sit erect. As soon as we were a few feet down we left daylight behind and had to depend on tallow candles for our light. Gradually the rope was played out from the shaft-house, and soon we reached the bottom of the shaft. Here the track diverges in several directions, and runs on a level for thousands of feet into the drifts. As the ore is taken out of the drifts the track is extended so as to be convenient in loading the cars.

At the bottom of the shaft are two gigantic steam pumps which are kept going night and day to keep the mine free from water; one of the greatest expenses in deep mining is to keep the water from flooding the mine.

Walking along the drift about a thousand feet we came to where the miners are at work. The men work two and two together—one man holds and turns the drill, while the other strikes it with the hammer. When they hav a sufficient number of holes drilled they proceed to load them with dynamite and fire them all at once. The noise made by the explosion is terrific, as there is no place for the sound to escape. One blast generally loosens several tons of ore, which is then broken up, loaded in the cars, and hauled to the surface, where it is sorted, part sent to the stamp mill and the rest to the smelters, as the case may be; the poorest ore is generally smelted, while the better ore is run through the stamp mill, whereby the gold is extracted at a less expense than smelting. The ore varies greatly as to the quantity of mineral it contains. Some of it hardly pays the expense of mining, while other ore is very rich.

A very curious superstition exists among the miners out here. They believe that if anyone whistles in a mine it will bring bad luck, so visitors are requested to be careful and not whistle while they are in the mine. The miners work only eight hours, so it requires only three sets of men to keep the mine going.

The men work Sundays, holidays, and all, no stops being allowed on any account. When they shift, the men flock out of the mine like ants from an anthill; but they soon disappear again, and then the mountains look deserted until the next shift.

The miners are men recruited from all classes of people, and follow mining only until they make a little money; then they giv up mining and go at some other work; for in spite of the big wages which the miners receive, they all prefer to work aboveground and hav the sun in place of a tallow candle as an illuminator.

Having explored several drifts, we signaled the shaft-house to hoist us up. When we came to the surface we were ready to fully appreciate the value of sunlight after being thus deprived of it for an hour.

Having seen all the inner workings of the place where great fortunes are dug from the bosom of Mother Earth, we are ready to start on our return to our home at Denver.

WM. L. PALM.

Denver, Col., May 11, 1892.

He Was "In It" That Time.

A benevolent-looking gentleman of clerical appearance stopped at the bridge entrance and got a paper from one of the street gamins that hover about in that locality like bees before a hive. The happy urchin had scurried off for change and was soon lost to view with a "Hi, Jimmie, giv me de coppers." The benevolent gentleman waited a moment and then, concluding that he was perhaps face to face with an illustration of frail humanity wrestling in the throes of heavy temptation, started for the cars. He had gotten but a short distance when he felt a tugging at the tail of his coat. Looking around he saw the bright face of the little chap and his change in the boy's extended fist.

"Here's yer coppers, boss."

"Are you always as honest as this?" said the gentleman.

"'Cept when I ain't in it," piped the little fellow.

The gentleman took the hint, and the newsboy was "in it" to the extent of a handful of pennies.

School Hours in Switzerland.

The Swiss school hours are very long—twenty-seven hours a week for the primary classes, and only eight weeks' vacation in the year. The studies in these earlier classes comprehend religion, good manners, German, arithmetic, elements of geometry, natural history, geography, history, singing, drawing, gymnastics, and for the girls, female industry. The girls may skip the geometry class, if the parents so choose. In the secondary schools, where the pupils are from twelve to fifteen years old, the studies are mostly a continuation and repetition of those passed in the primary schools, except that natural history is enlarged upon greatly, especially in its bearings on farming and other industries. More attention, too, is given to gymnastics and drill. These classes are attended thirty-three hours a week, and forty-four weeks in the year, exclusiv of much time spent in gymnastics. The course is for three years.

Correspondence.

CEDAR BLUFFS, KAN., May 25, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I never wrote to the Corner before. I like to read the letters. We hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a good many years, and like it very much. I am eleven years old, and read in the Fifth reader. I liv in the country, and go to school in a sort of schoolhouse. Last term we had a religious teacher, and I asked her to tell me where the soul was, and she said the brain was the seat of it.

I like very much to read books. I hav read lots of Mrs. Alcott's books, among the rest "Little Women." I never had a chance to read "Little Men," but I want to. My father has got the "Life of Paine," and the rest of his books. I mean to read them when I am old enough to understand them. I read Ingersoll's lectures in the Ironclad Age every week. I would like to hav some correspondence with THE TRUTH SEEKER girls.

Yours sincerely, INEZ E. PLUMB.

ST. JOHN, WASH., May 15, 1892.

MISS WIXON, Dear Friend: I thought I would write to the Corner to-day, as I had nothing else to do.

I liv on a farm six miles from St. John. We are having a fine spring for grain, and I think there is no doubt of a good crop next fall. I am not attending school now, as we are having vacation.

My father has been a subscriber of THE TRUTH SEEKER for some time, and I take great pleasure in reading it myself. I would like some of the readers of the Corner to correspond with me.

Well, for fear I am making my letter too long, and taking up too much of your valuable space, I will close.

Hoping to hear from some of the readers of the Corner soon, also that this letter escapes the waste-basket, I remain,

Your Liberal friend,
RAYMOND E. WHITE.

P.S.—My address is, St. John, Whitman county, Washington. Box No. 47.

GENEVA, NEB., May 2, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner. I am thirteen years old, and I like to read the Corner very much. I liv in the country, six miles from town. There are two churches within one mile of where we liv. We go to church sometimes, but not very often. We go just to be a-going. We can't comprehend the mysterious stories that the preachers tell.

I can remember the time when my father was a shouting Methodist. And we children could not enjoy ourselvs. But now he has changed to be a Freethinker, and we go to dances and enjoy ourselvs very much better. I like reading the "Pictorial Text-Book" and also the Bible Text-Book. We hav both, but we don't hav them very long at a time. We lend them to the people in town.

As this is my first attempt at writing to the Corner, if you think there is anything worth publishing, do so, and I will write again.

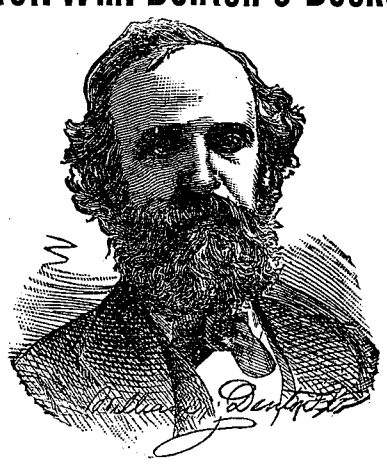
Yours respectfully,
HATTIE EDNA BELL.

[An interesting letter.—ED. C. C.]

CARTHAGE, MO., May 15, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I am thirteen years old. I like to read the Corner better than any part of the paper. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a number of years, and is very much pleased with it. I hav lots of pets around me. I hav a mountain burra, which I think very much of. I can hitch her to the cart and drive her and ride her. I hav also six cats and two crows. They are common crows, and they are very mischievous. They can talk better than a parrot. I will tell you what they can say. They say "Otto," which is one of my brother's names. One says, "Otto make lots of wood;" "Otto plow;" "Otto and the boys wake up;" and calls the dog, "Here, Zip; here, Zip; here, here, here;" and calls the cows, "Sook, Sook," and "Helloa." And he says "Ho" to the teams, and laughs like the average darky, and likes little girls, but he does not like boys. Lots of people come from town to hear him, for he is a great curiosity. If I see this in print I will write again.

Your friend, MATILDA F. ROTSCH.



EAGLEVILLE, CAL., May 18, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND CHILDREN'S CORNER: I am a little girl seven years old, and I get my mamma to write this letter for the Corner. I send you a picture of our home taken about July 1, 1891. You will see the snow on the mountains and the mountain stream that flows by our house the year around. We keep hotel, and hav a farm also. We hav to irrigate our farm in this country. We hav nice horses and cows, and hav sheep on the range. We do not feed them; just hav men herd them on the hills winter and summer. They hav them on the high mountains you see with the snow on in the summer-time, and on the desert in the winter. Mamma and little sister and I went to camp with papa and saw the lambs that came this spring. Papa cut their tails off, and there was over twenty-six hundred, such a nice lot. Papa has two large bands of sheep and lambs. Papa is fixing up our home. We hav just been here a year, so I will send you another picture some time. I hav "The Story Hour," such a nice book.

Your friend, HAZEL SCOTT.

[Hazel—what a sensible little woman she is! The picture is beautiful, and we thank you and mamma for sending it. If ever we come to California we shall try to see that lovely spot, and hope to find Hazel at home when we call.—ED. C. C.]

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.
From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."
By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.
Cloth. - - - - - 50 cents

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

News of the Week.

A LARGE part of Creede, Col., was burnt last Sunday.

THE Salvation Army barracks at Flushing, N. Y., was attempted to be burnt on the 4th.

IN the church of Our Lady of Good Council, Brooklyn, a few days ago, several hours were devoted to the ceremony of blessing and sealing a casket containing relics of saints, and depositing it beneath the altar.

FATHER CRONIN, editor of the Catholic Union and Times, says that his visit to Blaine was not in answer to a call from the latter to communicate the probable effect of the Ducey letter on Catholics, and had no political purpose.

LAST Sunday a cloudburst converted Oil creek in western Pennsylvania into a torrent, a dam broke, oil leaked from tanks upon the water and became ignited, and the fiery flood swept through Titusville and Oil City, burning to death or drowning a hundred persons.

EX-GOVERNOR KNOTT of Kentucky said to a reporter a few days ago: "The future does not seem bright to me. People in this country to-day hav no conception to how great a degree wealth is being concentrated in the hands of the few, and to what an alarming extent legislation is being controled to advance private gain."

THE United Presbyterian assembly at Pittsburgh resolved that among last year's events "the most significant thing is the decision of the United States Supreme Court that we are a Christian nation. The president has no longer a valid excuse for refusing the recognition of Christianity in his annual Thanksgiving proclamation."

FEAR that if Ireland were self-governed she would oppress the Protestant minority in Ulster county, is working against the granting of Home Rule. Viscount Bury said in a late speech: "There is as much difference in Ulster and the south of Ireland as there is between—France and Germany, shall I say? Shall we, then, stand by and see Ulster annexed by the rest of Ireland, and subjected to—God knows what? I trow not."

BLAINE is the favorit at the convention about to nominate a Republican presidential candidate at Minneapolis. He resigned his office of secretary of state last Saturday, but has not declared that he will accept the presidential nomination. The chief arguments used against him are those of protectionists against his reciprocity policy, and charges of servility to the Irish. McKinley, Cullom, Rusk, Sherman, and Whitelaw Reid are possible dark horses.

CATHOLICS are triumphant over the miraculous cures wrought by the relic of the Virgin Mary's mother at the church of St. Jean Baptiste, New York. The Freeman's Journal (R. C.) says: "These are not 'stories' from medieval times or from remote countries or from ignorant persons. They are events which hav occurred within the last ten days here in the city of New York, and which are attested and vouched for by people of education and respectability. They hav been subjected to the scrutiny of the American reporter, whose capacity for hunting up facts is proverbial. The daily papers hav given a number of cases with particulars that will enable anyone who may be doubtful to investigate for himself without incurring greater trouble or cost than a call at a few New York addresses. The happy recipients of the miraculous blessings of the relic are delighted to tell everybody how and where they hav been relieved of their bodily afflictions. The deaf hav been made to hear, the dumb to speak, the blind to see, and the lame to get up and walk."

IN Kojetein, Germany, the old story concerning ritual murders has been revived as an excuse for a fresh attack upon the Jews Moses Fuchs and Barbara Misera disappeared, and a servant started the usual report that they had been sacrificed in Jewish religious rites. There was nothing to indicate the probability of the charge, but the people at once raised the familiar outcry and began to loot Jewish shops. The Jewish families barricaded their doors and covered their windows while mobs paraded the streets and threw sticks and stones at every Jew they met Windows were smashed throughout the Jewish quarter, doors were forced and much property was stolen or destroyed. The police charged the mobs without success. The fire brigade turned on the hose after everything else had failed, and wet down the crowd until they dispersed. In the evening the police found the body of the Misera girl in the river. In her pocket was a letter which showed that she committed suicide. The anti-Semitic agitators still contend that Fuchs was murdered by Jews, and more trouble is feared.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper. 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper. 80 cents.

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
5	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

AGENTS We want one in every town to handle the DEALERS

JACK FROST FREEZER.

A Scientific Machine made on a Scientific Principle. Save their cost a dozen times a year. It is not mussy or sloppy. A child can operate it. Sells at sight. Send for prices and discounts:

29 Murray Street, New York.

Makes Ice Cream in 30 Seconds.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st., [Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, care of Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

CONVALESCENT.

The time between a severe sickness and complete recovery is one that needs the most careful attention especially in regard to food. Any physician will tell you that is the only mild stimulant, combined with a perfect food known that makes blood and muscle and builds up the system by its easily digestive and assimilative qualities. For sale by druggists. Send for descriptive circular.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

The ALE & BEEF CO., Dayton, O., U. S. A.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome: early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents. ☜

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

HITHERTO the Christians hav been the most intolerant of all men.—Voltaire.

HEALTH is the condition of wisdom, and the sign is cheerfulness—an open and noble temper.—Emerson.

IGNORANCE is the greatest danger that can threaten a ship of state. There are more vessels lost in fogs than in storms.—Anon.

FEAR of unpopularity is allayed by the sentiment expressed in the words of F. A. Lange, "Never has the thoughtful observer the right to be silent, merely because he knows that for the present there are but few who listen to him."—Robt. C. Adams.

"THE living organism," says Professor Matteucci, "is a machine, like the steam engin or electro-magnetic machine; that is to say, a system in which chemical affinities, especially the union of the oxygen of the air with the materials of alimentation, produce heat, electricity, and muscular work." He might hav added, "and mental work too," for we know that without chemical, mechanical, and physical changes, not only no movement can exist, but no feeling, no thought, and no volition either.—Büchner.

THE Good how can we trust?
Only the Wise are just.
The Good we use,
The Wise we cannot choose.
These there are none above.
The Good they know and love,
But are not known again
By those of lesser ken.
They do not charm us with their eyes,
But they transfix us with their advice.
No partial sympathy they feel
With private woe or private weal,
But with the universe joy and sigh,
Whose knowledge is their sympathy.
—Thoreau.

THE effect of testimony depends on the intelligence and honesty of the witness and the intelligence of him who weighs. A man living in a community where the supernatural is expected, where the miraculous is supposed to be of almost daily occurrence, will, as a rule, believe that all wonderful things are the result of supernatural agencies. He will expect providential interference, and, as a consequence, his mind will pursue the path of least resistance, and will account for all phenomena by what to him is the easiest method. Such people, with the best intentions, honestly bear false witness. They hav been imposed upon by appearances, and are victims of delusion and illusion.—Ingersoll.

A MILLION pulpits still preach a gospel that inculcates the vanity of industrial pursuits. "Take no thought of the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself." "Take no thought, saying, What shall we eat, or what shall we drink, or wherewithal shall we be clothed? For after all these do the gentiles seek." As a practical comment on the wisdom of those precepts, nations, cities, and corporations vie in the restless pursuit of wealth, and a thousand lessons of daily life admonish the young citizen of our industrial world to take earnest and constant thought of the morrow; nay, the mere attempt to disregard those lessons would be followed by the punishment of the shiftless vagrant.—Prof. Oswald.

WOULD it not hav been as well [asks Saladin of God] to hav done me the honor to ask me whether I had any desire to be "created?" If you had explained to me that the "creating" of me and things like me would hav caused you and your family so much trouble and annoyance, including your bother in getting up the Flood and the fatigue your son was put to in flying down here and flying back to heaven again, I should hav politely declined to be "created" at all. I do not care to put gods and the like to trouble on my account. If you had explained to me that you intended to "create" me a sort of tub that could stand upon its own bottom, I might hav consented to be "created." But you hav fashioned me into an automatic squirrel, revolving in my wheel forever, cracking my nuts, and indulging in my silly chattering and squeals while I am shut in from the pleroma of the Universe by the cage of the Esoteric with its bars of Mystery. You hav made nearly all men, O Lord, dull owls, that eat much and think nothing and believe the incredible. And, for your glory and amusement, you hav made a restless and sporadic few who eat little and think much, and whose brain-hammers ever clang upon the anvil of Fate, amid sweat and fire, forging empirical keys to turn the bolt of the lock of the Unknowable. O had I been blest with the stupidity not to inquire, or not curst with the Tantalus cup of ever inquiring in vain!—Saladin in God and His Book.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Aronnd the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN,

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial and Miscellaneous Lies: Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - - 40 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate
ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3 Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

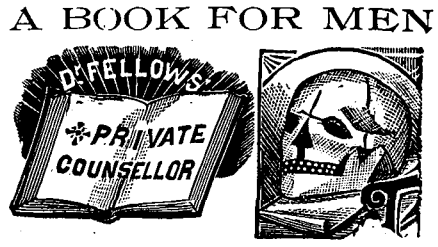
WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ISAIAH'S JOSS IS TIRED OF PRAYER.

And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood.—Isa. i, 15.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

RIPANS TABULES

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

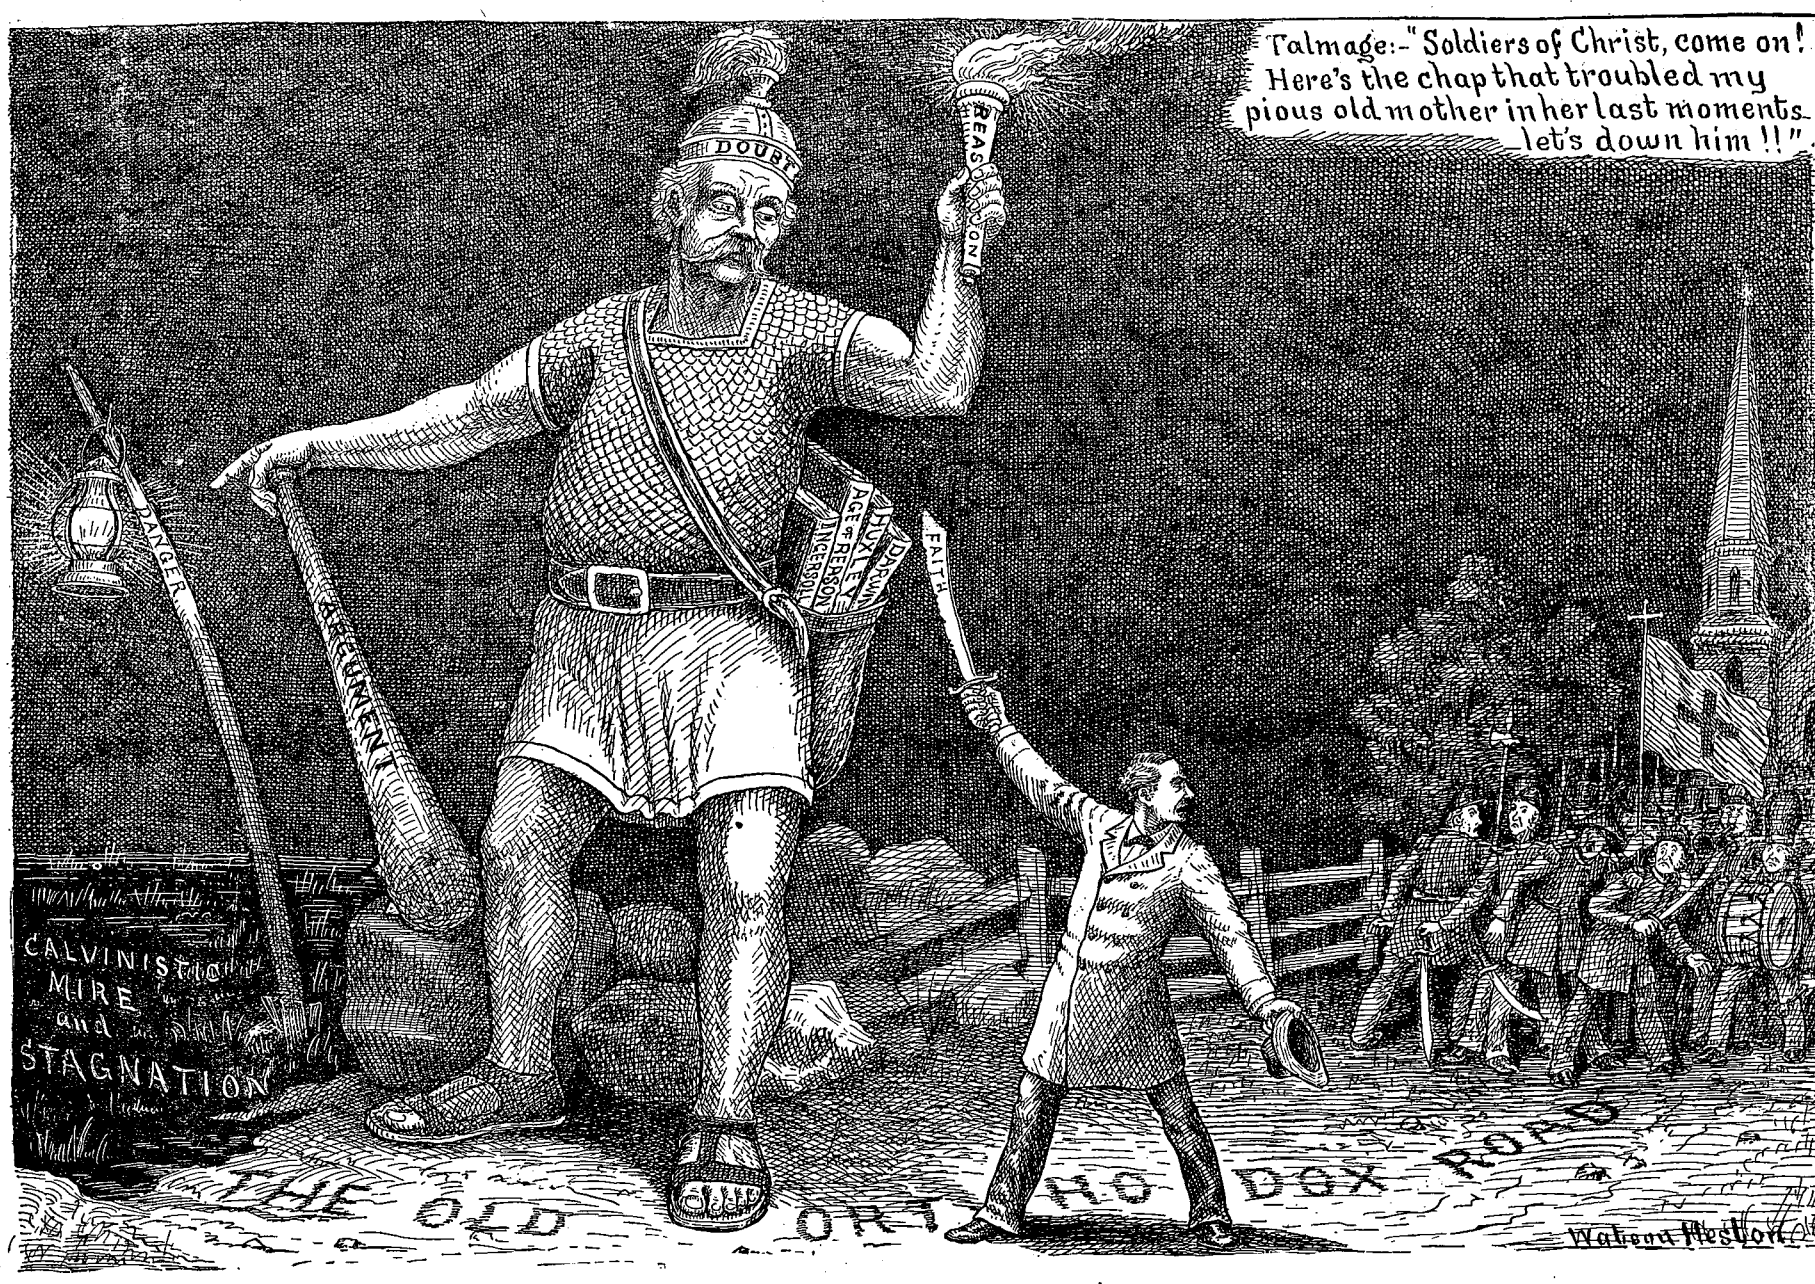
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents: cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 25. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 18, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE GIANT DOUBT AND THE DOUGHTY DOCTOR.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity. "That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 899pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price. cloth. 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 25. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 18, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 18, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Some Wonderful Cures.

The wrist of St. Ann, the alleged mother of the alleged Virgin Mary, who is alleged to hav been the mother of the Christian's alleged savior, has been taken to Canada, glass case and all, and placed in a church there, where it will no doubt prove to be as good an investment as it was in this city.

And it has by no means gone unadvertised. At that the priests can giv the vendors of patent medicins many points. The cures performed by it in this city are all used as testimonials, and are as remarkable as any told in the advertising columns of the religious weeklies.

Case No. 1. Mrs. Rhoda E. White, of No. 1,051 Park avenue, who livs with her brother, Mgr. Bernard O'Reilly, the chosen biographer of His Holiness Leo XIII., was attacked last December by the grip. For many weeks she lay in bed unable to change her position without the aid of servants. The relic was brought to her bedside and she kissed the box in which it was held. On the day following she was taken to the church, carried to the altar, and touched by Father Tetreau with the relic. That night she slept soundly and awoke the next morning apparently completely restored to health. An almost total deafness had disappeared. This was on May 5th, and she has been entirely well since then.

Case No. 2. Miss Ann Stetson, of No. 158 West Twenty-fourth street, had suffered for a long time with an ulcer on her right ankle. She went to the church of St. Jean Baptiste and venerated the relic. The day after, the ulcer disappeared and she was completely well.

Case No. 3. Miss Mamie McCullough, of No. 1,482 Third avenue, had almost lost her voice from tonsilitis. Her throat was so bad that the doctor advised her to submit to an operation. He intended to cut out portions of her tonsils. She went to the church and kissed the relic to see if it would help her. She could feel no change, and that afternoon she was out riding with some friends. She told them she had kissed the relic. "You don't believe in that, do you?" asked one of the girls. Mamie began to argue with them and to say that she believed in St. Ann. She felt something break in her throat and instantly felt she was well. She found she could sing, and she has been well since then.

Case No. 4. A woman socially prominent in San Francisco who venerated the relic. She was stopping at the Hoffman House, but would not permit her name to be published. She had an abscess on her side which no medical treatment would cure. She had consulted specialists in Europe, but they could not help her. After she had visited the relic the abscess went away. It entirely disappeared. In this case there was an organic change—an actual restoration of the bodily substance. It cannot be explained on any theory of imagination or suggestion. It was a manifestation of divine power.

These wonderful cures are all printed in the Herald and vouched for by eminent churchmen of the Roman Catholic faith. Skeptics are referred to this as the minister referred the Sunday-school scholars to the stone he had brought from Mount Ararat to show the reality of Noah's flood. The mountain is there, and these cures are printed and vouched for.

A Great Scheme.

The Methodists are now taking their turn at trying to subordinate the state to the church—and make the state pay for it. They want more chaplains in the army and navy. The churchmen hav Secretary of War Elkins and Secretary of the Navy Tracy to use their influence to provide more military and naval ministers, and they propose that all applications sent by Methodists to the war department and the navy department for appointment as chaplains shall be submitted to a board of three Methodist bishops, and that no selection shall be made from the Methodist candidates without the approval of the board. Presumably the other sects would also maintain a board to pass on the appointments from their ranks.

This is a very neat little scheme to elevate the church into a coördinate power—and a little more. It would be such a recognition of the Protestants as the pope claims for Rome. Next they will ask for examining boards of clergy to pass on the religious qualifications of government employees, and anyone who neglected his church—or the contribution-box—could not draw pay from Uncle Sam.

It is a much greater scheme than having a Presbyterian elder for president and a Sunday-school superintendent for a postmaster-general.

Swindling Religious Concerns.

This city pays to various sectarian charitable societies about a million dollars a year. The amounts to each are computed at the rate of two dollars a week for each child supported. Comptroller Myers, whose duty it is to look after the city's interest, has discovered, in connection with these payments, what a daily paper designates as either a gigantic swindling scheme on the part of these institutions, or a "simple error in bookkeeping."

The money to pay the subsidy comes from the excise fund, under the laws of 1882. Application is made for its benefit monthly, accompanied by a sworn statement of the number of children in each of the several institutions. Mr. Myers noticed that there was a discrepancy in the statement of four of the institutions. This led to an examination, which revealed the fact that the city had paid for many thousand days' board which had never been furnished. About eight thousand dollars in all has thus been paid into two institutions—one Catholic and one Hebrew. Further information is refused until all has been investigated.

Mr. Myers has given it as his opinion that the error is simply clerical. Naturally. Mr. Myers was elected by Tammany, and that is all that need be said on the subject. But if he thinks he can make honest people believe that the managers of one institution did not know within forty-six hundred dollars' worth, and another within thirty-six hundred dollars' worth, of the children under their care, he miscalculates the capacity of the public to figure. One sum represents twenty-three hundred and the other eighteen hundred weeks' board, and a manager or clerk who could make errors of such proportions could never obtain such position. It is a good deal more probable that it is a gigantic swindle rather than a "simple error in bookkeeping."

The Adventist Trials in Tennessee.

The following is a copy of the indictment found against the Seventh Day Adventists of Henry county, Tenn., for working on Sunday:

"STATE OF TENNESSEE,
HENRY COUNTY.

"JAN. TERM, A.D. 1892.

"The grand jurors of the state of Tennessee, elected, empaneled, sworn, and charged to inquire in and for the body of the county of Henry, in the state aforesaid, upon their oath, present that ——— ———, late of said county, laborer, heretofore to wit on the 8th day of Nov., A.D. 1891, that day being Sunday, and divers other Sundays before that date and up to the taking of this inquisition, in the county of Henry, aforesaid, then and there, unlawfully, openly, publicly, notoriously, and unceasingly did engage in his secular business, and did perform and follow his common avocations of life on Sundays by working on the farm, plowing, hoeing, chopping, hauling wood, mauling rails, and doing various and divers other kinds of work on Sundays, said work not being necessary or a matter of charity, and it was and is to the great annoyance and disturbance of the people, to the evil example of society, prejudicial to public morals and a public nuisance to the citizens of the county and against the peace and dignity of the state.

"J. W. LEWIS, Attorney-General.

"Sec. Count.—And the grand jurors aforesaid, upon their oaths aforesaid, do further present that the said W. S. Lowry, on the days and dates aforesaid, and in manner and form as aforesaid, was guilty of a public nuisance by said working on Sunday, to the prejudice of society, and against the peace and dignity of the state.

"J. W. LEWIS, Attorney-General."

Five men in all were put on trial week before last, at Paris, before the same judge who tried R. M. King. The prisoners argued their own cases, and were tried separately, each defendant having the privilege of cross-examining the witnesses and making a statement of his belief, manner of life, and practice touching the observance of the "Sabba'h." They all told the court that if they were fined they would not pay, but would go to jail instead. As the law allows only twenty-five cents a day in working out a fine, and pays the jailor forty cents per diem for boarding prisoners, this would saddle considerable expense upon the county—and the heavier the fine the greater the expense. One of the men was discharged and four were fined one dollar each and costs, with a threat to make it heavier next time. Both the judge and the prosecuting attorney said that Sunday labor by the Adventists must be stopped, and it is reported that the grand jury hav found other indictments for more recent offenses. Opinions among the Adventists differ as to whether this is the beginning of a "furious storm of persecution," or "virtually an arraignment of the law as unworthy to remain on the statute books." The attitude of Judge Swiggart and the attorney would seem to indicate the former. That the judge is a bigot was proved in the King case. And in these cases the prosecution tried the defendants, not as individuals, but as members of the Seventh Day Adventist church. This is shown by some of his questions; for instance, one witness was asked: "Do you know anything of the workings of the Seventh Day Adventist church?" Another was asked, "Are you a member of the Seventh Day Adventist church?" "Is it the habit of that church to do secular business on Sunday?" This question was asked of every witness until the judge objected to it and told the attorney to confine his questions to the practice of the individual defendant. However, in his plea to the jury the attorney returned to the same idea, saying, "I am sorry that we hav among us this class of people."

The indictments were that the Sunday labor constituted a nuisance, but not only was there no evidence to support the charge, but every witness testified that he was not annoyed by it. The convictions therefore show clearly that the prosecution of these people is a religious persecution, and the pretense of punishing "civil"-law breakers and not desecrators of a holy day is fully exposed. And though both judge and prosecuting attorney maintained the pretense the attorney made the trial one of religious belief by asking witnesses as to their church relations, the practice of the Seventh Day Adventist church, and by seeking to make it appear that one of the defendants did work on Sunday because he did not go to church on that day.

Thomas Paine's Farm and Body.

The Investigator prints this: "Mr. John Power sends us the following, and suggests that it would be well to hav it settled once for all where the remains of Paine were finally deposited:

"'A few religious people and a few thousand sporting people will be glad to learn that the handsome Westchester county estate known as the "Tom Paine Farm" has just been sold to a company which will make it a stock-farm with a one-mile trotting-course.

"'The history of this farm takes everybody back to the Revolutionary period, or to the close of it, when the state of New York, desirous of expressing its appreciation of the great service which Paine rendered to the patriotic cause during the war, purchased and presented the best farm procurable to the famous author of "The Rights of Man."

"'Paine wasn't much of a farmer, and, according to all written and traditional accounts, he spent most of his time looking over his broad acres and wondering what next to do with them. He was buried by the side of the road which runs through his estate; but his remains were afterward taken up and carried to England, where some of his admirers thought he was held in higher respect than in the country whose cause he espoused. But there seems to hav been some mistake about it, for England failed to find a proper resting-place for them, and no one knows where they are now.

"'The monument erected over them still remains, and it is a strange fact, and illustrativ of the change of opinion which has come in religious matters during the lifetime of the past two generations, that the monument is cared for by an extremely orthodox Presbyterian deacon. Relic-hunters hav chipped it most mercilessly; but a few years ago, a lot of men, who regarded the great Revolutionary writer more for what he did than for what he tried to undo, restored the monument to its original condition; and the inscriptions upon it to-day, although not a word has been changed from the original, do not excite disapprobation in the most orthodox religious mind.'"—Once a Week.

"Mr. Power thinks Ernestine L. Rose of England might furnish the information desired, or Mr. Geo. J. Holyoake. We shall be glad to print anything reliable on this matter, and would ask our English readers to giv us the particulars in regard to the final disposition of the remains of Thomas Paine, if they are able to do so."

The Paine farm in New Rochelle is still owned by Mr. See, though we believe some would-be purchasers hold an option on it. But the title to the farm does not include the title to the little square plot where the monument stands, and Mr. See says himself that he cannot sell that, nor can anyone acquire a title, as no one seems to own it. The matter ought to be looked into and a title gotten from the town and held by some incorporated Freethought body.

Nobody in England knows anything about where the body of Paine was finally deposited. There are several stories current, but none of any pretension to truth.

A Royalist Prayer.

This is the prayer that one of the preachers made one day at the Republican convention:

"Almighty God, who hath promised to giv wisdom to all who reverently seek thee, who alone pourest into the hearts of men that most excellent gift of charity, we ask thy blessing upon this convention. Help them to realize that government is a sacred trust from God, who alone has the right to govern, and that his love hath given to every nation the right to say in what form that trust shall be clothed. Grant, heavenly father, that the one whom we may choose shall be a man after thine own heart, a lover of righteousness, the defender of the poor and the needy, and the guardian of the nation's honor. Giv to this people an understanding heart to obey thee, that truth and justice, religion and piety, peace and happiness, may be established among us for all generations. Grant this for the sake of thy son, Jesus Christ, in whose words we sum up our petitions. Our father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth as in heaven. Giv us this day our daily bread, and forgiv us our trespasses as we forgiv those who trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever. Amen."

Bishop Whipple, an Episcopalian, did that. It is full of his sectarian prayer-book phrases, down to the Lord's prayer, and probably offended some of the Methodists present. But what an unregenerate American wants to know, you know, is, if God alone has the right to govern, why the delegates were trying to nominate presidential candidates? The American idea is that the people do the governing, or should.

This prayer was that of a royalist, a believer in the divine right of rulers who receive the sanction of the priests who claim to speak for God. It might hav been appropriate in England or Germany or Russia, but it was harshly out of place in a convention of republicans.

Evangelicals Working for Infidelity.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church recently held at Portland, Ore., has sent the Briggs case back to the New York presbytery to be tried. That body once dismissed it on a technicality, glad to get rid of it so easily, but Briggs's orthodox enemies would not let it rest, but appealed to the synod and then to the general assembly before the synod had considered it. As the assembly ranks the synod, Professor Briggs must be tried.

Of course the friends of Professor Briggs do not like this procedure at all, especially as the assembly coupled with its decision a censure of the Union Theological Seminary—which censure may practically amount to a boycott—and they are protesting vigorously. They claim that the assembly had no right to take the case away from the synod. They call the act a strange perversion of law, maintaining that the rule of appeal is the same in ecclesiastical courts as in civil courts, viz., that cases shall go up step by step, and the action of the assembly they assert to be subversiv of justice to accused ministers. On this point Dr. H. M. Field, of the Evangelist, says:

"How easily might such a liberty be used to further the ends of personal malignity! Unfortunately, among ministers, as in other professions, there appears now and then one who makes himself notorious as an accuser of his brethren, and what is to prevent his trumping up a charge against some one against whom he has a grudge, and if his own presbytery, who know the man, dismiss it with contempt, what is to prevent his jumping over the synod and rushing to the general assembly. Once there, it is easy for a noisy disturber of the peace to raise a party, and if he cannot carry the assembly, he can at least, by the perpetual ringing of his charges, injure, if he does not ruin, the fair name of a faithful minister of Christ. We say not that this is likely to occur, but that it may occur. The recent disregard of all restraints, the overriding of all barriers, shows that anything is possible in these revolutionary times, for such they are, and the strangest feature of all is, that the very men who boast of their conservatism are the leaders of the revolution, the sans culottes, who shout for the guillotin. It is not for the sake of Dr. Briggs, but for the protection of every one of us, that we desire that the barriers of law should be reëstablished so firmly that they cannot be broken down."

The anti-Briggs men, on the other hand, seem to care less how they get at the heretic than for the fact that they do get at him. They want to try him and expel him, and they hav no doubt as to the final result. The New York Observer, which is as orthodox as the belief in the devil, says of the case and the action of the assembly:

"It is evident that the expectation of the majority of those who hav directed this course is that upon a thorough trial of the case the charges of heresy will be established. His heresy is already so well settled in the minds of his opponents, by the professor's inaugural address and other addresses and writings before and since, that no other result seems possible to them. . . . They hav not allowed technicalities and objections to obscure the main question at issue, and even if they cannot read Hebrew and are not experts in higher criticism, they nevertheless know what they believe and what is hostil to their faith. They find that the teachings of Dr. Briggs are opposed to their faith, and therefore they demand that he shall cease to be a teacher in the Presbyterian church. It does not change their minds to call them ignorant, incompetent to decide questions of this sort, bigoted, and illiberal. Presbyterians hav been accustomed to hear such charges from Infidels, and are well acquainted with the intolerant style of so-called Liberals and unbelievers. . . .

"Judging from the past, it may be expected that every possible effort will be made to prevent the case from coming to trial on its merits. The accused has everything to gain and nothing to lose by delay, and it can hardly be expected that he will neglect to avail himself of every resource. An individual has in such a trial great advantages over a numerous body like the presbytery, and in the presbytery of New York Dr. Briggs has a number of men who sympathize with his views, and a larger number who do not desire to see him ecclesiastically branded as a heretic. They will giv him, as they did before, every chance to explain or modify or withdraw his heretical views, and they will not condemn him unheard, though they hav not a particle of sympathy with his doctrins. Hence the trial may be protracted, and as there is a possibility of two appeals and of other delaying contingencies, the end may be far off. What that end will be, however, so far as the decision upon the question whether the teaching of Dr. Briggs is in accord with the faith of the Presbyterian church in these United States is concerned, is certain."

When Professor Briggs won his case on a technicality before the New York presbytery the public was greatly disappointed. They desired to see the issue fought out. In this Freethinkers sympathized with them, because all divisions and fights in the church ultimately make for freedom of thought, and thereby help to destroy ecclesiastical supremacy and Christianity itself. It was therefore a cause for regret when the controversy was smoothed over, and its reopening of the battle is equally a cause for rejoicing. Christianity is such a bundle of superstitions, and the clergy ride the people so hard, that even a slight illumination of the one and a partial downfall of the other are direct and long steps on the pathway of progress. Dr. Briggs's heresy is not very violent, and its best result will be the split it makes in the Presbyterian church. It consists in:

1. His declaration that "there are historically three great foundations of divine truth—the Bible, the church, and the reason"—thus making the church and the reason each to be an independent and sufficient fountain of divine truth.

2. His affirmation that, in the case of some, the holy scriptures are not sufficient to giv that knowledge of God and his will which is necessary unto salvation.

3. His opinion that some may turn from the supreme authority of the word of God and find the knowledge of him through the reason.

4. His opinion that the temperaments and environments of men determin which of these ways of access to God they may pursue.

5. Questioning the full inspiration of the scriptures.

6. Asserting that Moses was not the author of the Pentateuch, and that Isaiah was not the author of half of the book which bears his name.

7. Teaching that predictiv prophecy has been reversed by history, and that much of it has not been and never can be fulfilled.

8. For teaching the doctrin of an intermediate existence after death, or a second probation.

There is not much heresy in these declarations; they are more a violation of the dogmatic assertions of the Confession of Faith than of Christian standards. They constitute, however, a very sharp wedge, which, when driven home, splits the Bible into fragments, because if the Pentateuch is not a reputable and authoritativ work, the foundation of the New Testament is seriously undermined; and if its authorship is unknown, of course no one can claim divine inspiration for it, and without that it is of no possible religious value. The Observer and other church authorities realize this and intend to stamp out the heresy in order to save their business. It will be an interesting struggle, very bitter, between the two wings, and cannot fail to command great interest, even though occurring in the midst of a great presidential contest. Whichever way the presbytery decides an appeal to the synod will be taken, and from that to the general assembly. These appeals will be on the main issue, whether Professor Briggs is a heretic, and not on points of ecclesiastical law; and so the controversy will be prolonged till the people get at least a little education in creed-making. From the standpoint of orthodoxy Professor Briggs's opponents are very unwise, but from the Infidel standpoint they are doing a mighty good thing.

The Anthony Comstock of San Francisco, Mr. C. R. Bennett, who has been accused of ruining a young woman, has been expelled from his church without a dissenting vote. The elders who examined into the charges declare him guilty, and it is to be hoped that the courts will giv him an equally impartial trial. If they do the penitentiary will probably be his home for a long time.

In the West.

News and Notes.

It rained and rained when I arrived at Ottumwa. The place has an energetic nucleus of Liberals, and excellent work has been accomplished. There was disappointment this time though, on account of the impossibility of securing a suitable hall. The lecture was adjourned until a more favorable occasion. Ottumwa has a population of twelve thousand, and audiences of five or six hundred hav been gathered together. This shows a vigorous Liberal element in the community.

John W. Dayton; Mr. Eaton Allen, of Creston; Postmaster Tilton; Mr. Smith; Mr. Thompson, in the labor reform movement; Wm. Lindsay, and others, are among those I met in my brief sojourn. If the rain ever stops I hope to visit Ottumwa again. Unfortunate circumstances will occur and we must make the best of them. I could not, however, hav struck a better company than at Ottumwa to make the hours of waiting pass by with sparkling zest. I did not regret the "lay-off."

The train I intended to travel by was delayed thirteen hours. There was a break in the road. The waters were rushing by fearfully and it looked for the time being as if it would take a day or two, if not a week, to repair the damages. But by Thursday morning I was speeding on my way and on Friday was in Denver safe and sound, at a hight of five thousand feet from the mighty floods of the Mississippi valley. The great mountains towered before me white and glorious, and the green plains, beginning to shine with fruit, stretched away into the effulgent horizon. Denver, proud and prosperous, queen city of the hills, greets one with the music and splendor of its crowded thoroughfares. It has been nearly four years since I was here, and the city is still on the move to empire. Ingersoll has just given two lectures to crowded houses and the effect is still apparent. The people are talking about the great Infidel. All the pulpits resound with praise or blame. A marked progress, however, is evident. Ingersoll is treated with respect by the theologian.

A new movement has been started by Professor Casey—originally a "Christian Science" movement, but under the direction of the professor evidently progressing to broad and Liberal fields. Professor Casey is thoroughly honest, and will not, I think, smother his convictions for the sake of popularity. He is a thinker, and is not afraid to see things differently to-morrow from what he sees them to-day. I guess his motto is, "Don't be consistent, but be simply true." Call his movement by whatever name one will, it is for the advancement of the world on some lines if not all.

I find friend Truss the same genial, learned, and instructiv philosopher as in days past, and together in cordial mental sympathy we hav discussed nearly all the problems of the universe, but hav not yet settled them. We hav concluded that it is a pretty big job, and we are willing to wait until we know more. I hav enjoyed in my short sojourn at Denver the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Truss, and, although a brightness has gone out of their home, the light of humanity still illuminates. When I was here before little Darwin was alive—a beautiful boy, wise beyond his years, for he was the almost constant companion of his father in his blindness. He has passed away in the awful tragedy of death, and no words can speak the sorrow and the loss. We can simply endure, that is all, and meet the eternal fate with brave and buoyant spirit.

The shadow has passed over another home. The son and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Shed hav both died since I was here. I remember them, husband and wife, fondly devoted, gracious in hospitality, and now in life's morning they hav reached the end. How deeply the mystery of existence thrills as we think of these changes, as we pass from light to shadow and from shadow to light, and the universe grows more wonderful as we suffer and still hope on. It seems as if I was in a new world this time as I come to Denver. The stream of time has swept along with such diverse currents.

The soldiers, John G. Jenkins, Charles Roth, etc., are still here, and Denver has a familiar look in spite of the "flood of years." It has been a great pleasure to meet these comrades again, although I only make a flying visit.

Arriving in Denver on Friday, June 3d, the same day I plunge into the heart of the mountains, and reach Blackhawk, where I lecture in the evening. Things didn't roll along quite smoothly, and I didn't hav quite so large an audience as I expected. However, I hope to try it again some time and make a greater success. There is good material at Blackhawk. After the lecture I thought I would see how near I could get to hades without meeting the devil himself. So I donned the miner's suit, and with friends Belcher and Wessel mounted the grimy car, and rode down two thousand feet into the bowels of the earth. It was a weird journey. The lights were dimly burning. The heavy beams hung overhead. The waters trickled with a kind of ghostly shiver, and deep in the darkness throbbed and glittered the mighty engins as if they were keeping up an everlasting war with "chaos and old night."

Saturday I return to Denver, and shifting my journey's route push on to Boulder City. This is one of the handsomest places in Colorado, and for a residence city cannot be surpassed. The state University is here, and makes, with its new buildings, a splendid appearance. The mountains round about are unrivaled in their magnificent ruggedness, and present delightful and sublime views that seem exhaustless in their variety.

Dr. Coman is our frontiersman here, and he does keep things on the move when he sets about it. He is constantly buying and distributing Freethought literature. He believes in education. There is a sturdy Liberal cohort to stand by and help him when the signal comes. I had large audiences. On Sunday evening the hall was as full as it could hold. After the lecture steps were taken for further organization. On this matter it is best for Liberals to work slow and sure. The difficulties must be frankly met. As a spirit Liberalism is wonderfully prevalent, but for its body there must be years and perhaps centuries of growth.

Sunday morning with Mr. and Mrs. Neil McKenzie and Dr. Coman I enjoyed a ride about Boulder, and was more than ever impressed with its excellent location and the natural beauties by which it is surrounded. This is a fruit-bearing country, and the orchards, and vineyards, and cultivated fields present a brilliant contrast to the mighty mountains that rise like a huge barrier along the western sky. In the afternoon I went up Gregory canyon. This was one of the most blood-curdling rides I ever took. I seemed constantly on the brink of hell and ready to tumble in. The road was narrow, winding, going upward like a vast stairway, with huge hills and huge chasms on either side. I had the doctor with me and felt comparativly safe, for he was an old hand at traveling through this terrific country. Besides, if there were any broken heads, he could mend them. I came to the conclusion that he was better than "God" for the present emergency. I hung on to the carriage and he hung on to the horses as they rose above us almost perpendicularly. I remarked to the doctor as I looked at the road, hardly wide enough, it seemed to me, for our own conveyance, "If we met a team how could we get by? One of us would hav to roll off, I think." "Oh," said the doctor, "there's always a chance." Just then we wound round a declivity and right before us a big two-horse wagon loomed. I thought we were caught sure; unless by some method of "Christian Science" we could drive right through each other, I did not see any way out of it. But a mountaineer can do almost anything. The doctor just shoved his carriage against the precipice and stuck the hind wheels into a crevice, while the other man said, "All right." But I shut my eyes as he went by, for it did seem to me that he would tumble into the abyss. He went within an inch of the awful chasm and slid by our carriage with the greatest facility, but I really would not hav believed it if I had not seen it. On we went two or three thousand feet skyward, and more magnificent prospects never unfolded to the wandering eye. Deep gulfs at your feet, mighty rocks above snowy peaks, and far away the immense plain with villages upon its bosom, and sparkling lakes, groves, the winding river—an effulgent, wonderful picture in the glory of the sunset. It was an entrancing journey with a dash of danger. The descent of these tremendous hills was what took my breath away. It seemed as if I was going right down the roof of a house. I could look over the heads of the horses directly into a yawning abyss. As the doctor said, such a view was what made the blood circulate and gave one a new sensation. I do not know whether I would want to try that trip again or not, but I would not hav missed it. It was one of the grandest experiences of nature's sublimest and most beautiful scenes that I hav ever had. Mountains, mountains, plains, plains, the sweet and the terrible, the gentle and the stupendous, mingling in marvelous array as, like a balloon almost, we floated up and down in that glorious atmosphere.

It was a surprise and pleasure indeed to meet at Boulder Mr. and Mrs. Austin, formerly of Rochester, N. Y. They are now living at Boulder, hav built a beautiful home, and the Liberal spirit is still bright in heart and hope. Longmont sent a good delegation—Mrs. Georgiana Rice, Mr. Coffin, Mr. Young, and others.

It is impossible to mention all that I met at Boulder. There are many here, and the list is beyond my space; but this campaign has been a successful one, and I shall not forget the host of friends at Boulder. I must thank Mr. and Mrs. Neil D. McKenzie for their kindly hospitality. They are stanch Liberals and do much to aid our cause.

Monday morning I bid good-bye to Boulder. My next point is Georgetown. I lecture here on Monday evening. It is a romantic journey to this bright burg away up among the mountains. It is a winding way. The river dashes now on this side and now on that side of the railway, while the vast boulders tower along. On and on we whirl into the rocky recesses. It looks at times as if the engin was plunging right into the massiv hillsides, but suddenly the vista opens and we sweep around the curve and another wild panorama opens upon the view.

I giv one lecture at Georgetown, the first I hav ever given here. The attendance was large. There is a big Liberal element in this place. There are some earnest workers—Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Old, Mr. Hayward, Mr. Landers, J. W. Forest, J. A. Thompson, Mr. Lyons, Mr. Young, etc. Landlord Dupuy of Hotel de Paris is a Radical reformer, and knows how to giv a good square meal besides. I am sure that Georgetown could be made one of the best points in the state. Silver Plume, up in the clouds, nearly sent a solid delegation to join with the Georgetown phalanx. I was pleased to meet with these strenuous allies, also with B. F. Southgate, a Vermont Yankee, who keeps our colors flying. The list is long here of those who will stand up and be counted. I cannot name them every one, but I shall remember the splendid welcome which they hav given me, and the promis of the future.

Georgetown is in one of the richest districts of the state. The mountains hug the city close. There is scarcely room to build. The hills are like immense walls. They are nearly straight up and down, and make an imposing framework for this lively mining camp. It is eighty-five hundred feet above the level of the sea.

Amid these scenes of beauty and grandeur I am writing these "News and Notes," in a miner's home—that of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Old. The flowers are in the window, pictures upon the wall, Freethought books in the library, THE TRUTH SEEKER upon the table. Without there is a cloudless dome. The sunshine is gorgeous, summer's warmth is in the air. And yet as I look toward the mountain wall almost in front of the door, I see the snow gleaming in the trees that tuft the lofty summit, and on the bare rocks. Summer and winter are blending here, and in the splendor of one we see the desolate grandeur of the other. I glance from beautiful flowers to cold hights that appear but a few minutes' walk away.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Georgetown, Miner's Home, June 7, 1892.

Letters to Workingmen.

PATENT-RIGHT.

As I said in a former letter, the greatest obstacle to the no-government idea is the theory of protection; and in no instance is this theory more pronounced than in that of protecting inventiv genius. The idea is that unless the man of genius cannot be pecuniarily benefited by having a monopoly of the manufactory and sale of the article invented he would never exercise his talent. This is a mistake. Man's actions are always prompted by his pleasure, and pleasure always follows the bent of natural inclination. Genius prompts invention, and pleasure greets success. If wealth be added the pleasure may be enhanced by increasing the facilities for working and leisure for thinking, but wealth of itself is no incentiv to true genius. But if it were, the laws governing the issue of patents are of no importance or consequence to the man of genius. Genius, industry, sobriety, and integrity as such are in no wise assisted, protected, or promoted by the laws—a strong statement, but one I believe you will admit after a careful study of the question. The only factors that bring advantages by the laws are invasiv power, cunning, and rascality. The effect of "the law" is to giv one an undue advantage over another. The generous and the kind desire no advantage. The vicious and the tyrannous seek it to justify invasiv acts. Show me a mean, contemptible man and I will show you a great stickler for "the law."

> No rogue e'er felt the halter draw
> With good opinion of the law,

is often quoted to prove the contrary, but like many other sayings it proves nothing. The fact is, the rogue has an excellent "opinion of the law." It is the judge's opinion he takes exception to. He had hoped to "stand within the law," and that his lawyer's opinion would prevail. Do not misunderstand me, friends; I speak of law as the acts of legislature, written statutes. Against ethical law, the unwritten law, the natural law, I hav no objections. It is only when man claiming sovereignty over his fellows writes out his interpretations and is empowered to enforce the same that I demur. For a man who seeks to establish a standard for others is much more, as I hav endeavored to show by his political methods, the representativ of rogues than honest men. Covetousness is the author of legality. Legality was established to secure the possession of that which nature never granted and to deny the rights which nature has granted to every human being. "A patent," says Chambers' Encyclopedia, "is an exclusiv right granted . . . to an individual to manufacture and sell a chattel or article of commerce of his own invention. . . . When a patent has been granted, if it is of such a nature as to lead to competition, infringements are almost matters of course, and the only mode of discovering and checking the infringement is so tedious, costly, and ineffectiv that inventors generally pass their lives in constant litigation, fighting in detail a succession of imitators, who often hav nothing to lose by defeat and therefore entail all the greater burden on the legitimate manufacturers. . . . Many manufacturers hav boldly advocated the abolition of the patent system altogether on the plea that the good results, whatever they may be, are overbalanced by the bad." Let me here extract a little from an interview with Mr. Edison as reported by Frank G. Carpenter. The Wizard of Menlo Park said: "Our patent system puts a premium on rascality. I hav taken out seven hundred patents for my inventions, but I hav never had one minute's protection. . . . I hav never made one cent out of my inventions. All I hav made has been out of manufacturing. . . . I believe I would be $600,000 better off if I had never taken out a patent. What I hav made has been because I hav understood the inventions better and hav been able to manipulate the manufacturing of them better than the pirates. I could not hav made anything had I not had large capital to back me, and the ordinary inventor has no protection whatever. His certificate of patent is merely a certificate to the poorhouse, and hundreds of inventors are ruined. They spend all they hav in getting out their inventions and they die poor." The sentence I hav placed in italics tells the story. It is a matter to be taken advantage of by capital, and capital is the beneficiary whether employed by the inventor, the "pirate," or the company who has purchased the right. So far as genius is concerned, it has not the shadow of a chance. But capital is not the only beneficiary; it is a source of great profit to the court, the lawyer, and the politician. Patent laws, like all other laws, are molded by lawyers and tempered by politicians for their own utility, and while their inefficacy is admitted by all, the great majority seem to think the principle is right and that by using the politician as the monkey did the cat's paw they may pull out real chestnuts from the fire. But, friends, the principle is too much of a "chestnut," and it is you and not the politicians who are being used as the cat's paw.

I want you to consider the monopolies founded upon the patent laws, exacting a large price for articles which but for the exclusiv right might be manufactured at prices which the laborer could afford. And I want you to realize that vendors and manufacturers who are enabled by those laws to monopolize certain avenues of trade can render no reason why they should be thus favored, as the great majority of them came into possession of the right by the use of money or fraud, or both, the poor devil whose brain gave birth to the idea being bought off for a few shillings. I hav in mind this moment one such, now laboring by the day to support his family. I knew him when a prosperous grocer, engaged upon perfecting a mechanical contrivance for elevating and drying grain, neglecting his store in his study. His business declined as his invention progressed, and when his model was perfected his money was gone. He placed it on exhibition at the rooms of the board of trade. Some men of means became interested, the sole right to manufacture and sell was obtained, and the invention has enriched some half dozen men, while the inventor is working for $1.50 a day.

I want you to dwell upon another point. It is this: The patent laws are preventing and obstructing progress instead of promoting it, as its defenders would hav us believe. In fact, you will find that the tendency of all laws is to defeat the avowed object for which they were constructed. All monopolies restrict and prevent labor, reduce wages, and increase the price of commodities, create idleness, producing tramps, vice, and crime. I believe it can be demonstrated that the world produces enough to giv abundance and to satisfy the wants of every living soul, and the only reason why poverty exists may be found in the fact that laws and customs hav given favored ones a monopoly of the means of living. The natural desire to excel and domineer over one's fellows and the opportunity to rise above and keep in subjection a lower order of human beings hav created those laws and customs.

Opportunity favors individuals. The animal instinct comes into play through the struggle for existence and the survival of the fittest. Monopoly is the animal, the ignorant, brutal nature of man. Liberty, quoting from To-day, says: "More than fifty years ago Mr. Babbage predicted that if a new power were to be discovered that could be generated in a central place in sufficient quantities and then distributed wherever it was wanted, the age of domestic manufacture would return. The huge factory would tend to disappear and the small factory would multiply everywhere." I want you to think of this—how very important for your happiness this would be. It is the large factory, the monopoly of labor-saving machinery, that causes the centralization of wealth that destroys the efficacy of trades by the division of laborers into the various departments, and is making wage-slavery the only means of existence of a large majority of mankind. And what prevents the establishment of domestic manufacturing? Is it not the monopoly of the factors required through the laws of patent-right?

In the article above quoted a Mr. Cook Taylor, an English inspector of factories, expresses the opinion "that we are on the verge of the discovery of a power which can be distributed in workingmen's homes, and which will result in the return of the laborer to his cottage and his family." While Dr. Albrecht, a German statistician, also predicts "that with the improvement of electric motors and the cheapening of electricity, there will be a great increase of small shops and possibly a return to the day of small industries." Again, I ask what prevents this "cheapening of electricity" and return of "small industries?" If the patent monopoly, in which we may include the land monopoly and money monopoly, could be removed, then every man could be a capitalist, every man and woman could be independent. Wage-slavery, with its attendant poverty, drunkenness, and prostitution, would become the exception and not as now the rule. I am sure that a study of the intricate problems of sociology will bring out more and more the importance of liberty in the realms of thought and action. As Voltairine de Cleyre has said, "Follow your logic out, cannot you see that true economy lies in liberty?" It is liberty and not protection that will bring about the decentralization of wealth and industry which I regard as the hope of the world. Patents—that is to say, exclusiv rights—iusure profits, and profits (taking from another without rendering an equivalent) is robbery. Patents inaugurate rents—not economic rent, but profitable rent—robbery. Patents engender interest, and interest—taking what in equity is not ours—again robbery. And this, in short, is expressed in Proudhon's celebrated saying, "Property is robbery," meaning legal exclusiv rights, which are issued as letters patent.

A. L. Ballou.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Christian Barbarism.—Dr. Parkhurst.

I hav just read in the last week's Truth Seeker an item of news that I will copy, as I think it will do no harm if each reader of that paper shall read it more than once: "During the last twelve months one hundred and fifty negroes hav been lynched in the United States, seven hav been burnt alive, one has been flayed alive, and one disjointed." I am sure if such atrocities can be enacted in these United States, we need spend no more time in discussing whether or not we are a Christian nation; surely it is proved. Our American Indians scalp and burn alive, but I hav yet to hear of their flaying alive or disjointing; and surely we do not hear of other savages reveling in such horrible cruelty.

We know that the Christian's God is a monster of cruelty, creating people just for the enjoyment of roasting them through an eternity, and as the author of physical nature, one would think that for the last several months he had been holding high carnival in that floods and fires, lightning and earthquakes, hav been of every-day occurrence. Such teaching has had its legitimate effect, and we can find any number of people who, if they do not actually flay a negro alive, excuse the perpetrator and say, Oh, well, the nigger outraged a white woman. I wonder if some of Dr. Parkhurst's friends (or is followers the better word?) hav ever outraged a woman—perhaps a colored woman. Dr. Parkhurst's case is too much, I think, even for a Christian. Imagin Mrs. Parkhurst taking a sister church-member to accompany her and, for the sake of proving a wrong, going to a saloon, taking a drink, and then persuading some of the young men to denude themselvs of their clothing, and then frolicking with them.

Yes, Mr. Editor, I am fully convinced that this is a Christian nation, that our government is Christian, and that it is decidedly Christian to shut up the great Exposition every seventh day. I hope that with the other specimens of cruelty exhibited with which Christians hav tortured each other, we may hav a picture of this late transaction in New York, if it can be given without shocking the feelings of Anthony Comstock, the Christian detectiv, who figured in much the same way near New York some years ago.

The proprietress of the house by Dr. Parkhurst's testimony was sent to prison. Where are the gentlemen who, by their patronage, made the house a profitable business?

I hav not seen my name in The Truth Seeker of late, not because I am not in heart and soul with it in its work, but I am growing old, and younger people need the space. I do not like to feel that I cannot still work for liberty, but if one has not done all possible in seventy-five years there is little hope of very much to come.

I am, very truly yours for the world's progress,

Lucy N. Colman.

412 Gifford st., Syracuse, N. Y., June 5, 1892.

Legal Tender.

"We the people pay to our national government one million dollars every day in taxes" (McKinley speech in Ohio). That is true. And what does government do with the money? It pays it right back to the people again. It pays one hundred millions in pensions; another hundred to the army, navy, contractors, Indians, and the like, and the remainder goes to Congress, civil servants, improvements, interest on debt, etc. We are all the time paying in to government and it is all the time paying out to us. But what is the money used for? It is used to pay for services done or commodities delivered.

The real fact is, government wants us to furnish produce, goods, and do labor. But as it is unhandy for all of us to do this, a part of us act as soldiers, sailors, laborers, contractors, servants, and the remainder of us hand over to the government the goods, clothing, and other things that these few require to liv on—but instead of doing it directly we giv to government the money pieces and government givs the money pieces to those it employs so that they may get what they want with them. And that is all that is doing the world over with money. A piece of money is but a certificate entitling the holder to call on any person to giv the holder any service or any article he holds himself out as dealing in. Its sole value is in the confidence generally given to it. Take away that confidence and it is worthless, whether it be gold, silver, diamond, or paper. "Nothing is worth anything except in opinion."

Now, seeing we owe taxes to government and the money is but a certificate, why does not government issue its certificates to its creditors who may call on us or any of us for what they may want, instead of going to private persons and borrowing the certificates and giving interest? Was there ever a greater absurdity put in practice? Here is just what it is: suppose I owe you a hundred dollars and you owe me the same. To pay my debt to you I go and borrow the money of some one and you also go and borrow of that same one to pay me. We both leave unused the real, true, and only money which ever was, is, or could be in the transaction—that is, our own intermoving credits.

And that is just what all governments and peoples are legally doing about money. By custom or permission the vast business of mankind is moving through the use of these credit-on-paper signs. But by law this real money is not money at all save by the will of gold-owners. Let the least accident or confusion occur and all the innumerable debts must be paid in gold—the paper signs must be settled with gold signs. It is as though no one should use any but licensed vehicles for carrying although by custom ninety-eight per cent of all carrying were done by unlicensed ones, and suddenly the law is sternly enforced. What a grand opportunity for the licensed vehicle men. What a dreadful calamity by our own folly! Now, the money sign carries the exchange while the vehicle carries the thing. The one is as much a vehicle as the other. And one of the most doleful errors ever man fell into is that same one about gold or any other thing being naturally money to the exclusion of all other things. It is just as bad if we issue one kind of paper as the sole legal tender yet permit other paper (or metal) to circulate as non-legal tender. We did that during the war and the sixty millions paper full legal tender ruled and depreciated the many hundred millions not full legal tender. The former circulated as gold and not a dollar of real gold was in circulation. If you doubt that, read the "Black Friday Proceedings." "HOLT."

Oregon, Mo.

This Convention Wants Sunday Opening.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: In order to show you that the People's party movement in this country is not altogether composed of bigots, I send you a copy of the resolutions passed at a recent county convention held here, wherein you will find among others one favoring the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. This convention represented forty-five hundred voters and was composed of one hundred delegates from different sections of the county. A more resolute body of men is seldom seen gathered. That the people of this section are ready to throw off the shackles of religious and political bigotry is certain. "Men of thought, men of action, clear the way."

Come, brother Freethinkers, let us assist the struggling masses in their efforts to gain liberty and happiness, and dethrone preacher and shylock.

Yours truly, ELIAS STEENERSON.

Crookston, Minn., June 4, 1892.

PLATFORM OF THE PEOPLE'S PARTY OF POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, ADOPTED BY THE CONVENTION HELD AT CROOKSTON, MAY 24, 1892.

We, the delegates of the People's party in the county convention assembled, do promulgate and prescribe the following principles:

1. That we reaffirm the principles of the People's party as formulated and adopted at St. Louis, Feb. 24, 1892.
2. We are unqualifiedly opposed to the creation and maintenance of an office-holding class and to all forms and usages leading to political corruption.
3. In order to destroy the power of legislativ lobbies we favor the adoption of a referendum to be patterned after that in operation in the republic of Switzerland.
4. We favor the passage of a lien law which will absolutely protect wage-workers from the fraudulent withholding of their wages, and giv to them the first lien upon the product of their labor.
5. That we demand a national law prohibiting the employment of the so-called Pinkerton's bands or any other similar institution for the purpose of intimidating citizens who are fighting for the right to the product of their own labor.
6. That we favor the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition every day of the week.
7. That we demand that the government of the United States take immediate steps to foreclose the mortgage on the Pacific railroads as a preparatory measure looking toward the nationalization of the railroads of the country.
8. That we ask that the government provide sufficient elevator facilities at the headwaters of the Great Lakes to supply wants of all grain-shippers.
9. That we condemn option gambling in all its forms.
10. Believing that the national government is and should be principally interested in improving all our navigable rivers, we therefore ask that Congress make adequate appropriations in order to improve the navigation of the Red and Red Lake rivers.
11. That since private enterprise cannot accomplish a public improvement extending over a large portion of our state, we demand that the state legislature make appropriation of a sufficient amount to establish a good system of drainage where required in the Red river valley and other parts of the state.
12. We denounce the scheme of establishing a national park in the northern part of our state as being detrimental to the development of the natural resources of the northern part of the state and ruinous to the industries of the Red river valley.
13. That we are in favor of the preservation of our forests by prohibiting the cutting of timber below certain dimensions in all sections of the country.
14. That we utterly repudiate any scheme of fusion with other political parties.

MINORITY REPORT ADOPTED.

WHEREAS, We are unqualifiedly opposed to the establishment and maintenance of an office-holding class, and also to all forms and usages leading to political corruption, as they are inimical to the free and untrammeled expression of public opinion in matters of government, and

WHEREAS, Under the present laws of Minnesota, adequate protection is not guaranteed laborers and mechanics against swindling contractors and employers, therefore be it

Resolved, That we favor such constitutional amendments, both state and national, as shall absolutely prohibit an ex-official holding office within two years from the expiration of his official term, also that any office-holder convicted of political agitation during his term of office shall forfeit both his office and salary. Be it further

Resolved, That we favor the adoption of a referendum to be patterned after that in operation in the republic of Switzerland, and be it further

Resolved, That we favor the passage of a lien law which will absolutely protect the wage-workers from fraudulent withholding of their wages and giv to them the first lien, whatever the work, and be it further

Resolved, That the so-called Pinkerton bands, or any other similar bands, be extinguished in both the state and nation.

H. G. MITCHELL, Chairman,
JOHN E. OPPEGAARD, Secretary.

How Shall Women Dress?

A REJECTED COMMUNICATION.

Editor Cincinnati Herald: In the Woman's Column of your issue of February 19th, I read: "I believe in dress reform for women. I believe that girls and women should dress for health, comfort, and convenience. But their garments in material and make-up should be distinctivly feminin. Whenever a woman tries to look like a man she'll lose much that makes her charming to men, even with her most thoughtful friends amongst the opposit sex."

To where this writer ends with "health, comfort, convenience," I sturdily indorse, but I hav my "but" as well as said writer, and it looms up like an eternally snow-capped mountain where he or she advises woman to hav "her garments distinctivly feminin in material and make-up or otherwise she will lose much that makes her charming to man, even with her most thoughtful friends amongst the opposit sex." In the wind-up here a threat can be construed, hence it smells of man's impertinent habit of dictating to woman, even in concerns most personal to herself; and if it be a man that has thus written, it adds one more to my list of objections, to say nothing of the colossal conceit in presuming to know how all kinds of men will be affected for all time by something that so far is practically new and untried. Judging by the many varying, opposing, and contradictory methods of "charming" that the world presents to our view, we hav a right to assume that men will be only temporarily affected by the change under discussion, as they are by the change of hats on themselvs. It would be hard to convince a savage that "charming" was possible other than by a tattooed face and body, and it seems as if we in our clothing are as much wedded to our ideas of "charming" as the savage is to his.

I hav not heard that the Eskimo women were suffering by their similarity in garb to men, though encompassed by a climate cold enough to freeze off the nose of a brass monkey.

As no kind of slavery is any longer legally admitted in this country, it follows that a woman is as much entitled to individual sovereignty as a man, and hence, cannot too jealously exercise the right to dress as she pleases, though it seems to me the best course in the long run would be for her by garb to aim at something more enduring and trustworthy for happiness than what is commonly implied in "charming." I believe it will be granted that there is a cruel side to sexual love and that it is sufficiently indicated when termed "lust," or a desire for gratification regardless of the cost to another. Well, I think it ought to be considered that there may be a possible tendency in "distinctivly feminin dress" to unduly develop this cruel side in men; for what do we know about this all-important subject of which the scientific study has been so long tabooed?

And I also think it will not be disputed that pure saving sexual love is that condition of mind in a person who would rather die than harm a hair on the head of the one beloved; and I would ask what better means can there be to hav this beautiful saving flower of love all-pervading than to thoroughly familiarize our children, from boyhood to manhood, with how women are charged with all the burden, pain, and danger of perpetuating human life? Familiarizing them on the principle that the nearer and more constant our consciousness or our knowledge is of the evil effects of our acts the greater will be our self-restraint. A man may be sorry for, but he does not reproach himself if ignorant or unconscious of the evil effects of his acts. Further, if men are indelibly impressed with the fact that women are the same as themselvs in being all contradictory, with some weak, some vicious, and some noble-minded, and that all hav the same desires, appetites, and passions, they will then see what a dirty, cowardly shame it is to charge woman not only with the restraint of herself but with the restraint of man as well, and they will also see that that which is not sinful in man to do or know is neither sinful in woman to do or know. And, in my opinion, to instill this knowledge, it will be necessary to hav boys and girls, men and women, constantly associated together, whether for pleasure or work, outdoor or indoor; but this close comradeship is not possible until woman utterly discards skirts. Because, with skirts, she can neither jump, nor run, nor climb; if she approaches a fire, some puff of wind, a stumbling or heedless child, or rubbing cat or dog, or some unconscious movement of her own body, and behold! her light, outflowing, spreading skirts are instantly aflame; if on a vicious or runaway horse it is nearly sure death; if falling in swimming water she is more helpless and unmanageable than a log; if riding or walking, she is halted and torn by every straggling twig and briar. And she is neither protected from cold nor from creeping things. To sum up: compared to man's the present garb of woman is a constant menace to her health, life, and limb, besides practically condemning her to a convict life from not daring to move out from between four walls. If the barbaric origin of skirts, as developed by historical research and inductiv reasoning, was generally admitted, such origin would be alone sufficient to make woman indignantly discard them and hasten to don pants securely buttoned up man-fashion.

Step out, you skulking Adam, and take your medicin. GEO. T. BONDIES.

Forney, Tex., February, 1892.

WHY IT WAS REJECTED.

MR. GEO. T. BONDIES, Forney, Tex., Dear Sir: I return you your manuscript, not because you disagreed with me, but because you misapprehend my meaning. I only intended to convey one idea and, I think, ninety-nine out of a hundred would understand that at a single reading, that women in a struggle for freedom should remain women and not ape a man. There are actually differences between the sexes outside of those recognized by law. There are many women, I am sorry to say, who, in their struggle for independence, are aping the very worst there is in man. In fact, they are dissatisfied with God because he did not make them men. I know a female physician in Kansas who wears a man's hat, coat, shirt, collar, necktie, and maybe his pants, I don't know, and walks along the street with the swagger of a sport and occasionally stops and sees how far she can spit. That woman does not deserve the respect of either sex any more than the man would who wore the voice, clothes, etc., of a woman. Masculin women will never be popular, neither will effeminate men. Jenness Miller has proved that a woman may dress for health, comfort, and convenience and be as graceful as a Greek goddess. I hav gone as far as any man in the direction of national freedom for women. I not only believe in their rights to vote and to fill any position for which they are mentally qualified, but I believe in their absolute freedom in all their relations of life including the marriage state, but I shall never like the woman who abuses her freedom by an attempt to ape men. The gentle qualities of a true woman are the greatest conserving moral force in the world. I am an old bachelor, and I would remain an old bachelor until I was as old as Methusaleh's grandmother before I would marry a woman who would wear pants like Dr. Mary Walker. I am willing that women should be musicians, lawyers, physicians, artists, anything that she is capable of being, but I shall never liv long enough to be satisfied in seeing women driving drays, working in livery stables, digging wells, serving in the army and navy, etc. It is not their work; they are not adapted to it; they never ought to be expected to perform it. But a woman can fill any mental position that a man can, and do it well, but in the line of physical labor there is quite a difference of adaptation between the sexes.

Now, in the last half of your letter you present some good ideas, but you did it in harsh language. The fine art in the reform movement is to say things in a way that will not shock that class to whom you must necessarily look for leaders in all great reforms.

There is one trouble with reformers. The most of them want to throw rocks, and smash windows, and raise the devil generally. I was just as bad as anyone for a while, but I got mighty hungry at it and concluded in the future to put a little of the graces of rhetoric into my work. Since I commenced that I hav succeeded admirably. The great trouble with reformers is that they go too far. The Anarchists want everybody to do as they please, even though they please to raise the devil. I want to teach people to use their liberty, to do what is right, true, and practicable. I think you hav the capacity to do some good work. I trust you will take this letter kindly and modify your ideas and your language and sail into the work.

Yours kindly, M. W. WILKINS.

WHAT THE WRITER REPLIED TO THE EDITOR.

FORNEY, TEX., March 28, 1892.

M. W. WILKINS, Editor Herald, Cincinnati, O., Dear Sir: I hav just received my manuscript of matter on woman's dress reform and your letter, of the 25th inst., accompanying it. And now, my dear fellow, I will hav to endeavor to work up a little storm for the purpose of clearing the mental atmosphere between us. Take it, I beg of you, with the easy good nature that flows from the consciousness of being able to return as good blows as are sent you. So straighten up for the first. And it is in reminding that, though it is implied in your letter that you are an old hand "at the bellows" of reform, you nevertheless violated newspaper ethics in, silently, retaining my manuscript for something like a month when, it is now evident, you had no intention, at any time, of publishing its matter. As to the harshness you charge me with, I may hav been too ready at taking it for granted that you would see that I meant to be purely impersonal and that your editorial paragraph was merely used as a peg to hang my matter upon. In other words, that I was striking over your shoulders at all men who believed as you preached on woman's dress. If you had been less ex cathedra in your style of announcement, I would hav found it awkward to hav expressed myself according to the vigor of my desires. In fact, I halfway expected to find you privately agreeing with me and, like a certain Quaker on a certain occasion, ready to secretly reward me for my rude assault. But alas! that I should be so self-deceived as to your intention of not inviting a fight, hippodrome or real. And now after this apologetic explanation, I hope you will smooth your corrugated front and smile blandly while taking a few more of my love pats.

Being myself vain and conceited as it is possible to be, I not only forgiv your patronization of me but thank you for considerable amusement thereby, and you hav my gracious permission to laugh as heartily at me as I am laughing at you. Still, I pray you, venerable Mentor, describe and tell your Telemachus where are to be found "that class to whom we must necessarily look for leaders in all great reforms." Hav they never had a diapered babyhood? And hav they such distinguishing peculiarities as three eyes—two in the front and one in the rear? Or possibly they are so ethereal as not to require anything so gross as eating but liv and wax strong on scent alone? I want to know because you imply that my way of saying things shocks them; and, by these precedents, you must readily perceive how quick I will bend the knee when once convinced of there being persons or things peculiarly and singularly set apart for leadership in human affairs. You must feel that I would be incapable of carping at their being monstrosities and hence far removed from common, every-day folks like you and myself. No, perish the thought! In the mean while I am so dazed by the anticipated revelation of this class of infallible leaders that you will hav to pardon my limping attention to other matters in your letter. For instance, where you would make it a crime for women to ape (as you term it) men in garb or deportment, thus seeming to forget that language and all other things, that you know and do yourself, come mainly from the aping faculty common to us all. Besides, what right hav you to assume that a woman is solely aping men when she can advance so many substantial reasons for similarity of garb? And even if she was confessedly aping, it would be, in my opinion, an outrage for you to offensivly object as long as she did not attempt to force you to wear her discarded skirts and frilled pantalets. As to your objection to a woman spitting as far as she can, pardon me for also assuming that you are opposed to man's continuing, by the ideas conveyed in such terms as "unladylike," "gross," "vulgar," "disreputable," etc., to practically forbid woman's spitting at all, to the great injury of her health and fouling of her breath—and thence suggesting that you might be in favor of arresting and fining her if she went beyond the demure use of a spittoon tied under chin when walking or driving on a public thoroughfare; but even this arrangement would hav its drawbacks and hence I am in favor that man utterly cease, in any manner, whether by word, look, or gesture, attempting to make woman any longer ashamed of having a mouth and a nose.

Thanking you for another opportunity of airing my thoughts, I remain,

Yours kindly, GEO. T. BONDIES.

My Second Campaign.

On my way to Manchester I stopped off at Ryan, upon the invitation of Chas. Hickethier, and spent the earlier portion of the day with him, going on to Manchester by a later train. Upon my arrival at the latter place, I held a telegraphic correspondence with E. L. Farrington, of Waverly, Ia., announcing the death of his father, the Hon. M. Farrington, and requesting that I should attend the funeral and conduct the services.

Great efforts had been made to hav my course of lectures successful in Manchester, and upon my arrival I found the Liberals eagerly anticipating my advent in the town. Manchester appears to be a thriving town of about six thousand inhabitants, but it is extremely orthodox. There are but few outspoken Liberals in the place, while many who are favorably inclined toward Freethought are held somewhat in check by the public sentiment. Still, there are a few that not all the powers of hell could swerve from the path of duty and right, men who hav stood by our cause through all its trials, who hav shared the glories of its triumphs and suffered in its defeats.

The lectures were given in the city hall, a magnificent building for the size of the town, and upon the first night a good-sized audience assembled therein to hear me talk against the dogmatic assertions of the church. Mr. Howe very ably presided at each meeting.

The audience listened very attentivly throughout the whole proceedings, and at the conclusion manifested certain signs of appreciation.

Thus Freethought is gradually gaining ground. It is impossible to estimate the good that is accomplished by these lectures; already the clergy feel their effects, and in many instances are driven to stand upon the defensiv. This is just what we want—we must drive them to the platform, and compel them to work instead of praying, to become teachers instead of preachers.

Immediately at the close of my lecture, I repaired to the depot, and ten minutes later I was on my way to Waverly, to perform the last sad offices of respect and to pay the last tribute of affection over the remains of an aged but valuable ally in the glorious cause of human freedom, M. Farrington. One by one our friends are lying down to sleep, to sleep the last long sleep of death. One by one they are passing on to join the innumerable caravan of those who hav already mingled with the dust. But some men, like some stars, outshine the rest, and stand as a beacon-light about the pitfalls of the rocky path of life's highway, a beacon around which others seem to cluster and to gain their strength. This brave Freethinker has gone; he has entered upon that voyage from whence no traveler has ever returned. His death has left a void that cannot be easily filled. A kind father, a loving husband, a true-hearted and generous friend, he won the love, honor, and respect of all who knew him.

The Hon. Matthew Farrington was born at Poughkeepsie, in the state of New York, on Sept. 18, 1822. From his early youth he was an ardent advocate of physical and mental liberty. Before he had even attained his majority he allied himself with the Abolition movement, and became an enthusiastic follower of William Lloyd Garrison. At this period in his career, he made a solemn vow that he would never accept an office whereby he would be compelled to take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, nor even to cast a vote for any candidate so long as that Constitution recognized the infamous doctrin of human slavery, a vow which he faithfully kept, and all his life he strictly adhered to the principles inculcated therein.

In his younger days he followed the profession of pupil-teacher, when eventually he settled down in Bremen county, Ia., with his wife, Anna L. Willis, in the year 1851. He then took up farming for a livelihood, and at the time of his death was one of the oldest settlers in that section. When the emancipation was proclaimed and slavery no longer regarded as a divine right by the American government, he felt that he was released from his vows and took an activ interest in the political welfare of his country.

He first allied himself with the Republican party, but subsequently became an enthusiastic supporter of the Greenback movement, and later he affiliated with the Democratic body, and was an ardent admirer of the principles of that party until his death.

His services were duly recognized by his fellowmen, and amply rewarded by placing him in positions of trust.

During the years 1871–72 he was supervisor of Bremen county. He was also made the president of the Iowa State League, in which capacity he served for three years. He was, again, the president of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and president of the Liberal League of northern Iowa. He was an efficient speaker, and an able debater, and has held joint discussions upon political and religious topics with some of the ablest men in the state of Iowa.

Always an enthusiastic Freethinker, he never hesitated to avow his honest thoughts, and was ever ready to defend them from the attacks of orthodoxy. Well does he know the price of being an advocate of mental freedom. Urged by his friends to accept the nomination for county representativ, he finally consented and was placed upon the ticket, but was defeated by about one hundred votes. Even some of his own personal friends had voted against him for no other reason than being a Freethinker. But never for one moment did he falter, and went on through life undaunted, fully determined never to sacrifice an intellectual principle for the sake of political preferment. It was not the praise of the people he sought, for he constantly rebuked them. It was their welfare that he studied.

But now this brave and noble Freethinker has gone, gone back to the arms of nature from whence he came. True to his principles in life, he remained steadfast to them in death. His couch was never desecrated by the polluting touch of the priest. Fully conscious of what was taking place, he died without a murmur on his lips, or even a sigh of regret. He approached the grave like one who > Wraps the drapery of his couch

> About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

The funeral services were held at 9 o'clock in the morning of the 19th of May. Fully one hundred people had gathered together to listen to the secular services, and to take the last look upon the face of him who had just gone. Two secular hymns were sung, after which I gave an address; then commenced the weary procession of the funeral cortege to the cemetery, which lay at a distance of nine miles from the Farrington residence. Being such a popular and well-known man, I gave another short oration at the side of the grave for the benefit of those who could not conveniently attend the services at the house. The services over, I returned to Manchester, where I lectured again the same evening.

Owing to the severity of the storms I did not arrive at my destination until 9 o'clock, but late as it was Chas. Hickethier and Mr. Howe were at the depot to meet me. The audience, knowing the cause of my delay, sat in the hall and patiently awaited my appearance, and in a brief space of time I was on the platform again battling musty creeds and fighting superstition.

My audience had increased a little over the first night, and upon the occasion of my third lecture it increased still more, and began to manifest a little interest in the lecture and frequently exhibited signs of enthusiasm.

I was very pleased indeed at the success that followed my efforts in Manchester; our friends were enthusiastic over them, and I heartily acquiesced in their desires and wishes that I should visit Manchester again in the near future.

Saturday morning I leave the state of Iowa, with its floods, swamps, and rains, and once more crossing the now swollen, turbulent, and angry waters of the Mississippi river, I enter the state of Illinois, and finally reach Chicago a few hours late. However, I speedily wend my way to the home of E. A. Stevens, whose hospitable doors are always open to the Freethought wanderers as they travel to and fro. Mr. Stevens is away from home, but his wife gave me a pleasant welcome to Chicago, and bade me make myself thoroughly at home, an injunction which I obeyed to the very letter.

All is now bustle and excitement in this great Western metropolis; improvements are being made upon every side in anticipation of the great World's Fair. Large blocks are being razed to the ground and handsome, massiv structures are being reared in their places. A new elevated railroad, after the fashion of New York, has been erected and will be put in operation within the next few days.

While here I visit all of my old friends and acquaintances, but as my brother-in-arms, S. P. Putnam, has said so much concerning them, he has left me very little to say in addition. I will state that he has expressed exactly my sentiments.

Of course, I pay a visit to A. D. O'Neil, and if he is a "right bower," his excellent wife is most assuredly a good left, and I believe they are both known as excellent jokers. In fact, all of the friends that greet the Liberal lecturer in Chicago are "trumps," and they know how to use him to advantage.

On Tuesday afternoon I spend a few hours with Judges Bennett and Russell, the attorneys who carried on the fight against the Roman Catholic church inaugurated here a few years ago by our late secretary, E. A. Stevens, and which would hav undoubtedly ended in a gigantic triumph for our party had he not been prevented from continuing the case against them. These two lawyers are both devoted to our cause, and are earnest in their labors for Freethought.

Wednesday evening we spend very pleasantly indeed, at the home of Miss Ida Black, where, after a sumptuous dinner, we are entertained by vocal and instrumental music. Mr. McElroy is with us and charms us with some excellent vocal compositions. Sunday, May 29th, turns out to be a beautiful day and we accept the invitation of George L. Robertson to drive out to the World's Fair grounds and inspect the great buildings now in course of erection for the celebration of that great event. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Rojalm, Mrs. Stevens, and myself form the party, and after a few hours' ride along Michigan avenue and South Park boulevard with their handsome and palatial residences we arrive at the grounds.

It is Sunday, but many workmen are busily engaged completing these immense structures. The blow of a hammer resounding on the air, the buzz of saws, the whirr of machinery, bespeak the activ interest of the people of Chicago in this great undertaking.

The Fair grounds are thronged with visitors, handsome equipages are rolling through the parks and entering the grounds, for which an admission fee of twenty-five cents is charged. This grand fact, the present opening of the Fair grounds and the thousands that flock there already on the first day of each week, speaks out in unmistakable language concerning the intentions of the directors with regard to Sunday opening, and shows distinctly the grand success that would attend the permanent opening thereof and the financial failure that would result from its closing.

But this is not what the preachers desire; they want to close the Fair, while the liquor stores, churches, and other houses of ill fame shall be allowed to keep open and do a flourishing business in consequence.

We visit the grounds, and, after a picnic lunch upon the grassy lawns, we return home, and Sunday evening was pleasantly spent at the house of Mr. Robertson.

Monday morning, amid pleasant farewells and wishes for success, I take my leave of Chicago once more and continue my travels. So I start off again, this time to Angola, Ind., where I shall giv two lectures.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Secretary Ohio State Secular Union.
154 N. High street, Columbus, O.

A Rejoinder.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: In your issue of May 28th there appears a venomous attack on Colonel Ingersoll in general and the Jews as a class in particular. Colonel Ingersoll needs no apologist. His honesty, patriotism, love of his fellow-men, and political integrity are irreproachable, and Mr. Jones is in the position of a pigmy trying to upheave a mountain. It is not my purpose to defend Mr. Ingersoll's political convictions; however, I am sure, whatever they be, they are honest and emanate from studying the different issues. The question whether we should hav unlimited coinage of silver and thereby go to financial ruin, or continue our currency on a metallic standard, which prevails among the nations with which we exchange, is one about which legislators differ, the same as they do on the tariff and other momentous questions.

But Mr. Jones has a theory (which is not to be found in any book of political economy or finance) which he calls the "Jew system of finance," and proceeds to lay his particular grievance, and all the evils which afflict mankind, at the feet of the Jews. I fail to find a single reputable writer who claims that the Jews hav a different "system" than the Mohammedans, Christians, and other folk. The "system" emanates from Mr. Jones's capacious intellect, and hence must be refuted before it evolves itself into a fixed science and becomes a standard work on finance.

I will say for the benefit of Mr. Jones and others who are equally as illiberal, that history vindicates all his ribald attacks on a much-maligned people; and also that anti-Semitism is not fashionable in this country just at present. Thanks to our progressiv civilization, such sentiments will never take root on American soil. He says: "And every person acquainted with history knows the Christian church, or followers of the Nazarene, until the sixteenth century after the Christian era stood uncompromisingly on that position and absolutely refused to tolerate the practice of taking interest or usury. The Jew was persistent then as now in it, as much so as he is in his religion. . . . But when the united churches and states in Europe and this continent began to tremble for fear the common people would secure their civil, religious, political, and industrial liberty, the priest, minister, noble, and royalty, and the old Jew shylock, entered into an unholy alliance to keep them in subjection. . . . In brief, old shylock the Jew has converted what we usually call Christendom—clergy, noble, and state—over to his religion of mammon, usury, and churchianity. . . . The Jew, who for eighteen hundred years has been destitute of a country, and always has been and is devoid of patriotism; who has not faith in God or man—nothing but a handful or tillful of gold or silver," etc.

I am at a loss to know what historian has branded a whole people a lot of parasites, cowards, knaves, and thieves. Were Mr. Jones's conclusions correct, the civilized world would be justified in extirpating the whole Jewish race. But their charge has been answered so often that it seems useless to pay any attention to this class of writers who quote "history." But it is necessary, in order not to poison the minds of less thinking people, to challenge such tirades in the name of humanity and Liberalism.

The history of the Jews is full of bitterness and woe. Originally being an agricultural and pastoral people, they were nearly extirpated by their Roman conquerers, who were enraged at their rebellious spirit, and at last were scattered all over the world. Being dispersed in small bands in barbarous Europe, they were not strong enough to wrest the land from its older inhabitants, like the Huns, Sclavs, Turks, and more numerous races who established their supremacy by the sword. They were not allowed to own land where they at last found asylum, and the most oppressiv laws were made and enforced against them. History is full of barbarous persecutions of this race; and were it not for their extraordinary vitality and the fortitude with which they can bear persecution, they would long ago hav become extinct like other ancient races.

But what I said above is medieval history, and I want to confine myself to modern times.

Since the French Revolution there has come a change for the better for all mankind; and progressiv and representativ governments prevail in all Europe, with the exception of Russia. We are evoluting. True, we hav not reached the millennium, whatever that may be; but that cannot be accomplished in one year, or in ten, or in fifty. The Jew takes his place among his fellow-citizens, and is one of them in spirit and action. In those countries in Europe where he has gained complete political freedom, he has always been ready to defend the state. As proof of this we hav only to read the histories of European wars since the French Revolution. The proportion of Jews in the armies was fully equal to that of citizens of other religions. In the patriotic struggle of Hungary for independence the Jews of that country united their fortunes with Kossuth. After the Russians invaded the country and overwhelmed the revolutionists by sheer numbers, the emperor of Austria was so angered at the Jews for having taken part in the struggle that he immediately imposed an old and obnoxious tax on all the Jews in the empire.

Some of the leading statesmen in France in this century hav been men of Hebraic blood. Castelar, of Spain; Laskhar, of Germany; Gambetta, of France; and Disraeli, of England, were all of Jewish extraction.

It is nonsensical to blame the inequities of our civilization on the Jews. Admitting that a few Jews in Europe hav succeeded in distancing all others in the mad race for wealth, how does this make all Jews "financiers?" What about the wealthy class in this country? Does not Mr. Jones know that twenty-five thousand people of the United States own nine-tenths of all the wealth? Is he acquainted with the condition of the poverty-stricken masses in Great Britain, where enormous fortunes are concentrated in a few hands? If he is embittered against modern exploitation, let him condemn the system which puts nine-tenths of the race at the mercy of a few taskmasters. His virulent remarks are out of place. In the race for life we all hav a show. Some are fleet-footed and distance those who lag or fall by the wayside. Till the whole social system is changed all is fair and legitimate. But when in the future the social system undergoes a change for the better, as it eventually must, then the robbery will cease and a new and happier "system of finance" will prevail.

"JACQUES GAUTIER."
Pittsburgh, Pa., June 11, 1892.

The Illogic of a Christian.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: What do you think of a "Christian" who allows himself to produce children, knowing that they run many more chances of going to hell than to heaven, and yet cruel-hearted enough, for his own pleasure, to bring human beings into the world to run chances of damnation? Do you not think that if a Christian really believed what he professes to believe he would hesitate before taking to himself a wife, and becoming responsible for the eternal torture of human souls? It seems to me more charitable to suppose that a Christian does not believe what he professes to believe about damnation—only thinks he believes it—than to suppose he really believes it and yet is cruel enough to condemn souls to a probable or possible everlasting hell-fire.

If a "Christian" man believes in damnation and produces children, he is a fiend, and hence cannot be a Christian. If a "Christian" man does not believe in damnation, he is not a Christian because he does not believe. Therefore there can be no such thing as a married Christian. And yet how many there are who profess to be!

WM. C. MILES.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Salt Lake, Utah.	June,	19	Inyo county, Cal.	June	24–27
Provo, Utah.....	"	13	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash...	July	3, 4
Murray, Utah....	"	14	Woodburn, " ... "		5
Kaysville, and Farmington, Utah	"	15	Barlow, " ... "		6
MorganCity, Utah,	"	16	Canby, " ... "		7
Echo, Utah.....	"	17	Sheridan, " ... "		8
Reno, Nev.....	"	21	Scappoose, " ... "		9
Carson City, Nev.	"	22	Tacoma, " ... "		10
Virginia City, Nev.	"	23

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Pittsburgh, Pa....	June	19	Philadelphia, Pa..	June	26
Butler, Pa.....	"	20, 21

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

LECTURES for June of the Manhattan Liberal Club:
June 17th, "Reincarnation," Eliza Orchard Connor.
June 24th, Last meeting till October; lecture to be announced later.

W. S. BELL'S lectures: Tacoma, Seattle, Snohomish, Sultan City, Whatcom, Sehome, Roeder, Lynden, Port Townsend, Port Angeles, Wash.; Victoria and Van Couver, B. C.

Immortality.

This dear old world is good enough for me.
No home beyond the grave mine eyes can see,
But hope to a sweet fancy bids me cling
And whispers, "Love can hear the rustle of a wing."
This may be true. I hope 'tis so.
In every human heart there seems to grow
This flower of hope, love's brightest bloom,
Which throws around the grave its sweet perfume.
But think you I accept eternal life
And pay the price of that unholy strife
That Christians waged against the world of thought,
And from their Bible inspiration sought
To prove the truth of all their various creeds
And justify their dark and bloody deeds?
If I shall liv again beyond the grave,
I ask no blood of Christ my soul to save,
But rather would I sleep as dreamless dust,
So much this Christian God I do distrust,
So much this Christian Bible I detest,
This book they call the father's own bequest,
That I would rather know that all the earth,
That every source of joy, of love, or mirth,
And everything of life that loved the light
Would sleep forever in eternal night,
Than think one soul on which the light of reason fell
Should suffer torment in a Christian hell.

Butte, Mont., May 29, 1892. F. R. BAKER.

Letters of Friends.

One Freethinker Escaping Deathbed Calumny.

FULTON, ILL., May 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: My devoted husband, T. S. Andrews, passed away at 11:14 A.M., March 31, 1891. I was too full of grief to giv you all the particulars at that time. He passed away as he lived, a Deist, not a Christian. He was laid away April 3, 1891, in Fulton, Whiteside county, Ill. He was a true Liberal all his life.

MRS. DR. T. S. ANDREWS.

Christian Liars Overreaching Themselvs.

GUSTAVUS, O., May 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: That the Christians in their anxiety to close the World's Fair should send in such a surplus of names, is a gigantic farce. There are large sections of the state that hav not been canvassed at all, hence the swindle is so ridiculous that it will serve the ends of justice much better than it could otherwise hav done, as many people will be made to see the enormity of the wrong that never gave the subject a thought heretofore.

Respectfully, MARY A. CLESBY.

Hell-Sent, Hell-Fraught, and Hell-Bound.

ELKTON, MINN., April 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Oh, those pictures are great! Go it, Heston! Press hard! Giv the crank another turn or two! Scatter the hell-fraught, hell-sent, and hell-bound nest of vipers in every direction! Ingersoll and Paine are invulnerable to their poisonous fangs, though more deadly than the one Moses lifted up. Oh, what a blessing it would hav been for the human family had he (Moses) been food for the crocodiles while in the bullrushes, before his name was ever suffered to besmear the pages of history—the deceitful, lustful, thieving tyrant! The devil himself would shrink in holy horror from the crimes perpetrated by the holy men of God.

M. FLEMING.

Incensed at Christian Injnries.

VERA CRUZ, MO., May 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Your letters protesting against closing the World's Fair on Sunday are all gone, and did not go half around. Please send me two or three dozen more. I think I can hav them all signed and sent in. I want to down the hidebound, lying, robbing, villainous, hypocritical church bigots if it is possible, and am going to do my part toward giving them a back seat. I am lied on, talked about, and insulted by a gang of brutes here where I liv now, till I hav—like C. B. Reynolds—got to be considerably in earnest, and if there is anything that I can find that will help to snow the contemptible villains under I am going to be caught giving it a lift.

Respectfully yours, S. B. DAVIS.

Arming Himself With Good Literature.

CHEMAWA, O., May 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I now proceed to write my first letter to the brave TRUTH SEEKER, though my father has been taking it for a long time. We receive it on Thursday, and it is a wonder some of us are not made cross-eyed at the other side of the week by looking with both eyes for that day.

I hav received the "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," and it is worth five times what it cost—so most who see it say. But if you would make a book containing the pictures which hav been printed on the front of THE TRUTH SEEKER I would surely send for one or more.

Last spring I used to go to church, and it was fun as I was going to tell my Christian friends of the minister's contradictions in his own words.

Yours for Mental Liberty,

FRANK BEATY.

[The book which our friend desiderates is already in existence, in the shape of the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book."—ED. T. S.]

The Clergy Havn't Time to Discuss.

WOODBURN, ORE., May 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Prof. W. S. Bell, of Oakland, Cal., lectured here the evenings of the 7th and 8th inst.; and to good audiences, considering that this is a village of churches, and the clergy understand that their position is untenable; consequently they endeavor by any means, fair or foul, to keep the faithful from hearing anything on the other side.

We hav in this place a few outspoken Freethinkers, whom the clergymen, as a rule, treat very respectfully—but generally express their regrets that their time is limited and they are so sorry they hav not the time to discuss the question now.

Mr. Bell is entertaining as well as instructiv; holds the attention of his audience to the last; has the happy faculty of illustrating a point in logic by an anecdote which is always appropriate yet never impertinent.

Wishing you success in the good cause in which you are engaged—breaking the fetters of superstition—I am,

Yours respectfully, W. M. CLINE.

California Inquisitors Burn the Picture Book.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me sixteen Bible Picture Books, with boards, illuminated covers. Send them as soon as you can.

An incident happened in front of my place which I cannot help but write to you. As I am in the news business, I make a good display of THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Bible Picture Books—in fact, of all Liberal newspapers. Last Tuesday a gentleman came along and saw the Bible Picture Book. He got excited and said that it was a shame to display books of that kind; and as he was a good Catholic he wanted to see books of this kind destroyed, and he offered $1 for the book, and also a good ten-cent cigar to any young man that wanted to burn the book on the street. Well, he had no trouble in finding the young man, and the Bible Picture Book was burnt up, much to the satisfaction of the good Catholic. It created quite a little excitement, and I sold all the books I had on hand. I want fifteen more as soon as I can get them. You will hear again from the good Liberal truth seekers about this occurrence, as I think this a good article for any good writer to write about. Yours truly,

MAX ROTH.

Has Man a Right to Freedom in Land and in Trade?

TURNER, ORE., May 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of the 21st inst. I note communications on "Coffee Growing and Prices" by "Holt," also by Edward Q. Norton on "The Single Tax." I am "pleased" (as the preachers say of their God) to see these matters discussed in THE TRUTH SEEKER, because they touch fundamental principles with which all citizens, be they Freethinkers or not, are interested. I am particularly interested in the last paragraph of Mr. Norton's article: "And meanwhile waits for Colonel Ingersoll to reply to the question as to whether freedom to trade and freedom to think are not both essential rights of the individual." Good for you, Brother Norton! Who next? This question should be answered, not as by political partisans, for there is no politics in it, but as a fundamental principle. Has, or has not, every individual born on this planet a right, by reason of being so born, to hav a portion of the earth's surface to liv on; a right to his or her share of the natural opportunities to make a living by personal exertion; a right to trade wherever and with whomsoever he or she pleases; or in other words, a right, an "inalienable right," to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness?" And if not, what do our "Bill of Rights," our declarations of principles of government, mean? What is "free government" anyway? Leaders in the Freethought army should answer these questions. F. S. MATTESON.

Useful Recipe—How to Tell a Christian.

FLAT CREEK, LA., May 23, 292.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of the 14th inst. Mr. Frank Cook quotes from the famous chatterer, Mr. Talmage, the following words: "Avoid as you would shipfe er and small-pox people who lack faith." This admonition was intended for people who do not lack faith, but are full of it. Now, I propose to amend this admonition so as to make it read: Avoid as you would ship-fever and small-pox preachers of the gospel who lack faith in the gospel. Now, how can we distinguish believers from unbelievers? Mr. Talmage does not tell us, but Jesus does. Jesus had more sense than to require us to take a man's word as evidence of his faith, and he gave certain tests by which we may know believers. He says: "If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamore tree, Be thou plucked up by the roots and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you" (Luke xvii, 6). "And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye hav faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing be impossible unto you" (Matt. xvii, 20). "And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover. And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following" (Mark xvi, 17-20).

Now, I will say, If any come among you preaching and claiming to be a minister of Christ and the Lord is not working with him and confirming his preaching by the above signs, avoid him as you would the ship-fever and the small-pox. He is a hypocrit and impostor, and is preaching for your dollars and fried chicken.

P. F. SHUMAKER.

The Zulu's Belief Proves Neither His Spooks Nor His Gods.

MERIDEN, CONN., June 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Last Sunday I listened to a Zulu who spoke in Springfield, Mass., on the character and customs of his people. He represented them as steeped in superstition; believing in witchcraft, in love-potions, and in spirit possession of persons, sticks, and animals; and dwelling in low-built wickups; wearing only an apron—from which degradation only Christianity could giv them ambition to rise. He told how desperately they fought against British invasion; once with only spears rushing over their own slain in the face of musket and cannon and driving the trained soldiery.

He claimed that his people, though untaught, believed in a supreme spirit, and therefore that the educated Atheist had no excuse. It is not very plain how the savages' belief in one God proves him any more than their belief in spookism proves that. Either one may or may not be true for all that such testimony evinces. Yet this is the central argument of Christendom, and the converted Ethiopian student of Oberlin only voiced his lesson from the European text of another superstition.

I thought that in point of character the odds were in favor of the Zulus, who fought as patriots, as compared to the hired Christian robbers from the English empire, which, not content with India, half of North America, and the profits of the opium trade forced upon the Heathen Chinee, warred with the pagan niggers that it might put a diamond belt around its possessions; and the more in favor of the benighted Africans since until the advent of the enlightened soldiers they had dwelt in sobriety, and though they bought as many wives as they could, they had no houses of ill-fame, and needed not even doors to keep out thieves.

JOHN P. GUILD.

This Letter Is Worth Two or Three Readings.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., March 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am a new subscriber, and I want to say that I cannot realize how I got along without THE TRUTH SEEKER. I believe it must be better now than ever before. I am agreeably surprised to find so many familiar literary workers contributing to its pages.

I want to say a word on Freethinkers' organizations. I hav found out that it is almost impossible to sustain Liberal organizations. Freethinking seems to "destroy the power of cohering," as you say. Freethinkers agree on some things, such as the Demands and the tearing down of the old superstitions and dogmas, but when it comes to a system of positiv philosophy they cannot. Our society here failed, but I attributed it to the fact that we hav so many Liberal churches. I believe that one of the causes of the lack of coherency is that their work has been nearly all of a negativ character. I hav looked for the ethical societies to be more successful than the Freethinker societies, but I am inclined to think that, although their work has been more positiv, they lack a real basis.

If Freethinkers cannot agree as to the primal causes of the phenomena of the universe they surely can agree that the thing for them to do is to learn all they can of secondary causes and effects; these they can know scientifically, and such knowledge will enable them to relation themselvs properly with the rest of the universe. Now, is it not a fact that a society for the purpose of enhancing the welfare of its members and humanity can only do it by studying nature and the order of nature so that the individual may know his duties to himself and to society?

Let Liberal societies adopt this scientific method. We know that every cause has its effect, and we should endeavor to regulate causes so that there will be the desired effect.

Let a philosophy of living here on earth take the place of religion and theology. Liberals can surely agree that the welfare of humanity is the only aim that they can hav. Fraternally yours,

LEROY BERRIER.

Advertisement—Wanted: Holy Relics.

PORTVILLE, N. Y., Feb. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I saw in THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 27th that some of our Catholic friends hav some very old relics. Now, I hav what I suppose to be the oldest piece of wood in existence. It is said to be the original branch of the tree of knowledge, from which Eve picked the forbidden fruit. It was afterward broken off by Cain and used to kill Abel; was afterward kept in the family until at last it fell to Moses and Aaron, and every Bible-reader is familiar with the wonderful tricks it performed in Egypt and the wilderness; and it was used as a brazen serpent, in which form it came to me. It still retains its large brazen eyes.

Now, I will giv $5,000,000 for the use of the relics which I will name, and I will include my own relic in the lot. I want them for five months during the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and it seems as though our Christian friends ought to easily furnish them. I must hav positiv proof of their genuinness. Here they are: One handful of nothing from which God made the world, one view of Adam and Eve as they appeared in the garden of Eden, a picture of Cain's wife, a piece of the ark, a brick from the tower of Babel, a piece of the burning bush, a horn of the golden calf that Aaron made, the cloven foot of the devil, a view of the part of Jehovah that Moses saw, a piece of Jacob's ladder, a lump of salt from Lot's wife, one bottle of the Egyptian darkness, one view of David dancing before the ark of God, Judah's staff and signet that he gave to James, one of the patriarch's bones from the cave of Macphelah, one of the wheels of Elijah's chariot, a view of the Holy Ghost as he appeared to the Virgin Mary, a piece of the true cross, a small vial of the Virgin's milk, a picture of Mary Magdalene as she appeared before the seven devils were cast out, one of the rams' horns with which the priests blew down the walls of Jericho, the three asses on which Christ rode into Jerusalem, one of the horns of the altar, the two tables of the law. But I will name no more here, but if I can get as many more I will double the price. But I positivly must hav proof that they are genuin.

JOHN R. COATS.

Endeavor To Solve the Money Problem.

ONTARIO, CAN., Feb. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of Jan. 2, 1892, appears a letter by W. P. Brooks on the subject of money, in reply to which I would like to make a few remarks. I had thought that the advocates of an irredeemable currency had become extinct. But it appears that there are a few people yet who think that all government has to do to make a piece of paper valuable is to put a stamp upon it.

One of the reasons why there are so many opinions regarding this subject is, because they do not understand what money is. And to discuss the subject intelligently we must get down to fundamental principles.

I will now endeavor to explain what I believe money is. Man, in order to prolong his existence on this earth, must labor. Now, money is nothing more nor less than a certificate that labor has been performed.

If the above is a true definition of money, then irredeemable paper is not money.

True, the advocates of irredeemable paper will tell you that the fact of the government stamping it a legal tender makes it money, and that the law makes it able to perform all the functions of money. But right here the question of confidence comes in. Suppose the government should issue greenbacks until W. P. Brooks himself should cry Enough, what guarantee hav we that the paper money would not depreciate, or that gold would not run up in value? True enough, the money would be good for paying all debts, but what about new contracts? Suppose I should become suspicious, and should come to the conclusion that it would be just as well not to hav too much of this money about me, and W. P. Brooks should come to me to buy a horse, and I should tell him he could hav the horse for $100 in gold, or $120 in paper, what is he going to do about it?

W. P. Brooks, in his illustration of the purchase of postage-stamps, uses this language: "But, sir, when you bought your stamps, you paid a dollar tax to the government." This dollar is in no sense a tax. Genuin labor is given in exchange for it. The stamps themselvs were the receipts given by the government, and were used by the government as evidence that the citizen had paid for carrying the letters to their destination.

W. P. Brooks says in another place in his letter: "There is not one-twentieth enough money in circulation to do the business of the country." This is simply an assertion, without any evidence of its truthfulness. Is it a fact that W. P. Brooks cannot get all the money he wants by offering good security? What good would it do a man if there were a million dollars lying idle in every post-office in the United States, if he had no collateral?

W. P. Brooks, in another place in his letter, calls "hard" money a myth. Now, if gold and silver should suddenly drop out of existence, by what standard would he put a value upon his paper dollar? I take it that gold is used for a standard of value because it is not subject to fluctuations in value. No matter what revolutions take place, the price of gold remains the same. Respectfully, H.

Struggles Against the Catholic Monster.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you a clipping from the Pioneer Press having to do with action taken on the school question at Stillwater. You will see by it that we are not asleep. LEROY BERRIER.

Shortly after the Stillwater board of education met last evening a dozen or more prominent citizens appeared with the following petition signed by one hundred and five representativ citizens:

"We, the undersigned citizens of Stillwater, believing that all classes of our citizens should receive equal treatment in the management of the public schools, and that no religious sectarianism or class favoritism should be allowed therein, do hereby express our extreme dissatisfaction with the manner in which the schools of the city hav been and are still being managed with reference to the conduct by you of the parochial schools of St. Michael's parish, the employment of Roman Catholic nuns as teachers in the public schools and the entire or partial gathering together in separate schools of Roman Catholic children to be taught by nuns without regard to residence, believing the course being pursued by you to be opposed to the true spirit and best interests of the American public school system; and we do respectfully protest against a further continuance of the present plan and request you to take such steps as may be deemed best, either by the entire abrogation of your present arrangement with said parish, the discharge of said nuns or a request of their resignation and the classification and distribution of all pupils on one common basis without regard to religious opinions, to exclude from every school all sectarian teaching and influence by symbol, garb or otherwise, and restore our school system to its former satisfactory and efficient condition; and in view of the present situation we respectfully request you, as the representativs of the public, to state as definitly as possible your intentions for the future in reference to the matters herein mentioned, and especially as to whether the employment of nuns as teachers, the present use of the property of said parish for school purposes, or the present method of distribution of pupils is to be continued throughout the current school year, and also whether those of your members whose terms do not expire with the present year will support a further continuance of such arrangement."

The meeting was the most spirited ever held here in connection with the school question. The matter was thoroughly discussed, but the board did nothing but accept the petition. President Clapp stated that he would not consider that or any similar petition, because it was misleading in several respects and did not set forth the facts. The meeting lasted until midnight. The next step will be to enjoin the county authorities from paying over any of the school funds.

Some Wanderings Through the Wildernesses of Theology.

UKIAH, CAL., April 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: On Easter Sunday, 17th inst., the inhabitants of Ukiah and vicinity were favored with an Easter celebration by the Knights Templar from Santa Rosa, some fifty miles south of Ukiah, coming on a special train and being joined by the few resident members of Ukiah—making in all some two hundred. Taking it altogether it was a splendid affair. The concourse of people was too great to be accommodated in any one building in Ukiah, consequently the county fair tent was utilized as a shelter for the concourse of inhabitants who were attracted to this grand display and exhibition of grand-appearing men in rich and superb costume and accoutered in costly glittering uniforms and armor. The immense pavilion was filled to its utmost capacity. The services were conducted by President Emery, D.D., of the Pacific Methodist College of Santa Rosa, "who preached a powerful and eloquent sermon"—so our town papers say. Choice music was rendered by a choir of our choicest singers. As to the display of oratory and eloquence, so far as I am capable of judging, it appeared to be quite creditable; but as to its being a very "powerful," convincing sermon, I was very much at a loss to discover or feel the effects of any decided powerful influence. Of course, whatever others may hav felt is not for me to know; I can only speak for myself. After all the parade and splendor connected with this exhibition, I could not accept it in any other than a rather humiliating light, except as a kind of romantic affair for the purpose of recreation and pastime. Think of a special train of cars being called into requisition to escort a college president and two hundred Templars fifty miles, and a pavilion erected for the accommodation of a thousand people, with a choice choir of music, all for the purpose of giving a college president the opportunity of rehearsing the story of the fall of man, reciting the Lord's prayer, reading a portion of the Sermon on the Mount, and reciting the Ten Commandments (omitting Jonah and the whale), all of which no doubt could hav been creditably performed by any smart Sunday-school boy of ten years. But he told us one secret that certainly would puzzle older heads to harmonize or unravel, notwithstanding all his logic on the creation, fall of man, and the life and death and resurrection of Christ, as the first fruits of them that slept, having in his hand the keys of death, hell, and the grave. The speaker here was quite delinquent, altogether reticent, utterly failing in an attempt to explain to our benighted intellect how it happened, with this golden opportunity of securely locking up these three horribly dreaded prisonhouses of the human race and casting the keys into the bottomless pit, how and why this golden opportunity of indemnifying mankind against these dreaded evils was overlooked and neglected by the savior of our race. On this we are not informed. And he being the first fruits of them that slept, what of the millions who had fallen asleep before his time? Is theirs an endless sleep? Or will all this ex-post-facto proceeding of the man Christ, "descending to earth from the throne of the father, born of the Virgin Mary, crucified, dead and buried under Pontius Pilate, descended into hell, rose again the third day, ascended up to heaven, where he sitteth at the right hand of God the Father making continued intercession for us," hav the retroactiv effect to indemnify the millions and billions who lived and died before his advent on this earth? But the speaker did not attempt to explain. Therefore, we are left in the dark as to the final fate and destiny of all the antediluvians, including all the race up to the time of the resurrection of Christ, he being the first fruits of them that slept. Although we are told that during his mission on earth in the case of Lazarus and others, he restored them to life.

Here, again, is a problem, as to how he can be termed the first fruits of the resurrection. In speaking of the creation of man, the speaker did not say, in just so many words, that he was created immortal, but he did repeatedly say that God did not design or intend him to die, but man's disobedience brought death into the world. Which, as it appears to me, is equivalent to saying that God's design was unquestionably thwarted, no matter what the process may hav been. Or shall we say man is an immortal mortal?

On account of this "powerful sermon," he was called upon to preach a night sermon in the Methodist South church. I regret not having heard this discourse, as he may hav explained some of these mysteries. I should hav been pleased to hear him unravel the solecism of the immortal-mortal race of man.

THOMAS MCCOWEN.

Tidings from a New League.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., March 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: About six months ago a few Freethinkers banded together, rented a nice hall to be occupied two hours each Sunday, and there met and organized in the simplest manner the Liberal League of Jacksonville, Fla. At each subsequent meeting interest and numbers increased. Two months since, it was my privilege, and, I may add, joy, to meet with them. Though unknown to all but one or two, I was invited to address them. Still more, at the conclusion of my remarks a motion was carried unanimously that I be received as a free honorary member. None more than I could hav appreciated this courtesy and compliment. No church in this or any other city would thus honor a brother on the free list. The iron-clad creed, from the Catholic down to the lowest Protestant, shackles the thought, the order, and the entire administration. Their inspired apostle Paul ordered the women into silence in all the churches, and the men hav improved on the command by ruling all to the same subserviency, unless ordained to the ministry. No one is allowed at the close of the sermon to ask the preacher questions or gainsay before the audience one thing he has said. Thus, like the blind, dumb horse in the mill-sweep, do they go round and round week after week without the first inch of progress.

The League is doing a good and most enjoyable work. It is pleasant and profitable to get together once a week, and now the idea is getting in to form a class auxiliary to study natural philosophy, astronomy, and especially evolution. There is the more need of the natural sciences being taught here than in communities farther north. Religion in the old slaveholding states has a stronger hold, and investigation and science hav so much the less. Still, it is cheering to find common sense asserting itself in minds accepted as Bible-believers, and at times in church-members. Recently a woman told me she was a Catholic, and asked if I did not believe it was the oldest and truest church. I answered, "Yes, if the Bible is to be received as inspired; but," said I, "do you accredit the priests, or even the pope, with miraculous inspiration?" She did not know. "Then," said I, "they hav given you the bread in communion?" "Yes," she replied, "but not the wine." "Did not your taste tell you that it was just the same bread after the consecrating prayer that it was before?" "Yes." "Then how can you believe it was transubstantiated into the flesh of Christ?" "Well," said she, "to speak the truth, I don't believe it;" and she virtually admitted that many things were taught by the priest which she could not accept, asking me to call again and induce her daughter to learn more at home. I entertain a hope of getting simple common sense, saving truth, to work in the family like leaven in meal.

This comes in connection with what was urged in our last meeting, viz., to speak out boldly yet kindly our Freethought sentiments. Truth is powerful, and will prevail only as it is thus spoken and written. Had there been a few more Paines, Humes, Gibbons, Voltaires, and Abner Kneelands preceding the Spanish Inquisition, the St. Bartholomew massacre, and the witch-burning in New England, these horrors had been spared. Indeed, had the honest, common-sense persons living previous to those horrors spoken out their minds and wisely argued down the dreadful superstition, the fiendish tortures and murders might hav been prevented or at least modified. That we are now exempt from the danger of having them repeated is due to light and reason having been brought from under the bushel. The fear of offending the superstitious or losing their patronage should never creep into the brains of truth lovers, nor will it ever padlock the brave. Patrick Henry's immortal exclamation should nerve the patriots and philanthropists. "Giv me liberty or giv me death" will yet inspire the words and deeds of true men and women. The result, too, will be in our times as then, that liberty will be achieved and "truth crushed to earth will rise again."

Even from the churches we may learn the wisdom of using the means to accomplish the end. They sing, they pray, they exhort, they preach, and they pay, in season and out of season. They profess to visit the sick, them that are in prison; clothe the naked, and feed the hungry. Falsely and yet assiduously they claim to be the exclusiv donators and administrators of these charities. Then they monopolize the Sunday-school to train the young in their superstition. Years ago the Liberal, Mo., Freethinkers held their Sunday-school in the natural sciences, and soon the Christians retired to build an outside village. So will it be wherever wisdom, prudence, and perseverance are found in charge of truth. When, years ago, Garrison went into Boston destitute of about all but a humane heart, and a knowledge of and a zeal for the rights of his fellowmen, he was denounced as a fanatic and finally experienced the strong argument of a halter about his neck to cause him to adorn a lamp-post. Nevertheless, he rather strengthened than weakened by the means employed to crush his truth. The result came when "liberty was proclaimed throughout all our land and to all the inhabitants thereof." Then the old church-members woke from their Rip Van Winkle fifty years' nap, rubbed open their eyes, and said, "We hav always been antislavery, and now swear by the Union." From this we must except the candor and honor of Jeff Davis.

But to our League. Though not going fast, it does go surely. The ground conquered is held, and the territory weekly enlarged. It will not be out of place to name in this connection a few of the older members. The officers are: J. A. Turner, president; James Douglas, secretary; J. G. T. Betts, treasurer; Capt. John Rhodes, librarian. Among the members are three lawyers, one judge, two more captains, two editors, one publisher, one learned ex-Unitarian minister, and Mrs. Gardener, an author, with myself an honorary member.

Last Sunday the social and legal rights of women were discussed, the subject interesting all present to the point of having it continued at our next meeting. By sending two or three extra copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER to Captain Rhodes or myself—publishing this little contribution—some more of our members will become its readers. W. PERKINS.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

For You, My Friend, For You.

I've culled this bunch of grass and flowers,
For you, my friend, for you;
Moist they are, with summer showers,
For you, my friend, for you.

They grew on hillside and the plain,
For you, my friend, for you;
They bring the scents of wooded lane,
For you, my friend, for you.

Heart's warmest love goes with these flowers,
For you, my friend, for you;
'Twould make all days sweet charmed hours,
For you, my friend, for you.

S. H. W.

Talks on Political Economy.

They ran something like this:

"Economy with me
Is chief of all," said he,
"And I'm very glad to see
There's nothing wasted."

Isabella's blue eyes sparkled in the sunlight as she turned toward her friend and said: "Where hav you received all this extraordinary information, may I ask?" "Certainly," replied Ethel. "I took your advice and opened a correspondence with papa, and he did not disappoint me," she said, leaning back against the mossy seat, fixing her dark eyes upon the blue lake, "but gave me lots of valuable information, and sent me books on the same subject. I hav just been reading Henry George's 'Progress and Poverty,' and would hav developed into an ardent single-taxer had it not been for another valuable book that papa sent me, called 'Social Wealth,' written by Mr. J. K. Ingalls, of Glenora, N. Y. Mr. George has met an equal, I think, in Mr. Ingalls. And I feel justified in saying that I think his book ought to be in the hands of every student of political economy. I will let you hav it, Belle, if you will remind me of it when we go home." "Thanks," said Isabella, "I shall be very glad to hav it. But did you get those revolutionary ideas from him, or your father? I hope I hav not offended you, Ethel, by calling your ideas revolutionary, but, oh, my dear, though I shrink from applying such an epithet to you, nevertheless your ideas are alarmingly Socialistic; and let me warn you, Ethel, you are treading on dangerous ground, and if you are not careful you will sink under the oppressiv weight of your own ideas. Believe me, dear, your supposed Truth is only an ignis fatuus, a will-o'-the-wispish light, that if you follow in your blind way will lure you on over treacherous quicksand to instant destruction."

Ethel laughed. "Do not needlessly distress yourself, Isabella. I do not propose ever developing into a Socialist. But I shall search for truth, wherever she is, and don't worry about my being lured into swamps of despair, for I shall not grope about in the dark, but make my investigations in the light of day. But enough of allegories. Come, Isabella, you must admit that your sentiments, if they are carefully worded, are nevertheless a little inconsistent. You say that wealth was the result of labor applied to land, and we find that land cannot be so applied until the laborer has acquired a title to the land, which makes him a capitalist, and givs him exclusiv right to that natural agent, which is needful to sustain the very life of the laborer." "It is just as I thought. But that is part of the cares teachers hav to bear!" exclaimed Miss Lloyd with a little deprecating gesture. "They teach and explain, and then if the student wanders from the teaching and gets lost or hopelessly confused, they blame the instructor. Ethel, can you not see that if the laborer is dependent on the capitalist for the privilege to toil, the capitalist is also dependent on the laborer to work his capital, else he must lose what he has gained, by the gradual consumption of his capital?"

"No," answered Ethel; "I confess I cannot see, because the capitalist employs the laborer to increase his wealth, not being able or willing to get machinery, or do it himself. There is no parallel in the dependency, not because the capitalist has the added advantage of his capital, but because he has the advantage of a privilege denied the laborer, a right to land, a property not in nature, but in law. It strikes me as being very unjust to the laborer. For you deprive him of his life when, as Shakspere says, 'You take the means whereby I liv.' I should like to impress you, Isabella, with the injustice in the distribution of wealth, and although political economy is not responsible for this injustice, it seems to offer an apology by throwing the blame, if there is any blame, upon nature, when it is in man, his customs and laws. There is no title to be obtained of land in nature. The only right in nature is the right of toil. The bow and arrow the savage makes is his; the game he captures is his. There is no need of any law to establish his claim, but the forests, the river, the air, and the sunshine hav no owner. Henry George has given the best definition of property I hav seen yet. He says: 'The right of ownership that springs from labor excludes the possibility of any other right of ownership.'" Ethel would hav said more, but Isabella, rising, tried to stifle a yawn and reminded her that it was late. Both girls rose and went down to the lake. After a long pause Isabella said: "All your sentiments are very impracticable, Ethel, as you will find as you advance in your study. Encourage your ideas toward the practical, Ethel, not toward the ideal. That is very impracticable, very." Concluding with this sage advice Isabella said no more. Ethel ventured no reply, except a dimpling smile which was of itself very expressiv, and the conversation drifted into tropics. As we are not interested in that, we will leave the young girls for the present.

IDA BALLOU.

Correspondence.

BALTIMORE, MD., June 1, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav just finished reading the Children's Corner, and I thought the letters very pleasant to read. I do not go to school; I am living out with Mr. F. A. Everitt. I used to go to Sunday-school, but since I came to Mr. Everitt's I hav become a Freethinker. The girls think I am not going to heaven. Freethinkers are better than church-members. I am thirteen years old. I must close now. If this escapes the waste-basket I will write again.

Yours respectfully,
ANNIE D. KAHL.

[Annie should tell the girls that this world is good enough for anybody; and if there is a better one somewhere else she will get there if anyone does.—ED. C. C.]

OAK MILLS, KAN., June 1, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: While I hav a few moments to spare, I thought I would try and write my second letter to the Corner. I hav just finished reading the Corner, and read some very interesting letters in it. It has been raining here several days, after a week or more of sunshine, and the thunder is now rumbling at a far-off distance, as though we were going to hav some more, but I hope it will not find its way here. I think the good Lord has lost his stopper this spring and could not find it, as it has rained almost every day since the first of spring. Strawberries are getting ripe. I wish you and your Corner friends could be here while they last. We hav three or four acres, and they are very fine this year. I hav composed another piece of music. It is a waltz. I hav named it the Louis Stapper waltz, after my teacher. I am going to compose another before long, and name it after our great orator, Colonel Ingersoll. I am teaching a class in music this spring. I like teaching. I think it is so nice to giv the young ladies lessons. I am going to get the "Alpine Storm" when I go to town, and learn it, for fear we hav drouth this summer. Well, as they hav called me to supper, and I am ready to eat, I will close, with love to the Corner friends.

Your Liberal friend,
JOHN J. I. REMSBURG.

P.S.—The rain has come again, and it is just pouring down.

Proper Use of the Word Taste.

Discriminate in the use of taste. When taste is used transitivly it should not be followed by of. Do not say, "taste of the meat," "taste of the preserves;" omit of. The same rule applies to smell. The intransitiv verbs taste and smell are often followed by of, as, "the bread tastes of fish;" it "smells of creosote."

A Competent Witness.

In one of our courts recently a nine-year-old boy was placed on the witness-stand, but before he began to testify the defendant's counsel objected and would not allow him to giv his evidence, asking the court to pass on his intelligence and his idea of the responsibility of an oath.

"Question him on those points," was the judge's reply.

"How old are you?" began the lawyer.

"Nine years old."

"Work or go to school?"

"Do both—sell papers and flowers."

"Do you know what an oath is?"

"Tell the truth in this case, sure."

"Now, if you should not state the truth and tell a lie, what would become of you in the next world?"

The boy, after hesitating awhile, answered:

"I don't know what will become of me in this world, let alone the next."

"Proceed, Mr. Attorney," said the judge; "the boy seems to hav more than ordinary intelligence."—Boston Herald.

Why Not?

F. M. H. "hopes to see something in the Children's Corner about the foul play involved in preventing the Chicago children from seeing the World's Fair on the only day that many of them could go. Why do not children generally petition as a body?"

[This is a pertinent question, but probably a petition from the children would receive no more serious attention than like petitions from their elders. Besides, the children are generally of the same way of thinking as their parents and guardians, and, if they opposed the opening of the Fair grounds on Sunday, their children would also.

Nevertheless, there are children of Liberals who think otherwise, and we would like to see a petition from the children of Chicago asking admission to the Fair on Sundays. They hav rights that should be respected.—ED. C. C.]

A Chinese Joke.

The love of fun is not unknown among the serious-looking Chinese, who during the last few years hav been collecting in some parts of our Australian colonies. A storekeeper wishing to advertise his articles in the Chinese language, engaged a Chinaman to paint him a sign, expecting of course that it would be a very enticing one. It did not answer his expectations, however, for the only perceptible effect it had on "the relations of the sun and moon," as the Chinese term themselvs, was to excite a grin of the broadest dimensions. At length the storekeeper, by a considerable bribe, obtained a translation in English of the advertisement, and found it read as follows: "Don't buy anything here; storekeeper a rogue."

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

Three-year-old Pansy asks her mother to read a story. Mother replies: "My eyes ache. I cannot read to-day." Pansy: "Don't read wif your eyes; read wif your mouf."

A grandfather coming to read his paper, found that he had mislaid his spectacles, and thereupon declared: "I hav lost my glasses somewhere, and can't read the paper." A little three-and-a-half-year-old girl, desiring to assist him, answered: "G'an'pa, you go outside and look froo ze window, and I'll hold ze paper up so you can read it."

Little George's mamma was suffering very acutely with neuralgia, when a friend called one afternoon and suggested that she would get relief by smelling a little ammonia, when the small boy popped his curly head from underneath the table and said: "We've got no harmonia, ours is a piano, and I don't tink dat smells much."

Jamie took the largest banana in the dish the other day when the fruit was passed to him. He did this before his grandmamma had been helped. He looked ashamed when he saw her take the small one, but he was glad that his was so big. But when he took off the skin the fruit was black and unfit to eat. His papa's eyes twinkled, and he said: "The largest isn't always the best, is it, Jamie?" And his mamma said, "Selfish boys often lose what they want to get."

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - 50 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES,
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

FRESH Antichristian disturbances are reported from Mantchooria, China.

MEDICAL societies of Philadelphia and New York announce that they hav established the contagiousness of consumption.

THE West African Jebus hav made a sacrifice of two hundred persons to conciliate the favor of the gods in their coming battles with the British.

A DAKOTA clergyman has advertised: "Religious doubts and difficulties answered by private letter. State your difficulty clearly and inclose $1 for reply."

THE latest advices from the famin-stricken districts of Russia report the diet as clay, weeds, bread mixed with chopped straw, melon skins, and weed soup.

BISHOP DINGLESTADT, at Münster, Germany, has had a narrow escape from a man who broke into his apartments knife in hand saying that he had a commission from God to kill.

THE pope has announced that he will be an exhibitor at the World's Fair. He will send some objects of interest from the Vatican, and be represented by some distinguished prelate.

ON the 11th Revs. Gustav Laas, Morgan, and T. DeWitt Talmage conducted benediction services over the three million pounds of bread-stuffs to be sent Russia on the British steamship Leo.

FATHER QUIGLEY, of Toledo, has paid his $50 fine for refusing to make reports of his parochial school to the state officers, who by the new law must receive reports of all schools whether public or private.

LONDON bigots hav achieved the victories of inducing the county council to prohibit dance music in the parks on Sunday, and perstuading the city corporation to refuse to open the Guildhall art gallery on that day.

PERSIA and Cashmere are being ravaged by cholera. This is essentially a dirt disease, and its devastations at present, as in Christian lands during the ages of faith, are due solely to disregard of sanitary measures.

THE priest of the church of St. Jean Baptiste, New York, reports $12,000 to $15,000 contributions from visitors of the relic of the Virgin Mary's mother. This sum, he says, will enable him to finish his parish school.

To aid in closing the World's Fair Sundays, Rev. Wilbur Crafts has brought out a huge cyclopedical work called, "A Study of the Origin, Obligation, History, Advantages, and Present State of Sabbath Observance."

CATHOLIC manufacturers of Lille, Roubaix, and Tourcoing, France, united in an association and abetted by priests, are tyrannizing their employees into observance of Catholic disciplin. The case has been brought up in the chamber of deputies.

LADY SOMERSET, a leader of the temperance party in the English elections, urges anti-liquor people to hold great meetings in the parks Sundays, under color of the allegation that their cause is a religious one. The clergy, who prefer full pews to temperance, are denouncing this counsel.

BENJAMIN HARRISON has been nominated by the Republicans for president, and Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune, for vice-president. Blaine had implicitly entered the contest, and declared himself "a perfectly well man." Harrison was a favorit with the women and the pious at the convention.

AT the assembly of pilgrims at Fulda, Germany, to pray for the restoration of the pope's temporal power, Baron von Ioe spoke of the government of Italy as "so blasphemous and unholy that Christian nations should not be represented by embassadors at its court." He toasted the pope as "King Leo XIII."

THE Rome correspondent of the London Chronicle telegraphs: "Archbishop Ireland has left Rome for Paris. He assured his friends before his departure for the United States that he had strongly advised Mr. Blaine to resign from President Harrison's cabinet in order that his hands might be free for the presidency. The Roman Catholics, the archbishop said, strongly favor Mr. Blaine."

CATHOLICS of this country say that, as "under the decision of Leo XIII. the bishops of this country hav the power to make whatever [school] arrangements they deem essential with the local authorities, they will proceed to do so if the Faribault-Stillwater experiments continue to make the present favorable showing. Parochial schools will continue to go up, and in so far as it is possible to incorporate those schools in the public system it will be done."

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE
CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.
A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.
12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions
And Arguments.
By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.
BY KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.
An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman
Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.
BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.
By BRONSON D. KEELER.
CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.
Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.
The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.
Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.
Universe Analyzed. $1.

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
8	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
24	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the untruthfulsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Starr's News Depot, 106 20th st., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, care of Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

DR. T. J. YARROW, 1335 N. Broad St., Phila., writes:—"I can't speak too highly of your ALE & BEEF "Peptonized." As a Nutrient Tonic in cases convalescing from FEVERS and other Wasting Diseases it has no Equal." For Sale by Druggists. Send for Circulars.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his Satanic Majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

THE history of human opinions is scarcely anything more than the history of human errors.—Voltaire.

THAT which increases the sum of human happiness is moral; that which diminishes the sum of human happiness is immoral. Blind, unreasoning obedience is the enemy of morality. Slavery is not the friend of virtue.—Ingersoll.

WITH compassion,
Severe yet perplexing compassion,
Celestial compassion, founded in love,
The high soul is ever filled.
It is the soul of supremacy
Encompassing all creatures,
Elevating all.
—Udanavarga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

THE possibility of diabolical apparitions is implied in a countless number of passages which our traditional creed requires us to accept as infallible truth. Devils by scores and legions range the land of faith, tempting the virtuous, afflicting men and animals with strange diseases, or even taking permanent possession of a human body still tenanted by a conscious soul. The report of a five minutes' interview with the smallest of those imps would now expose the narrator to a risk of a lunacy inquest.—Prof. Felix Oswald.

I HONOR the man who is willing to sink
Half his present repute for the freedom to think,
And when he has thought, be his cause strong or weak,
Will risk t'other half for the freedom to speak,
Caring naught for what vengeance the mob has in store,
Be that mob the upper ten thousand or lower. —James Russell Lowell.

THEOLOGIANS lay the flattering unction to their souls that all this [evil in the world] is only the result of the Fall, and has been factitiously brought into an originally pure and corrupt Nature by the moral ruin of mankind. They do not know, or do not want to know, that natural laws hav been the same at all times, and that paleontology can bring forward countless and irrefutable instances of bones of men and animals having been injured by disease though belonging to a period prior to the supposed date of the original sin.—Büchner.

THE process of discovery is very simple. An unwearied and systematic application of known laws to nature, causes the unknown to reveal themselvs. Almost any mode of observation will be successful at last, for what is most wanted is method. Only let something be determined and fixed around which observation may rally. How many new relations a foot-rule alone will reveal, and to how many things still this has not been applied! What wonderful discoveries hav been, and may still be, made, with a plumb-line, a level, a surveyor's compass, a thermometer, a barometer!—Thoreau.

HEAVEN has got so distressingly far away since printing and telegraphy and steam-engins came into vogue. The steam-engin has abridged terrestrial space wonderfully; but it and its concomitants hav immeasurably increased the distance between earth and heaven. The distance is now so great that gods and angels and bath kols hav forsaken the earth, probably unable to bear the traveling expenses thereto. Your gospel, too, has made slow progress since these agencies came into operation. The rattle of the printing machine and the roar of the railway train hav drowned the credos and orisons of the Ages of Faith: and your gospel, if it is making any progress at all, is tearing along at the pace that is adopted by an insulted snail.—Saladin in God and His Book.

WHENEVER in ancient history there has come forth a hero to champion the people's cause, a David or a Robert Bruce, with sling or battle-ax, to do his devoirs as a knight of humanity, he has been murdered in the ranks of his friends; and wherever in modern times some unselfish and enthusiastic dreamer and student has stepped to the front, and risked his name, his ambition, and his ease of life, in the effort to correct the evils and repair the wrongs which the poor receive in their encounter with the rich, with ecclesiastical or civil powers, this power calls him "stag," and the down-"trodden" class eat him as Actæon was eaten by his hounds. No man is so certain to feel the quick and gleaming fangs of the ungrateful as the intelligent and ambitious man who endeavors to serve them. If with them he toils and sweats, they rend him sooner. If he keeps aloof, they rend him later. If he is an empty-handed, brazen-faced, long-tongued, noisy demagog, who rubs them, and seeks power or pelf at their cost, he survives and triumphs.—Anon.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial
Walt Whitman.

BY
ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN,

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin: The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3 Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

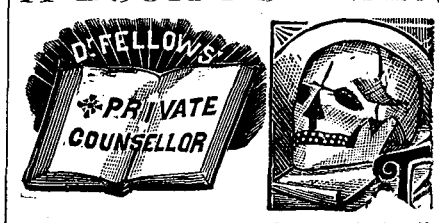
WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER

A TERRIBLE PREDICTION.

And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach.—Isa. iv, 1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents

Those of our readers who have not already signed and obtained signatures to this petition should now cut it out, paste it to a sheet of stout paper, get all the signatures possible, and send it before September 15th to John T Dickinson, Secretary World's Columbian Commission, Rand-McNally building, Chicago, Ill.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

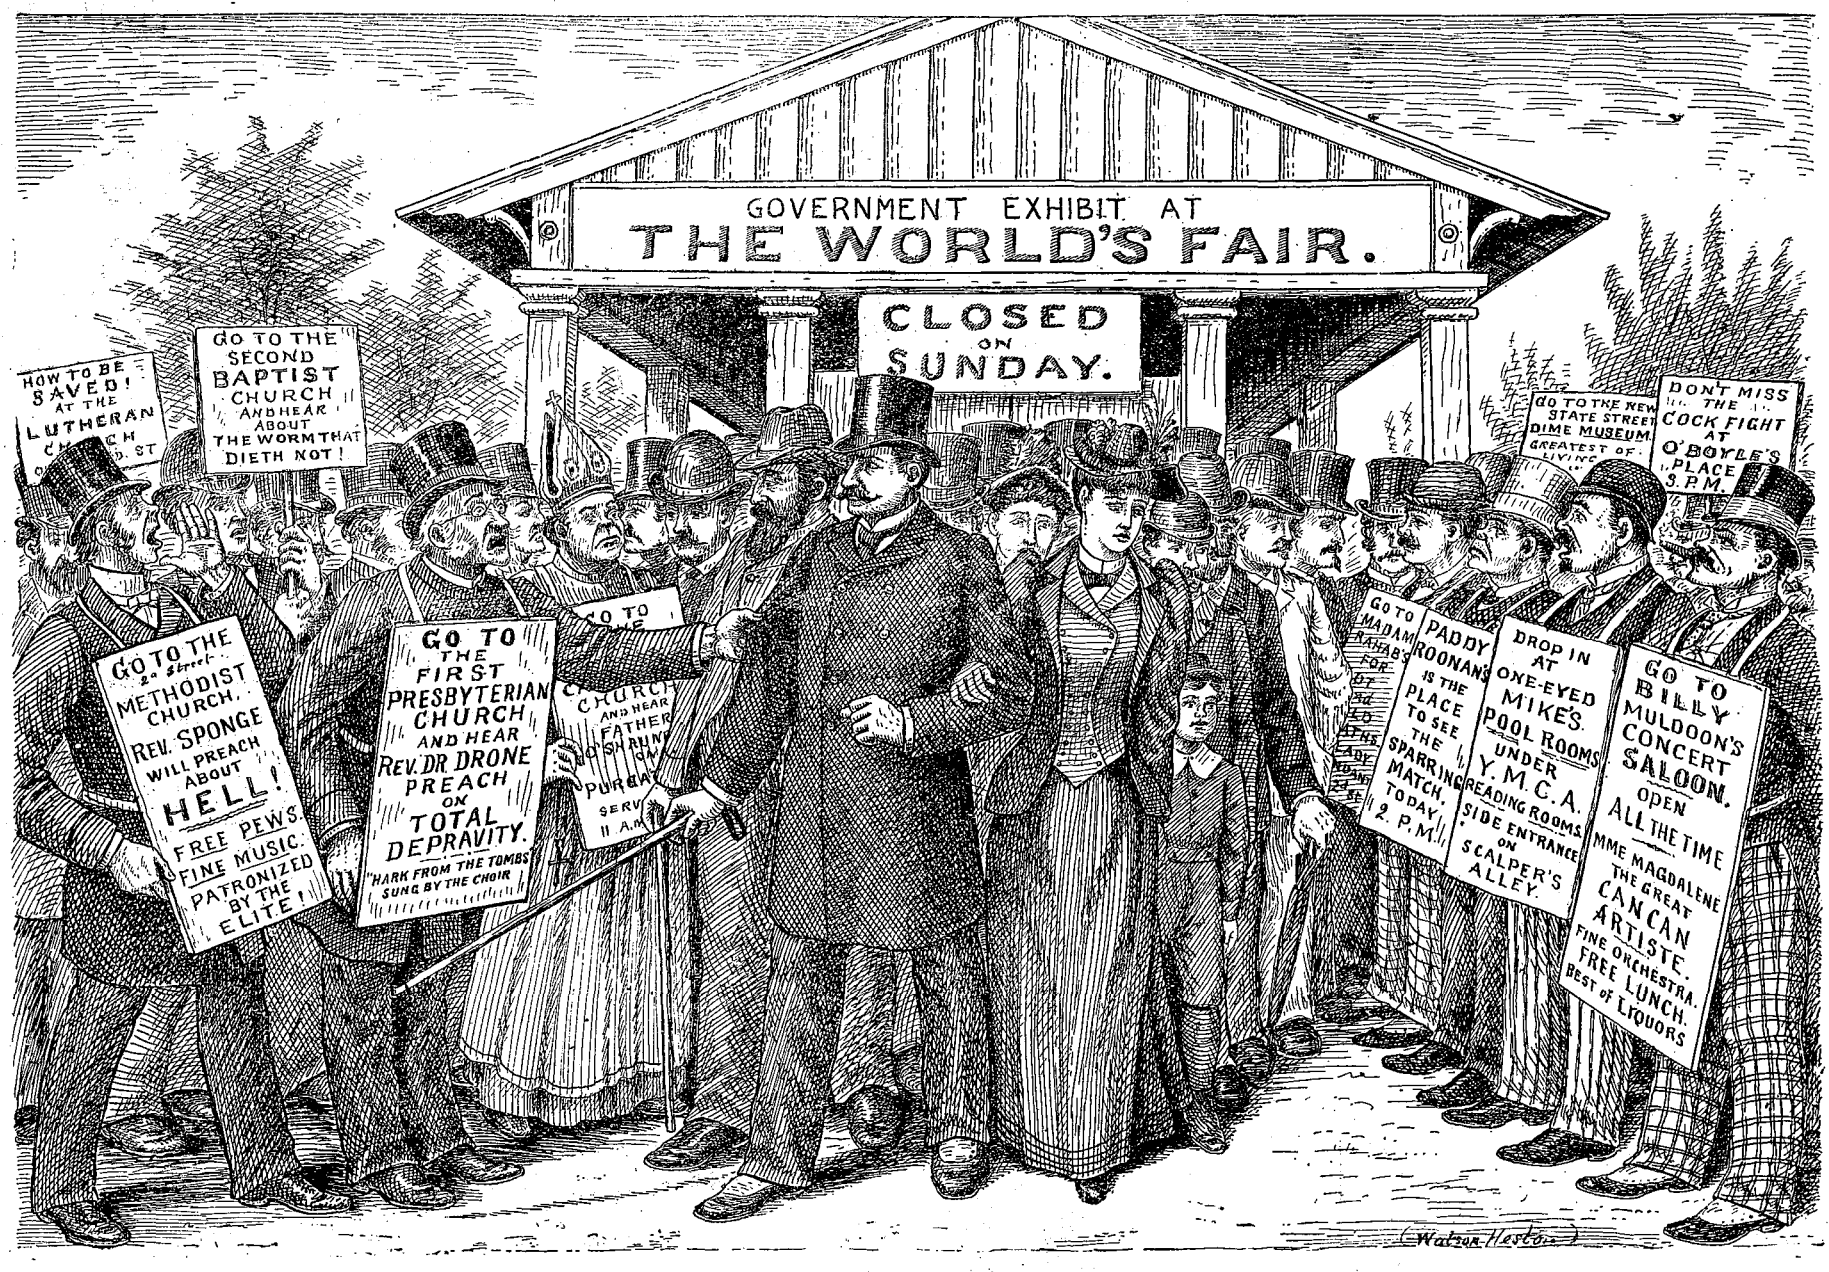
2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago, who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.



7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 26. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 25, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE CLOSED AND THE UNCLOSED—RIVAL DRUMMERS FOR SUNDAY TRADE.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Heury Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shiloh.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1 50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc, with Life of Paine and steel port $1 50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.]

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 26. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, June 25, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JUNE 25, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Pictorial Text-Book and a Fair Critic.

We giv up a good deal of space this week to a gentle and ladylike criticism of "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" originally published in the Sandusky, Ohio, Daily Register. So far as the encomiums of the book go we hav nothing particularly to say. Their fairness, beauty, and freedom from prejudice must occur to everyone. And the few remarks about the designer of the pictures will be taken by him, we feel sure, as a not undeserved compliment—and by this time he is used to being complimented. With some other remarks of the reviewer, however, we are somewhat concerned.

Our gentle critic tells us that the Bible stands to-day as an authentic and well-preserved cosmological record. This statement, it seems to us, who hav duly and carefully studied many of the numerous books on geology, is somewhat deceptiv. Genesis, we believe, states that the Lord created the world in six days, with mornings and evenings. It also givs the order of creation. But geology shows that Genesis is wrong, as everybody knows. What we desire to call the attention of our fair young critic to is that in making the statement that the Bible contains an authentic cosmological record she errs. In this perhaps she is not wholly to blame, for she has distinguished examples to follow, but nevertheless she is not without sin; for before writing so cocksurely upon the subject it would be not entirely out of place for her to read what science has said in the matter. Her assertion irresistibly reminds the reader of a similar statement made by England's alleged greatest statesman, in these words:

"First, looking largely at the latter portion of the narrativ, which describes the creation of living organisms, and waiving details, on some of which (as in verse 24) the Septuagint seems to vary from the Hebrew, there is a grand fourfold division, set forth in an orderly succession of times as follows: on the fifth day,

"1. The water-population,

"2. The air-population, and, on the sixth day,

"3. The land-population of animals,

"4. The land-population consummated in man.

"Now this same fourfold order is understood to hav been so affirmed in our time by natural science that it may be taken as a demonstrated conclusion and established fact."

Mr. Gladstone made these remarks in about the same spirit as that which moved Miss Thorndale. But another eminent Englishman, and one whom all will agree is rather more competent to speak upon the subject than a statesman, objected precisely as we object to Miss Thorndale's misleading assertion. Professor Huxley said, in the politest of manners, what we hesitate to say of a lady of such vast erudition as Miss Thorndale, that he did not know what he was talking about. We hav room to print only his denial of the accuracy of the record, leaving the reader to determin whether he or Mr. Gladstone is the better qualified to speak authoritativly. He said:

"I cannot bring myself to imagin that Mr. Gladstone has made so solemn and authoritativ a statement on a matter of this importance without due inquiry—without being able to found himself upon recognized scientific authority. But I wish he had thought fit to name the source from whence he has derived his information, as in that case I could hav dealt with his authority, and I should hav thereby escaped the appearance of making an attack on Mr. Gladstone himself, which is in every way distasteful to me.

"For I can meet the statement in the last paragraph of the above citation with nothing but a direct negativ. If I know anything at all about the results attained by the natural science of our time, it is 'a demonstrated conclusion and established fact' that the 'fourfold order' given by Mr. Gladstone is not that in which the evidence at our disposal tends to show that the water, air, and land populations of the globe hav made their appearance.

"Perhaps I may be told that Mr. Gladstone does giv his authority—that he cites Cuvier, Sir John Herschel, and Dr. Whewell in support of his case. If that has been Mr. Gladstone's intention in mentioning these eminent names, I may remark that, on this particular question, the only relevant authority is that of Cuvier. But, great as Cuvier was, it is to be remembered that, as Mr. Gladstone incidentally remarks, he cannot now be called a recent authority. In fact, he has been dead more than half a century, and the paleontology of our day is related to that of his very much as the geography of the sixteenth century is related to that of the fourteenth. Since 1832, when Cuvier died, not only a new world, but new worlds, of ancient life hav been discovered; and those who hav most faithfully carried on the work of the chief founder of paleontology hav done most to invalidate the essentially negativ grounds of his speculativ adherence to tradition.

"If Mr. Gladstone's latest information on these matters is derived from the famous discourse prefixed to the Ossemens Fossiles, I can understand the position he has taken up; if he has ever opened a respectable modern manual of paleontology or geology, I cannot. For the facts which demolish his whole argument are of the commonest notoriety."

Of this difference of opinion between these two distinguished Englishmen we can readily excuse the former, as his devotion to politics has naturally left him scant time to acquire familiarity with the subject; and we can just as readily find excuses for a belief in the flood story for Miss Thorndale. One who regards Ignatius Donnelly as a scientist can be forgiven for believing anything.

Another point that our fair critic allowed to escape her memory for an instant is that the book of Job is a heathen work, and that the knowledge of the various things therein displayed was not given the author by the Lord. It does not belong to the cosmological record at all, but if it did, the author might be accused, along with the Atheist, of superficiality. Poetry and science rarely agree.

The comparativ merits of Roman and Christian civilization cannot be settled by a sentence against the savage scenes of the arena. There hav been enough bull-fights since in Christian Spain to make the point very dull. And the Romans we believe had no racks and thumbscrews and iron maidens for heretics; nor did they bury them alive or burn them at the stake. We cannot help but think that the Christians who did these things were quite as barbarous as the Romans. The magnanimity of the gospel of Christ is very plainly expressed in these words:

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

"Now the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death."

"If any man come to me and hate not his father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple."

"Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me."

Isn't that magnanimous? isn't that the "issue of Christianity?" or was Christ only a mistaken zealot of an ignorant age? It is one thing for pious people to claim everything for their favorit religion, and another to show that it deserves the credit it gets. Christianity is no more a consolation than is Confucianism, and the Mohammedan religion inspires its devotee with an assurance not even comprehended by Christians. But does that fact prove its truth? Is faith in Mohammed a "clear second sight?" Can faltering humanity, by its aid, grasp the arm of Allah? Through faith in Allah and his prophet Mohammed the weak, the weary, and the troubled Mohammedans are enabled to peep onward hopefully, and even joyfully. In life's darkest hours, when everything worth living for seems vanishing like an evanescent cloud or a beautiful dream, faith in Allah and Mohammed touches, and idealizes, and makes still cognizant the cherished objects which hav passed beyond the Muslim's grasp. Is Allah, then, the divine inspirer of that religion, and is it true because the people believe so?

It's a pathetic tale, that of the sailor on the mast, but what does it amount to? The clergyman should hav sent a life-line instead of a mocking message. His song did the sailor no good, for he was drowned, and the chances are a million to one that the whole story is a lie. Death-bed ecstatic visions are common. Even a healthy person can shut his eyes and hear and see things not real. Imagination is a great thing; and the lesson to be imposed upon the gentle critic of the Text-Book is that she should learn more facts and gush less. It is easy to gush, very easy; but gush over faith and recitals of imaginary death-scenes will never invalidate the statements of the Text-Book nor remove the impressions the pictures leave upon the minds of its readers.

Our English Brethren.

Once a year, around about Whitsunday, the English Secularists hav what the Westerners call a round up, whereat they count noses and make merry and pick out new places in the enemy's walls to attack. This year the meeting was held at Newcastle, with G. W. Foote in the chair, Charles Watts on the platform, and Arthur Moss and Sam Standring, two of our correspondents, circulating around loose like.

The reports made were encouraging. Mr. Foote said that while there hav been times of greater excitement than the present, under the stimulus of persecution, there has seldom, if ever, been a period in which the society has shown so much steady vigor or enjoyed such a gratifying prospect. Each year, of late, has shown a decided increase in the number of new members joining the society. In 1889–90 the new members numbered 709; in 1890–91 the figure rose to 794; in 1891–92 it has risen to 1,074. Owing to the special subscriptions for the settlement of Mr. Bradlaugh's affairs, and the erection of a monument over his grave; the special subscription in connection with Baskerville Hall, Birmingham; the Bradlaugh Memorial, and the London Hall of Science scheme—the appeals for all of which hav drawn from the Freethought party more than £3,000—there has been a natural falling off in the society's income during the past year. But notwithstanding the reduction of the minimum subscription, and of the amount per member payable by the branches, the balance sheet shows an increase in the total amount of members' subscriptions from £116 7s 2½d last year to £130 4s 9½d this year. There is reason, said Mr. Foote, to hope for a continued increase in this portion of the society's income. New branches were formed in eight towns in England, one at Malta, in the Mediterranean, and a seceding branch has reëntered the fold.

A National Secular Hall Society has been formed for the purpose of providing Secular halls in London and the provinces. Its immediate object is to acquire the eighty-six years' lease of the London Hall of Science, and convert it into a first-class Secular Hall and Institute, so that the place which was the scene of Charles Bradlaugh's chief labors as a Freethinker may continue, under improved conditions, to be the headquarters of the society which he established and so many years presided over. There has been something of a squabble in this matter between the managers of the Secular Society and the heirs of Mr. Bradlaugh. At his death it was proposed to erect a Memorial Hall to him, and subscriptions to that end were solicited. Afterward Mr. Foote thought it better to secure the old Hall of Science, and make that Mr. Bradlaugh's monument. This was opposed by the successors of Mr. Bradlaugh in the conduct of the National Reformer, and a rather acrimonious controversy has been the result. It is probable, however, that Mr. Foote will prevail, as his scheme is the more feasible, and, apparently, receives the most support from the subscribers.

Mr. Foote called attention to England's blasphemy laws and their oppressiv bearing upon the Secularists. At the coming elections, he said, every candidate should be furnished with a statement regarding them and asked if he will help to remove the disabilities under which Freethinkers suffer in the present state of English law. The liberty of bequest committee, which is presided over by Mr. G. J. Holyoake, having provided in its draft bill, not only for the right of inquiry, but also for the right of propounding and maintaining its results, the conference agreed that the bill should be heartily supported, although nothing, said Mr. Foote, can fully satisfy our party but the sweeping away of the odious blasphemy laws. It is gratifying, he added, to record that a very large number of Liberal and Radical members of the present House of Commons, and candidates for the next, hav promised to vote for such a bill if it should be introduced. The chief difficulty was to find a member able and willing to take charge of the bill in the house.

During the past year England has not been without its stories of oppression and attempts to muzzle the press similar to those occurring here. Mr. Foote thus gave the instances: "During the past year there hav been two special attacks on the freedom of the press, which it has been left for the Freethought party (as usual) to repel. In the metropolis Mr. H. S. Young was prosecuted for sending a Malthusian tract in a sealed envelope through the post-office. Mr. Lushington, the Bow street magistrate, before whom the case was tried, admitted that the tract was couched in unexceptionable language. Nevertheless he condemned Mr. Young to pay a fine and costs amounting to more than £50. The sentence, however, was appealed against; and owing to the dilatory action of the attorney-general it is still undecided. With Mr. Young's social opinions this society has nothing to do, but it is concerned with his right to express them. Your president, therefore, in conjunction with Dr. C. R. Drysdale, formed a free discussion defense committee, which collected subscriptions and held public meetings to protest against the prosecution. Those meetings had much to do, in all probability, with the more cautious attitude which the authorities hav since assumed. At Newcastle, a Christian gentleman, Mr. H. Loader, was prosecuted for selling a medical work on the population question. The Newcastle Secularists, with the aid of a few Spiritualists, formed a committee, raised funds for Mr. Loader's defense, and held two very successful indignation meetings. Your president addressed the first meeting, which broke the silence of the local press. Dr. Drysdale addressed the second meeting, after Mr. Loader's imprisonment. But the heavy work fell upon the committee, and especially upon Mr. Joseph Brown, its self-sacrificing secretary. Mr. Young's case is put upon the shelf, and although Mr. Loader was taken to jail his term of imprisonment was merciful in comparison with previous sentences. It may be hoped, therefore, that we hav seen the last of these prosecutions. When journals like the Newcastle Leader are alive to the importance of ventilating the Malthusian as well as other social questions; when they champion free discussion, and boldly rebuke those who would stifle it, everyone can perceive that the bigotry of presumptuous ignorance, or privileged imposture, is drawing near to its doom."

Before concluding his report Mr. Foote looked over toward this neck o' woods and found things fairly satisfactory, as the Freethought papers in Canada and hereabouts "show a considerable activity in propaganda. Colonel Ingersoll's appearance in the lecture field has stimulated the zeal and energy of the Secular party." A motion was adopted to hav the Society represented at the World's Freethought Congress at Chicago, if possible, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Foote can find time to come over. Mr. Watts, too, and Messrs. Moss and Standring would meet many friends. Another resolution adopted was, "That we the Secularists here assembled desire to express our earnest sympathy with the Freethought workers in Canada and the United States, and that the noble work they are doing in emancipating the minds of men from degrading superstition is watched by us with interest and appreciation."

The treasurer submitted a report showing that the total income, with £217 11s 7d in hand last year, amounted to £596 18s 3½d, and expenditures left a balance of £85 2s 2d. The benevolent fund amounted to £127 18s 9d, and the expenditure left £19 7s 7d in hand. Mr. Foote was reëlected president, and among the vice-presidents whose names are familiar on this side of the ocean are Charles Watts, A. B. Moss, George Standring, J. N. Wheeler, and J. A. Brumage.

There was a little difference of opinion shown on the secretaryship election. Mr. Foote, the practical man, held about the same idea as to this office that some of the practical members of the Secular Union in this country hold. He put it in this way in a resolution: "That the conference select an honorary secretary as before, and leave the executiv to employ and pay an assistant to do the clerical work of the office in London, and that this arrangement take effect three months after the present (1892) conference. He (the president) had all the threads of the society's work connected with his fingers, he knew the old arrangement was no the most efficient one in the present condition of their strength and present condition of their finances." The situation in England is about as here. A secretary selected from the prominent members of the party and put to clerical work costs too much money; but a secretary who only directed could serve without pay, while the amount necessary for clerk hire would be small, thus saving the funds for real work. Mr. Foote's motion, after a lively debate, prevailed.

A notice of a motion to the effect "That it is desirable for all Freethinkers to wear a distinctiv badge, say a pansy," was not moved; and another motion to form a National Secular Temperance Society was put where it will probably die. In formally closing the business portion of the conference Mr. Foote referred to the sharp remarks made by the delegates. Differences of opinion, he said, were not necessarily signs of rending or decay. The stagnant pool would be harmonious enough, its surface was but occasionally broken by the snapping of a turtle or the leaping of a frog; but true, wholesome, fertilizing water runs and leaps and dashes, and their party never could hav the quiescence of the stagnant pool. Let them hav the vehemence of the rushing river. It was easy enough to organize sheep; one dog would organize a thousand; when they came to organize Freethinkers it was a different matter. They had more individuality, or they would never hav become Freethinkers. They sought for truth. They could not hav the flash of the lightning without the meeting of the thunder-clouds, and out of the thunder clash of diverse opinions in honest debate they hoped, and experience justified the hope, there might leap forth the lightning of truth.

In the evening a public meeting was held, and several speakers talked to a crowded house. Two of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S English contributors were among them, Mr. Sam Standring being the first speaker. He said he would confine his remarks to the question of organization. At a conference of that sort one could only speak of those threads which needed pulling together so as to make the whole society throughout the country go forward with a tremendous swing. There were many possibilities, he believed, before the Secular Society, but he did not want to speak so much of possibilities as of practicable things; and the first thing to be done was to make up their minds exactly what it was they wanted. The first thing, he thought, which should be done was to organize the ladies a bit. In Manchester they had some bonnie wenches, but they were not organized. All the branches to-day were largely weak because enough notice was not taken of the lady members of the different branches. Another point which he thought they wanted to consider was a little more self-sacrifice on the part of those w ho might make self-sacrifice not necessarily in money, but in time.

Mr. A. B. Moss said Secularists had made up their mind upon one thing, and that was that it was their bounden duty to do their best to destroy superstition, especially the Christian superstition, and one of the worst features of the Christian superstition was the foolish and cruel idea that unbelief is a crime. While Christians harbored this idea, while they considered that unbelief proceeded from a bad heart instead of from a clear head, Secularists were bound to do their best to destroy such a superstition. Christians had recently modified their beliefs, but he was convinced that these modifications had been brought about by the zealous conduct, the strong criticism, and the enthusiasm of the Freethought party. The idea of Secularists was to destroy all belief in supernaturalism, and his belief was that once superstitious people gave up belief in a personal devil it would not be long before they gave up belief in a personal God. When they had given up so much it would not be long before they gave up belief in miracles, and then religion would be only a question of conduct. That was exactly what they wanted Christians to understand. If human beings were to hav any religion at all, it was not to be a religion based upon supernaturalism, but upon human conduct, the issues of which can be decided here and now. The Secularists' creed was that this life is the only life of which we hav any knowledge, and that human conduct here is good just in proportion as it is useful, and it is useful without regard to any considerations of a future life.

Charles Watts, in his speech, seemed to be pretty much himself. He congratulated the conference on the excellent work which had been done that day. An attempt had been made to consolidate and extend the influence of Secular forces. There was a necessity for that work because they had evils in their midst that theology had failed to correct, and from the fact that there were many earnest and sincere men and women who could no longer prostrate their reason at the shrine of ancient tradition. The great requirement of the age was a more comprehensiv standard of right—of faith based not upon the conjectures of the future, but upon the experience of the past. The voice of all history was that so far as society had progressed and broken away from the fetters of a dark and ignorant past it had been achieved not by theology, but by secular effort.

Mr. Foote pronounced the benediction, derisivly controverting the statements that the Freethought movement had received its deathblow either in the loss of Mr. Bradlaugh or the defection of Mrs. Besant from Freethought to Theosophy. He went on to discuss what it was the Freethought party lived for. First of all, he took it, it lived to win the right of equal freedom for all to think, speak, and act in their own fashion. The party also lived for the Secularization of life. They held that deed was higher than creed, and conduct than belief. Let them, as Mr. Watts had said, leave conjectures about the future and deal with the realities of the present. They were trying, and bit by bit they were succeeding, in driving the priests out of the school. Why should they suborn the child's mind in the interests of the priests' dogmas? Were the priests afraid if they let it grow up unbiased it would never in its maturity accept their creed? If so, their creed should be cast into oblivion and contempt. If not, then they must let the child's mind hav a chance. They wanted also to further Secularize life on the lines of Charles Bradlaugh by making equal laws. All these things were to be done by the force of education. Then, having done their best for the human race here, they might face any hereafter if there be such; and if there should be no hereafter the consciousness of duty done would tint with rainbow and orient colors the mists of death far more surely than any expected glories from the vague and mystic land of dreams.

On behalf of the Freethinkers of this country we extend to our brethren in the mother country assurances of cordial regards, and a hope to see them over here at the World's Fair, even though they may not look at some of the exhibits on Sundays.

Judge Lawrence Denies Colonel Ingersoll's Motion.

In his answer to Colonel Ingersoll's complaint for libel the Rev. A. C. Dixon set up as a defense these three points:

1. That in February, 1878, Colonel Ingersoll, as chairman of a committee, presented a petition to Congress for the repeal of sections 1,785, 3,878, 3,893, 5,389, and 2,491 of the United States Revised Statutes, which in part prohibit the transmission of obscene literature and other articles through the mails. The petition contained about seventy thousand names and was twenty-one hundred feet long. The Society for the Suppression of Vice appeared against the petition and it was killed.

It is claimed also in this defense that Colonel Ingersoll addressed a convention of the National Liberal League of Cincinnati in September, 1878, having the same purpose in view, and was one of those to issue the following card:

"A convention for a free people to make a free land, free thought, free speech, free ballot, and free mails, which must be secured by a secular republican emancipation from church domination."

It is also averred in this regard that when D. M. Bennett was convicted in this city for violation of these laws in a paper he published, Colonel Ingersoll offered resolutions of sympathy with Bennett at a meeting, and said that he was convicted "by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal." He had also petitioned the president to pardon Bennett.

2. That in 1882 a book was issued at Chicago entitled "Thinkers, Principally upon Social Science; What They Think and Why," by Van Buren Denslow, LL.D. Colonel Ingersoll wrote an introduction to the book, in which he commended it, and said: "In my judgment this book, filled with original thought, will hasten the coming of the blessed time."

Mr. Dixon says that in commending this book Colonel Ingersoll must be responsible for the following propositions which the author makes:

"1. That it is right and proper to lie.

"2. That it is right and proper to steal.

"3. That it is right and proper to be unchaste."

Mr. Dixon also holds Colonel Ingersoll responsible for this statement of the author in this book:

"So, the laws forbidding unchastity were framed by those who in the earlier periods of civilization could afford to own women, for the protection of their property rights in them against the poor who could not. It will be observed that in the Jewish Decalog the rule 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife' is introductory to the kindred rule, 'nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.' The will and preference of the wife in question is no more regarded or assumed to exist than that of the ox, nor does the Decalog forbid a woman to covet her neighbor's husband. The fitness of the existing union is not considered. Chastity begins, therefore, as an element in the law of the strong for the government of the weak, concerning property."

In the last defense, Mr. Dixon says:

"For years he has been making, for pay and otherwise, speeches and writing books and pamphlets attacking Christianity, in which he has blasphemed God, denied the inspiration of the Bible, and sought to weaken the sanctity and authority of the moral law."

The language used by Mr. Dixon, constituting the libel, is this:

"Infidelity fosters impure literature. A few years ago it was found that pictures and impure publications were passing through the mails. Anthony Comstock decided to stop it. On investigation whom should he find representing publishers of impure literature but Colonel Ingersoll, paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation?"

Recently, before Judge Lawrence in the supreme court, Colonel Ingersoll moved to strike out these three "defenses" on the ground of irrelevancy and not being proper subjects for defense in the action. The motion was denied. Judge Lawrence probably wants to hear a speech from the colonel, and these are the only points Dixon could get in.

In the West.

News and Notes.

A wonderful land indeed unrolls before the vision as one speeds on the Denver & Rio Grande to Salt Lake City. Mountains and plains intermingle and rushing waters gem the wild panorama. The Royal gorge hems one in with crowding ranks of towering and bannered rocks, blazing with color. As the gorgeous daylight, with its limitless pictures, changes into the splendid moonlight, showering a thousand pinnacles, still more lovely scenes attract the view. Into the canyons of the Grand river we roll, and with the swift music of the abounding stream gleam our flashing lights, and round and round we seem to whirl into inextricable chasms, while the gigantic mountains bathed in silver luster unfold and change and mix and mingle like the fantastic imageries of a dream. What witchery it is—the thunder of the train, the silence of the hills, the tumult of the river, the dazzling summits sinking into infinit darkness.

With dawn the lofty and rugged summits disappear, and the gentle valley spreads amid undulating hills. Pleasant valley indeed it is, green and beautiful, overlooked by soft gray hights in the summer's morning.

Scofield is a mining town of somewhat magnificent distances, being about three miles long, with about one thousand people. This was formerly quite a Mormon settlement, and it would scarcely do for the gentile to say his say. But these times hav passed, and the priest can no more rule. There has been discussion and thought and progress. A few Liberals hav dared to express themselvs, to openly debate, to challenge the church and the saints, and so to-day Scofield is one of the best Freethought places in Utah.

I lectured on Thursday, June 9th, to a nearly full house. The Mormon leaders were present, took notes, but had nothing to say in reply—even admitted that they had learned something new, and meant to investigate.

The next day, June 10th, it snowed. Think of that! Several inches fell. There was almost enough for a sleigh-ride. The hills were clothed in white, a picture of winter in the bosom of summer. It was quite delightful.

Along toward evening the gentle storm ceased, and the rays of sunset faintly struggled forth over the white landscape. Tramping through the snow I find the schoolhouse again full of people to listen to what but few of them had ever heard before. I hav seldom addressed a more attentiv or appreciativ audience. Evidently they were willing to hear something novel and giv it a fair field.

After the lecture there was a sociable and dance. There is nothing in this objectionable to the Mormons. Like David, they believe in dancing before the Lord. It is a pious exercise. They open and close all dances with prayer. I do not know whether this performance is an improvement to the prayers or to the dancing. If it makes the prayers more lively, so much the better. Formerly they didn't allow "round dances," but now they do.

I hav not had a more delightful time than at Scofield, although it is somewhat on the verge of civilization. There is plenty of intelligence in a mining camp. Theology does not flourish much there.

M. P. Braffit, through whom I arranged for the lectures at this point, is a "true blue" Liberal. He is the son of Dr. J. H. Braffit, of Pawpaw, Ill., and his enthusiasm for Freethought has a good ancestral fountain. Wherever my friend goes he always puts in a good stroke for Freethought. He has traveled extensivly over this Western country, and has never failed to express his honest convictions. Along with him is Conductor J. M. Morris, who, when he first came to Scofield, did not find much encouragement for Liberal ideas, but he has not flinched although some of the church adherents threatened his life. But it was too late for that. He told them the church could no longer use the sword.

Judge Harkness comes from Thorndyke, Mass., and is a Freethinker from away back. He has been in this country quite a number of years and has exercised a marked influence.

D. Wright is another of our good friends here, and T. J. Lewis and Jos. Patterson, T. M. Donaldson, Dr. Cunningham, D. S. Webb, B. R. Macdonald, F. Strang, A. H. Earl, and others. We can "hold the fort" now at Scofield without much difficulty, although the saints in the past hav had such sway. But their star is disappearing. The rays of Freethought will illumin Pleasant Valley, and the "joss-house" will be no more.

I shall come back to Scofield at the first opportunity, for the welcome to Freethought has been most exhilarating among these "gray and melancholy hills" within whose bosom of fire and smoke toils the dauntless man, victorious over God and devil.

On Sunday morning the valley of the Salt lake unfolds its splendor between the white walls of its mountainous ramparts. A beautiful valley, and no wonder that the saints rested here, as in a paradise to be. It needed no "revelation" to discover the felicities of this happy spot. Salt Lake City is advancing to a proud position. It has now a population of over fifty thousand. It is sure to be a great railroad and manufacturing center. They are talking of railroads now to southern California, and Texas, and the gulf, and this will open a vast country to this "city of the saints," not with the glory of heaven, however, but the riches of earth. Every kind of metal is found in Utah. The angel Maroni is now shining and blowing his golden trumpet from the top of the temple, but he will bring no messenger from the skies, no glitter from above. The wealth and glory of Utah is in the soil, and in its freighted hills, and the pick and the spade will do more than Gabriel's horn.

It has been several years since I was in Salt Lake City, and changes hav taken place. Friends hav come and gone, but a large audience greets me at Salt Lake Theater. Old faces and new faces are there. I lecture on Sunday evening, June 12th, and lecture again next Sunday evening.

There is a numerous Liberal element in this city. The Rev. Mr. Utter, of the Unitarian church, is getting together quite a large assembly. He is a man of fine intellectual power, of eloquent address, and broad and generous sympathies. He is beyond denominational lines, and the Liberals of this place are in cordial alliance with his work. I must thank him for his noble and pleasant words of introduction at my lecture. He was not afraid to stand upon the same platform with me, and to giv me a welcome as a Freethought lecturer to Salt Lake. He almost introduced me as a "Rev." in kindly remembrance of our oldtime fellowship in the Unitarian ranks. Well, I spent some of my happiest years in the Unitarian fold, in which is included so much after all of the beauty and grandeur of human progress. I hav had to step beyond, but memories are delightful of the genial spirits of this splendid humanitarian movement. Mr. Utter is the man for Salt Lake City. He is fearless and sincere in his utterances. He has his own convictions, but is ready to coöperate with the radical worker on diverse lines of thought.

In my "News and Notes" of next week I shall hav more to say of this peculiar city whose history is so unique and interesting, and whose outlook is so attractiv.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book."

Theresa Thorndale in Sandusky Daily Register.

The object of this publication professedly is to illustrate "the absurdity and untruthfulness of the church's claim to be a divine and beneficent institution."

The book is of large size, containing copious extracts from the most pronounced Atheists and Agnostics of the past and present times, including Tom Paine, Voltaire, Robert G. Ingersoll, and others, together with doggerel rhymes by Henry Luttrell, attacking the Bible, the church, and religious belief the world over, in the most virulent and calumnious manner. Extensiv pictorial representations, in glaring colors, are employed to illustrate the text—caricatures at once the vilest, most offensiv, libelous, and diabolical ever conceived by human brain, or executed by artist's pencil. Caricatures which cause the flesh to creep with loathing and disgust, and which exhibit the contorted imagery of a mind insane with baseness and malignity. The arch-fiend himself, with all his inventiv genius inspired by rabid and frothing virulence, and with all the resources of the inferno at command, could never hav designed anything more villainously false and scurrilous than these representations. Nothing in the way of illustration has been deemed too hideous and exaggerated wherewith to attack and vilify not only the church and religious belief in general, but likewise every collateral institution thereof, which has for its object the relief, the uplifting, and bettering of humanity.

Earnest and disinterested workers, who are giving their best efforts toward the moral and spiritual advancement of the race, are made—individually and collectivly—the target of the caricaturist, possessed as it were of a frantic and satanic eagerness to tear down, to raze, to destroy.

Upon one hand the church is charged with ignorance and superstition, while upon the other, the magnificent schools and colleges founded by churches, and which stand as monuments of intellectual growth and advancement, are blindly assailed. Hospitals under church supervision, missions, home and foreign, and every Christian enterprise along that line, receive the besmirching touch; likewise the Young Men's Christian Association, which is accomplishing in our cities a work so praiseworthy and successful in the establishment of reading-rooms, lyceums, lecture courses, gymnasiums, and in seeking in every possible way to shield young men and boys from corrupting influences and directing and sustaining them in paths of manly virtue and integrity.

The band of patient, long-suffering women representing the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who, in "the name of God," are so earnestly and arduously working to save husbands, fathers, brothers, and sons from drunkards' graves, and their home from ruin, are not forgotten by the caricaturist, neither sex nor consideration of the wrongs inflicted thereon affording protection.

Even the Sunday-school, wherein the young are taught the rudimentary principles of virtue and morality, has not escaped the vile and slanderous dart. Had the compilers of the "Freethinker's Text-Book" confined their attacks to the formalism and conventionality; the individual fraud and hypocrisy known and acknowledged to exist in the church as in every other organization, had their criticisms borne the stamp of cool, unprejudiced, and truthful reasoning, these criticisms and attacks might appear more justifiable; but the sweeping and indiscriminate assault upon the adherents of religious belief as a body shows a narrowness and pusillanimity in keeping with the character of the work.

Antagonism, if fair, honest, and honorable, is entitled to respectful consideration, but an antagonism which is a mere vent of spleen, of vituperation, of false accusations and degraded witticism, is utterly beneath the notice of those who are made its object. To the oblivion of silence and contempt, therefore, would we consign the "Freethinker's Text-Book," but for one consideration—namely, the baleful and unhallowed influence which its gross perversions and misrepresentations exert upon society at large.

The person who is widely and intelligently read, is in no danger of contamination from a perusal of this book. His practiced mind readily detects the sophistry employed, and after winnowing therefrom a vast amount of chaff, finds little remaining. To his mind—capable of a true estimate—the projected shafts of ridicule are formidable in appearance only, and fall harmlessly, the weapons of a groveling and despicable foe.

The individual, however, of narrow research, of limited reasoning powers, or whose moral and spiritual nature has become vitiated, becomes a ready victim to its poisonous inculcations. Its most deplorable effects, however, are those exerted upon the minds of the young, the character of youth being molded by every surrounding influence, and like a sensitized plate receiving impressions of all objects focused upon it. Children are more readily attracted by pictorial representations than older persons, and when these representations are hideous distortions of truth and virtue, the result can be but the sowing of seed which in after years must yield a harvestage of Dead sea fruit. Such a book in a home will blight and destroy the healthful, hopeful, and beautiful ideals of life and create youthful and hardened cynics than which nothing can be more painful or revolting. In bringing into his family a venomed rattlesnake as a pet or plaything, the head of a household does a less unwise act than in introducing this mocking, scurrilous publication wherewith to poison the minds of his children. To destroy the idea of immortality means to brutalize. With nothing for which to hope but a brief and precarious present existence, with no prospect of future reward or punishment—the cause and effect of present acts—to nerve and inspire to a life of virtue or restrain from criminality, the average man rapidly descends to a common level with that of things which cling to the earth element; and that creep and crawl thereon, having no higher aspiration than "to eat, drink, and be merry." To such a level does the "Freethinker's Text-Book" seek to reduce its adherents.

For the sake of individuals liable to become prejudiced by cunningly devised and seemingly plausible sophistries the writer proposes, therefore, to answer as many of the insinuations against religion and the Bible contained in this book as is possible within the limited compass of a newspaper article. Following the trend of blind conceit, cavilers at religious belief are disposed to arrogate exclusivly to themselvs the fruits of scientific research, overlooking through ignorance or ignoring through malice the fact that religion has claims in the scientific field prior to their own and of a magnitude far greater.

Modern science is to-day unlocking many historic and symbolic mysteries of the Bible, the significance of which hav hitherto been misconstrued or hav remained shrouded in complete obscurity. For example, the first chapter of Genesis stands preëminent as the exposition of a science supposed by many to be of modern origin—namely, geology. Considering the age in which it was written, the crudities and imperfections of the existing languages, the possible mutilations of translators—the agreement of this scripture with modern theories is remarkable, and it stands to-day conspicuous as an authentic and well-preserved cosmological record. The fact that old-time Bible-readers failed to comprehend the now clearly demonstrable problem of the earth's structure, as chronicled in these sacred writings, serves only to illustrate the weakness and superficiality of finite reasoning and the vastness incommensurable of the infinit. Says the Psalmist: "Canst thou, by searching, find out God? Canst thou find out the almighty to perfection? Behold, it is higher than heaven, what canst thou do, deeper than hell, what canst thou know?" And so all along the ages, poor humanity has stumbled over these high and deep things of God, narrowing down the days of creation to the modern signification of the term, forgetting the declaration of holy writ, that "with God a day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day;" or in other words, an indefinit period of duration. Concerning the mighty cataclysm, biblically known as the "deluge," legends of which still exist among all tribes and nations of the globe—many of whom never heard of the Bible—the old-time reader again stumbled. "The windows of heaven were opened and the fountains of the great deep were broken up." The passage puzzled him. He vaguely wondered what was meant by "fountains of the great deep" and their "breaking up," never for an instant realizing that a great convulsion of nature, with perhaps the sinking of a continent, was involved therein. To this passage modern science furnishes the key.

Noah's ark and its construction also gave him trouble, as it is still giving trouble to the big, overgrown children of the Atheistic school. "How could the deluge hav submerged the whole world, and how could the ark hav contained all the animals and things said to hav been herded therein?"

They forget, or perhaps never knew, that "the world" is used in a relativ rather than an absolute sense. That up to the time of Ptolemy "the world," so far as known, comprised but a small portion of southern Asia, the northern part of Africa, or Lybia, and Europe-Europa. The world of the antediluvians may hav been far more limited in extent even than this. It may hav been the "Lost Atlantis" of which Plato tells, and of which the scientist Ignatius Donnelly treats at length. The animal life of an obviously limited world could not hav been extensiv, and a vessel such as described could hav easily contained a full representation of each species.

Over "Jonah and the whale" and other symbolic writings of the Old Testament, blunder both the old-time believer and the modern unbeliever, and each gets his nose bumped in a manner which seems almost ludicrous, both construing literally and neither comprehending.

Archeological research and discovery is throwing light upon many a mysterious and apparently meaningless passage of scripture writing. The claims of religion and the Bible in the scientific field are thus being fully substantiated, and it is noteworthy that some of our most distinguished scholars and scientists are believers in the Bible records. Among examples near home may be cited Professor Wright, of Oberlin College, one of the ablest geologists in America, a firm believer in Christianity and an earnest advocate thereof. A smattering of ideas supposed to be scientific, is what ails very many of the Atheists and Agnostics of to-day. Says Watts:

> A little learning is a dangerous thing,
> Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring,
> For shallow drafts intoxicate the brain,
> While drinking deeply sobers us again.

To the Freethinker's charge that the Bible was written by "unscientific and illiterate men," what say Professor Wright and other Christian scientists? What say scholars and critics the world over? Treating on the subject of sublimity in his "Advanced Course of Composition and Rhetoric," G. P. Quackenbos thus observes, concerning the literary merits of this book:

"The grandest of all passages are found in the earliest of books, the Bible. What can transcend in grandeur the following descriptions?" Which query is followed by copious quotations from the sacred writings.

Literary critics from ancient time to the present day hav concurred in attributing the highest sublimity and poetic beauty to biblical writers, as exampled in the books of Job, Psalms, Isaiah, Habakkuk, and portions of the New Testament.

That the Bible writer was posted on the sciences of astronomy and geology, and had made a general study of practical philosophy; that he knew something of the laws of gravitation, even in that obscure age, is further evidenced by observations such as these:

Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades or loose the bands of Orion? Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season, or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?

Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect in knowledge?

He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea, or hast thou walked in search of the depth? Hav the gates of death been opened unto thee, or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?

Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?

Doth the hawk fly by thy wisdom and stretch her wings toward the south? Doth the eagle mount up at thy command and make her nest on high? She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, the crag of the rock and the strong place; from thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off.

In corroboration of the scientist's theory that the center of the earth is an ocean of flame and that the planet is liable to speed to final destruction as a rushing, burning comet, the Bible says: "The earth, being on fire, shall melt with fervent heat;" and again it is quaintly but logically observed: "As for the earth, out of it cometh bread and under it is turned up as it were fire."

Here is a combination of beauty, sublimity, and philosophical inquiry which would do credit to even the modern thinker.

St. Paul was a scholar of note, and so logical, so forcible, and eloquent was his defense before King Agrippa, that almost was that hard-hearted Roman persuaded to an adoption of the Christian's faith.

Notwithstanding his assumption of scientific enlightenment, the Atheist exhibits a superficiality and obtuseness commensurate only with his arrogance. While admitting the established facts of science relativ to the indestructibility of matter, he yet assumes that the mind, or spiritual being which thinks, feels, and aspires; that most subtle, all-powerful, incomprehensible force of all known forces, which from its very nature is most fitted to survive, this he ignorantly and ignobly consigns to annihilation.

The claim of Christianity as a civilizing and enlightening influence is repudiated by "The Freethinker's Text-Book," which cites by way of comparison the superior civilization of ancient Rome under pagan rule and Rome of to-day under the sway of Christianity. Where, we ask, in all the annals of history can be found a more revolting record of profligacy and moral debauchery than existed among the ancient Romans? or where such wanton cruelty as characterized this nation from ruler to subject? No more execrable name than that of Nero blackens the page of the past, and the very appellation of Roman stands to-day as a synonym of all that is hard, stern, cruel, and despotic. A model populace, indeed, was that which could laugh and applaud the dying groans of their fellow-beings pitted in the arena against savage beasts, and gloat over flowing blood and death agonies. A civilization devoid of spiritualizing and humanizing influences is but refined barbarism.

The bigotry and intolerance of historic churches, and the religious persecutions which were carried on by some of its representativs, are charged against the faith. The gospel of Christ, we answer, has nothing in common with bigotry and intolerance; it is free, magnanimous, and wide as the world. The doctrin of "universal brotherhood" claimed by the Theosophist and grafted upon his esoteric sciences is but the essence of Christianity as recognized by its true followers. Because the mistaken zealots of an ignorant age did wrong it is as unreasonable that the system itself should be condemned, as that it should fall into disrepute because of the fraud and hypocrisy which to-day masquerade beneath it.

The fact that traitors in disguise touch elbows with true soldiers in the ranks of an army may retard and injure the cause, but should not reflect discredit thereon.

Prison convicts and rogues in general, as charged by the Freethinker, often profess a leaning toward this or that church, when in reality they are its covert enemies. From the fact that murderers and cutthroats generally seek religious consolation before commission to the gallows, the Freethinker classifies them as "representativ Christians." For reply it may be briefly said that the blackest criminal who yields his neck to the halter is not like the average Atheist; when arrives the hour supreme, and life with all its objects is slipping from his grasp, instinctivly he reaches toward the only power that can aid, the divinity, which all his life he professed to deny.

> For almost everyone, when age,
> Disease, or sorrow strikes him,
> Inclines to think there is a God,
> Or something very like him.

With all deferences to any and every religious system which has for its object the upbuilding of humanity, there does not exist a religious power more elevating and satisfying than that of Christianity, when comprehended in its brightest spiritual sense.

Faith, denominated by the uncomprehending critic "blind," is in reality a clear second sight, a spiritual discernment, as convincing to the inner consciousness as visual sight to the outer perception, and is known to those, and only to those, who hav felt its inspiring power. By its aid faltering humanity may grasp for sustenance the arm of Omnipotence. Through faith, the weak, the weary, and the troubled are enabled to peep onward hopefully, and even joyfully. In life's darkest hours, when everything worth living for seems vanishing like an evanescent cloud or a beautiful dream, faith touches, and idealizes, and makes still cognizant the cherished objects which hav passed beyond our grasp. In the great moral struggles of men and nations how many a glorious victory has been scored on the side of faith.

Lost in the gloaming; groping blindly over dangerous and uncertain ground, it is faith which kindles a hopeful ray and inspires the wanderer as he sings:

> Lead, kindly Light! amid the encircling gloom,
> Lead thou me on.
> The night is dark and I am far from home;
> Lead thou me on.
> . . . . . .
> So long thy power has kept me, sure it still
> Will lead me on;
> O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
> The night is gone.

The sublimity of faith transcends all other elements of sublimity. It was this which inspired the great masterpieces of renowned artists; all that livs and speaks from the printed page. Faith tipped with inspiration the pen of Handel when he composed that greatest of musical compositions, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." It is faith that thrills and vibrates in Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," and that givs such transcendent beauty and depth to the poems of Whittier.

One of the most thrilling songs ever written, and which exemplifies the sublimity of the Christian faith, was composed from an incident which occurred some years ago on the coast of Wales. Off a wild and rugged promontory a vessel had been driven upon sunken rocks. A storm of unprecedented fury swept the sea, and realizing the utter inability of human aid to reach her, the peasantry gathered with blanched faces on the shore to watch the inevitable breaking up of the doomed ship. Through leveled glasses they saw her canvas torn away and her rigging swept by the board. They saw the great waves mount her sides and numbered the crew as one by one they were picked up and carried overboard. They saw the masts, main and mizzen, go crashing into the sea, until but one remained, and clinging to the crosstrees the last survivor of the wreck. In the crowd on shore was a clergyman, and to him was handed a speaking trumpet, with the words, "Send him a message."

He hesitated, not knowing what to say; then placing the trumpet to his lips, he shouted:

"Look to Jesus! Can you hear?"

In a moment came back the answer,

"Aye, aye, sir!"

Then, clearly, above the roar of wind and sea, they heard him singing:

> Jesus, lover of my soul,
> Let me to thy bosom fly;
> While the billows round me roll,
> While the tempest still is high.

Impressed by the strange and awful grandeur of the situation, and the power of a faith that could signally triumph in such an hour, the group on shore listened spell-bound:

> Other refuge hav I none,
> Hangs my helpless soul on thee,
> Leave, oh, leave me not——

The mast swayed and toppled, and in a moment the sailor had plunged to a death which for him had lost its terrors.

As an example of sustaining faith may be cited an occurrence in which again figures the grand old hymn above quoted. The occasion was the very recent death of a young lady—well known to the writer of this article—in one of the northern counties of Ohio. To the last Emma C—— was in the full possession of her reasoning faculties. Shortly before her final dissolution she exclaimed:

"O mother, I hear them singing!"

"Whom do you mean?"

"The angels in heaven. They are singing, 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul.'"

Then, clasping her hands, she joined her feeble voice with that of the invisible choir, singing the hymn to its close.

A moment later she said, "O mother, I see a beautiful stream of water; it is clear as crystal," and she motioned as if dipping it up with her hands. Her closing moments were the embodiment of peace serene; of joy ecstatic, when from the portals of the great unknown the curtains were swung backward and faith bid her enter.

These are but samples of multitudinous instances, falling constantly beneath our notice, of the uplifting, upholding, and comforting power of the Christian faith in hours which try men's souls. With St. Paul many a failing voice has been led by faith to exclaim:

> For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor hight, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Grim-featured death cannot be glossed into attractivness by even the seductiv rhetoric of an Ingersoll. Despite the acknowledged strength and beauty of his eloquence, he leaves a void unfilled. Despite his deep and absorbing love of kindred and friends, he offers no hope of reunion with them in the great hereafter. The very best he givs us to expect is a brief and uncertain present career, with a black oblivion beyond.

A religion which enables its earnest and true followers to liv nobly and courageously and to die rapturously is a triumphant success, where so-called Freethought and Atheism fail utterly.

Put-in Bay, May 18, 1892.

What Is Man?

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: There is a little frisky bantam rooster in town, kept for the amusement of children and passers-by, who when accosted will flap his wings, turn right about face, and fight the biggest man in town. He does not stand a ghost of a chance to "lick," but actions plainly indicate that he thinks he is as good as "any other man."

August Buesing, in your issue of the 4th inst., assails Materialists in like manner. He bristles all over with fight and conceit, and insists (indirectly) that his head is level, his ideas are in harmony with nature's laws, his mind is cultivated fit to reason and to demonstrate the truth as it exists in nature, but not the minds of Materialists. His five senses are acute, his thoughts are not limited to present existence, and he is acquainted with a former and a future life; all of which, however, he sadly fails to prove—kikirikih!—a bantam rooster still.

He scornfully resents sneers, but in his short effusion embodies more sneers and abuse of Materialists than I hav used in nearly forty years of friendly intercourse with Spiritualists.

Recognizing the necessity of proving a former eternal life to prove a future eternal life, he points to our very limited prenatal existence, and after expressing the strange desire (no accounting for taste) again to inhabit that world which we inhabited the day preceding our birthday (!) he exclaims defiantly: "Any person who denies an existence in time that preceded his birth is, in my estimation, an ignoramus, a lunatic, or a liar!" And now thinks, after this brilliant coup de bantam rooster, he has proved that we hav "existed in the universe in all ages." Kikirikih!

Not desiring or expecting to transform a member of the genus fowl into a thinking man, yet, having gained a text for a very important subject, I desire, upon this occasion, to make clear to your readers, beyond cavil and dispute, that man, as such being, did begin in time, and consequently, as such being, must end in time.

There is no such thing in existence, abstractly speaking, as a man. If there was he would indeed be eternal, for existence implies eternal existence; neither can the sum total of all existence be lessened or increased to the amount of a single atom. But there exist, so to speak, certain forms of matter composed of certain aggregations of atoms, which we call "man," but separate and apart from these aggregated physical and chemical elements such forms hav no existence. When such particular aggregations of matter constitute a man, youth, child, infant, fetus, germ, we name these forms accordingly and know them as such while they exist as such, but when the material constituents of such forms are again scattered to the four winds of heaven and identical particles constitute other forms, the previous forms, of course, hav vanished forever.

Here is a seed. It was born of a flower, which in turn evolved from a seed. But had conditions not favored the maturing of the flower, this identical seed would not now exist. We plant it and it soon loses its original form. It unites with other elements, grows, and daily changes. The forms of to-day, to-morrow will be no more. Now it buds and blossoms and is covered with magnificent flowers in profusion. Alas! that those beautiful forms cannot exist forever. But it cannot be. Eternal change is the inexorable law of nature. All forms are transient, changing even when not perceived by man. But see, what are these? Little sacks containing many duplicate seeds of the original seed planted. Thus nature ever supplies with prolific hand the means to perpetuate the species. Soon the flowers wither; an early frost will destroy the last vestige of the organic form. It is dead. Living, vital, potent, inorganic matter, however, remains, ever struggling and finding new affinities, then to mingle and giv life to new forms. But the original flower is no more.

So the form of man is but transient. In fact, he changes daily—no two days the same man. And thus we lose our infants, children, youths, and maidens, though death does not snatch them from us. The form of man is preceded by the form of a youth; the youth by a boy; the boy by an infant; the infant by a fetus; the fetus by a germ or seed, the latter originating—growing—when the parents arrived at ages of man- and womanhood and when their forms developed such germs. As the matured flower developed the seed to perpetuate the species, so the matured man (and such man only) develops the seed to perpetuate the human race.

The origin or beginning of the form of man is therefore not an unsolved problem, the period of his prenatal life or preëxistence is not an uncertain fact. It is absolute and self-evident. The form of man begins when his parents mature and develop the seeds or germs which eventually evolve into the form of man. He individually could not exist if his parents did not mature such germs, and the human race would soon vanish with the cessation of such processes.

That the form of each individual man, then, does begin in time, and does not begin until the growth of the seed is complete, and does not exist during all the ages of beginningless time prior to such time, must be conceded, but this concession necessitates the like dictum of logic that what begins in time must end in time.

Man is but a form of matter. There are no eternal forms. Hence man cannot be eternal.

There is no analogy in nature for an immortal form. The pyramids, the world, the sun, stars and systems, hav no existence as such or per se; all are but mutable forms of immutable matter, the former ever changing, the latter alone eternal and forever the same. And all these forms at one time were not—other forms preceded them—and all these forms at some time in the remote future will not be, but other forms—non-existent now—will continue the evoluting and involuting process forever.

Thus all forms begin, grow to maturity—never stand still—then the disintegrating processes begin and continue their work of destruction till the last vestige of such forms has vanished, and so on forever.

And the form of man is man. When the fetus or seed, such a form was not man, but what such names indicate. It is the matured living organism—and nothing more or less—which constitutes the man. This organism is man, and man necessitates such organism or he doesn't exist. The functions of man—life, mind, his senses, etc.—are dependent upon such organism—effect and cause—and in the absence of such form cannot continue. All the sciences—chemistry, physiology, anatomy, phrenology, and others—are based upon this fact, and are a farce if such functions can exist without necessitating the complex, living, breathing, physical form of man. If the anatomy, brain, nervous system, organs, etc., are a necessity to man during life, what folly to insist that such man can continue to exist during all eternity without them.

And Brother Perry's "proofs" are childish problems beside the overwhelming enigma: How man can exist when all which constituted him a man has assumed other form? OTTO WETTSTEIN.

Rochelle, Ill.

The Materialist Resembles the Laborer Who Clears the Ground for a New Temple.

The Materialist has always contended that it was the duty of every man to sneer at faith and at an everlasting life. He maintains that the human body is the master, the governor of the mind.

Truth is an element which the Materialist can neither handle nor analyze. Should he for this reason hav a right to deny its existence?

Truth is my yardstick—a measure which I apply to ascertain the grade and quality. The Materialist's limiting his thoughts to the present existence unfits him to be classed among the Freethinkers. In fact, he limits his thoughts, and for this reason he is not a Freethinker. He has neither wit nor a mind that is suitable to reason. His five senses are lame and are too feeble for handling logic and truth. He imagins himself to be a person chockful of wit, well prepared to educate the masses of the world by tearing things down instead of offering them something better. He imagins it great when he blows out the light and permits them to hustle in the dark. He imagins that progress consists in tearing down instead of inventing something superior to what has been in use in the past.

His reasoning would make one believe that a poor man is benefited in tearing down his hut and living for the rest of his days without shelter. Any person who imagins that human progress consists in such rude methods, is, in my estimation, an ignoramus, a lunatic, or a brute. The Materialistic arguments may hav suited the dark ages of the past, but that sort of tearing down without showing any skill in replacing something better in its place is out of season in this age of light, reason, and sunshine. Do not consult a Materialist on a former or future life, because it is beyond his conception. Go to the Spiritualist for truth, reason, and logic.

Jacksonville, Fla. AUGUST BUESING.

Prohibition Party Principles.

There is a class of people in the world who are always expecting dishonesty. They expect to be robbed and mistreated at every turn, and are chagrined and disappointed if such is not the case. They are always expecting disaster—pestilence and famin; earthquake, cyclone, and flood; political crises and financial ruin. These poor souls are sick. They hav dyspepsia or rheumatism, or diseases of other kinds. They are narrow of mind because they suffer in body. They expect the assemblyman from their district to sell his vote when he is offered a good price, because their own stomachs are sour. You may think it is because they would make such a sale of themselvs if they had the chance, but let us be more charitable—let us think it is because of derangement from disease. How can a man think well of a fellow-man if his own liver is paralyzed and his gall, instead of discharging into the proper duct, is being thrown back again into his blood. It goes back to his heart and to his brain, and every part of his body receives a portion of the poison. No wonder he sees in the board of supervisors five fire-eating demons, ready upon a moment's notice to sell their souls for gold—no wonder he sees upon the bench of the superior court monstrous devils dealing out vengeance for money—no wonder he sees in the state legislature only a body of moving putrefaction. He looks at them all through the same "smoked glass, darkly." His eyeballs are yellow with jaundice—poisoned blood—and he must needs look through that poison if he looks at all. Little is the wonder he sees in the uses of innocent wine a dreadful griffin with open jaws ready to swallow the world at one gulp. Looking out from behind his disease and seeing these hallucinations magnified and cast upon the world and sky, is it to be wondered at that he votes with his kind—others as sick as himself—for intemperate measures to govern a healthy people? He cannot see clearly the reason of things. In his affection he forgets that nature's laws are infallible and can not be changed, but is so narrowed down in his mental vision that he believes nature to be the seat and center of disorder. He thinks the human family totally depraved, and fancies that his God naturally hates everything human, and will finally save but a favored few—of which he is one—because of certain family relationship with some of the creatures here below. These people, who are sick, being jealous and unhappy make even their gods jealous and unhappy. Such a man makes for himself a little hell, of which he is the center and chief fireman, but he does it so innocently that we would be less than human if we did not pity him.

As a great man once said, "He mistakes the afternoon of his life for the evening of the world." How unfortunate for progress when a man of broad, cultured mind allows his body to become diseased. To him all nature gradually changes; the sun and moon and stars squint through the yellow mists of his eyeballs, the soft breeze chills his marrow, the song of happy birds jars upon his shattered nerves, the perfume from bursting flowers is nauseating, and nightmares ride him while he tries to rest. The things he used to love seem faded, and those who pleased him once disgust him now. What he says, and does, and writes partakes of his decay. His reason is the first to suffer, and with the loss of that comes fear of something supernatural. The "buggerman" who preyed upon his childhood beacons him again, the world of science has lost a thinker, some branch of superstition gains a dupe, some crafty priest will reap a benefit, and the unfortunate one is pointed to as an example of how great men at last fall in the dirt to worship. Before he dies, perhaps he casts his right of suffrage once upon the side of Prohibition; thus asking that all mankind shall be compelled to see the world through the vail—the yellow-green gall of dissolution—as he is seeing it.

F. H. HEALD.

The State Secular Union of Ohio.

It is with extreme sorrow and regret that I hav to announce the death of our beloved president, Frank Spencer Dean, of Cleveland, O.

His death occurred on the 30th of May last, and the loss of his valued assistance and encouragement will be keenly felt by us, and leaves a void that can not be easily filled.

It was his last wish (also the wish of his affectionate wife) that I should conduct the funeral services, but owing to the delay in transmission of the news of his death, I did not receive it in time to enable me to comply with this, his last request, a circumstance which I deeply lament.

Mr. Dean was one of the most courageous and consistent Freethinkers in the state of Ohio. Never did he hesitate to avow his honest thoughts and to show the world that Freethought is not a passing fancy, but a deep-rooted conviction. His noble life has endeared him to all. Christians and Freethinkers alike were numbered among his friends—friends who loved him living and who loved his memory now that he is gone. And now the most fitting tribute we can pay to his memory is to forget whatever faults he may hav possessed and try only to emulate his virtues.

He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss, who faithfully adhere to the principles he taught them in life. But now this kind and loving husband—an indulgent father, a devoted and generous friend—has gone. He has joined that endless procession passing over the dark, stagnant waters, from whence as yet no traveler has ever returned.

Sad is death at all times, but sadder when as now; sadder when death comes in the full meridian of life, while the sun of existence is still high in the heavens and has scarce turned his steps toward the horizon.

Mr. Dean was but thirty-seven years of age, though in that short time he had earned for himself a name that one twice his years might envy. Now that he is gone, may he sleep in peace, sleep forever in his cloudless tomb. There is no need of marble monument exquisitly and elaborately sculptured, for living thoughts are drooping o'er that grave.

Let this suffice, that the once-loved form is laid there to rest. He lived a Freethinker and died true to his principles. He ever strove to make those around him happy; and living a life without hypocrisy, he died without fear. His friends were legion, all of whom deeply lament his loss, who miss his genial smile and beaming face, and who will think of him with love, honor, and respect.

The first quarterly meeting of the executiv committee of the Ohio Secular Union was held in Columbus, June 12th. In consequence of the death of our president, the duties pertaining to that office hav now been placed in the hands of the second vice-president, Mr. Joseph Simpson, of Columbus, in whose favor the first vice-president, S. M. Bower, had waived all rights owing to the pressure of business matters.

The committee hav now adopted a form of charter and members' certificates, which, together with the constitution, are now under way of printing and will be ready for members and local auxiliaries within the next two weeks. It was also decided by a unanimous vote of the committee that the secretary shall prepare a monster petition from the Freethinkers of Ohio in favor of the opening of the World's Fair upon each and every Sunday during its continuance, and to present the same to proper authorities. Also, that he shall appear before the commissioners on the 6th of October and argue before them in favor of its opening upon these days.

A resolution was also passed, requesting that whenever the death of any of our friends, or any member of this Union, shall occur, the secretary shall be immediately notified of the death of such member, when he will be on hand to conduct the funeral obsequies, and read the Secular burial services. In conjunction with this the committee confidently recommends the secretary to perform these offices. The committee feels that this is an important feature in connection with our work, and we earnestly desire that our friends will comply with this request, for we must bury our own dead, without the interference of any priest, or the mumbling of any church creed. A resolution of condolence and sympathy was also carried, and ordered to be forwarded to the widow of our late president.

The committee having now outlined the work of the secretary for the next few months, we must make an appeal to our friends for help. The work cannot be done without financial aid, and those who desire to see this accomplished are asked to assist us.

We must secure the legitimate opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. It is an important movement just now. Let us only secure this and we shall hav achieved the greatest triumph that our party has witnessed during the present century.

The opening of the Fair on Sunday would be a severe blow at church legislation, and the enactment of pious politics. We must not lose this fight through over-confidence, for the Sabbatarians are exerting themselvs to the utmost to secure their objects. Fraud, perjury, and corruption are the weapons they are now using, considering, no doubt, that could they only gain their point the end would justify the means.

Friends, we must meet this in earnest, and we need your assistance to carry on this just war against ecclesiastical domination. The church has ruled long enough. The priest must be taught to keep his hands off the political life of this country.

But to do this, we need your help, and we must hav it, if we are to succeed. Do not keep in the background, but come to your place in the forefront of this great battle for human freedom.

The first society in connection with this Union has now been successfully organized in Cleveland, where the good work will be carried on by ready hands and willing hearts.

I hav also several other places where I am informed that a local auxiliary may be established, and where I shall visit in good time. All Freethinkers who may desire, being willing to help us financially, to become members of the Union, or where a World's Fair petition may be used to advantage, or wherever a local auxiliary can be established, are earnestly requested to communicate with the secretary at once.

The expense of printing charters, certificates, constitutions, etc., has reached a sum in excess of the amount in our treasury, and there is now a small balance due the wrong way. Friends, we once more appeal to you for help, and to giv us the means of strength whereby we can carry on the glorious cause of Freethought.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Secretary.
JOSEPH SIMPSON, President.
DR. J. B. SCHUELLER, Treasurer.
154 N. High street, Columbus, O.

The Saint of New York.

The United States may fairly regard as an event of national interest the inauguration of the City Club of New York. Nearly four hundred gentlemen, of both political parties, mostly of high position, wealth, and ability, organized a society for the purpose of securing for their city real and honest municipal government, which it has never had. The evil they confront is the long subordination of the welfare of the city to national partisanship, its offices being regarded as part of the spoils with which party services are rewarded. These eminent Republicans and Democrats hav pledged themselvs to exclude national politics from municipal affairs and to oppose candidates proposed by Tammany Hall on the one hand or the Republican machine on the other. The real struggle is against Tammany Hall, which holds New York in the hollow of its hand. In so holding this city, Tammany holds also the state, and, in holding the state whose electors are the most numerous, that organization largely controls the nation. But Tammany itself, these gentlemen declare, is held in the hand of its president, called its "boss"—just now a personage named Croker. It is probable that the majority of Americans never heard of Mr. Croker, yet he is the most powerful individual political factor in the United States. When any election is drawing near the Tammany regiment gather in their Hall; the "boss" sticks up before them on a bulletin-board the names of the mayor and alderman, or the governor and state officers, or the president and electors, for whom they are to fight. No one dreams of asking how or why those names are selected. They all go out and work in primary meetings, when those names are always nominated. The nominees are certain of election if municipal, nearly certain if for the state, and hav if national the only chance of carrying the state electors their party can giv. No Democrat opposed by Tammany can carry the state.

The origin and evolution of St. Tammany form the most extraordinary chapter in our national history.*

Tammany was the name of an ancient chieftain of the Delaware tribes, an aboriginal Charlemagne, invested from the early colonial time with a large mythology, in which he figures as the mightiest of warriors and most virtuous of rulers. Early in the American Revolution some officers and soldiers conciliated the aborigins by calling themselvs "sons of Tammany." Among such soldiers was one John Pintard, of New York city, the virtual founder of the organization, which dates from the period of Washington's first inauguration.

There is a tradition that when the first president was about to be sworn into office at Federal Hall, New York, no Bible was found in the building, and Chancellor Livingston sent for one to the Masonic lodge in John street. The Bible (edition of 1767, containing a portrait of George II.) is preserved in that lodge, adorned with inscriptions. The Masonic legend is that Washington kissed the open book, and the very page is shown; a page showing the picture of Issachar as "a strong ass couching down between two burdens." The legend sounds like the invention of some political philosopher who saw Washington between the two burdens of his time, —a radical democracy, and an obstinate devotion to the pomp and circumstance of royalty. The first month of Congress was given up to an acrimonious dispute between Representativs and the Senators about titles. Among the titles proposed for the president were "his majesty," "his electiv majesty," "high mightiness." A committee of the Senate reported in favor of "his highness the president of the United States, and protector of their liberties." "The lower house," as some heady Senators called it, overruled all this, and compelled the vice-president, John Adams, to address the chief magistrate merely as "the president." It also struck out the phrase in which he proposed to thank the president,—"for his most gracious speech." Adams declared that he never would hav "drawn sword" (purely metaphorical, in his case) if he had foreseen such a result. This aristocratic feeling found its center in a powerful organization known as the "Order of Cincinnati," which preserved the hereditary feature, membership being confined to revolutionary officers and their descendants, in primogeniture. Washington was its first president, but had resigned because of the hereditary feature. He was retained on promis that this feature should be abolished, a promis unfulfilled to this day, when, however, the society of the Cincinnati has become so unimportant that few know or care anything about its regulations. Nevertheless, a hundred years ago, led by General Hamilton, Baron Steuben, and other powerful politicians, it filled the democracy with alarm. Tammany was the American answer to the Cincinnati. Its first public appearance was on old May day (May 12th), 1789, when its members masqueraded as Indian chiefs, in paint and feathers, through the streets of New York. They called themselvs "the Sons of St. Tammany, or the Columbian Order." The "saint" was adopted in competition with the foreign saints of other societies in New York—Patrick, Andrew, George. The new society included then people of different parties, like that which was last night organized to resist it, in its turn, as it once resisted the Cincinnati. The society called its place of meeting the "wigwam," its officers grand sachem, sachems, sagamore, wikinskie. Curiously enough it anticipated the French Revolutionists in their wish to alter the names of the seasons, which Tammany distinguished as blossoms, fruits, snows, hunting. The months were "moons." An old Tammanyite letter might be dated "Manhattan, season of fruits, 17th day of the 7th moon, year of discovery 300th, of Independence 16th, of the Institution 3d." Of the grotesque aboriginal features the chief relics now are two large Indian figures are kept in Tammany Hall. When the great "boss" Tweed was plundering the city he regarded these figures apparently as his "mascots" or "pals," and transferred them to his private rooms. (From which they were recovered by Mayor Abraham Hewitt.) But in early times the aboriginal features of St. Tammany were of national importance. In 1790, while New York was still the federal capital, the Indians of the far South gave the whites much trouble (perhaps not so much as they received), and an officer was sent by the president to negotiate with them. The tidings presently came that the chief of the Creeks and twenty-eight warriors were on their way to New York to form a treaty. The sons of St. Tammany, in full paint and feathers, went out to meet the red men, introduced them to the president and ministers, showed them the sights of New York, gave them a banquet and speeches, and stood around them in the Federal Hall when the treaty was signed. The president's last visit to Federal Hall, New York, was to sign that treaty. He went in his new English coach-and-six, with all pomp, even the horses' hoofs painted. Addresses were interchanged, the president gave the chief wampum and a paper of tobacco (substitute for the calumet), and all, including Washington, joined in singing a chorus of peace. The costumed sons of St. Tammany managed this business, and made their mark on the nation. The Cincinnati began to court them.

The leading Tammanyite at this time was the before-mentioned John Pintard. Most of them were tradesmen and mechanics but Pintard was a university man and in fashionable society. He was editor of the leading Republican paper, in which he published the whole of Paine's "Rights of Man." He was also, and at the same time, a member of the city council and the state legislature, which then sat in New York city. The foundation of the historical societies of both Massachusetts and New York (1791) was due to Pintard. The city council gave Tammany a room in its hall to show American antiquities. The St. Tammany Society made its next great impression by a stupendous banquet in celebration of the third centenary of the discovery of America by Columbus. There was set up in its hall an illuminated obelisk. At the base a globe, emerging from chaos, presented America as a wilderness. At the top history, drawing a curtain, revealed a commercial port, and Columbus instructed by Science, who presented him with a compass and pointed to the setting sun. Other figures were Columbus at court; next in chains, where Liberty points him to the gratitude of posterity represented in the obelisk and the Sons of Tammany or the Columbian Order. Near the chained Columbus was the prone eagle and the inscription, "The Ingratitude of Kings;" elsewhere the eagle was seen soaring with a scroll inscribed "The Rights of Man." For some years after, the transparency was exhibited in a museum with living tableaux.

So Tammany took root in New York. As the conflict between the Hamiltonians and the Jeffersonians—the Federalists and Republicans—waxed hot, Tammany called Jefferson its great grand sachem. It was denounced as a "Jacobin" club. It was imitated by other clubs throughout the country. Gradually the earlier society developed what is now called "Tammany Hall." The two now coexist, as wheel within a wheel. The old society preserves its character as a sort of charitable institution. A Tammanyite is not seen forsaken, nor his seed begging bread. The "Hall" was sixty or seventy years ago a place where politicians used to assemble and drink hot flagons, toddy and rum punch. Although they are not distinguished now for hard drinking, a good deal of their power lies in the fact that they are understood to be steadfastly against all the efforts of Prohibitionists to break up the saloons. At the organization of our new "City Club" most of those present were smoking their cigar-calumets, and on the tables were decanters of whisky. Few drank any, but I hav a notion that the chief promoters wished to forestall any charge of Prohibitionism. They mean to fight Tammany, no doubt, with some of its own political fire. Such, then, is the archeological history of St. Tammany, probably little known to most members of that society. It will be seen that the society is to be credited with having checked a monarchical tendency in the beginning of our government. In the relativ importance to-day of the two burdens between which our governmental Issachar couched, and which found their respectiv labels in the "Cincinnati" and "St. Tammany," the political history of the United States may be pondered. But Tammany, while it has lost its aboriginal costume, has developed a tendency to revert to the aboriginal mental condition to which Sir Henry Maine traces all partisanship. The Australian who travels hundreds of miles to join one tribe against another, merely because that tribe has the same "totem" with itself, reappears in the Tammanyite who fights for a candidate with his own badge, or "totem," without particularly caring whether the said nominee is an embezzler or a competent man. The comparison is borrowed from an eminent Democrat who spoke at the City Club. The Hon. Abraham Hewitt, who once resigned his seat in Congress to become mayor of New York, declared that he had owed both of those offices to Tammany, but had discovered by his former connection with that society that their reign was the pure autocracy of a "boss," and entirely subversiv of self-government. Such it has turned out to be. New York is practically without self-government. But, although I hav joined the new club, I do not take an optimist view of its prospects as a municipal reformer. The moral forces of New York are largely mingled with pious fanaticism, and whenever they are aroused spend their thunder and lightning on private vices with which law has nothing to do, or on suppressing Sunday beer, with which it ought to hav nothing to do. We sadly need some political school to teach such men as Comstock, Parkhurst & Co. the meaning of personal liberty, and the baseness of prurient espionage.—Moncure D. Conway in The Open Court.

* I am permitted to use in this form researches made for the second volume of the "Memorial History of the City of New York," edited by General Grant Wilson.

Matthew Farrington.

When Matthew Farrington died the Freethought party lost one of its best men, one of its most reliable leaders, one of its bravest fighters. He hated sham, he hated cant, he hated tyranny. He was true to his friends, to liberty and justice, and to himself. He saw clearly, he struck strongly and home, and he never surrendered. The Freethinkers of America hav never had a better exemplar.

E. C. WALKER.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Inyo county, Cal.	June 24–27	Canby, Wash...	July 7
Athens and Cathlamet, Wash...	July 3, 4	Sheridan, " ... "	8
Woodburn, " ... "	5	Scappoose, " ... "	9
Barlow, " ... "	6	Tacoma, " ... "	10

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH will lecture at Philadelphia, Pa., June 26th. He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

THE last meeting of this season of the Manhattan Liberal Club will be held June 24th, at 220 East 15th street. The program will consist of music, instrumental and vocal, alternating with very short talks from the stars of the club's regular stock company.

Letters of Friends.

Liberal Society Notice.

CINCINNATI, O., June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: After a very successful course of lectures begun in December last, the Ohio Liberal Society has discontinued its public meetings until some time in the fall, which will be duly announced. Yours truly,

ANDREW P. HOGG, Secretary.

Lays a Brick in the Edifice of Civilization.

MR. EDITOR: In your last issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER I notice that your Literature Fund is overdrawn and exhausted. I therefore take the liberty to remit to you $1 to help to replenish it again, and for expenses to keep the Chicago Columbian Exhibition open on the holy Sabbath day.

Yours truly, F. C. M.

Freethought Must Shine at the Fair.

SHARON, KAN., Feb. 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5 to be applied as per memorandum inclosed.

Now, Mr. Macdonald, I hav a plan to offer to you and all of our friends in regard to having lectures delivered at Chicago during the World's Fair. To illustrate, lead off, say July 1st, with Colonel Ingersoll, one lecture at night; the next night, the 2d, with T. B. Wakeman; the 3d, with Remsburg; fourth night, S. P. Putnam; fifth, with Charlesworth; sixth, Helen Gardener; seventh, with J. D. Shaw. Then next week repeat, and continue for a month, or longer if the plan works well. This would giv all Freethinkers and others a chance to hear the great lecturers and attend the Fair at the same time. If a month is agreed upon, all that can attend in that month can hav a chance to make the acquaintance of the leaders, and others as well; and most of the Freethinkers could arrange to attend in the same month. You must understand me—I name the speakers above to illustrate only, and not that they shall come in the order I name them, or that they shall be the only speakers. This arrangement would attract attention all over the country. Let it be made known every day by posters on the Fair-grounds and it would require a large hall to accommodate the crowd that would attend. Make the admittance reasonable and thousands will attend. I would like to hear from others on the subject.

Yours, HOMER.

Some Biting Remarks.

BEULAH, COL., Feb. 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find $2.50, for which please send me a copy of the Bible Pictures, and "Force and Matter," by Dr. Büchner. Some day I will send you a big order for books.

The way you conduct the paper deserves to win approval from all sides, and your patrons seem ready to attest this cheerfully. Keep as close to the main track as possible; these side issues hamper our progress. Let politics alone—we get enough of that in other papers. Tell Mr. Ballou to address a series of letters to the Christian ministers and missionaries and giv us workingmen a rest. His free trade arguments are the silliest bosh ever offered to intelligent readers. And theory is one thing and practice is another.

There are a number of bright boys wasting time and abilities better employed in other directions to prove that fiat money is money. Of course it is money, such as it is. The Texas cow is called cow as well as the shorthorn cow; and the broncho is called a horse as well as the thoroughbred horse, though one is worth $100 where the other will fetch $10. The gold dollar is the ever-fresh, genuin butter, while the other is rank oleomargarine.

To remedy one evil many plans and schemes are proposed that, if adopted, would, perhaps, effect the object, but at the same time erect a dozen other evils to harass society. Some keen-sighted reformers are equipped with such marvelous penetration as to deem it impossible that some new and finely executed stroke cannot be parried by the adversary. This is precisely the case with the single-tax delusion, though the idea is old as Solomon's temple.

But I do not write to invite discussions, as I hav no time to spare to attend to them. Being so fortunate as to hav at my disposal the volumes of papers that reach every Christian home about here, I do not neglect to make the superstitious bones rattle to the best of my abilities.

You hav a splendid lot of correspondents, and it is delightful to peruse their brilliant articles. Let all observe the utmost care in avoiding what is low and vulgar. Of course, if they quote scripture the blame is to some extent shifted on other shoulders.

Were I to suggest a new feature for your paper—if the space left vacant by a diminished supply of Spiritualism, politics, etc., needed filling, let us hav a scientific department in which a brief and condensed report of all inventions, discoveries, and researches would be given, both terrestrial and celestial. Yours sincerely,

GUSTAV E. KREUZKE.

Can Say What They Would Hav Been Whipped For Once.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., May 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We are getting very Liberal in this part of the state, and what a man would hav been whipped for fifteen years ago in favor of Freethought can be publicly proclaimed on the streets here now.

If you would some time giv us an editorial on church use of state money in Mississippi, I will send you a page of the printed Acts of 1890, showing that $150 was appropriated to Rev. Mr. Sprobes, of Jackson, Miss., a Baptist preacher—and a very large one, too—for preaching to the convicts on Sunday evening. Also where the big Methodist, Bishop Galloway, and Rev. Dr. Sprobes went on the bond of the defaulting treasurer to brace the treasurer up, while both of the learned doctors never owned a cent of property and were supported by the public—although they afterward repented and the treasurer was convicted and is now a convict. But the treasurer was a shining light of the church.

Mr. Putnam and Mr. Remsburg hav lectured here, and we are getting awake, and you will hear from us soon.

I was at Jackson, sixty-five miles north of here, a few weeks ago, and the Freethinkers are waking up, and say when we hav a lecturer here they want him also. We feel that Freethought will, before twenty years, hav the whole country. I scatter any TRUTH SEEKER and everything I can get hold of, and only wish I had it by the cartload to giv.

Yours for Freethought,

ZACK T. HOSKINS.

Feeling "Experience" Rendered by One of the Saved.

MONTREAL, CAN., May 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Your admirable journal is a veritable oasis amid the desert of superstitious and unfathomable literature with which I was wont to be surrounded. In it truly is a great and fertil spot amid the whirling sands and desert storms which blind the eyes of those piteous creatures still hoping for a paradise—and who, let us hope, may all in time reach this free, untainted liberty in the oasis of Freethought. It was the brutal manner in which Christian bosh was administered to my youth that first disgusted me with the whole scheme.

My father was a "sky-pilot" of the more modern make—to wit, one who, while undertaking to pilot poor credulous souls to incomprehensible, or rather, chimerical, realms beyond this universe, deemed it not beneath him to sprawl voluptuously in this world's bliss. He was decidedly despotic, too—a trait which, above all others, parsons—in their own interest, at least—would do well to stifle.

As his son, I learned to curse the day which had all unwittingly created him mon père. But I loved him dearly once, with that full, uncompromising filial love which the relations 'twixt parent and child can alone excite. More was he dear to me as being my only parent; my mother having died while I was still in the joyous oblivion of babyhood.

Though I learned, as I say, to curse my father, yet I never forgot he was my progenitor, never that he was but a passion-endowed mortal as we all. In tolerance, therefore, and love, I learned to bear with stoical equanimity what the mere thought of today causes me to shudder in grim fear. I only hope my own sons may, in time to come, learn to be as grateful for the natural care of a secular father, as I am indignant at the brutalities and deformations suffered under the supernatural philosophy of my originator.

Therefore it is that I urge tolerance upon parents everywhere. If Christian parents, do not thrash your child to death because he cannot giv you the essence of a pulpit oration on those proposed planets, outside our own universe ostensibly, which as a son you hav caused him to swallow, but which the most profound thinkers of the day reject as falsehood and fraud. Search your Bibles, if you will, and I trow naught there can authorize you to half murder your child in the interest of its God, as was my father's wont with me. No, the Bible message is—according to its own enunciation—not to be crammed down our throats, and is voluntarily to be accepted. How I shudder at the brutalities to which I was subjected in the cause of this Christ!

And, in effect, this is the only really efficacious mode of maintaining the church. From all times has its propaganda been enforced by terror and bloodshed. What terrible tortures it has devised—and, in itself, what a great scheme of horrible torture to man's weak mind and heart.

What a heaven, beyond all these biblical paradises, is that of Secularism! What sunshine and joy has it brought to my formerly miserable life! No brutality is needed for its propagation—nothing but love—the dawning intelligence accepts it unquestioningly. There is nothing foul, bloody, or cruel about it.

'Tis that pure realm of health and love
That truth and reason reign above!

D. MCKINLAY MACARTHUR.

The Preacher Can't Argue, So Throws Mud.

ROGERS, ARK., May 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The debate of Rev. J. Hall and John E. Remsburg closed Saturday. The first proposition, as in the inclosed clipping, was dropped by mutual consent of the speakers, and the discussion was on the inspiration of the Bible. On this proposition Remsburg persuaded Hall to admit that, granting or assuming that there hav been inspired books written, the translations were not inspired, and that the book commonly used and called the Bible contains many errors. On the second proposition Hall left the question on opening his first speech Saturday night and threw mud at a terrible rate. Remsburg declined to follow him on that occasion, but expressed a willingness to compare teachings and morals if they desire to do so, and thereby gained the respect of all good people. Remsburg conducted the debate with masterly skill, and did the cause of humanity much good. There were five sessions on each proposition, making ten in all, and the opera hall was filled each time.

Remsburg's firm stand for order and decency, and his gentlemanly conduct, were highly commended by the people. And its being plain to all thinking persons that his array of proof could not be answered, was what caused Hall to fly the track. Mr. J. N. Hall is regarded as the champion of this country, and he is a keen logician and a forcible speaker. After the debate Remsburg made a neat little speech of thanks, followed by a plea for honesty and good fellowship. Hall followed in the same vein, and the meeting broke up with the best of feeling prevailing.

FREETHINKER.

Rev. J. N. Hall (Baptist), of Fulton, Ky., and J. E. Remsburg (so-called Infidel), of Oak Mills, Kan., will hav a joint discussion in Rogers, commencing on May 24, 1892.

PROPOSITIONS.

"There is a supreme personal being and the Bible is a revelation from him." Hall affirms. Remsburg denies.

"The Christ of theology is a myth, and the four gospels which purport to giv a record of his life and teachings are unworthy of credit." Remsburg affirms. Hall denies.

They are gentlemen of learning, in fact, champions of their respectiv causes.

We predict one of the most interesting debates ever had in Rogers.

The Bible "the Greatest Book on Earth."

DALLAS, TEX., June 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: John E. Remsburg, of Oak Mills, Kan., lectured here to a fair-sized audience, both ladies and gentlemen, who appreciated the lecture very highly. I will send you a clipping of the Dallas morning News of his lecture, and also the clippings of a sermon of one of the pulpit's pets, and you can see the difference in the reports. The evening paper never condescended enough to notice it at all. M. H. VAN DUSEN.

AN INFIDEL LECTURE.

Mr. John E. Remsburg, of Oak Mills, Kan., delivered a Freethought lecture last night in the auditorium of the city hall to quite a large audience, which included a number of ladies. The speaker was introduced by Mr. E. H. Andrae. For the subject of his lecture he took "Bible Morals," and in language quite eloquent—for the speaker has the reputation among Infidels of only being second to Bob Ingersoll as an Infidel lecturer—he proceeded to berate the good book without restraint and with a seeming chronic aversion to its teachings. He admitted, indeed, that the Sermon of the savior on the Mount was full of beauty, "but," he proceeded, "duty calls to another task." He asserted that it "would be a monstrous wrong to put this book in the public schools," and he acknowledged that he would rather trace his descent to a hyena than to a God who condemns innocent creatures to eternal damnation. He assumed that Christianity taught such condemnation. The lecturer traveled over the same field as Ingersoll, Tom Paine, and others.

THE GREATEST BOOK ON EARTH.

There was a very encouraging attendance of men at the meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association at the First Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Rev. A. M. Simms, pastor of the First Baptist church, addressed the meeting, his topic being "The Greatest Book in the World." He said that some men were great because they perform great acts, that some books were great because they grapple with great problems, and that the Bible was the greatest book in the world because it dealt with the greatest of problems. He remarked that the Bible was the greatest book in the world from a purely literary standpoint, its poetry and description being beyond anything ever written by man. Hundreds of other books are annually dumped out of the libraries of the world as so much trash, but the Bible has shown its ability to liv for five thousand years. It has adapted itself to the needs of all classes of people in all ages of the world.

2. Because of its influence over the minds and conduct of man. Wherever it has gone it has elevated the manners, customs, and habits of the people. It has lifted woman from the slave of man to be his equal and companion. It has more influence over the world to-day than ever before, and yet it is two thousand years old in its present form.

3. Because of its authorship. Written by about forty men, ranking from the humblest herdsmen to great rulers and kings, whose lives covered a period of sixteen hundred years. They wrote sixty-six books at different times, under different circumstances, and yet when the whole library was combined into one book, one thought ran throughout the whole, and that thought redemption by the blood of Jesus Christ. The only explanation of it is that God is its author and that he used the forty men to put his thoughts into writing.

4. The Bible is the greatest book in the world, because of what it has passed through. No other book has ever passed through such a fusillade of shot and shell, grape and canister. Every word of it from beginning to end has been fiercely attacked for centuries by enemies. They hav attacked it internally and externally, and still it survives, the same grand old book.

5. Because of its purpose to lift up man—humanity—to save the race.

6. Because it is true, from Genesis to Revelation.

"The Owled," or Owlish, "Story."

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: For near thirty years I was a constant church attendant. It is the rule of all Christian bigots to giv their experience in the same owled, owled story, that Jesus loves me. As practice makes perfect, I got quite familiar with the devil and his colleagues. But to come before an audience of Freethinkers, that is as far ahead of church bigots as the nineteenth century is in advance of the ninth century, calls for my best trump. My first advance step was through the teachings of Henry George. I am a great advocate of the single-tax doctrin. My second advance step was seeing nearly the first small pamphlet of Brother Pentecost. I was placed on his subscription list through the generosity of a noble, true woman—for I am in the grand army of those whose watchword is, Blessed be nothing. Well, I was with Brother Pentecost until he announced to the world he would not be a martyr for the advancement of his blind, deluded brothers. The difference was dollars vs. duty. Law was in the balance. That showed the man was not for the unfortunate masses, but for a class that is destroying this nation by their power of stolen wealth. My third good fortune was—through the kind, Liberal generosity of Brother H. L. Green, publisher of Freethinker's Magazine, I hav been feasting on his rich mental food for the past three years. Some two years ago I received through his office the "Pictorial Text-Book." Well, it takes a good deal to surprise me, but I will say Brother Heston's sermons are a lifelong subject. It is a book that the intelligent mind can never read through. Amusement never ceases under the tuition of Brother Heston. Well, that book has been lent a number of times. With two persons there came a fear that it was their God's command to burn it. The difference—last week it got in the hands of a Dutchman that has a heart that will outweigh Talmage's whole body, and when I wanted my book he put his hand in his pocket and handed me $2 for a book that had been handled for two years. He will show it many times that I would hav no opportunity to.

Oswego is in the same condition as Toronto, Can., and Orange, N. J.—priest-ridden, with five missionaries. With regret I saw so many of our American citizens decorate and build grand arches for the followers of Myth No. 2 to march under. This calls for a question: Will some of your able correspondents tell us how it is that Ireland has no snakes? Or is it only a myth, the same as all other Christian superstitions?

Well, I want a present. You see, March 28th I reach my fifty-sixth mile-post. The kindness of my brother Dutchman enables me to order two brand-new books for my birthday. Inclosed please find $3; send to my address the "Pictorial Text-Book" and the "Old Testament Stories." I hope they will come by mail, for our good postmaster is in harmony with Anthony Comstock. I think they are watching for some obscene literature from your office, or for me, for your paper has got to me without any wrapper. As I hav nothing to lose of this world's goods, for I am laying up treasures where moth and rust doth not corrupt, I am enrolled as a working missionary. Not for the benefit of Jesus, but for my brother man. Not for the life to come, for I am so depraved I expect no better resting-place than mother earth. For I am so Atheistic in my views I can find no God, no hell, no heaven—but plenty of living devils. I think such a being is fit for missionary work and willing to distribute tracts, pamphlets, or any literature that may be sent to my address.

Not wishing to monopolize your paper the first time, I call a halt, with ten thousand thanks for the benefit I hav received from science and evolution.

JASPER J. BROWN.

Who Created God?

NEW YORK, June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: While attending Methodist camp-meeting at Round Lake, near Saratoga, last year, for a couple of weeks, I heard sermons, rantings, experiences, revivals, etc.

One sermon, on "The Idea of God," though well delivered and argumentativ, was poorest attended. When the learned sky-pilot was subsequently asked, "If God created the world, who created God?" he answered, "That is a Freethinker's question, and is simply assumption; otherwise than that, God is All in All." (He meant nothing in All!)

Assumption and presumption is certainly all that theology possesses.

THE FAITH OF SKEPTICISM.

A noted skeptic recently lectured in Cincinnati on "Myths and Miracles." Two thousand people listened to him, and paid $1,200 for the privilege. He took the position that Jesus of Nazareth was a mythical personage. He assumed this as a matter of course; he did not attempt to prove it. During Christ's life a new religion was planted in the world. Even Gibbon is obliged to trace its growth and triumph till it erected its standard on the ruins of the capital. The dominant religions of that day gave place to it. Heathen temples were cleansed of their abominations and converted into Christian churches. Law, literature, art, music, and even war felt its genial influence. After eighteen centuries this religion is more vigorous and more aggressiv than ever, and is pressing on like a bannered army to its ultimate destiny, the conquest of the whole world. Did this religion derive its indestructible vitality and its instinct of victory from a myth? That can not be. The only adequate explanation of Christendom is the historic Christ, the son of the highest. Many theories hav been invented to explain his place in the world's history. The theories are not rooted in truth and in fact, and they perish. Meanwhile Christ says, "I am he who lived and was dead, and I am alive forever."

This mythical theory invented by Strauss has been dead for many years. It would be as easy to restore a mummy to life as to restore this theory. It ought to be allowed to rest undisturbed in its grave. Anyone who can believe in this mythical theory ought not to be troubled by miracles. There is not a legend in the Koran, or in the mythologies of Egypt, or Greece, or Rome, or Scandinavia, that is not more credible than this exploded and abandoned theory. The man that can believe that can believe anything. Such faith as the average skeptic has, when he wants to believe, is not found in Israel or in Christendom. — Christian Standard (Disciple).

A religious newspaper, called the Christian Standard (Disciple), uses very bad logic in trying to call Colonel Ingersoll to account for stating that Jesus was a mythical personage. Christians say that such a statement is mere assumption. The burden of proof is with the religious wiseacres; if they can, let them giv evidence, the positiv proof, that such a man as Jesus lived. Christians cannot, hence their statements are self-evident assumption, indeed. When the historian, Gibbon, traced back to the third century, he found the Christian Constantine both emperor and pope, but in going back further the view grows very dim, till the time when Jesus was supposed to be alive. But the search revealed a very decided truth—Jesus was a myth!

The Presbyterian general assembly, in their recent convention at Portland, Ore., resolved that "Our church holds that the inspired Word, as it came from God, is without error." Notice the phrase, "as it came." Who knows when that time was, or how it came? And hav not the learned scribes and translators contradicted the word in the Word so frequently that most people of reason believe not a word of their Word!

E. J. KIMBALL.

Deep Generalizations.

LEXINGTON, KY., May 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Cardinal Gibbons is a prominent reasoner, who reiterates the idea that religion is the great civilizer of the world. Let us notice first, then, that when good principles are impaired or set aside, the church is the first thing to be contaminated; and though it inveighs against evil in public, it licks the hand of power at every corner, consents to abuses and shameful neglect of the poor, until the masses cry out in indignation and demand reform.

When the wrangling and rivalry of factions betray the existence of evils, the horrified populace will endure it no longer. Fiendish pride and the real coarseness of refined indulgence are then suddenly attacked by the noble and virtuous of both rich and poor—by men who hav souls. Then reform sets in, and in no other way. What has the church done to secure this effect? At the very outset, the church was not considered as a reformer. The gods were more immoral than men. All that raised them above the masses was their inordinate love of power, as well as a furious and arrogant manner of asserting their rights. How did they obtain a foothold upon the necks of men? Instead of appealing to their reason, they and their agents addressed themselvs to every weakness which could fill a contribution-box.

How small religion appears upon the page of history.

Patriotism and the ordinary rights of man hav unsheathed the sword, let loose the thunders of the cannon, pierced the sky with the acclamations of the crowd—not for religion, not for the triumph of the strong—but for liberty for the weakest, for the most trampled and oppressed. Liberty, that musical word, was the true religion of Greece and Rome, when augurs could scarcely meet without being convulsed with laughter; when Cicero scarcely noticed the "immortal gods" except to point a moral, or gild a pill of justice, or necessary retaliation.

The aim of the scientists is to get rid of the spell of religion long enough to reach the ear of the people that they may teach them something that will raise them above the contemptible vices of ignorance, the low tricks of inferior animals, and imbue their minds with all that is of real importance to man.

The sensible poor find the veil of hallucination rudely torn from their eyes, when they notice that ten cents comforts them more than the aid of the infinit God who wanders, yea, trampooses idly through space. The Egyptians considered the ichneumon as a respectable deity only because he devoured the eggs of the crocodile. The great god Anubis, or the holy jackal, soothed the rage of the strong lion by offerings of meat, but jackalism is now supplanted by a faith which refers to nothing useful or agreeable.

Necessity framed our laws and a future state exists only in the brain of the necromancer.

There is no force or expression of intelligence except connected with the attributes of matter. Attraction is motion, heat is fine fancy. A potency must be organized, or we hav no hinge for heaven's gate. Principles ungrasped and not referred to reason belong to the field of hallucination, doubt, and despair. They produce no mentality.

Experience is our only refuge from the world of phantoms.

An aged man is a "bundle of habits."

Inertia is taking the place of force. Look, for instance, at the contrast between a problem in trigonometry, and the same in faith. Faith forces you to surrender your reason to believe a tale invented centuries ago by anybody, but the problem, a triangle between the sun and earth, the angle at the sun is to the base line on earth as the side angle is to the line opposit, which is the distance from the earth to the sun, worked by logarithms—any deception here? The angles of a triangle are equal to two right angles.

I would like a situation as a teacher. Perhaps Mr. Macdonald will giv my address to a friend. ALHAZA.

Clearly Written Views on Labor.

June 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As agitation is the proper method of arriving at a correct understanding of things, I take the opportunity of differing with our sister Mrs. S. C. Todd's views on the labor question. Of course you would not expect women to giv as intelligent ideas on such a question as our brother man, for it is only recently that women hav been permitted to advocate an idea, even though it be ever so good. Therefore, if we women expose our ignorance (as I certainly think the sister has), I hope due allowance will be made us by those who may be our superiors in intelligence on this subject. I noticed in your paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, of February 13th, that Mrs. Todd opposes the labor question in strong terms. She speaks of our reform journals telling of our oppressed poor, of the wealth being wrung from the sweat of the honest toiler by the rich corporations who rob the honest poor of their hard earnings, and so forth. Now, she seems to scorn the idea, and seems to feel that all our smart men who are posted much better than she on finance are mistaken in regard to this matter, and are agitating the question just to split up the old parties, so as to get themselvs into offices and get their fingers in Uncle Sam's pocket.

Well, be that as it may, my frail idea of the subject is, that the trusts and monopolies are pressing the laboring class down as much as is in their power to do so.

My opponent speaks of a young man who works for $8 per month. She seems to think that is all right; he ought not to complain. Well, I say: Young man, just keep on complaining, until you get justice done you. Of course, I believe in everyone being as economical as circumstances will permit, and thus trying to save something for a rainy day, but the idea of only getting $8 per month—how could he clothe himself comfortably, take a paper or two so as to keep posted on financial and other matters that pertain to his interest?—then allow him several days in a year for sickness, and a doctor's bill to pay in the bargain, with other expenses, a nurse, washing, and so forth, and how much can he save to buy a farm? I do not think he could save enough to buy a decent suit of clothes to get married in. The poor fellow could not afford a good warm overcoat, I am sure. I hav seen many a poor boy so thinly clad I shuddered for him.

I really hope the lines I am penning will be a drop in the bucket to help make life's burdens easier for the oppressed; and I hope the sister will take a peep into the affairs of finances in such a way as will open her eyes and heart to the misery of our fellow-beings. I hope she will yet see there is something that is crowding down the farmers so they cannot afford to pay hired help what they ought to hav.

Another case is of a man and his wife who received large wages, lived grandly, and did not lay up anything for a wet day. That is often the case; many are thoughtless about such things; but that has nothing to do with the principle in question. It is justice to the laboring class that they hav wages sufficient to enable them to clothe themselvs respectably, to go into society, and enjoy a little of this world as they go along. Our sister seems to think that a farmer's family ought not to be anything but drudges (as most of them are); does not wish them to dress well, go to fairs, send their children to even a district school, for they are needed at home to work for fear of coming on the county (for she says they must scrimp and work hard to ever make anything on a farm); and it is out of the question for farmers to send their children to college, or hav a musical instrument in the house; for their children to learn music; must not hav a gun, a dog, or anything for amusement, but work, work, work, every minute from 4 or 5 in the morning until 7, 8, and 9 in the evening; no time to read, or hav any amusement; too tired to enjoy anything but sleep—not even that.

The sister owns that a widow with children has to work very hard to even get a scant living under the pressure of hard times; but she does not explain why they cannot earn a really good living when they work so very hard. The middlemen, bankers, merchants, preachers, and many others, do not hav to work so hard, yet they liv elegantly.

The truth is just here: the middlemen cheat the farmers out of their hard earnings. That is why they cannot lift the mortgages off their farms. Other industries borrow money, yet they do not become bankrupt as the farmers do, and at the same time their families hav a good time and enjoy life, and they come out all right.

Finally, the sister closes her article very eloquently by saying: "O ye reformers, who is to blame?" I say that parents are to blame—or rather, they make a mistake—when they raise a family and do not succeed in teaching them to economize, for economy is beneficial in many ways, and adds to happiness; economy in dress, temperance in diet and other things, brings happiness, and there is no real happiness without it; then, after you succeed in teaching your children these things giv them a good chance in life, and they will not abuse it; then you can pay the farm-hands $25 per month, or even $50, if the farm can afford it, and if farming would get its just dues it could afford to pay as much as a bank or other industries, and you need not fear either but that the hired help would soon hav good homes instead of becoming tramps as many do.

But I do not blame the sister for her narrow views of the labor question, for she looks at it according to the light she has had. So we say, sister, investigate more, and in so doing get more light.

A LIBERAL.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

We Are All on the Car.

We are all on the car, a-rushing through space;
The seats free for all, every nation and race.
The train keeps its motion, we all come and go;
No call for tickets, we hav none to show.

We all are sure of one single ride,
And each by the rules has got to abide;
We reach the station, and pass from the train;
To hope any longer for life would be vain.

The station of Death, already in view,
Will hold all that stops, whether many or few;
And none will return to friends here again,
After they once hav passed from the train.

No ringing of bells again will they hear,
Nor the shrill whistle, when danger is near;
But they'll quietly rest in Nature's embrace,
And thus will it be with the whole human race.

Then why should we strive to change here our fate.
As we go flying at such rapid rate?
We pull on the rope, the bell we hear ring,
But the train never stops, but keeps on the wing.

We struggle for life from birth till we die,
And why we are here, I cannot tell why.
We come and we go, all nations the same,
Without any choice; then are we to blame?

The black and the white, the low and the high,
Cannot make a change, and all hav to die.
They pass from the train, we'll see them no more,
Unless it may be on the opposit shore.

Then let us remember, though dark be the night,
The train never stops on account of the light;
But when it arrives at the station of Death
We'll pass from the car as we draw the last breath.

G. W. SMITH.

To Friends of the Children's Corner.

DEAR FRIENDS: The editor of the Corner expects to sail in steamship City of Rome from New York, pier 54, on Saturday, July 2d, for Scotland, England, France, and Belgium. She will be absent two months, and perhaps longer. She intends keeping you informed of all her movements, and to tell you all she sees of interest, and in this way she will take you with her across the ocean. She will be pleased to see any of her friends in New York and vicinity who will take the trouble to come on board the ship before sailing. The ship leaves her pier at 11 A.M.

Pleasantness.

"Her ways are ways of pleasantness
And all her paths are paths of peace."

Thus it is that virtue is spoken of, and as we consider the word pleasantness we see what a beautiful meaning it has. It is truly pleasant to know and feel that we are virtuous and good, and to feel that virtue and goodness are increasing among us, to know that pleasantness is becoming more and more the condition of all. To be pleasant is to be cheerful, gay, lively, and sportiv; to be merry, amusing, and witty. A pleasant companion is always welcome. Pleasant days are gladly welcomed. Pleasant places and pleasant occasions are welcomed. To please and be pleased—in all its changes the word is agreeable to us.

Pleasure is the great boon all seek for. Enjoyment, comfort, delight, satisfaction, gladness—all are "ways of pleasantness."

We hav pleasure-boats, pleasure-grounds, and pleasurable occasions. It is well to rejoice and be glad whenever we can, to be pleased and make others feel pleased. A kind word, a friendly deed, or a smile will giv pleasure to another and make us pleased that we hav these things to giv.

May pleasantness abide and be with you all, is the wish of AUNT ELMINA.

A Good Way to Obtain Luck.

"Evening paper, sir?" Such was the cry of a little fellow, about eight years old, the other night as we were hurrying past.

We stopped and began to skirmish around for the nickel, when up came another boy with a larger bundle of papers under his arm, at which the hand first thrust out was withdrawn, and the little fellow to whom it belonged said, "Please, buy his paper."

"Why, I'm dealing with you!"

"Well, sir, he ha'n't sold one, and I hav. It always givs me luck to help a fellow what a'n't had a chance."

The lesson learned from the boy was worth more than the paper.

Not Much Changed.

A party had met at a public table, when the conversation turned on the subject of transmigration. Mr. K—— was a firm believer in the doctrin, and was expatiating largely upon its points, when he was interrupted by a gentleman who was present with:

"K——, what do you suppose yourself to hav been before you were K——?"

"I do not know," replied K——; "I might hav been a hog, for aught I know."

"Well," rejoined his friend, "you hav not altered much—only got up on your hind legs."

The Calendar.

In the blank grammar school yesterday the divisions of time were under consideration in the class. The teacher had explained the origin of the Gregorian calendar, and recounted the difficulties which arose from the Augustan calendar, and noted the reluctance of the Greek church to adopt the reformed arrangement of time. Then he turned to the class, and said:

"Under what calendar are we living now?"

Silence on the part of the class. But presently the smallest boy of the lot piped out shrilly:

"Under the life insurance calendar!"

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

A little chap, four years old, fell into a well where the water was only six inches deep, and remained there three hours before he was discovered. When he was finally rescued, his pent-up wrath knew no bounds. There was no crying about it, but such a volley fell upon the heads of the neglectful parents as never before came from childish lips: "You fink I can 'tay in a well wifout nuffin' to eat, like a f'og. 'F I wasn't no better fadder 'n mudder 'n 'ou, I'd do wifout children."

A little girl of three years, whose papa and mamma were so wise and careful of her that they had never allowed her to eat any but the most healthful food, was one day allowed to take dinner with guests. She was especially interested in the mystery of the pepper-box, an article she had never before noticed. She watched with close attention while one of the gentlemen peppered something, and then, extending her own little plate, said with the utmost politeness, "Please put a little dirt on mine, too."

Little Marjorie is by no means fond of going to church. She has to sit too still, and "the man" talks about things she can not yet understand. "What's it for, mamma?" she asked one day. "What do we go to church for?" Mamma tried to tell her the reasons and concluded by saying: "And when you can't understand what the minister means you must remember he is talking about good and beautiful things, and you must make up your mind to think of something good yourself." That day Marjorie was very quiet in church, and her mother praised her for it on the way home. "I did just as you told me," said the wee maid. "I thought of something good." "What was it, dearie?" "Apple pie!"

L'enfant terrible is even worse than the servant. "I should like to liv next door to you," said a young hopeful to a crusty old bachelor. "And why?" "Because mamma says you are next door to a bear." Visions of a domestic zoölogical garden were evidently floating through the youngster's mind. A little fellow was dining with a friend of his mother. "Charlie," said the hostess anxiously, "can you cut your own meat?" "Can't I?" said the youngster; "I've often cut up quite as tough meat as this at home." "Mamma," says another youngster, at his own table, after gazing long and earnestly at the two guests of the evening, "which of these ladies was it you said was so ugly she'd stop a clock?" At his own table, again, another youth remarks, with a chuckle, "Mother's got all her best things on the table to-night—ain't you, ma? and you needn't kick me under the table, neither. I hain't told a word about borrowin' the napkins."

Correspondence.

FLINT, MICH., June 10, 1892.

MISS SUSAN WIXON, Dear Girl: I hope this will find you as well as it leaves me. I hav read THE TRUTH SEEKER for a year, and I believe just as you do, or as the paper says.

Yours truly,
W. H. WARREN.

[Short and sweet. Keep on in the straight Liberal path and you need not fear. Thanks for cards.—ED. C. C.]

NORTH HURON, N. Y., June 1, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav been sick for a week so that I did not go to school, but I am better now, so I will write a few lines for the Corner and let the children know where they can find North Huron, if they should ever want to call and see me. By looking on the map you will find the meridian of Washington passes through Newark, which is just west of North Huron, and in latitude 43° north. The nearest villages are Wolcott, North Rose, Rose, Clyde, and Lyons, the county seat, which is twenty miles southwest of here. Lake Bluff, about two miles west, is bounded on the west by Big Sodus bay and on the north by Lake Ontario, and is one of the finest summer resorts in Wayne county.

Farming is the main business, and as the soil is very productiv, large crops of wheat, barley, corn, oats, and buckwheat are grown successfully; also various kinds of fruit, such as apples, peaches, pears, apricots, cherries, and plums of almost every kind. The trees are now robed with blossoms of almost every color, and the prospect is now that we shall hav the largest crop of fruit ever grown in this section. I am quite busy to-day tending store for Uncle Mort, so I will close by bidding you good-bye for the present.

BERTHA E. WEED.

P. S.—Inclosed you will find a few verses composed by grandpa headed, "We Are All on the Cars," which you can use as you think best.

LEWISPORT, KY., June 8, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: I am an old man, over seventy-seven, and I want to scratch a line for the Children's Corner, having raised three children of our own—the care and nursing of six grandchildren—one son living with his wife and three children, now playing around us as innocent as little lambs, with little beautiful, lovely ways—all of these, as our own, I and their grandmother hav nursed, rocked, kissed, in the same old farmhouse that we built over fifty years ago. These grandchildren carry us back to the days when we were young, nursing our own three babies. Our two daughters we lost in the last eight years—one not married, thirty-four; the other forty-five, leaving us three grandchildren. After the first shock, I never saw the day we would call them back. We can never see them sicken and die any more, nor can they see their aged mother, father, and friends die or suffer. All my family are Freethinkers, not one a church-member. I always told them to go to church and see their friends, bring them home or go with them, as it might suit, but "be careful to put a dime or a quarter in your pocket to pay for your room you occupy in the church house, for I hav not a dime invested in church property."

And now, if I was called on to say the last word to a father and mother raising children: Never, no, never let the church get control of the children. If this is avoided, the chances are, they will be free from the courthouse clan.

GEORGE SMITH.

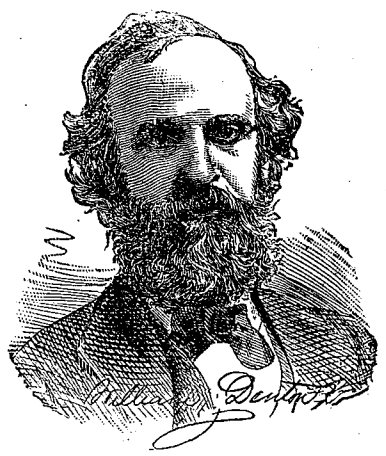
Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.
By John R. Kelso, A.M.
12mo, cloth, $1 00.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Superstition in All Ages.



BY JEAN MESLIER.

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.
Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.
Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.
Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.
Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.
Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

THE pope is about to issue a brief on Columbus and the Exposition.

FATHER MOLLINGER, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the worker of miraculous cures by prayer and relic, died on the 15th.

EMMONS BLAINE, Ex-Secretary Blaine's son, died on the 18th, of blood-poisoning arising from a bowel complaint.

THIRTY German families hav been expelled from Russia for refusing to embrace the state religion of Greek Catholicism.

THE papacy's adoption of the French republic into favor has alarmed Italy, which fears that France has engaged to restore the temporal power by war.

POULTNEY BIGELOW, the American traveler and author, has been expelled from Russia for writing in American magazines about the czar's misrule.

TALMAGE, who conducted religious services over the relief ship Leo before she left New York for Russia, has sailed for that country and will cant over the distribution of the cargo.

INDIANS about Tishomingo, I. T., are expecting calamities because they hav seen and heard battles of phantom Indians, which hav always harbingered war, pestilence, or famin.

THE Mennonites of the province of Saratoff, Russia, who attempted to practice Christ's injunction of non-resistance, hav been obliged to giv it up and take arms against the marauders whom their course drew upon them.

AN educated Chinese patriot writes that the conduct of Christian nations in forcing a foreign religion on the nativs by threats from governments accompanied by gunboats, is opposed to all principles of religion and international law.

COUNT TOLSTOI, author of the "Kreutzer Sonata," is in peril of arrest by the government for his fearless utterance of radical opinions, on such subjects as the degeneration of the present church from Christ's teachings, the misgovernment that has produced the famin, etc.

HENRY RICE, a negro of Rollo, Mo., is believed by his colored neighbors to hav sold his soul to the devil. He says that he obtained from God no response to prayers for deliverance from wrongs, and tried Satan, who appeared and gave him powers that exempt him from injury. Satan sealed the bargain by printing his hoof on Rice's breast—which now shows a scar in shape like a cloven hoof, appearing to hav been burnt in.

IN a certain part of Rhode Island it is believed that consumption is caused by a mysterious creature called a vampire, who eats the buried corpses of the victims, meanwhile infusing a fatal influence into the bodies of the living. Corpses of consumptivs are sometimes disinterred and burnt wholly or in part to thwart the vampire, the ashes being administered to a living person who fears consumption. At Exeter lately the body of Mercy Brown was exhumed and the heart and lungs were burnt, in the interest of Edwin Brown, a consumptiv.

THE Bavarian government is investigating the exorcism of a devil from the ten-year-old son of a miller named Zilk, by Father Aurelian of a Capuchin cloister. The holy father says that the boy was possessed of the devil because he had parents of opposing creeds, his father being a Catholic and his mother a Protestant. The case was aggravated by the fact that the marriage ceremony was performed by a Protestant clergyman. The boy went from bad to worse until he "not only could not pray, but could not hear a prayer without falling into a rage." He was intractable, and rebelled daily against parental disciplin. After the exorcismal rites Father Aurelian addressed to the devil the question: "Hav you left this child's body?" The devil replied that he had. "Hav you left this child's body never to return?" Again, Father Aurelian says, came the answer, "I hav." "In the name of the trinity, I adjure you, hav you left the child's body?" The answer being again in the affirmativ, Father Aurelian asked: "Where are you now?" "In hell," was the answer. Father Aurelian adds that only in the last answer had the devil told the truth. Before that he had not left the boy, but was lying, "for he is the father of lies," comments Father Aurelian. The boy has recovered completely since the ceremony, Father Aurelian says, and is now pious and tractable. The government is concerned only because beating formed part of the exorcism, and this may be used in future cases and cause injury.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE
CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.
A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MÜLLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.
12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.
By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women

—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.
By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.
An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman
Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.
By BRONSON D. KEELER.
CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 853 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
3	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED."

is the only mild stimulant combined with a perfect food known that makes

BLOOD AND MUSCLE

Convalescents should take it regularly as it assimilates easily and quickly. Sold by all Druggists.

Send for Pamphlet of eminent Pysicians testimonials.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his Satanic Majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

IMPLACABLE is Love,—
Foes may be bought or teased
From their hostil intent,
But he goes unappeased
Who is on kindness bent.
—Thoreau.

THE more we demand of human nature the more she gives; her faculties are exalted in their exercise, while the limits to her power of doing and suffering are no longer perceptible.—Taine.

WHAT is a true gift?
A true gift and worthy
Is that gift for which naught,
Nay, not even grace,
Is sought in return.
—Prainottaramâlikâ, Buddhistic Scriptures.

Loss of health and wealth, loss of working capacity—in fact, every form of temporal affliction—the disciples of our moral exemplar [Christ] are instructed to consider as proofs of divine favor. Yet the prevention of such favors is the legally-encouraged purpose of dozens of fire and life insurance companies and mutual aid associations with their omnipresent agencies.—Prof. Felix Oswald.

M. RENAN considers that the rule of opposing silence to calumny was excellent at the period when there existed an enlightened society which formed its opinions in a deliberate, wary, rational manner. It would, on the other hand, be dangerous in a democracy. The masses are naturally credulous—their first impulse is to believe what is told them. Methodical doubt is something which they are least able to comprehend.—M. W. Hazeltine.

I LOVE the man who scorns to be
To name or sect a slave;
Whose soul is like the sunshine, free—
Free as the ocean wave.

Who, when he sees oppression, wrong,
Speaks out in thunder-tones;
Who feels with truth that he is strong
To grapple e'en with thrones.

Who seeks for justice, not for gain,
Is merciful and kind;
Who will not cause a needless pain
In body or in mind.—Anon.

IF, after all this, it becomes perfectly obvious that Nature does not act from a conscious design or plan, but obeys a blind necessity, it is no less self-evident that, working as she does, she necessarily calls into life and being a number of things which must appear to us—if we judge only by the standard of fitness—as utterly perverse, useless, absurd, and imperfect. In fact, if once we begin to look at Nature from the point of view of fitness, it is easy not only to discover numbers of such aimless and useless things, absurdities, and imperfections, but also to demonstrate that Nature, when interrupted in her blind action by external or internal difficulties, becomes guilty of the most startling blunders and perversities. She is oftentimes unable to conquer the smallest obstacle in her path, or to smooth it away in a befitting manner, and in the course of her utterly involuntary action she entangles herself every moment in quite unnecessary or insoluble difficulties and perplexities, which would inevitably be steered clear of by a conscious reason, or even by an unconscious activity guided and determined by considerations of fitness.—Büchner.

THE principal of King's College insists that "it is, and it ought to be, an unpleasant thing for a man to hav to say plainly that he does not believe in Jesus Christ." Should it be an unpleasant thing for a man to say plainly what he believes? Can this be unpleasant except in an uncivilized community—a community in which an uncivilized church has authority? Why should not a man be as free to say that he does not believe as to say that he does believe? Perhaps the real question is whether all men hav an equal right to express their opinions. Is it the duty of the minority to keep silent? Are majorities always right? If the minority had never spoken, what to-day would hav been the condition of this world? Are the majority the pioneers of progress, or does the pioneer, as a rule, walk alone? Is it his duty to close his lips? Must the inventor allow his inventions to die in the brain? Must the discoverer of new truths make his mind a tomb? Is man under any obligations to his fellows? Was the Episcopal religion always in the majority? Was it at any time in the history of the world an unpleasant thing to be called a Protestant? Did the word Protestant "carry an unpleasant significance?" Was it "perhaps right that it should?" Was Luther a misfortune to the human race? If a community is thoroughly civilized, why should it be an unpleasant thing for a man to express his belief in respectful language?—Ingersoll.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN,

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c. cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

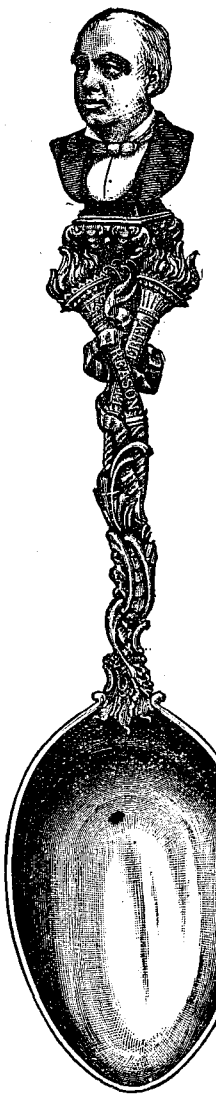
By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.



Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo.. 80 cts.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3 Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

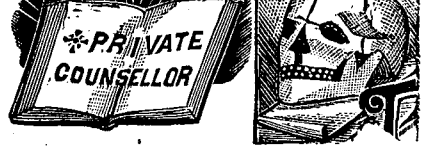
WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offer in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible: Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

ISAIAH'S VISION.

In the year that king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain did he fly.—Isa. vi, 1, 2.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN.

Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free.

N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense.

This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

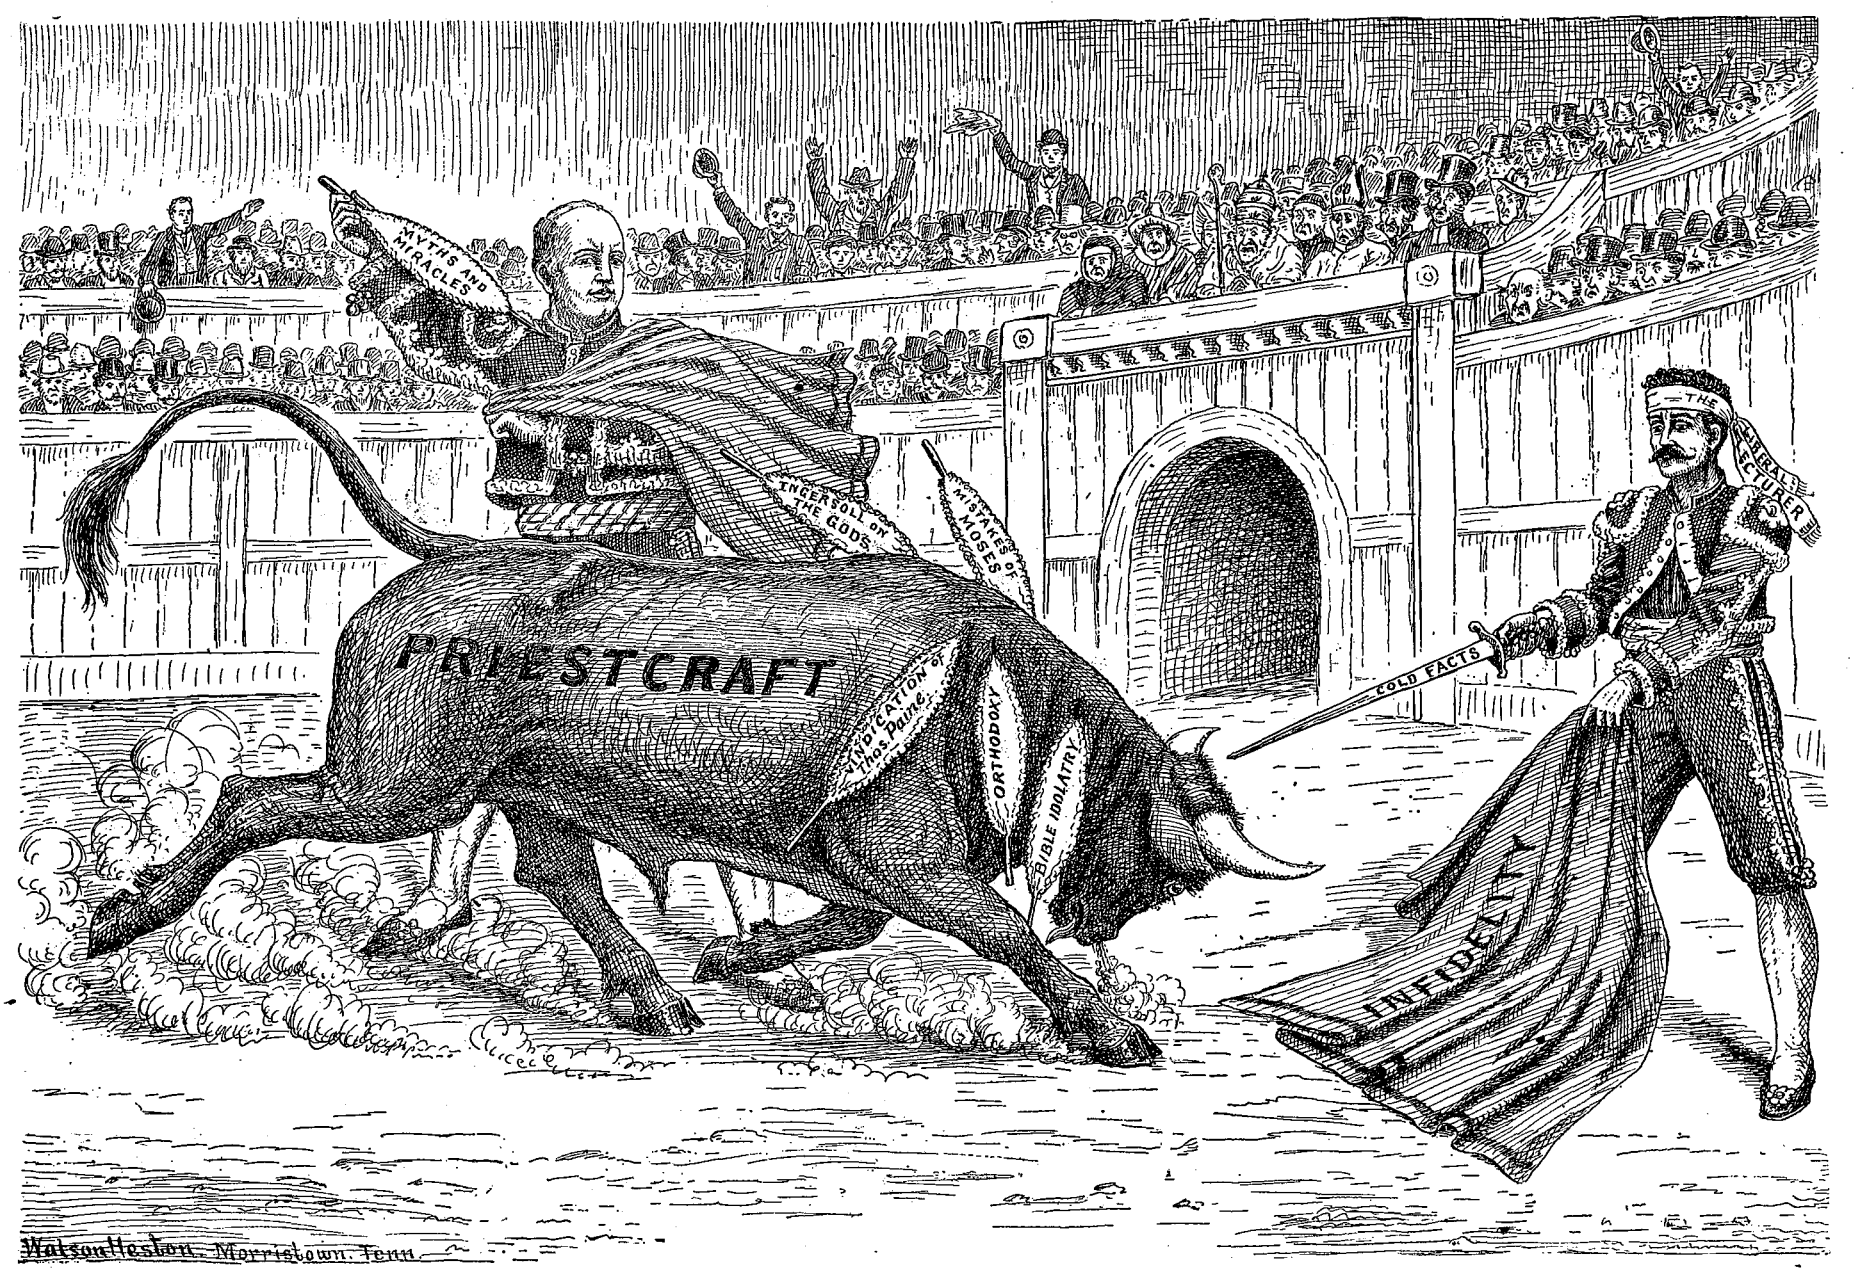
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 27. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 2, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year

WHY THE OLD BEAST IS ENRAGED—BRUTE FORCE AGAINST BRAINS.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST - - - CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 27. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 2, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 2, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

A "Civil Institution" Indeed!

As the details of the recent trials of the Seventh Day Adventists in Paris, Tenn., reach the public it becomes more and more apparent that the whole business is a persecution for opinions of one off-color Christian sect by the other sects which happen to be dominant in the state. And the light fine imposed by the judge does not at all indicate a purpose to discourage such prosecutions, but quite the contrary, as the judge warned the prisoners that if they persisted in Sunday work in the future, the situation would resolve itself into a question of the relativ strength of the law and of those who violated it, and that in such a contest the court could take but one course. And in Obion county indictments are to be found against all Seventh Day people who labor on Sunday. The attorney-general told one of the editors of the Sentinel that lack of time alone prevented the finding of such indictments by the last grand jury, and that "at the next term of court every man of them will be indicted." He also said: "Every man, woman, and child of them [the Adventists] that works on Sunday will be prosecuted until they quit it."

The indictments in Henry county were for maintaining a nuisance, but there was no evidence to support that charge, and though the judge charged the jury that it was "not a question of religious belief or conviction one way or the other," the trials had to hinge on the religious character of Sunday, and the prosecutor asked such questions as these:

"Are you a member of that church?"

"Is it the habit of the members of your church to labor on Sunday?"

"There is a number of you gentlemen that belong to that church living in the same neighborhood?"

"Hav you seen him go to church on Sunday?"

The offense for which conviction was obtained is shown in the testimony of one of the witnesses, himself an Adventist, and compelled to testify against his fellow-church-members:

Attorney-general. Hav you seen the defendant plow any? A. I do not think I hav.

Q. Did you see him driving a team, hauling? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see him chopping any? A. Saw him cutting firewood.

Q. Hauling wood? A. No, sir; I do not remember that he hauled any wood.

Q. Well, what kind of labor do you remember to hav seen him do on Sundays? A. I do not know that I can say.

Q. Is it, and was it his habit, Mr. Dortch, to follow his every-day avocations on Sundays? do the work on Sundays that is ordinarily done by other men on the other days of the week? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, he would perform the same kind of work on Sundays that he would do on other days? A. Yes, sir; all but Saturdays.

Q. And you saw him at different kinds of work? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in this county? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he do Saturday? A. He quit his work Friday evening in time to clean up and get ready for the Sabbath, and he kept the Sabbath as he thought according to the commandment.

Q. In other words, he recognized Saturday as the Sabbath? A. Yes, sir, he did.

Q. And he followed his every-day avocations and worked at other kinds of work on Sunday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw him at all these sorts of work? A. Well, I suppose most every time.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

W. S. Lowry. The indictment charges that the work performed was a public nuisance, and disturbed the community. Were you really disturbed by my work, or did it interfere with your particular views in any way? A. No, sir, not a bit. It did not disturb me any.

Q. Do you think a man ought to hav the privilege of working six days in the week? A. I think every man ought to hav the privilege of working when he pleases; I think that is his right. And he has the right to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience, I think.

REDIRECT.

Attorney-General. Are you a member of the Seventh Day Adventist church out there? T. F. Dortch. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lowry, who was on trial, made this statement to the jury:

"I would like to say to the jury, that, as has been stated, I am a Seventh Day Adventist. I observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath. I read my Bible, and my convictions on the Bible are that the seventh day of the week is the Sabbath, which comes on Saturday. I observe that day the best I know how. Then I claim the God-given right to six days' labor. I hav a wife and four children, and it takes my labor on six days to make a living. I go about my labor quietly, do not make any unnecessary noise, but do my work as quietly as possible. It has been proved by the testimony of Mr. Cox and Mr. Fitch, who liv around me, that they were not disturbed. Here I am before the court to answer for this right that I claim as a Christian. I am a law-abiding citizen; believe we ought to obey the laws of the state; but whenever they conflict with my religious convictions and the Bible, I stand and choose to serve the laws of my God rather than the laws of the state. I do not desire to cast any reflection upon the state, nor the officers and authorities executing the law. I leave the case with you."

The address to the jury by the prosecutor was an attempt to make it appear that religion had nothing to do with the case, but that the law must be obeyed simply because it is the law. He said:

"I want to say, gentlemen of the jury, so far as Mr. Lowry's case is concerned, that we hav a law that points out and recognizes a certain day as Sunday, and the legislature of Tennessee has thrown around that day safeguards of protection. It says it shall be a misdemeanor for any man to follow his secular work on that day; and, so far as the laws of Tennessee are concerned, it is a violation of that law when a man follows that work. It is not a matter of conviction as to whether he believes that his Sunday, or his Saturday, is Sunday, or the Sabbath, as Mr. Lowry terms it. And while the Constitution guarantees unto him, and to every other citizen of this republic, the right to keep Saturday if he sees proper, or to keep Monday if he prefer, or to keep any other day, if your honor pleases, that he sees proper, and guarantees to him the right to work according to his own convictions and his own ideas of these things, that very same guarantee is given to you and to all the citizens of this commonwealth. And the American people by law, and the people of Tennessee by the laws, designate and point out a certain day as the Sabbath, and they say that day shall be kept holy, and around it they throw the safeguards of law, and they say that no man shall work on that day, unless it is a work that is necessary, a work that is absolutely necessary and cannot be foregone. Now, Mr. Lowry has not gone to pull an ox out of the ditch, or to put up a fence to keep stock out of his farm; but he follows his every-day avocations on Sunday. While the constitution guarantees to him the right to keep Saturday, and protects him in his worship while engaged in that worship; and if in his church others should disturb him, he would hav the same safeguards thrown around him, and the same solemn protection given him in that worship that you hav in your own church, yet he must bow to the laws of the state of Tennessee; he must bow to the laws of this country; he must bow to the laws that hav been made and recognized and must be enforced by the courts of this country. And if he feels that it is his duty to keep Saturday, his honor will charge that the law makes him desist from his secular work on Sunday. It is not a question of fact at all; it is only a question of law; because he does not dispute that he follows his every-day avocations, but admits it; he does not dispute that he follows the work on Sunday that he follows during the week, but admits it, and givs as an excuse that it is a conviction of his church belief. This is a question that has been decided by the higher courts of this country, that this people must respect and regard the laws of the state. It is that a man cannot justify himself in the violation of a state law by religious scruples, by religious belief. It is a matter that I can not conceive how that a man who claims to be a peaceable, law-abiding citizen, can go on disregarding the day openly, in the face of the law, openly, in the face of the protections that are thrown around the holy Sabbath as we believe it, and hold it, and protected by the laws of this state; and it is a question that I presume you gentlemen will not hav any difficulty in coming to a decision upon.

"It is a question that has been decided by the courts, and whatever protection, whatever rights are guaranteed to a man in his own peculiar religious beliefs, no law could be enacted that would say that a man who violated the Sabbath was not guilty. It is a day that we are taught to respect, and as alluded to by Mr. Lowry here, the seventh day we should keep holy, and protect it with the laws of the state.

"While I regret that we hav that class of people among us with that belief, not that we hav the people, while I regret that there is that difference, yet if they want to keep Saturday the law says they must keep Sunday; that is to say they must not violate the Sabbath laws; they must not follow every-day avocations on that day. It is to be regretted, because of the fact that so far as I know they are good citizens; yet it is a solemn duty that rests upon the jury, and rests upon the court, and upon all the officers of the court, to see that this law is enforced. It is a duty that I take it the court will do. So far as I am concerned it is a painful duty to me; nevertheless, it is a duty that I would not shun."

The judge's charge was in the same strain:

"Gentlemen of the jury: This indictment against the defendant, W. S. Lowry, charges him with the offense of committing a nuisance by openly, and publicly, and habitually following his daily avocations upon Sundays. It is charged that on the 8th of November, that day being Sunday, and divers other Sundays before that date, and up to the taking of this inquisition, the defendant unlawfully, openly, publicly, notoriously, and unnecessarily did engage in his secular business, and performed and followed his common avocations of life on Sunday, by working on his farm, plowing, hoeing, chopping, hauling wood, mauling rails, and doing various and divers other kinds of work on Sunday; that this work was not necessary nor a matter of charity; and that it was and is to the great annoyance and disturbance of the people, and an evil example to society, prejudicial to the morals of the people, and a public nuisance to the citizens. The defendant does not plead; but the court has entered a plea of not guilty. In order to return a verdict of guilty, the state must prove the guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the offense was committed in Henry county, within twelve months before this indictment was returned by the grand jury.

"It must appear from the proof beyond a reasonable doubt that this defendant did habitually—that is, more than once—openly and publicly perform his daily work, and did engage in his daily avocations by doing the work described in this indictment, or some portion of it; and that it was done in such an open and public way as to become a nuisance—that is, a disturbance to the community.

"If you find, gentlemen of the jury, these facts proven beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the offense occurred in Henry county, and within twelve months before this indictment was returned to the grand jury, you are to return a verdict of guilty. If these facts are not so proven beyond a reasonable doubt, you are to return a verdict of not guilty.

"It is not a question of religious belief or conviction at all, either one way or the other. So far as, and for the purposes of this case, and in the administration of the laws of the state, it is not a matter of any importance, or to be considered by the court or jury, as to whether Saturday or Sunday is the Sabbath of the Bible, or as to what the peculiar religious opinion of the defendant may be, or the religious opinions of other people in the community. It is a question of observing Sunday as a civil institution under the laws of the state."

After reading these words one would think that the prosecutor and the judge were determined to be awfully impartial, but still the fact remains, and it is for them to explain away, that other kinds of Christians work in Henry county, Tenn., without molestation. Bearing this in mind, the assertion that the prosecution of these people is not of a religious character is the boldest of hypocritical shams. The whole Sunday observance movement is nothing but cant and hypocrisy and endeavor to tyrannize. The Advent Herald well says of these cases and the action of Christians who applaud the convictions: "Sunday, June 5, four of our brethren languished in a loathsome jail for pursuing their legitimate calling quietly upon their own farms upon Sunday. The same Sunday, June 5, the delegates to the Republican national convention at Minneapolis, deaf to the church-bells clanging their calls to worship, thronged the halls and corridors of the hotels, and from early morning till late at night, worked for their respectiv candidates. Prominent among these energetic workers was Col. Elliott F. Shepard, president of the American Sabbath Union, who arrived the night before, and took an activ part in this Sunday work. When the laws of this country can thus be used to oppress the humble believer, who conscientiously observes the seventh-day Sabbath, and let such occasions as this one at Minneapolis, and hundreds of other violations go unnoticed by the law, how can anyone hav the hardihood to say that such prosecution is not religious persecution? It may be truly said of this country, 'A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land.'"

A Historian's Discovery.

One of the traditions which the present age is surely picking to pieces is the great fame of the Puritans as the founders of a republic, the fathers of our system of public education, the establishers of freedom of speech and religious equality, and so on through the list of political, religious, and social blessings the Americans enjoy. Our ancestors are supposed to hav brought all these ideas with them from England, or to hav evolved them as a revolt from the established tyranny of English kings. The claim has been so often made for them that the Puritan refugees from England are supposed to hav a patentee ownership of most of those things of which this country is proud, such as refusal to be taxed without representation, township government, freedom of worship, and education for everybody.

But, little by little, we are finding out that the old pietists of New England were nothing but a lot of despots borrowing a few good ideas and evolving on their own account a great many brutal notions. The latest historian to dig up facts about these overrated patriots is a Scotchman, Mr. Douglas Campbell, who has effectually robbed them of many of their laurels. In studying the jurisprudence of colonial New York Mr. Campbell found that the institutions supposed to hav been derived from New England were not at all due to English Puritans. Of what he found in this study he says: "And here I met a series of surprises, for I encountered at every turn traces of institutions and ideas generally supposed to hav been derived from England, or at least to be of New England origin, but which clearly, so far as concerned New York, were derived from a different quarter. Here were free schools, and the system of recording deeds and mortgages, lands held in common by the towns—all under the old Dutch rule; here the doctrin was first laid down by a legislativ assembly that the people are the source of political authority; here were first established permanent religious freedom, the right of petition, and the freedom of the press. On the other hand, here were no executions of witches or Quakers, and no kidnapping and enslavement of the Indians.

"In comparing this record with that of New England, the points of contrast were no less remarkable than those of resemblance, while all the deductions from such a comparison were opposed to the ideas inculcated by our current histories. From their earliest school-days Americans hav been told that this nation is a transplanted England and that we must look to the motherland as the home of our institutions. But the men who founded New York were not Englishmen; they were Hollanders, Walloons, and Huguenots. The colony was under Dutch law for half a century; its population was probably not half English even at the time of the Revolution, and yet here one finds some of the institutions which giv America its distinctiv character, while, what is more remarkable, no trace of those same institutions can be found in England. What was their origin became to me an interesting question. New York, which was first settled, certainly did not derive them from New England, and New England probably did not derive them from New York. Could there hav been a common fountain which fed both these streams, the debt to which has never been acknowledged? Of course, the Netherland Republic must hav been this fountain, if one existed; but to prove its existence and the mode in which its influence was exerted on New England required an examination far outside the records of New York."

Americans will hav to transfer their reverence from the Puritans to the Dutchmen of Holland, and Forefathers' Day will hav to be celebrated with long-stemmed pipes and schnapps instead of in hard cider. And the Puritans who made life a burden to all who differed with them religiously will take their proper place in history as a narrow-minded colony of bigots who somewhat hastily concluded that the chief end of man was to glorify God by hanging witches, whipping Quakers, and enslaving men distinguished from themselvs in savagery only by the color of their skins.

Exonerated!

When the Cheseborough Manufacturing Company first put vaseline upon the market, Samuel Colgate, president of Comstock's Society for the Suppression of Vice, was one of the agents or principals in selling it, and from his store in John street was issued a circular setting forth its virtues, one of which was that mixed with a certain chemical it would prevent an increase in population. The attention of the authorities and the society was called to this plain violation of the law—for several of these circulars were obtained by mail—but Colgate was "exonerated" by the society and the United States district attorney did not prosecute because Colgate suppressed the circular.

The agent of the San Francisco vice society, C. R. Bennett, has likewise been "exonerated" by his society of the charges of debauching a young woman, a member of his church, in Oakland, under promis of marriage, and of afterward hounding her from a position by which she made an honest living, because she declined continuing her intimacy with him. Of the investigation conducted by the society the Oakland Times says:

"The alleged investigation was held in secret. Nobody but Bennett and the executiv committee of the society knows what was done or what steps were taken to secure evidence. The whole proceedings were carried out in accordance with the wishes and suggestions of Bennett. The committee began their investigation with the professed belief in Bennett's innocence.

"It is difficult to characterize in fitting terms such a proceeding as this investigation. The charges supposed to be investigated were made by the Times, but all this journal ever learned of this so-called investigation came from statements furnished to the press by Bennett. The Times was never asked to substantiate any of its statements or furnish any proof of the truth of its accusation.

"We challenge a judicial investigation. If this society desires one, let it institute legal proceedings. When it was ascertained that the statute of limitations barred both civil and criminal actions against Bennett, the Times denounced him as a seducer and a scoundrel. It made its accusations specific with the avowed purpose of forcing Bennett to begin a civil or criminal action for libel. The purpose was to put Bennett's guilt or innocence to the test of a judicial investigation before an unprejudiced jury. It desired a full, open, and fair inquiry before an impartial tribunal operating under fixed rules regarding the admission of evidence."

The society's exoneration under these circumstances amounts to nothing. If it really desired to know the truth, it could hav forced Bennett to sue the Times for libel. As it is, the society has now sunk to his level, if it were ever above it, and is another proof that all these societies are run by men whom decent people cannot trust.

Only Poor Bookkeeping.

Comptroller Myers has concluded that the charitable institutions which had made false returns of children cared for are not swindlers but only poor bookkeepers. Chief Auditor Lyons, of the comptroller's office, reports the following sums overpaid:

St. Joseph's Asylum	$3,603 14
Ladies' Deborah Nursery	4,675 71
Asylum of the Sisters of St. Dominick	636 29
Dominican Asylum of Our Lady of the Rosary	71 71
Asylum of St. Vincent de Paul	37 43
Mission of the Immaculate Virgin	526 29
Total	$9,550 57

Part of the money has been refunded and the balance will be deducted from the subsequent payments. The errors are characterized as "due to gross carelessness and negligence on the part of the managers of the various institutions."

"In several of the institutions," Mr. Lyons says, "children were carried on the bills after their discharge, and in other cases charges were made for the support of children after they had reached the age of sixteen." Morris Alexander, president of the Ladies' Deborah Nursery, thus explains how his institution made the mistake: "We hav about five hundred boys and girls. Often their parents secure their discharge, which is duly registered. But, instead of taking their children away, they leave them for several months, in which case, of course, they are charged for with the rest. Again, children often remain with us after reaching the age of sixteen. We cannot turn them into the street. We must wait until we find places for them." Mr. Alexander admitted, however, that "the bookkeeper might hav been a little careless."

Of all of which the public can believe as much as it pleases.

Told for the "Civil-Sabbath" Cranks.

We commend the following lines to Wilbur F. Crafts and Elliot F. Shepard:

"'How many legs,' asked Grandpa Jim,
Of each urchin who came visiting him,
'How many legs has a sheep, if you call
His tail a leg? How many in all?'
Always the answer prompt would be,
'Counting his tail, sir, five has he."
'Wrong,' smiled Grandpa Jim, 'he has four;
Easy to prove that no sheep has more;
For calling his tail a leg, my son,
Doesn't by any means make it one.'"

When people come around declaring that Sunday is a "civil" institution if only called so, and not a religious one, says the Adventist journal, bear in mind the fact that calling a thing so does not make it so, and gently remind them of the sheep's leg.

The Literature Fund.

On this fund, for the purpose of circulating Freethought pamphlets and petitions where they will do the most good, we hav, since the last acknowledgment, received the following sums:

J. A. Greenhill	$2 00	J. Souter	$5 00
J. W. Miller	50	H. Beichling	5 00
F. C. M.	1 00	R. Gunther	1 50
C. R. Moyer	1 50	L. G. Reed	3 00

This is a fund that should steadily be maintained because work for it to do comes up at unexpected times, requiring prompt action.

Mr. H. L. Green has published a new edition of the Bruno monument pamphlet, and reduced the price from twenty to twelve cents. Orders may be sent to this office.

The editor of our Children's Corner, Miss Susan H. Wixon, sails for Scotland on the City of Rome, Saturday, July 2d, for a two months' visit to the British isles and the continent. She will be at the Royal Hotel, Edinburgh, on the 13th and 14th, and will be glad to meet any of her foreign friends there. She will be in London two or three weeks, and can be found through the offices of the Freethought papers. Her family of children will greatly profit by her trip, as she will write for them every week.

In a letter to Helen Gardener recently, Colonel Ingersoll thus referred to her latest books: "I hav read with great pleasure, 'Pushed by Unseen Hands.' The stories are to the point, apt, deftly written and dramatic. We are the effects of causes and the causes of effects, because effects must in turn be causes. Our prison is large. We do not see the walls and therefore we imagin we are free. You hav done me great honor by quoting a paragraph from my reply to Mr. Gladstone. The book will greatly add to your reputation as a charming and thoughtful writer– and I congratulate you on your success. I hav just read 'Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle,' in which you hav presented your case with clearness and remarkable force, and again I congratulate you." Miss Gardener is rapidly acquiring fame as a story-writer and if ill health does not stop her will soon crowd some of the older and feebler novelists off the end of the plank.

In the West.

News and Notes.

Utah is now in its glory. It is as near to paradise as any place on this broad earth. It presents a magnificent appearance, rivaling the pearly gates and golden streets of the New Jerusalem. I do not wonder the saints came here. They had a shrewd eye to business. It did not take any "revelation" to know that they were in a country that might be made to flow with milk and honey, to be resplendent with fruits, to glitter with harvests. But alas, they did not know that the railroad was coming, and if there is anything that knocks religion higher than a kite it is the puff and whistle of the locomotiv. The saints would hav had a jolly time in these beautiful valleys if the iron horse had not snorted his way hither with the thunders of a new "revelation" that even Joe Smith or Brigham Young could not surpass. The priest would hav had it all his own way if the steam-engin and the Pullman car had not checkmated him. How the "angels," Destroying Angels and all, hav to take to their wings when the telegraph bears the lightning and the smokestack sings its sulphurous song. I do not think that a single angel has put in an appearance since the first stationhouse was built. They hav fled to parts unknown, and the saints hav had to succumb to civilization.

Well, the people, the common Mormon people, are as good as anybody. They hav the right stuff, they are industrious, they believe in good living, they like fine stock, they dig and delve. When they are out of the clutches of the priest they are sensible and go-ahead. Gradually the church power is diminishing. The payment of tithes is not so fashionable as it used to be; there is considerable kicking; the oldtime reverence is weakened; the temple, even with its new and golden angel Maroni, is not so imposing as it once was; a spirit of investigation is abroad; the gold and silver mines, the artesian wells, the factories and smelters, the brilliant alfalfa, the shining orchards and vineyards, all these are secular forces and help to break the chain of superstition.

An evolution is going on among the Mormons and they will one day make a sturdy and progressiv people. They will leap clear over the ecclesiastical fence and bid an eternal farewell to the joss-house, blood atonement, and the bishop.

Utah has a vast variety of wealth, and with the new population that is crowding in, with new ideas, with Freethought, with education, there will be a surprising advance.

A beautiful land this is. The valleys now spread in delicious bloom, flowers of every hue mingle with the dazzling green. Round about are the mountains, wonderful, glorious, enchanting. The tops are resplendent with snow, and even into summer's heat the white radiance quivers. Beneath these illustrious pinnacles are the dark-gray rocks, and the dark-blue groves, and along the base expands the living green—a surging ocean upon the steep hillsides, dropping into the far-reaching meadows that waver and glimmer in the silver and gold of the sunshine. And then the lake, how like a jewel it flows and bursts in sapphire beams and rolls against the dim horizon in masses of splendor. And see the ever-varying form of the blue hills, some towering with vast and frowning precipices overlooking the majestic flood; others flowing in soft lines of verdure to the glowing rim, others stretching away like floating, vanishing clouds, appearing and disappearing in a silver mist, seeming like the creations of a dream, so filmlike, so transparent, so unstable they are in the gorgeous effulgence.

A land of beauty this; the sky, the clouds, the innumerable hights, the gray lines of the ancient sea, the infinit variety of color the glassy lake—heaven mirrored in its depths—the delicious vales sinking into the massiv grandeur of the rocks, the smiling sunlight flecked far away with gentle showers—all these seem to weave a magic shifting scene of matchless glory, in which one revels with a sort of reckless delight, as if he were just born into this enchanting world and knew nothing of evil, of age, or sorrow, or disappointment. I am dreaming, dreaming, as I sweep by, as if in a chariot of fire, this immense magnificence.

But along with nature's superb excitements there is also the "deep heart of man." Salt Lake City has something of a metropolitan cast. There is a congregation of gifted spirits. I guess that something in the climate conduces to intellectual ardor. At any rate, there are literary and art circles quite brilliant, and philosophy also wields its wand. And woman's genius is also at the front. The genus "man" has no preëminence, only man in the general sense as including the feminin element.

I hav had the privilege of listening to an afternoon talk by Mrs. M. C. Donnell on "Mental Science." This is a more inclusiv name of what was originally "Christian Science." Mrs. Donnell plunges quite deeply into the origin of life, its "identities," the "primitiv brother," etc. She has evidently been an earnest student of psychology. She assumes that in man is concentrated the power of universal existence. Man's mind is the supreme instrument and can control the body; it can drive out disease at will, and destroy pain. This, however, is not a supernatural agency but a perfectly natural exercise of what is common to all. Of course "Mental Science" is beautiful and interesting as a philosophy, as something that "might be," but when it comes to science the outlook is different. There is only a suggestion in this direction from certain facts, but not a demonstration, and so the problem is not yet solved. With Goethe we can simply say, "More light."

Mrs. A. R. Tibbetts has given some bright essays on "Early German Literature" before the Unitarian Club. Mrs. Tibbetts is a German herself and has drank deeply of the fountain of the wonderful poetry and romance of Germany, which to-day seems to exert a more extraordinary influence than ever. Alluring are these tales of war and love, of gigantic strife and mighty passion. The gifted essayist has skillfully rendered to modern ears these epics of her fatherland.

I am enjoying the hospitality while in this city of Dr. and Mrs. Tibbetts, and almost every topic has been discussed in this charming home circle. And so, resting amid trees and flowers, the birds singing in the sunshine, and sunshine and shadow mingling on the beautiful grass, I find keen mental enjoyment that givs new zest to the labors of reform.

I hav to break up this genial repose, however, on Wednesday, and take my departure for Farmington and lecture there on Wednesday evening.

Fortunately, before the lecture the clouds roll off into a lustrous sunset, and, while day and night are mingling their splendors, a goodly number gather together in Farmington Hall to listen to a Freethought lecture. Among many strangers I find familiar faces. Mr. and Mrs. Hector W. Haight, Robert Southworth, the Andersons, father and son, Mr. Neilson, George Stead, and others that I hav shaken hands with years ago, not only in Farmington, but in places abroad. These old friends are still ready to help. The fires hav not died out. Among the new ranks is Mr. Jeffs, whose uncle in Idaho, a subscriber of THE TRUTH SEEKER, wrote him to be sure and attend my lecture. I did not catch the name of the Idaho veteran, but he will know by this that Jeffs was there.

Hector W. Haight has been made judge since I was here, so the Liberals are stepping to the front in law and politics. My friend is worthy of the honor.

A little bit of a cyclone struck Haight's farm on the day of my arrival. I guess this is the first cyclone that ever reveled over the plains of Utah. It is supposed that the mountains keep out these lively creatures. It was a baby cyclone, however, and perhaps had strayed far away from the land of its nativity, and did not know that it ought not to come to Utah. The climate of Utah is changing, they say, and it may be that cyclones will become a part of the regular order of things. Railroads, it is said, are an incitement to cyclones. They make more electricity in the air.

Thursday I journey on to Morgan City. Dan Williams and J. Williams are off on a journey to California, but Mrs. Williams givs me a cordial welcome. Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Edholm are still in the company here, and Dr. Wadsworth has joined it from Lehi, where I met him several years ago. Mr. Edholm has been made judge of probate. Freethought wins recognition. Oliver Kingston is another addition to our forces, willing to lend a hand. I hav a fair audience in the courthouse, and lecture on "The Bible," which is a good subject for the Mormon people. They believe in new revelations, and that the Bible does not contain all of God's word. The books are not closed. If God revealed himself in old time, why not to-day? Perfectly logical that is. But after all, the Mormon religion is founded upon the Bible, and if you destroy the Bible, you destroy the Mormon's hope, and his new revelations go by the board. Apropos of revelations at Scofield, in answer to the claim made by Mormons present that they had revelations I read Ingersoll's account of Balaam's ass, in which it was shown that the ass had a clearer revelation than the prophet himself; that so far as revelations were concerned the ass beat the man; and I guess he always will. Perhaps the ass intellect is more adapted to a revelation than man's. Conductor Morris says that hereafter when any Mormon claims to hav a revelation he will dub him "Balaam's ass." If we must hav "revelations," and since the ass beats the record, let him occupy the pulpit. Well, I guess he does, come to think of it.

Friday, I push on to Echo. Here I always hav a jolly time. The railroad boys are lively, and take in Freethought with a relish. Judge Edholm accompanied me from Morgan City. I was in hopes to see Wm. Reynolds, our oldtime secretary of the Utah Union, but was disappointed. Comrade Gale and others came over from Coalville. The schoolhouse was pretty well filled up, and evidently Echo is impregnated with Freethought. W. H. Fay, Wm. Hazleton, and E. C. Morse are our workers here, and they take hold with a will that is inspiring. After the lecture we hav a couple of hours of social relaxation, and like veteran soldiers we gather about the campfire, with memories of the past and hopes of the future. One noble companion is missing, Fred Hirst, who since I was here has passed away. He suffered heroically and never flinched while death claimed him for his own. He met the inevitable with brave and beautiful spirit. Even when he could not talk the radiant courage of his mind was apparent. He was in every way an honorable man, frank, earnest, cheerful, a friend in both sunshine and storm. I never found a better supporter of Freethought. He leaves a wife and two beautiful children, who still remain in Echo, in a lovely home on the banks of the Weber. Echo is indeed a delightful valley in the midst of the mighty and desolate hills—a bit of paradise amid vast reaches of desert. A little way from here is the enormous rocky pulpit, jutting from the side of the mountain, in which Brigham Young addressed the pilgrim multitude, who, after almost incredible sufferings, were on the verge of the promised land.

Mrs. Hirst is teacher in the public school here, and with a woman's genius faces the battle of life, looking to the future still from the sorrow of the past. I enjoyed her cordial hospitality while in Echo. Mrs. Hirst is not one who needs the false support of religion when hopes are shattered and the great doom comes. In humanity itself, in nature, in the breathing life of all, in the lofty cheer of one's own mind, is found the consolation, the balm, that shall make the earth again radiant and the skies benignant.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Little Blasphemies.

"Whoever deposited a button in the contribution plate," said Parson Brown, "must be singularly ignorant of African wearing apparel. If we are to make any use of his offering he must deposit the rest of the garment next week."

Elder Berry: "Joblots has fallen by the way again; he doesn't take any stock in the prophets."
Dr. Thirdly: "Why not?"
Elder Berry: "He says if they had been genuinly inspired, they would hav taken a hack at the weather."

Civil Disobedience.

From the Works of Henry Thoreau.

I heartily accept the motto,—"That government is best which governs least;" and I should like to see it acted up to more rapidly and systematically. Carried out, it finally amounts to this, which also I believe—"That government is best which governs not at all;" and when men are prepared for it, that will be the kind of government which they will hav. Government is at best but an expedient; but most governments are usually, and all governments are sometimes, inexpedient. The objections which hav been brought against a standing army, and they are many and weighty, and deserve to prevail, may also at last be brought against a standing government. The standing army is only an arm of the standing government. The government itself, which is only the mode which the people hav chosen to execute their will, is equally liable to be abused and perverted before the people can act through it. Witness the present Mexican war, the work of comparativly a few individuals using the standing government as their tool; for, in the cutset, the people would not hav consented to this measure. . . .

For government is an expedient by which men would fain succeed in letting one another alone; and, as has been said, when it is most expedient, the governed are most let alone by it. Trade and commerce, if they were not made of India-rubber, would never manage to bounce over the obstacles which legislators are continually putting in their way; and, if one were to judge these men wholly by the effects of their actions and not partly by their intentions, they would deserve to be classed and punished with those mischievous persons who put obstructions on the railroads.

But, to speak practically and as a citizen, unlike those who call themselvs no-government men, I ask for, not at once no government, but at once a better government. Let every man make known what kind of government would command his respect, and that will be one step toward obtaining it.

After all, the practical reason why, when the power is once in the hands of the people, a majority are permitted, and for a long period continue, to rule, is not because they are most likely to be in the right, nor because this seems fairest to the minority, but because they are physically the strongest.

Unjust laws exist; shall we be content to obey them, or shall we endeavor to amend them, and obey them until we hav succeeded, or shall we transgress them at once? Men generally, under such a government as this, think that they ought to wait until they hav persuaded the majority to alter them. They think that, if they should resist, the remedy would be worse than the evil. But it is the fault of the government itself that the remedy is worse than the evil. It makes it worse. Why is it not more apt to anticipate and provide for reform? Why does it not cherish its wise minority? Why does it cry and resist before it is hurt? Why does it not encourage its citizens to be on the alert to point out its faults, and do better than it would hav them? Why does it always crucify Christ, and excommunicate Copernicus and Luther, and pronounce Washington and Franklin rebels?

As for adopting the ways which the state has provided for remedying the evil, I know not of such ways. They take too much time, and a man's life will be gone. I hav other affairs to attend to. I came into this world, not chiefly to make this a good place to liv in, but to liv in it, be it good or bad. A man has not everything to do, but something. And because he cannot do everything, it is not necessary that he should do something wrong. It is not my business to be petitioning the governor or the legislature any more than it is theirs to petition me; and if they should not hear my petition, what should I do then?

I meet this American government, or its representativ, the state government, directly, and face to face, once a year—no more—in the person of its tax-gatherer; this is the only mode in which a man situated as I am necessarily meets it; and it then says distinctly, Recognize me; and the simplest, the most effectual, and, in the present posture of affairs, the indispensablest mode of treating with it on this head, of expressing your little satisfaction with and love for it, is to deny it then. My civil neighbor, the tax-gatherer, is the very man I hav to deal with—for it is, after all, with men and not with parchment that I quarrel—and he has voluntarily chosen to be an agent of the government. How shall he ever know well what he is and does as an officer of the government, or as a man, until he is obliged to consider whether he shall treat me, his neighbor, for whom he has respect, as a neighbor and well-disposed man, or as a maniac and disturber of the peace, and see if he can get over this obstruction to his neighborliness without a ruder and more impetuous thought or speech corresponding with his action?

Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison. The proper place to-day,* the only place which Massachusetts has provided for her freer and less desponding spirits, is in her prisons, to be put out and locked out of the state by her own act, as they hav already put themselvs out by their principles. It is there that the fugitiv slave, and the Mexican prisoner on parole, and the Indian come to plead the wrongs of his race, should find them; on that separate, but more free and honorable ground, where the state places those who are not with her, but against her—the only house in a slave state in which a free man can abide with honor.

When I converse with the freest of my neighbors, I perceive that, whatever they may say about the magnitude and seriousness of the question, and their regard for the public tranquillity, the long and short of the matter is, that they cannot spare the protection of the existing government, and they dread the consequences to their property and families of disobedience to it. For my own part, I should not like to think that I ever rely on the protection of the state. But, if I deny the authority of the state when it presents its tax bill, it will soon take and waste all my property, and so harass me and my children without end. This is hard. This makes it impossible for a man to liv honestly, and at the same time comfortably, in outward respects. It will not be worth the while to accumulate property; that would be sure to go again. You must hire or squat somewhere, and raise but a small crop, and eat that soon. You must liv within yourself, and depend upon yourself always tucked up and ready for a start, and not hav many affairs. A man may grow rich in Turkey even, if he will be in all respects a good subject of the Turkish government. Confucius said, "If a state is governed by the principles of reason, poverty and misery are subjects of shame; if a state is nct governed by the principles of reason, riches and honors are the subjects of shame." No: until I want the protection of Massachusetts to be extended to me in some distant southern port, where my liberty is endangered, or until I am bent solely on building up an estate at home by peaceful enterprise, I can afford to refuse allegiance to Massachusetts, and her right to my property and life. It costs me less in every sense to incur the penalty of disobedience to the state than it would to obey. I should feel as if I were worth less in that case.

Some years ago the state met me in behalf of the church, and commanded me to pay a certain sum toward the support of a clergyman whose preaching my father attended, but never I myself. "Pay," it said, "or be locked up in jail." I declined to pay. But, unfortunately, another man saw fit to pay it. I did not see why the schoolmaster should be taxed to support the priest, and not the priest the schoolmaster; for I was not the state's schoolmaster, but I supported myself by voluntary subscription. I did not see why the lyceum should not present its tax bill, and hav the state to back its demands, as well as the church. However, at the request of the select men, I condescended to make some such statement as this in writing: "Know all men by these presents, that I, Henry Thoreau, do not wish to be regarded as a member of any incorporated society which I hav not joined." This I gave to the town clerk; and he has it. The state, having thus learned that I did not wish to be regarded as a member of that church, has never made a like demand on me since; though it said that it must adhere to its original presumption that time. If I had known how to name them, I should then hav signed off in detail from all the societies which I never signed on to; but I did not know where to find a complete list.

I hav paid no poll-tax for six years. I was put into a jail once on this account, for one night; and as I stood considering the walls of solid stone, two or three feet thick, the door of wood and iron, a foot thick, and the iron grating which strained the light, I could not help being struck with the foolishness of that institution which treated me as if I were mere flesh and blood and bones, to be locked up. I wonder that it should hav concluded at length that this was the best use it could put me to, and had never thought to avail itself of my services in some way. I saw that, if there was a wall of stone between me and my townsmen, there was a still more difficult one to climb or break through, before they could get to be as free as I was. I did not for a moment feel confined, and the walls seemed a great waste of stone and mortar. I felt as if I alone of all my townsmen had paid my tax. They plainly did not know how to treat me, but behaved like persons who are underbred. In every threat and in every compliment there was a blunder; for they thought that my chief desire was to stand the other side of that stone wall. I could not but smile to see how industriously they locked the door on my meditations, which followed them out again without let or hindrance, and they were really all that was dangerous. As they could not reach me, they had resolved to punish my body; just as boys, if they cannot come at some person against whom they hav a spite, will abuse his dog. I saw that the state was half-witted, that it was timid as a lone woman with her silver spoons, and that it did not know its friends from its foes, and I lost all my remaining respect for it, and pitied it.

Thus the state never intentionally confronts a man's cause, intellectual or moral, but only his body, his senses. It is not armed with superior wit or honesty, but with superior physical strength. I was not born to be forced. I will breathe after my own fashion. Let us see who is the strongest. What force has a multitude? They only can force me who obey a higher law than I. They force me to become like themselvs. I do not hear of men being forced to liv this way or that by masses of men. What sort of life were that to liv? When I meet a government which says to me, "Your money or your life," why should I be in haste to giv it my money? It may be in a great strait, and not know what to do: I cannot help that. It must help itself; do as I do. It is not worth the while to snivel about it. I am not responsible for the successful working of the machinery of society. I am not the son of the engineer. I perceive that, when an acorn and a chestnut fall side by side, the one does not remain inert to make way for the other, but both obey their own laws, and spring and grow and flourish as best they can, till one, perchance, overshadows and destroys the other. If a plant cannot liv according to its nature, it dies; and so a man.

When I came out of prison—for some one interfered and paid that tax—I did not perceive that great changes had taken place on the common, such as he observed who went in a youth, and emerged a tottering and gray-headed old man; and yet a change had to my eyes come over the scene—the town, and state, and country—greater than any that mere time could effect. I saw yet more distinctly the state in which I lived. I saw to what extent the people among whom I lived could be trusted as good neighbors and friends; that their friendship was for summer weather only; that they did not greatly propose to do right; that they were a distinct race from me by their prejudices and superstitions, as the Chinamen and Malays are; that, in their sacrifices to humanity, they ran no risks, not even to their property; that, after all, they were not so noble but they treated the thief as he had treated them, and hoped, by a certain outward observance and a few prayers, and by walking in a particular straight though useless path from time to time, to save their souls. This may be to judge my neighbors harshly; for I believe that many of them are not aware that they hav such an institution as the jail in their village.

I hav never declined paying the highway tax, because I am as desirous of being a good neighbor as I am of being a bad subject; and, as for supporting schools, I am doing my part to educate my fellow-countrymen now. It is for no particular item in the tax bill that I refuse to pay it. I simply wish to refuse allegiance to the state, to withdraw and stand aloof from it effectually. I do not care to trace the course of my dollar, if I could, till it buys a man or a musket to shoot one with.

The authority of government, even such as I am willing to submit to—for I will cheerfully obey those who know and can do better than I, and in many things even those who neither know nor can do so well—is still an impure one: to be strictly just, it must hav the sanction and consent of the governed. It can hav no pure right over my person and property but what I concede to it. The progress from an absolute to a limited monarchy, from a limited monarchy to a democracy, is a progress toward a true respect for the individual. Even the Chinese philosopher was wise enough to regard the individual as the basis of the empire. Is a democracy, such as we know it, the last improvement possible in government? Is it not possible to take a step further toward recognizing and organizing the rights of man? There will never be a really free and enlightened state, until the state comes to recognize the individual as a higher and independent power, from which all its own power and authority are derived, and treats him accordingly. I please myself with imagining a state at last which can afford to be just to all men, and to treat the individual with respect as a neighbor; which even would not think it inconsistent with its own repose, if a few were to liv aloof from it, not meddling with it, nor embraced by it, who fulfilled all the duties of neighbors and fellow-men. A state which bore this kind of fruit, and suffered it to drop off as fast as it ripened, would prepare the way for a still more perfect and glorious state, which also I hav imagined, but not yet anywhere seen.

* This was written before the abolition of slavery.

Disagreements in Australia.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I am instructed by the executiv council of the Australasian Secular Association, Melbourne, to send you the following in reply to a communication from Mr. Otto Horwitz, of this city, published in your issue of January 30, 1892, which has just been brought under the notice of the council.

It is rather significant that the party represented by Mr. Horwitz should publish such a statement in an American paper, while they hav altogether failed to giv any public explanation of their conduct in this country, in spite of a distinct promis that they would do so, made in a semi-private circular which they sent to several members of the above association over six months ago; in spite of the fact that the Melbourne Liberator has been open to them for nearly four years—from the beginning of the quarrel until now—and in spite of their having been challenged on the public platform times without number to vindicate their actions.

Mr. Horwitz states that: "In 1884 Mr. Joseph Symes, of England, was engaged, who continued lecturing for the association till June, 1888, when dissensions arose which brought about a serious disruption in the association and ultimately led to a lawsuit in the supreme court, owing to the fact of Mr. Symes and some of his followers having jumped the association's land and erected a hall thereon. The trustees of the association got judgment against Symes last March, which judgment was confirmed on appeal to the full court in October last."

This is a specious misrepresentation of the case. As a matter of fact, "dissensions arose" in April, not in June, 1888, at which time the association occupied premises known as the Hall of Science, Bourke street, Melbourne; and, during these dissensions, on May 14, 1888, the trustees of the association, together with a section of the council, looted the secretary's room and carried off all the books and money on which they could lay their hands, while the association was assembled in public meeting for the purpose of settling the dispute.

They then seceded from the general body of the members, of whom an overwhelming majority remained with the president, Mr. Joseph Symes, the treasurer, and the remainder of the council.

According to the rules of the association, the trustees are to be elected annually; and on the anniversary of the date of their election, the association held an annual meeting for the purpose of electing trustees and other officers.

The seceding trustees and their followers not only failed to attend the meeting, but, although they claimed to be the original association, they neglected to call an annual meeting of their own, at which the members might hav had an opportunity of reappointing or of replacing them.

It is true that in October of the same year, they did purport to convene such a meeting; but the only notice given of the same was a small advertisement in an evening paper on the night of the meeting: which, of course, made it impossible for the members to attend and vote.

Shortly after this, the seceding party disappeared from view as a corporate body, and the lease of the Hall of Science premises having expired, the association took possession of its land in Fitzroy, without a shadow of a protest from the ex-trustees, who at this time had ceased to hav any connection with the association. A certificate of title to the land was secured by these trustees in January, 1890, they having been the persons whom the association intrusted with the money for its purchase; and armed with this, and taking advantage of another dissension which arose in May, 1890, they, in July of the same year, issued writs against the then trustees of the association, who were in occupation, claiming possession of the land and building.

On the strength of this they succeeded in ousting the association and installing themselvs and their followers.

This decision, of course, caused a great injustice to the members of the association who had subscribed and lent money to build the hall—the whole of the lenders who still remain unpaid being utterly opposed to those now in possession.

The case, however, is by no means concluded, and legal proceedings are still pending, which may hav the effect of producing a remarkable alteration in the position of affairs.

It is untrue that Mr. James Stirling ever lectured for the party with which Mr. Horwitz is connected.

By inserting the above you will do justice to the Australasian Secular Association and to Mr. Symes, who is still its president and lecturer.

Yours truly, John Love,
Secretary Aus. Sec. Ass.

131 Russell street, Melbourne, Victoria.

They Cannot See It.

A neighbor says, "I don't see how it is possible for you to doubt the existence of a God." And of course she does not, for once she could understand this she would no longer hav any need for her God. She would be compelled to accept the Atheistic theory, the scientific one, the only true one. True, because real. Another friend says, "We know that God exists by an inward consciousness and a latent conviction." But no child is born with such consciousness or conviction. No child has it till it is taught it.

Ignorance is the parent of all gods, devils, and superhuman chimeras. Knowledge is the destroyer of each and all of them.

The child theologically reared knows all about God, heaven, hell, and "the bad man." My little grandchild glibly says God made her little bucket; and begs me to swing her high, "most up to God's house"—talking of these things as if they were as real and commonplace as a farmer or a barn; and in speaking of money she said, "God had plenty of it;"—as if a real God had use for such a medium of exchange. But while the most fanatical can see the folly of a child's religious ideas, they are stoneblind to the folly of their own.

Yet we cannot wonder at the credulity that accepts the impossible when we consider the persistent drilling that has welded it all so firmly to the whole mentality of the believer. We hav, nearly all of us, believed in fairies, giants, and Santa Claus. The proof of the existence of these was as strong to our childish reasonings as is the proof of a God's existence to the falsely taught who cannot get behind mythical personages.

The pious talk wisely of a "supreme being," but a being must hav shape, substance, and locality. A being must be happy, miserable, glad, sorry, hopeful, and despondent. All these feelings are a part of all lives, and inseparable from them. A being must hav something upon which to support his existence—something to want, something to care for and to love. A supreme being—just one alone—would always be lonely, it being impossible for him to hav an equal companion. And why him? Better, if there must be only one, that it be her.

The mother is the fountain-head of all existence and all births. If there were any possibility of a supreme being, or any kind of a god, it would be her—the female, the mother from whom all life emanates; the female toward which all bends and tends.

Undeniable growth has established it.

Elmina Drake Slenker.

He "Quit Trusting."

From the New York Daily Herald.

It was in western Kansas. Just at sundown of a summer's day I rode up to a house which stood on the prairie, ten miles from anywhere. A lank, hungry-looking man stood in the door, and when I asked if I could put up there for the night he thought it over for a minute and then replied:

"It'll crowd things purty clus, but I guess you kin stop."

His house was only one story and one room, and he had a wife and five children. It was a very slim supper we sat down to, and the family were evidently very poor. The man seemed to think some explanation necessary, and after supper he remarked:

"The fact is, stranger, we havn't had a fair show out here."

"Sickness?"

"Some sickness, but not enough to discourage."

"Grasshoppers?"

"Some few but no damage. It's them 'ere infernal cyclones that knocks the tar out o' us around here."

"Joseph, don't you swear!" chided the wife, as she boxed two of the children's ears.

"Who's a-swearin'? I'm jest a-sayin' that if it wasn't fur them gaul-durned, infernal, cantankerous, thunder-and-blazes cyclones a-whoopin' it up every summer we might git a bushel o' taters ahead now and then!"

"Do they occur every season?" I asked.

"They do. They don't occur all over the state, but they do right here. They're got up for my special benefit—just a hundred yards wide, so's to rake my farm lengthwise. Durn my old butes! but I'm a-gettin' tired of 'em!"

"Joseph, how dare you complain of the Lord's doin's!" exclaimed the wife, as she gave the squalling baby a shake that nearly broke its neck.

"If the Lord is a-flingin' them there cyclones at me then I've a right to complain!" he answered. "This is our third house in three years. The other two are scattered all over America. We've lost crops and cattle and pigs and hens and 'twon't take more'n one more cyclone to make a mighty homesick man of me."

"Joseph! the Lord hears you!"

"Can't help it if he does. I'm gittin' powerfully discouraged over sich bizness."

"I say to you to put your trust in the Lord!" she exclaimed. "You havn't fully done it, or we wouldn't hev had them cyclones. Shouldn't he do it, stranger?"

"I think so."

"Of course he should, but he's been stiff-necked about it and brung calamities on this family."

"Well, I hev bin a leetle mulish, I guess," said Joseph, "but I'll quit right off and go to trustin'."

We went to bed soon after, and it was just at daylight that I was awakened by the man getting up and looking outdoors and saying to his wife:

"I can't say fur sure, but I guess you'd better git them young 'uns into the dugout. Dod rot my hide, but it would be just my luck!"

She roused up the children and left by the back door, and the husband left with them. I got up off the floor, where I was sleeping, and was just pulling on my clothes when he came rushing in.

"Is anything the matter?" I asked.

"I should somewhat insinuate that there be!" he excitedly exclaimed. "There's a gaul-durned cyclone gitting ready fur bizness down thar toward Ellsworth, and you can't git into our hole in the ground any too fast!"

He had constructed a rude outdoor cellar against the hill behind the house, and I followed him and crowded in.

He stood by the door for a moment to watch the storm, and when he entered he growled out:

"She's a-comin' headfust in this direction and jest exactly a hundred rods wide to an inch!"

She came. She came with a roar and a shriek, and with such force as to tear up the trees by the roots. In three minutes it had passed and the farmer and I crept out. The house was not to be seen, while chicken-coop and pigpen and sod stable had vanished and left no trace behind. We stood gazing about us in silence, when the wife called out:

"Joseph, has she passed?"

"She has."

"And didn't I tell you to trust in the Lord?"

"You did, and now you crawl up and see what trustin' the Lord in the state of Kansas amounts to! Durn my good-fur-nothin' old hide, but this is the last straw, and we start back fur Illinoy inside of one hour!"

What Two Representativ Journals Say.

Of the action of the House of Representativs in voting to close the government exhibit at the World's Fair the New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "If the House of Representativs could not hav seen its way to send a government exhibit to Chicago without trammeling the management with conditions for the special handling of that exhibit, it would hav been better probably to hav kept it in Washington where it would not hav been exposed to the profane gaze on a particular day in every week. Supposing that every state of the Union and every foreign country that intended to hav exhibits at Chicago were to imitate the House of Representativs in hedging around their exhibits, each with its quota of special conditions of opening and closing, what a delightful chaos the Exposition would be! And yet the states of the Union and foreign countries, it seems to us, are quite as much entitled to take such liberties with the management as is the House of Representativs. It is an indefensible move on the part of the House, which every open-minded person will hope to see reversed by the Senate." On the same subject the Minneapolis Times says: "There would be the greatest injustice in closing the Fair on Sunday, because there are many thousands who can visit it on no other day and whose right to visit it is just as good as that of anybody else. The principle of right under a free government is that no man's conscience shall giv law to any other man. Strait-laced philanthropists, cranks, professional canters, and dullards, as well as pious rich people, who hav no need for recreation on Sunday, because they hav all days in the week for it, hav managed to convince themselvs that the advocates of a reasonable Sunday are going to keep open the gates of the Exposition unnecessarily and force the poor people against their will into the inclosure. This country is not occupied by poor people who can be forced into anything by way of supposed pleasure. They will go to the Exposition Sundays if they desire to do so and if the Exposition be open on Sundays. If it be open and they do not want to go nobody is going to compel them. But if they want to go the gates should be open, and it ought to be considered whether they ought not to be open free."

My Second Campaign.

It was a beautiful day when I left Chicago; the rain-clouds seemed as though they had spent their energy, and the sun, asserting his superiority, shone down upon the gilded domes and housetops of this city with tropical splendor. In a few hours —thanks to the labors of modern science—I was carried through town and village, flood and swamp, farm and field, into Indiana, where I gave two lectures in Angola. Fremont Robinson and Gid Finch were on hand to meet me at the depot. They had worked hard to make these lectures a success, and their efforts had not been in vain. They were undoubtedly the most successful meetings ever held in this little town. Toward evening, just before the time of our meetings, the sun disappeared behind a thick black cloud; the wind and the rain fought hard for supremacy; the wind blew almost a hurricane, and the rain came down in torrents. No doubt the "pious folk" considered this a "god-send," as it would tend to keep the people from our meetings; but they were doomed to disappointment, for the storm cleared off just about one hour previous to the advertised time, and we were favored with a large and enthusiastic audience, who paid rapt attention throughout the whole discourse. One of the assistant teachers at the normal college situated in this town, who revels in the distinctiv title of "professor," and who, it is said, is regarded as the "windbag" of the Protestant faction in these districts, was present at the lecture and took down in shorthand what was said. We had hoped that he would hav something to say, for I had certainly given him plenty of argument against his own doctrins, but he refrained. Our venerable and efficient chairman, J. W. Hendry, invited him or any of his cohorts to say something by way of rejoinder, but he exhibited the true pharisaical spirit and acted toward me as the Pharisees did toward Christ—"when they found they could not answer him again to these things, they held their peace." Or rather, he held it for a time at least, as subsequent developments will show.

After my previous visit to this town the clergy attacked me from their pulpits—of course, after I had left the scene of conflict, and when they had the field left entirely to themselvs. Anticipating a repetition of this, I took the floor again and publicly challenged any of the clergy, or any member of the Young Men's Christian Association, to meet me in fair discussion upon the platform. It is needless to say, however, that no notice was taken of it by them. Whether they ever intended to accept it or not at this time is best known to themselvs; but at least, driven by the force of public opinion, they accepted, but waited until I had gone before doing so.

My second lecture was attended with the greatest success that ever followed any attempts in this town. The hall was filled to overflowing, and—wonder upon wonders—four "Bible-bangers" were present. Notebooks and pencils were conspicuously displayed, and throughout the whole of my lecture their fingers moved with an alacrity that would hav done credit to any stenographer. A lively discussion was anticipated by those present and the news spread rapidly throughout the town, which brought crowds to the meeting. But they had looked for too much. Not one of them seemed to hav sufficient courage to get up and defend their "joss" from the attacks of him whom they had designated as a "mere boy." Our honorable chairman gave them a pressing invitation to say something, but they did not feel inclined to accept. Instantly I rose to my feet and requested them to say what they had to say right there at the meeting, and not to wait until my back was turned before they could dare to giv vent to their abuse. Now was the time, and here was the place, for them to criticise me if they had any criticisms to offer. This had its desired effect, for it succeeded in bringing the "reverend professor" to his feet—and he doubtless would hav made better use of his feet in debate than he did with his tongue. Not one argument did he advance, nor even make an honest attempt to criticise me. Like the greater part of his tribe, he was coarse, vulgar, flippant, conceited, and evasiv. He labored strenuously to be "sarkastik," and treated the address I had given with ridicule. But I told the "reverend professor" that if he desired to make a use of ridicule, then I could make it as mighty and as potent a weapon as he; for ridicule has been well described as a "test of truth." The truth cannot be hurt by ridicule, for it will stand any such test. It is only in the breast of error and falsehood that it will rankle like a poisoned arrow. Ridicule is like a two-edged sword, made to cut both ways. In his remarks he made such glaring equivocations that they could not pass unnoticed by the audience. And this is the treatment to which we are subjected. Yet, as we court investigation and opposition, we are compelled to submit. It is doubtful whether or not any real good is accomplished by these methods, though they may furnish a little amusement to see the tactics of those professed followers of Jesus and expounders of the so-called "Golden Rule." Yet they rarely instruct only to that extent wherein they show the untenableness of the Christian doctrin, and the weakness of the watery arguments adduced by its defenders. However, this little "pantomime" was not without its good effect, for knots of people could be seen along the highways and byways discussing the question that had been raised. And even the next day my lectures were the general topic upon the streets.

The Freethinkers themselvs were elated at the outcome of these meetings and expressed a wish that they might be continued every week. Well, I would say the question lies with them.

Angola is making rapid strides in the cause we love so much, thanks chiefly to the energy and the enthusiasm of our young friend Fremont Robinson. He is the flower of the Freethought flock here, and without his assistance very little would doubtless be done.

Tuesday evening I take supper with "Gid Finch," and I am right royally entertained by himself and family. I was pleased to meet once more with the Freethought friends here, among whom the leading lights are, in addition to those already mentioned, A. M. Brown, Angola's leading attorney; Judge Turley; J. Freygang, the editor of the Angola Herald.

Having met with such success here, I next journeyed to Waterloo, to renew the conquest there. I found a host of friends awaiting my advent, and I had scarcely been in the town thirty minutes before my arrival was heralded from one side to the other.

Quite a number of Freethought lectures hav been given in Waterloo during the past few months. Since my previous lectures here, Putnam and Remsburg hav kept the ball rolling, and these lectures hav resulted in splendid work being done. Already the preachers are feeling their effects, and one of them, who is sadly deficient in veracity, remarked "that he had had enough of this kind of thing; one or two lectures were all right, but now," he said, "we are having too much of it; we are not going to stand it; they will hav to be stopped." And his equilibrium was somewhat disturbed when a gallant friend of our cause, Charles Voss, informed him that "they were going to hav some more of it, for Charlesworth was coming again." This is just what we want—make the preachers kick; but I would advise them not to take off their shoes, for they might possibly "kick against the pricks."

My first lecture was given to a large and appreciativ audience, the result of the earnest efforts of our Waterloo friends. The churches tried their utmost to keep the people away from the Infidel meetings, but their efforts were put to no purpose, for we had a larger meeting than any church in the district could boast of. The chair was taken by Chris Breebil, one who has been a victim of religious persecution, for the simple act of getting in his wheat on the falsely so-called "Sabbath day." Toward the close of the lecture, the "reverend professor" from Angola entered the hall and out came his pretentious notebook and pencil once more. We naturally looked for a little opposition this time, but again we were doomed to disappointment. He had no criticisms to offer, but, lo and behold, he had a challenge prepared for me to debate with him. Wonders will never cease. Truth is indeed stranger than fiction. The object he had in view, however, was to make it appear to the people of Waterloo that he was really anxious to debate, and that I was not, so he had followed me up in order to hold me and not allow me to escape. But if the "reverend professor" is really so desirous to discuss the issues, why, I ask, did he not accept my challenge when I offered to debate with him while in Angola? Then I had four days at my disposal; this he knew full well, but preferred to wait until he thought I would not hav time to meet him. However, I accepted the challenge, and the debate has been arranged between us and will probably take place some time in October.

He even brought papers for me to sign in order to make the arrangements more complete and effectiv. At first I thought he was making a bluff; nevertheless, I signed his paper, and no doubt the debate will take place in good faith. There were no less than three preachers present upon this occasion, and so eager were they to serve the Lord that it was impossible to restrain them from jumping upon their feet all together.

My remaining lectures were equally successful, and I was proud to learn that the most highly esteemed citizens of Waterloo were present. They listened attentivly to what I said and gave frequent signs of appreciation. No preachers turned out at these lectures; possibly they were engaged in saving souls from the orthodox hell and preparing them for "kingdum kum," therefore we had no further discussions. Owing to the activ work done by the Freethinkers in this little town, one of the churches (English Reformed) has been sold in lieu of the payment of taxes upon the parsonage. Thus the good work goes on. I was pleased to meet again with our Freethought friends here. It is needless to mention them individually. They are all what may be termed "hummers," and they seemed to vie with each other in making my stay among them as pleasant as possible.

From Waterloo I resumed my travels, this time to Butler, where I received a warm welcome at the depot by D. W. Tomlinson.

Owing to a slight misunderstanding I came near missing a lecture here, but, learning that the Opera House had been engaged for me, I at once repaired to the town.

A fear was evinced that the notices given were too short to be of much avail, or to insure a large attendance. But at the time announced for my lecture the crowds surged in the hall and even exceeded the anticipations of our friends. The hall was almost filled. This was the first Freethought lecture ever given in Butler, but it will not be the last. My audience thoroughly enjoyed the lecture, and these meetings will be renewed in the near future.

There is an exceedingly large Liberal element here, and it seems a prolific field for Freethought work. I deeply regret that I could only stay here one night, a fact which seemed to disappoint many of the audience, who evinced an earnest desire that I could stay longer and giv them some more.

D. H. and C. W. Tomlinson, with their families, are enthusiastic in our cause, and it was chiefly through their efforts that I lectured in Butler. Promising to visit them again as soon as possible, I left on the midnight train for Columbus, O.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Secretary Ohio State Secular Union.
154 N. High street, Columbus, O.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The German Freethought Congress had its annual meeting in Hamburg, June 10th and 11th.

A new Free Religious Society has been organized in Offenbach as well as in Frankfort-am-Main, Germany.

From the city of Keulen a petition signed by twelve thousand people has been presented to the German Reichstag, asking for a repeal of the obnoxious paragraph 166 (blasphemy, etc.).

Our esteemed friend Dr. Specht, editor of Menshenthum, no doubt feels highly flattered at present. His essay, "Freethought and Culture," has been interdicted by the imperial censor of the press in Russia.

Victor Lennstrand, who has been taking a rest of some weeks, has returned to work, and we are pleased to inform our readers that our Swedish friend has fully recovered from his recent attack of pneumonia.

In the colony of Victoria, Australia, there are, according to the last census, 5,028 Freethinkers, 306 Atheists, 300 Agnostics, 6,745 no church, 11 Theosophists, 4 Positivists, 9 Humanitarians, 3 pagans, 1 "put me where you please."

The Prussian congress (Reichstag) has voted ten million marks to build a new church in Berlin. Forty thousand people in the same city are out of work, and there is a general depression in trade as well as in manufacturing circles.

A new Freethought society has seen the light of day in Weisbaden, Germany. Professor Dr. Ludwig Büchner delivered the first lecture. We wish the new society success, and hope the example set by the Freethinkers of Weisbaden will be followed by Freethinkers in every city, both in Germany and here in the United States. Freethinkers must organize.

If the bigoted Christian IX. "by the grace of God" should happen to get an attack of common sense, the Danish capital, Copenhagen, can put its crematory into practical use. Both chambers of the parliament hav voted in favor of cremation.

The Austrian minister of war has issued an order to the effect that corps-commanders shall endeavor to resurrect the religious spirit of the privates, and that the latter shall appear in church at least once every month. They hav a state church in Austria.

The English missionary in Constantinople, Johnson, has been converted to Mohammedanism. At Ragun, India, a meeting has been held by influential and rich Mohammedans subscribing a plenty of money for missionary purposes. The mission is to be in London; its object, to make a good, temperate Mohammedan of John Bull.

The mayor of Christiania, Norway, in his message to the citizens of that city says: "The increase in quality and quantity of public education and the consequent better habits of the people, hav greatly influenced the lives and customs of the latter, and continue to improve them." When was such a compliment paid to Christianity with equal truth?

From the geographic review Globus we draw the following interesting facts concerning the educational status of the monks of the cloister Ssolowezky in Russia. Of 228 inmates 33 cannot read, 24 cannot spell, and 4 only hav succeeded in pulling through a seminary. Those that can read can do so only when the book given them is a prayer-book printed in the modern Russian language.

From the minutes of the late Freethought congress held at Mechelen by the Belgian Freethinkers it was found that during the past year the number of activ, outspoken persons belonging to the Freethought Federation has increased from four thousand to thirteen thousand. This fact shows what can be accomplished by thorough organization. Let us follow the example set by our Belgian brethren.

In the Danish daily paper, Dagens Nyheder, a Protestant minister and a Catholic priest are at loggerheads. The latter says that Luther in his translation of the Bible inserted the word "only" in Rom. iii, 28, thus making it known that man could be saved by faith only. The minister does not deny this, but claims that the word has since been taken out, as it was of no use. It is a very interesting confession. So long as the Reformation was not an established fact, the word was used to fight Catholicism with, but when the ministers had come into possession of a part of the wool of the faithful, well, they scratched that word "only" out.

Attempt at a Philosophy.

Under the head of "The Problem of Life" in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 8, 1892, by C. Severance, of Los Angeles, Cal., appears a remarkable essay, which is begun by stating that "the problem of life is one that mortal man has never solved, and nothing in this age of profound thought and mental commotion indicates that he ever will," which I would like everybody to read.

In order to remove the doctrin of the dogma of Agnosticism from the minds of the Freethinkers, and from scientific investigation, I make this communication.

It is evident from Mr. Severance's essay that he, like many others, derives his knowledge of truth from things that by no possibility can be denied and positivly are, and which he perceives clearly without the intervention of argument or other reasoning powers. The causes underlying phenomena not being visible or perceivable, the dogma of Agnosticism crops out and leaves him with no cause to lead or assist him.

At the close of his essay, in the same intuitiv way, he states the undeniable truth that "the world stands to-day, as it ever has, with no good and sufficient explanation of why nature creates man without purpose and destroys him without regret."

If my explanations do not show, why? I refer him as well as others to the base of my doctrin of the system of creation, which will appear further on. "Man," he says, "is a creature of fate, and the products of fate are the result of inevitable necessity. . . . Impulse is the propelling to action in every living being; man does not create or set it in motion; and as all impulses are dependent on conditions, he is the perfect slave of conditions, without a vestige of free will." This is Mr. Severance's answer to the question. No truer or better answer can be given to all things in nature that man can behold. All things made visible to his senses are sequences of invisible impulses, invisible activities, which are the causes and power underlying all phenomena.

Chemistry informs us that "each atom and each molecule is endowed with invisible power. . . . But however impossible it may be to explain an element's friendly deportment toward another, it is possible in each case to learn the facts with certainty, for each atom, or mass of atoms, possesses its true individuality and is always constant and consistent in its affinities and hates." Is there not a sufficient suggestion in their behavior that these chemical elements composing the globe themselvs are compounds; are sequences of the extremely subtil fluid matter composing the universe?

By induction and the admitted universal and abiding laws of nature, from chemistry and from what we do behold, how can we come to any other conclusion than that the universe is a boundless ocean of extremely fluid matter without beginning or ending? Chemistry asserts that the atoms of our globe, their nature and essence, cannot be changed or destroyed.

Why so? Because they are crystals, and the first, or nearly the first, compound matter transformed from the original ocean of universal matter. However, chemistry claims that they can all be resolved to gases, and when so reduced, may not the great ocean cut the minute particles and absorb them into its general whole from whence they came, the same as themselvs are known to do with all physical products evolved from them?

We know without doubt or uncertainty that only a very few elements are necessary to all physical forms of life on the globe. By induction may not the same be found of original elements of matter as respects suns and systems of worlds? We know that unseen matter is differentiated into parts the same as our globe, and all belonging to it, is found to be, and that the few, such as gravity, magnetism, electricity, temperature, light, heat, etc., that we do know, exhibit the same general characteristic behavior, one toward the other, for we hav appropriated several of their powers to our uses and purposes.

No matter by what name the whole or the differentiated parts may be called—either eternal matter, ethereal or cosmic spirit, God, soul, the Holy Ghost, or creation—it is all the same to me. What are not myths are all matter and subject to the laws of matter. Such stuff as being entities, having consciousness, knowledge, intelligence, motivs, design, senses, thoughts, ideas, and conceptions, must be obliterated from the great ocean, for such things are not written in the Great Book of Nature, and nowhere to be found outside the book describing the system of the animal kingdom. I call the whole ocean the Great Book, and the differentiated transformed created systems, kingdoms, masses, molecules, and atoms, Books; describing each system alone by itself, with unerring certainty of facts—in which we find the powers of all to be definit, exact. Being definit, exact, they are Law. We find them always alive and in activ motion; never ceasing to perform their functions of law or power. The nature and essence of their parts are separate and distinct, in many instances refusing to associate or having anything whatever to do with that of another. Again, some exhibit affinities, and their combinations may be endless.

The ever-circulating motion of the whole boundless ocean sways the great electrical whole with its positiv and negativ energies, and is the life and impulse and propelling power manifested in all things. It is the great first cause—the great first Law—all and in all; performing its functions as a whole. Each differentiated part, piece, molecule, or atom a separate, independent cause—Law; each a whole by itself, performing its functions alone in the performance of the general whole.

The great reason why the problem of life has been such a great mystery is apparent in the fact that man in his ignorance has not been able to perceive the unseen causes underlying all phenomena; he naturally assumes there must be cause; therefore he postulates one cause—which he calls God—for all things. He teaches and preaches it, and everybody takes it for granted as true without one word of proof, or even a hint of the operation of law. To even hint a doubt of its truth, brings the offender the anathema of its supporters with curses and awful consequences.

From my imperfect explanations, is it not possible to perceive the logic of the problem of life and death, and why and what are the causes underlying the phenomena? No purpose or design in all nature is apparent or manifested. What we behold are effects of causes. All phenomena are necessary sequences of causes.

If the logic is so blind and abstruse as not to indicate the causes of transformation—commonly called creation—I can only point you to Nature's Re-creating Books of Law, in which the process is now actually being recorded, and the operation of Nature in re-creating forms of matter is now being performed. Nature's laws being uniform and abiding, the manner in which she performs one single thing must be the way she performs all things. I ask you to read and study the books for yourself, then you will know the why and wherefore of all things.

To those desiring to obtain information on the subject of the universe and of creation, I would respectfully refer them to my base, which is the re-creating, electrical, living dynamos to be everywhere observed in the several kingdoms of growth. Each and every one of which is a universe by itself alone; not a mere appearance but a reality. They are facts; all correlated and absolute facts. Why correlated? Because they are all formed from the same primal material by the same generating law, differing only in amounts of quantity, quality, and combination of matter caused by conditions. They all grow, differing in manner only, not in the functions performed. They all are integrating laboratories with perpetual motions, never ceasing to perform the functions of life, of creation, during their entire existence, from nonentity to ultimation, to finality. During which time they are doing what no human chemist nor mortal man can do. They are transforming and integrating through their laboratories living, visible organisms, and invisible matter. To say that matter itself is not eternal impeaches the utmost limits of our thinking faculties.

Whatever is not universally manifested or written in each and every one of these little living dynamos, which they hav inherited from original matter, must be considered as specially evolved products of the kingdoms, species, and organisms wherein they are to be found. All else must be nothings, mere speculations. In these little universal laboratories, which are nature's books of law, are to be found the only facts that can giv correct information in regard to the whole matter. On every leaf is recorded only just what is desired to be known—positiv law, positiv facts, positiv knowledge. Study these books of nature's laws for yourself and you will find how and what from all things are created. Do not take my explanation, nor that of any other person, for they may be wrong; the books are not. Imagin nothing, postulate nothing, believe nothing, theorize nothing. All that is are sequences. Arrive at positiv knowledge of unseen things by their manifestations, or by induction from recorded facts written in the living books of nature. Study them, I say. They only can giv you correct, irrefragable, infallible information. They only, to you, can and will,

With magic key,
Unlock life's dream of mystery.

The universe is a system; transformation is a system; creation is only transformation. Every living thing that man can perceive is the result of the same system of transformation. Causes underlie all transformed things. The transforming agent is "true generation," whose powers are controled by conditions. In the transforming process every whole, every differentiated part, down to the lowest—even the molecule and atom, a cell or crystal, and all unseen elements in suitable or favorable condition—must of necessity respond to the law of true generation. Thus the law of heredity in transformed things.

The system is not theory. Supposed hypotheses, imaginations, assumptions, are myths—mere nothings to begin with. How can theories be true that are based upon myths for a foundation?

GEORGE DAVIS.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 2, 1892.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Athens and Cathlamet,	Wash.	July 3, 4	Rosalia and vicinity,	Wash.	July 21–24
Woodburn,	"	" 5	Davenport,	"	" 25–27
Barlow,	"	" 6	Colville,	"	" 29–31
Canby,	"	" 7	Missoula,	Mont.	Aug. 6, 7
Sheridan,	"	" 8	Albert Lea,	Minn.	" 13,14
Scappoose,	"	" 9	Watertown,	"	" 16–18
Tacoma,	"	" 10	Minneapolis,	"	" 21
Buckley,	"	" 11,12	Eau Claire and vicinity,	Wis.	" 24–29
Spangle,	"	" 14,15	Chicago,	Ill.	" 4, 11
Palouse City,	"	" 16,17
Oakdale,	"	" 19,20

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

THE next meeting of the Syrian Society will be held at the house of William M. McLaury, M.D., 244 W. 42d street, on Thursday, June 28th, at 8:15 P.M.

Letters of Friends.

Obituary.

ASPEN, COL., May 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It is with feelings of sadness that I send to you the account of the death of John Engstrom, of Aspen. He died on May 21, 1892, at the Citizen's Hospital, from paralysis. He was buried by Masonic ceremonies, being a member of the Masonic order. He was a good help to the cause of Liberalism. He was outspoken, and true to his belief, having no use for the church. WM. MASON.

Hopes We Can Always Work for Liberty.

PORTLAND, ORE., June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just got a copy of the Bible Picture Book, and I think that it is the grandest book I hav ever read to show up the fallacies of the Bible. I also got a copy of the "Pictorial Text-Book" when that was issued, but I like the Bible Pictures best. And I hav been a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER since it came to Portland and I do not think that I could do without it as long as I can raise money to buy it. When I am done reading THE TRUTH SEEKERS I distribute them to others. Hoping you will always be able to work in the cause of liberty, yours for truth, ANDREW FRASER.

Brief Reflections in Morals.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: All, all are selfish! There is not one who does not liv himself to please. Life holds for each no other aim or object than to gratify and satisfy his own ambitions and desires. We call those generous who deny themselvs to giv to others, but by those same denials they are taking greater pleasures than they giv; for no one does or can giv to another more happiness than he himself receives.

Those are just who claim for others the rights they claim for themselvs. Those are generous who make for others the opportunities they wish themselvs. The happiest are those who to others are kindest and who cause most happiness to all. The great are those who make the world better by their deeds.

LIZZIE J. MAGIE.

Obituary.

COLDWATER, MICH., June 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I write you these few lines to inform you that my father, Fleming Hopkins, Brighton, Ind., died May, 1892, after a severe illness of that dreaded disease, eczema. His system was very much reduced in trying to get rid of the disease, and at last he was taken with a congestiv chill which closed his lifework about 9 o'clock in the evening. He was an earnest worker in the cause (Freethought), and was never afraid to make his views known wherever he was. And he always welcomed your paper and had many a hearty laugh at the cartoons. He was born in Clark county, O., March 21, 1817, and while young he came to Sturgis, Mich., and resided there until 1848. Then he came to English Prairie, where he spent the remainder of his life on the same farm forty-four years. He will be greatly missed by neighbors and relativs.

MRS. HANNA BOOTH.

Disapproves Ridicule.

PLAINFIELD, WIS., May 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Many of the caricatures that appear in THE TRUTH SEEKER repel and disgust those who are not thoroughly weaned from all religious notions. I know this from my own observations. "Those that are well need not a physician, but those that are sick." Now, how are you going to get those that are sick with religious fanaticism to take your Liberal medicin, if you make the dose so bitter and nauseous that at the first taste they push it from them in disgust and will hav nothing more to do with it? Many that make no profession of religion would be ashamed to let THE TRUTH SEEKER be seen in their houses. I do not believe THE TRUTH SEEKER will ever get the circulation that a Liberal paper ought to hav until it stops ridiculing what Christians hold most dear, and what nearly all people as children hav had ground into them.

I do not expect that THE TRUTH SEEKER will consider my opinion of any value, nevertheless I could not forbear, for I am greatly interested in the spread of Freethought. M. B. S.

Christians Who Hav to Cool Their Furious Bloods in the River.

ALMY, WYO., June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $5 to renew my subscription and for the "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" and the other undernamed books. We hav had a very long winter this year—the longest I remember of. The last of the snow has not gone yet. If we had as warm weather here as some places in this country I think some of our Christians would go crazy; as it is, we hav had about two weeks now of pretty fair sunshine, so between the heat and the election coming off some of them had to get baptized in the Bear river to keep them in good standing and keep their blood cool till after the fray, when the weather will be cool and they will naturally slide back. So it seems Christianity comes in quite handy at times.

I may say the Freethinkers are very scarce in this place. Some of the church people are shocked very much when they happen to see a TRUTH SEEKER, and "That Watson Heston is a very wicked man." But I hope he will liv a long time and continue his pictures for the good TRUTH SEEKER, as it gets off more good common sense in one issue than all the preachers in the country in a lifetime. Wishing THE TRUTH SEEKER and Heston success, I remain,

Yours in the ranks of liberty,
WM. ARMSTRONG.

The Drones Who Steal One-Seventh of Our Time and One-Tenth of Our Money.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., June 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I do not want to miss one number of your valuable paper, which has come so regularly to me and each time brought new light which I needed. For nearly twenty-five years I was a Sunday-school scholar and a constant attendant for nearly all that time. I read and studied the "Holy Queer" until I had begun to see for myself that it would not stand close questioning without conviction in regard to facts. I hav since read Paine's "Age of Reason," and find more solid truth in it than the score or more of "inspired" writers giv evidence of possessing.

This town supports a dozen or more gospel-shops where the "holy drones" try to persuade the people that "the Lord" requires of them one-seventh of their time or more, and one-tenth or a great deal more of their income, that they, the H. D.'s, may be supported in idleness and be able to deliver each week that "word of God" which is considered mailable in whole or in part but is unfit to be read in the presence of any decent, modest people, and is also a bone of contention among themselvs as to the ins and outs of the awful mess of contradictions.

With best regards to Watson Heston and all of THE TRUTH SEEKER family, I remain,

Yours for liberty and the downfall of superstition, FRED C. GREENE.

Objects to the Criminal Resort Called Heaven.

FLAT CREEK, LA., June 8, 292.

MR. EDITOR: The Globe Democrat in commenting upon the Southern lynchings of the negro ravishers of white women, says that "It is always best to let the law take its course." Now, is this so, or is it not? Perhaps there is a point here which the editor of the Globe Democrat has not considered. When we let the law take its course, after these black brutes hav been sentenced to hang the preachers intervene and make their peace with God and giv them a passport to heaven, without consulting the ravished women about it. Now, these ravished women are wanting to go to heaven themselvs, and they do not want to meet on terms of equality and fraternize with these black fiends who hav ravished them, and the only way to prevent this is to giv the brutal ravishers a speedy send-off to the other country before the preachers can get in their work.

If we permit the law to take its course the preachers will send all of the murderers and ravishers who get hanged to heaven, and no modest and respectable woman will voluntarily remain in such society after she gets there.

Heaven's recruiting officers are enlisting all of the ignoramuses, fools, murderers, and ravishers who get hanged, and I want to go to some other country. I pray to be delivered from that kind of society. Let me go with Voltaire, Volney, Paine, Bennett, and Ingersoll.

PETER F. SHUMAKER.

Letter From a Dentist Who Has No Feelings.

PAYETTE, IDA., June 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am one of the adopted children from the Freethought family. I now send $1 for the Picture Book and $3 for the paper.

This is rather a church-ridden town, there being four, with the prospect of another. What few Liberals there are here are those of the quiet kind who are afraid to speak out—but I do not know why, unless it is lack of courage. As for myself, most of the townsfolk know of my belief, and those who do not soon find out when they commence to talk church politics; yet I do it in a kind, unoffending way, so I hav the respect of all. Why, the preachers seem to be more clever than some of their members. I am making a set of teeth for Rev. Mr. L., and we always get into an argument. The last one I was just trying to find out what kind of a God he believed in, other than a God of nature, when he cut me short by saying that he did not worship or believe in a God of hell-fire and brimstone, or a God of murder, or one that would send little children to hell, or a prayer-answering God. This took my breath, so I could not answer for a short time, but he did not wait, as he had some work at home to do.

I was told by one of our cowardly Liberals that I would not get many teeth to pull, as a man who did not believe in a God had no feelings. "Well," I said, "those who don't want to come to me on that account can go to hell and get them smashed."

The Truth Seeker Company has our best wishes. Yours for truth,
A. A. BRANTHOOVER, D.D.S.

M.D.'s Better Than D.D.'s.

CAMP ALOVO, May 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your issue of May 7th an article from J. D. Kaufman, Sanger, Cal., that caps the climax for misrepresentation. It is somewhat like replying to a donkey who brays at you to reply to him. But when you are charged with crime, silence is equal to acknowledgment or pleading guilty.

Mr. Kaufman places all doctors in a tent that he dubs humbuggery and fires artillery at all alike, as if all doctors practiced the same system. If he does not know that there are now a few hundred M.D.'s in the United States who practice on strictly hygienic principles, he would better go to any well-informed schoolboy or schoolgirl and learn some facts on the doctor question. In Mr. Kaufman's article he makes use of language which was published in hygienic medical books thirty years ago by Prof. R. T. Trall, one of the champions of hygienic medical literature. Thus Mr. Kaufman shows unmistakably that he is trying to steal the artillery of the reform doctor and palm it off as original, and class the hygienic doctor as a medicin-vender and a humbug of the deepest dye.

He is as inconsistent as the Christian who thinks everyone who does not believe his little creed is a terrible sinner and on his road to sheol. In fact, his article sounds like that of one who had been a devout church-member, and forgot to leave his crankiness behind when he left the church.

I would like to ask Mr. Kaufman if he has an occupation. If so, if he ever knew anyone of the same occupation who was dishonest. And what he would think of the lack of brains of anyone who would say that all people in any occupation are consummate rogues.

The expression, "I despise D.D.'s and M.D.'s," shows mental imbecility, for a well-balanced mind despises no one. "He that hateth his brother is a murderer." I do not esteem that quotation any more or any less because it is in the Bible. The question is, is there any truth in it? Hate is the first step toward murder.

Mr. Kaufman hates doctors, so he is unscrupulous in his statements about them. He would rob the doctor of character if it was in his power.

I hav heard just such maniac ravings from cranks about lawyers. Such forget that there was a Lincoln, that there is now a Rosecrans and an Ingersoll, and other honest attorneys and M.D.'s—many of whom, I will venture, would compare in character with Mr. Kaufman or any other crank of his ilk.

When anyone condemns a whole class indiscriminately, he only portrays his own defects.

Colonel Ingersoll says he would like to see people deport themselvs so well that they would need no attorneys. So also the sentiment of the true physician is this. I would like to see people liv so physiologically that they would need no doctor. Those who liv and labor to that end, as the literature shows, will go on all the same as if there were no cranks who despise all doctors.

Yours for reform physically, mentally, and above all for truth and consistency,
N. W. PICKENS, M. D.

Sadly Profane Discourse.—Parsons Are Called Bull-Pups.

LONE ROCK, ORE., March 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write a few lines from this part of "the Lord's vineyard"—as the sky-pilots say, while they look as fat and sleek as Grant's bull-pups, and fully as tenacious and ferocious.

We hav had the finest winter out here I ever saw in my life, but considerable sickness, mostly la grippe and pneumonia. We hav had several deaths, among them an old English gentleman, named Enry Nike. He was about eighty years old. He had lived in my family for twelve years. He was the stanchest Liberal I ever saw; said he had always been so. He said Infidelity had been beaten into him in infancy with the Bible and prayer-book. He said he was so old and feeble he wanted to die and be at perfect rest. He told the doctor while dying to tell them all he was not afraid a bit. I told the doctor that there was a soldier for him, and not a soldier of the cross either. He was the best-read man in this part of the country, not excepting the sky-pilots—and they know several things they don't tell, and tell several things they don't know. Oh, we miss our dear old friend sadly, especially when THE TRUTH SEEKER comes, he always enjoyed it so much. The last that I read to him was Ingersoll's lecture on Liberty, and the last he read himself was "What Must I Do To Be Saved?" by Ingersoll. I know they brightened his pathway even to the portals of the tomb. He said he saw all around his bed (not angels nor devils, but) emblems of the best, the noblest, the grandest religion this world ever saw. I thought his mind was wandering, and I asked him, "What is that, Uncle Harry?" and he looked up at me and said, "Humanity, madam; that covers it all." And so it does, although our sky-pilot told us in his last sermon that humanity, morality, and good works were the righteousness of man and as filthy rags in the sight of the Lord, then exhorted us to put off the righteousness of man and put on the righteousness of God. Great Scott! I wonder what kind of a masquerade suit that is! Probably David wore it when he tripped the light fantastic before the Lord and the blushing Jewish lassies. The Lord never made any kick about rags that time, but the queen, whew! she wasn't jealous a bit—Lordy, Lordy, wasn't she mad!

I am really anxious to get to vote, to help right a few of the wrongs before I die. I am more interested in what I shall do before I die than in what I shall do after. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. And Christ said, "Take no heed for the morrow, what you shall eat, drink, or wear." I think he wanted to bring the linen ephod back into style again, for of course he saw David mazurkaing before the handmaids when he was walking around with his father in the cool of the day—and that was poor David's time to dance, so he wouldn't sweat. I hope that cute, cunning Comstock will not get hold of this letter. I think myself it has too much of the Holy Queer in it to be safe under his immaculate gaze.

Inclosed you will find $10, for which please send me the following bill of books, as I am opening a free Liberal library, where I can feed those who hunger for common sense without money and without price.

I will close with best wishes for THE TRUTH SEEKER and all the grand, noble contributors. MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

Says the South Is Barbarous.

TEXAS, Feb. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav made efforts to secure subscribers, but with no success. Were it possible for me to do so I certainly would put my shoulder to THE TRUTH SEEKER wheel with dollars and cents to keep it rolling; nor would I consider a donation to THE TRUTH SEEKER in the Christian charity sense, but pay for work I want and which THE TRUTH SEEKER is doing. But it would seem that said work was accomplishing little of the desired end, when I reflect that I am the only subscriber that I know of in this large town. But if the Editor knew as much of the accursed people of this Sunny Southland as the writer, he would feel surprised at any subscribers at all. Bigotry—don't mention it! Ignorance — stupendous! Religious—to a fault!

At the town of Bryan last week a mass-meeting of the "big uns" was held who notified a traveling troupe that to play "Uncle Tom's Cabin" there would be unpleasant (to them) and dangerous (to the troupe).

Last week also at Texarkana a negro ravisher was tied to a stump and burnt alive, the woman herself applying the match.

This last fall an outspoken Agnostic by the name of Trapp was invited to leave the town of Brenham inside of a certain specified number of hours because he was honest with himself and wanted to be the same with other people. But they would hav none of it.

The good Methodists of Boliver, an out-of-the-way peninsula between Galveston and Sabine, had in their flock a young lady of some seventeen summers, who may hav been a little too ardent—at any rate, such a hint got in the breeze, and the good sisters ran the rumor to earth, as becometh good sisters. Some boys who had been particeps criminis squealed on the poor lass, as good boys will. The sisters, taking the word of the boys with a grain of salt, set about to investigate on their own account before firing the girl out of the Lord's sanctuary. A meeting of the sisters was called and the girl was summoned to appear for actual hymeneal examination, and such was actually done. The girl had no parents or male relativs, and, half frightened out of her wits, submitted to the test, which was made by about a score of the good sisters in the district schoolhouse (none but ladies admitted), while a crowd of nice young men and boys peered and jeered from a cover hard by. But the wise old matrons could not tell exactly whether the maid was guilty or not guilty, and accordingly appointed a committee to take the girl to Galveston to a physician for examination. But the victim of this infernal outrage escaped from her pious tormentors and left for parts unknown before the farce was concluded. Mind you, the affair was public, nor was any attempt made to keep it private. Make your own comments.

I was boarding with a family of which I should hav thought better. Some one accidentally dropped four playing-cards in the yard. The woman discovered them, and considered it the work of some hoodooer. The cards were picked up with a stick and put in the stove. Seeing the serious turn the thing took, to further the joke I secured four cards and drew on them a cross, a skeleton, a coffin, and a gallows, and left them in the yard. Horror and consternation! This was enough! The neighbors were called in, who advised no one to touch them. A can of kerosene was brought and the luckless cards were cremated then and there. Anyone fooling around that yard after night with cards if detected would certainly hav been shot.

But I might go on ad infinitum multiplying cases of superstition, hypocrisy, intolerance, and duplicity, indicating the low mental state of the mass of the Anglo-Saxons in this corner of the earth.

I hope your paper can and will continue its good work, and perhaps the little leaven will in time leaven the whole lump. Sam Jones, last summer, was paid $3,600 for ten days' preaching, while THE TRUTH SEEKER gets only my poor support so far as I know. Too bad! too bad! *

Bible Morality.

BEEBE, May 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed a homely rhyme from my pen which may prove amusing if not instructiv. This I send at the request of many of your readers, of whom a number hav written me asking, like Oliver Twist, for more. I wish to thank these indulgent Liberal friends for their kind praise of my poor efforts.

Yours fraternally,
MRS. ED. ABBEY.

THE HOLY BIBLE AS A TEACHER OF MORALS.

A drummer for the upper route
Had tickets for the sky,
And so resolved to do some work
Toward fitting men to die.
So pulling down his pious phiz
To a "Lord we thank thee" look,
He started out to draw them in
With "mustard" faith, and book.
The looked-for sinner hove in sight,
And great the parson's joy.
The drunken vagrant clutched his arm
With "How's yer health, old boy?"
"O man of sin," the parson said,
"You're trembling on the brink
Of that dread hell where Satan waits
For all who love strong drink.
Oh, rise and haste to save your soul!
Oh, fly the dreadful fate!
The wrath of heaven pursues you, man!
Call Jesus ere too late!"
"Whose name was that?" the drunkard said,
"Christ Jesus? Well, that's fine!
Why, that's the very chap, they say,
'Turned water into wine.'
Plain water wasn't strong enough
To help digest his cake,
And so he made a little wine
Just 'for his stomach's sake.'
I hav to laugh 'bout Solomon,
The way that he connives—
'Twas only by his keeping drunk
He lived with all them wives.
Besides, we are commanded
In your 'good book,' I think,
To spend our money freely
For sheep, oxen, and strong drink.
And Noah and Lot got drunk—what, gone?"
The parson had passed on
To meet an erring magdalen
With cold, forbidding frown;
And to her piteous plea for alms,
He drew his hand aside
And told her of a seething hell
With portals yawning wide.
"Man wrought my ruin," the wanton said;
"I could not sin alone.
And even you, O holy man,
I dare to 'throw a stone.'
The Magdalen of Jesus's time
Was his especial pet,
And many more in that good book
Whose names I don't forget."
The parson drew his cloak aside,
Nor longer stayed, to hear
The truths his book could not deny,
Which pained his pious ear.
So, farther down a narrow lane,
He sought the master's cause
Among some lads who played at dice,
And here he slyly paused.
One little fellow played to win,
And cheated on the sly;
But he, when charged with the offense,
Most stoutly did deny.
"O vipers, did you never read
Of brimstone lake of fire
Prepared for all such wicked boys?
For God doth hate a liar."
"Just tell me, then," the small voice said,
"If 'tis such an awful thing,
Why God called out 'a lying spirit'
To trick Ahab the king.
And why old Peter told a lie,
Denying Jesus thrice.
I'm sure such things are good deal worse
Than fibbing 'bout our dice.
I asked the teacher 'bout it, too,
But with an awful look
She said that I was much too young
To read God's holy book.
Now, what's it there for but to read?
And that's what I did tell her.
For 'sassing back' she made me learn
Six pages in the speller."
The parson made him no reply,
Spoke of the shade-trees cool,
Hoped, like good boys, they'd save their dimes,
To bring to Sunday-school.
Across the street an angry son
Had struck such cruel blow
Upon his aged father's breast,
As though 'twere deadliest foe.
"Hold, hold," the parson cried;
"In this good book, my brother,
The Lord commands the sons of earth
To honor father, mother."
"But Jesus don't," the wretch replied;
"I've read the very line
Where Jesus says to hate them both,
Or 'ye are none of mine.'
And as 'twill get me into heaven,
This one command I'll keep,
A blessed 'disciple' I will be
And sit at Jesus's feet."
A murderer calm awaits his doom,
Chained in his prison cell.
"Ah!" said the parson, "I'll go there
The 'gospel news' to tell."
The parson prayed—the felon smiled;
"Don't waste your holy power,
For I've repented, and was saved
Just at the eleventh hour.
The man I killed went down to hell;
He wasn't prepared to die.
But I'll receive a harp and crown
And dwell with Christ on high."
The parson hurried back to church
The wondrous tale to tell—
"A murderer from the burning snatched
In paradise to dwell.
And, O my brethren, up in heaven
There is more joy to-day
O'er that one soul than all the rest
That do not go astray.
And while we humbly bow in prayer
Let all remember that
'The lord doth love the cheerful giver'—
Please, deacon, pass the hat."
The congregation praised the Lord;
Their pastor was perfection;
While he knelt down and slyly cussed
At such a small collection.

Interesting Report of a Debate.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Bible Pictures came to hand some time since, and this book, along with the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," has afforded me a great deal of amusement. The majority of the folks who hav examined these books are yet troubled with that brain disease called faith. As yet, I hav met with but one man who has ventured to reprove me for keeping such books, in consequence of which a lively discussion was brought on between us. This party is one who makes his religion his boast, and is ready at all times to reprimand anyone whom he finds violating God's laws. He said to me, after looking over the books for some time: "It is a wonder to me that God almighty does not strike some men with death who ridicule the Bible and the church in this manner!" I said to him: "Your God is not in the habit of killing people for telling the truth—although Christians hav murdered many people for this very reason. The history of your religion proves to us that in former times Christians invented instruments of torture and built Inquisitions for the purpose of destroying life. But now they build hospitals for the purpose of saving life. You see, therefore, your church is just emerging from the confines of its barbarism. Your church no longer leads the van, but follows in the rear. Learning and education are in the advance. The church follows reluctantly, unwilling to accept truth, right, or justice until compelled by the pressure of public opinion. This is why they build hospitals now instead of Inquisitions."

As our discussion ran from one point to another, he finally said: "All those who profess Christianity will not be saved, by a long shot." I asked him in what proportion they would be saved or lost. He said: "At the rate that people are going on, scarcely more than one-fourth will get to heaven." The people, he said, are living in a riotous and wicked manner, and they disregard all pleadings and persuasions for their repentance. He then quoted from the big book the following: "For many will be called, but few are chosen." He said again, in reply to my question, that the heathen would all be saved, for in consequence of their great ignorance, they were not amenable to the law. He then gave me the following passage from the same funny book: "Because the law worketh wrath, for where no law is there is no transgression" (Rom. iv, 15). I then asked: "Why does your church strive to convert the heathen?" He said: "It is our duty. The Bible commands us to go among the heathen and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ." "Well," I said, "do you not see that, by obeying the commands of your Bible, you will send more souls to hell than you will save? According to your doctrin, the heathen, in their present state of ignorance and purity, are assured of salvation, and by gaining a knowledge of Christianity they become contaminated, when three-fourths of their number will be sent to hell.

"Christians used to make slaves of these poor heathen. They would make angels of them now. I must say that the heathen are the specially favored people of God. I suppose the sword that Jesus left in the world to sever the friendship of relativs, is in the shape of the law that worketh wrath, and this being the case, it would prove a curse, not a blessing, to the heathen to Christianize them. Carrying Christianity to the heathen, under the circumstances, would be like flavoring ice-cream with onions. What would you think," I continued, "on going to heaven when you found nine hundred and ninety-nine in every thousand of its inhabitants were heathen? Would you not begin to think that Jesus's mission in this world was a failure? What would it profit the heathen to gain your religion and lose his own soul? How deplorable it is to contemplate that three-fourths of all the Sabbatarians of our country will never see the golden gates, while the ministers and priests get all the murderers through clean and clear. Now, as you seem to think that God ought to kill everybody who shows up the hypocrisy of your religion, this is clear proof of the fact that you are, as yet, unacquainted with your God's method of doing business. In this particular, your God is more just than that; in fact, he is more just than some of our railroad corporations. He never discriminates. It is true, he sends pestilence and disease, fires and floods, cyclones and earthquakes, and all kinds of accidents to destroy life, but these visitations of his wrath strike us promiscuously. He slaughters the just as well as the unjust. Do you believe that Sabbath-breakers will go to hell?" "I certainly do," said he. "Then I can assure you," said I, "that there is not an advocate of the Sunday Sabbath in the world that will ever get to heaven. Your law commands you to keep holy the seventh day Sabbath, Saturday. You hav cast aside this law of your God, and throw defiance at his face by instituting a man-made Sabbath, Sunday. You are all desecrating God's holy Sabbath. You will all be damned." I asked him if the affairs down in the lower regions were kept running on Sunday. He seemed embarrassed. But I continued: "My reason for asking the question is this: I thought, as the heathens all go to heaven for the one cause, and as the Sabbatarians all go to hell for the other, that the latter-named body might be strong enough in numbers by this time to hav a Sunday law enacted there. But if this question is too knotty for you I will ask you an easier one. Do you know if the color line is drawn in heaven or not?" I could now discern the least semblance of a smile upon his lips, as he answered: "You seem to take the wrong view of these matters. The construction you put upon the scriptures amuses me. I shall call again to see you in a short time, and we will speak more fully upon this subject." I requested him to bring the preacher of their church along, as the Bible had become a very rickety old book now, and needed a great many props to support it in its present state of dilapidation and rottenness. He said he should certainly call again, and thought he would be able to enlighten me on many points of the Bible. I will wager a nickel that, when he meets me again, he will not mention this subject to me.

There's nothing like ridicule to rebuke the impertinence of brazen piety.

Yours for the rights of man,
JOSEPH SCHAFFER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Florence.

We look upon thy white, cold face,
Which was, aforetime, as the flush
Of summer roses—now, its grace
Hath changed into a sudden hush.

A pallor, gray and grave, o'ersets
The casket, erstwhile called thine own,
And everywhere are sad regrets
That so soon hath the jewel flown.

Looking so on thy lovely eyes,
Veiled now in strange and solemn sleep,
Dear, tender thoughts of thee arise,
And chide us for the tears we weep.

In august majesty of death,
Serene and calm, thou waitest now;
We longing gaze with bated breath,
And place white roses on thy brow.

The noisy sounds of earth—the sight
Of sad distress—the aching heart—
The jostling crowd—the cruel slight—
From all that hurts—thou'st gone apart.

Hast thou awakened now in glad
New life, in firm and vig'rous strength,
No more rememb'ring pain thou'st had,
Tired days, and nights of wearied length?

Dost see the lonely ones thou'st left,
Lonely, that thou no more art here?
And knowest thou they're not bereft,
If thou livest and still art near?

Or art thou still in slumber deep,
Oblivious to all sound or sight?
Serene and safe, in calmest sleep,
Unmindful of the day or night?

We may not know—but we shall hold
Thy memory blessed as the light,
And perfect trust shall e'er enfold
The fact that life and death are right.

So, fragrant as the summer breeze,
That softly sweeps o'er flow'ry lea,
And sweet as bird-notes in the trees,
Shall thought of thee forever be.

S. H. W.

How I Spent a Rainy Afternoon.

It had been raining for a day or so. Dull and dreary it had been to me, sitting by the window watching the children go to school. I forgot it all looking in their bright faces, as they went tripping along so brightly, wholly unmindful of the rain; some were dressed richly and showily; others plainly—a veritable bouquet.

Just then my eye caught sight of four little sisters, the youngest barely five, the others like stairs, each one only a step higher. I knew there were four more in that family, and the father died the year before; the three eldest ones were working, although too young to earn much. I will not try to explain to you, my dear little friends, the reason why children are obliged to work so young—some of you will know, I fear, all too soon. Our dear Miss Wixon knows all about it, for she, too, livs in a manufacturing place where one can see children early in the morning hurrying sleepily along to their day's work, with their little faces looking pale, pinched, and haggard, working that a few may grow richer. It sometimes makes me wish there really might be a genuin old orthodox hell; but then, I guess it is better that there is none after all.

Well, I wondered what these little girls had to play with, and if I could not giv them something for their dolls perhaps. So I went through some boxes and drawers and picked out a lot of old silk, odd bits of ribbon and lace, and put them in a neat box; then I found some pieces of old jewelry, and that, too, I put in a box, and smiled to think how once I should hav decked out my best dollie; then I took my big box of buttons, only saving myself a very few. Next came the thread—I was generous with that—of all colors. The last thought was needles and pins.

So busy had I been that the afternoon had slipped away and I had hardly time to watch for their home-going. I called them in and told them I had some things for them to play with and, perhaps, keep millinery store with; their eyes showed their wonder and delight when they saw all those boxes. It did not take them long to get home, I assure you; and as I stood in the door gazing after them, all those dark clouds were breaking, so that I could see the blue sky smiling down on me, and all my dull and dreary feelings had floated along with the clouds.

The strangest thing about it is that those things were never used for anything but real live dolls, as the mother told me later that they were a great help to her.

Dear friends of all ages, try this recipe; I think you will vote it a good one.

Yours for Freethought and a free heart,

ETTA MARDEN.

Correspondence.

WALLA WALLA, WASH., June 7, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav never written to the Children's Corner before. I thought I would write a few lines. I like to hear my papa read the Children's Corner, and I like to look at the pictures. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time. I am eleven years old. Our school is out Friday; then I will start over to the Wallowa. I hav an auntie over there. I went out to visit a young girl, and on Sunday her father would not let me laugh. He said I should read the Bible. I was reading a book named Esop's Fables and he made me put it down. I guess I will close for this time.

Your friend, BERTHA MONTAGUE.

STAPLETON, S. I., June 16, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I like very much to read the letters. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER a number of years and thinks it very interesting. I was eleven years old the 12th of March, and my papa made me a present of "The Story Hour," which I am very fond of. I attend school every day. I am on the roll of honor each month and our names are put in the paper. And besides, I hav two music lessons a week. So my time is pretty well taken up in study, but still I manage to find time to read the Children's Corner. I hope some of THE TRUTH SEEKER girls will correspond with me. Hoping to find my letter in print, as it is my first attempt, I remain,

Your Liberal friend,

ELSIE L. SEIDEL.

P. S.—My address is 112 Broad street, Stapleton, S. I. Box 464.

[Your letters will be always welcome.—ED. C. C.]

PENACOOK, N. H., June 15, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav written this little piece, "How I Spent a Rainy Afternoon," hoping (should you see fit to giv it a place in the Corner) that it might help to make some of our band more thoughtful in giving. Old things laid away only to gather dust and mold, they are like old creeds, better be used up and done away with in their day and generation.

Do you ever travel in our lovely state? If so, could you not find time to visit us? Penacook is Ward 1 of Concord, six miles out, connected by electric cars and steam cars. As you said at the Paine meeting this spring, what a beautiful belief ours is to grow old in. It teaches us to know and appreciate this life we are living, rather than wholly ignore it and look beyond to another that we know nothing of and Mother Nature does not show us. That was a grand idea from a noble man, "One world at a time."

Sincerely thine, MRS. ETTA MARDEN.

[Some time we intend to see Penacook and Etta Marden. But this year we are booked for a journey overseas.—ED. C. C.]

HILL TOP, COL., June 4, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: I thought I would write a few lines from Colorado, as I do not remember having seen any letters from this state.

I am at present living with my parents on a ranch thirty miles south of Denver. We are in what is called the divide region, or rain-belt, and do not irrigate as in most parts of the state. We raise most kinds of vegetables, small grain, and corn to some extent. The weather is very changeable, as yesterday and to-day will show. Yesterday the temperature was above 80° in the shade, crops all up and growing, and about fifteen kinds of wild flowers in bloom on our ranch. To-day we had a regular winter blizzard for about seven hours. About four inches of snow fell, and the thermometer registered 32°. This, however, is a very unusual occurrence.

I am a member of the class of 1891 of the Denver high school, and being much interested in engineering, mining, and scientific work, I intend to commence a four years' course of study at the school of mines in this state next fall, if I can raise the necessary funds.

I hav collected from this vicinity many varieties of petrified wood, and being interested in minerals and natural curiosities, I would like to exchange specimens with readers of the Corner for minerals and curios of other states. I send you some specimens to-day.

I do not see how people that hav studied any of the sciences or the laws of nature just a little can believe them and the Bible too. They do not agree in anything.

Hoping this letter is not too long, I will close.

Yours, from a stanch young Liberal,

JAY W. STEVES.

[We are very much obliged for the lovely specimens. We see in our friend the elements of a scientific scholar, and hav no doubt he will attain high distinction in his chosen field. Best of all, he is a true Liberal, and his studies in science will only confirm his opinions. Attention of boys and girls is called to the matter of exchange of minerals and curiosities. We hope to hear from our new friend again and often.—ED. C. C.]

ROCHELLE, ILL., June 13, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND FRIENDS OF THE CORNER: After reading our interesting Corner this week, I am reminded that it is my turn to write, and will consider it an honor if I am permitted to join you.

What a grand old paper THE TRUTH SEEKER is, and what a noble and very successful effort it makes to obtain that for which it is seeking. And the Children's Corner, so ably edited by yourself, is doing great good by encouraging the young minds to think and also express their simple ideas, which will lead to greater efforts later in life.

How few are the years since an honest man would hav been hanged or burnt at the stake for writing articles such as now appear in its columns weekly and are distributed by thousands of copies every week. And I hav no reason to believe that this same progress will not continue twenty fold the coming century.

I hav been much pleased to see the steady increase in the membership of the Young Men's Freethought Temperance Society. The young ladies are joining very promptly, till now they comprise about half our number, and it is time the girls were represented in the name of the society. What's the matter with the boys? Are they afraid of the pledge? I hope not, but if such is the case, now is the time to be brave. Take the pledge and keep it. Keep it, not only because you hav promised to abide by it, but because it is right and moral, and your duty to your loving mother and sister, and for your own good and the world's in general.

Every young Freethinker in the country should be a member of our society. For particulars see the Freethinkers' Magazine, or write Mr. H. L. Green, of Buffalo, the editor, who is its founder, and has done noble work in its behalf.

We want good men and women in our ranks, so as to prove to the Christian that with good moral places of education and amusements we could disperse prisons and gallows without the aid of churches and preachers. Yours truly,

OTTO WETTSTEIN, JR.

[A very sensible letter, full of moral truths. Otto is the promising son of the Rochelle, Ill., jeweler, whose beautiful badgepin should be worn by every Freethinker in the world. And his new "Ingersoll souvenir" is said to be the handsomest of spoons and well worthy of the name we all delight to honor. Otto is not our most frequent correspondent, but every letter is a gem.—ED. C. C.]

John Goes Marketing.

Teacher (to class in arithmetic): "John goes marketing. He buys two and a quarter pounds of sugar at eleven cents a pound, two dozen eggs at sixteen cents a dozen, and a gallon and a half of milk at twenty cents a gallon. What does it all make?"

Smallest boy (hugging himself ecstatically): "Custard."

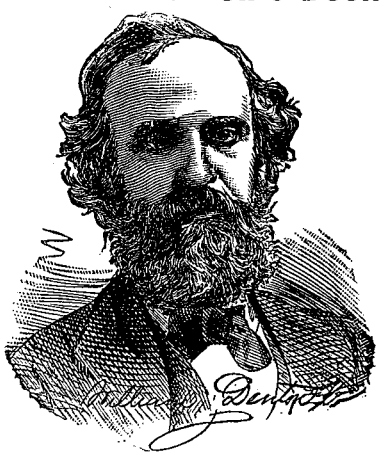
J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.



Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine [illegible].

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

CATHOLICS are aggrieved that "the man who insulted the pope is still a director of the Exposition."

THE Socialists will in a few weeks, if their factions can agree, nominate a presidential candidate.

THE building being erected for the Congressional library will be the largest in Washington except the Capitol.

THE Democratic convention nominated Cleveland for president, and Adlai E. Stevenson, of Bloomington, Ill., for vice-president.

THE People's party hopes to make a fine showing in the campaign, carrying Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Tennessee, South Carolina, and West Virginia. It may run Judge Gresham for president.

SANTA DE CABON, a young Mexican woman, recently laid claim to divine authority and as a sort of Joan of Arc headed a revolt of the Mayo Indians, who attacked the Cohol Sonora and murdered the mayor and several others.

THE courts hav been asked to prevent the marriage of Benj. Schoeneman and Louisa Schroeder, of Brooklyn, because one is a Jew and the other a Christian. The courts hav declined to interfere, but the parents bid fair to prevent the marriage by other means.

EX-PREMIER CRISPI of Italy says that though the large armament maintained by Italy entails oppressiv taxation, it must be continued, as that nation has besides the common dangers of other European powers an additional peril in its relations with the Vatican.

NEW YORK is in considerable alarm at small-pox and like diseases which hav passed the quarantine and refuse to be exterminated. This state of affairs is due to the incompetency of the health board, selected by the Tammany-Catholic party for political services.

REV. DR. DE COSTA says of the statue of the pagan goddess Diana on the New York Madison Square Garden: "Like the black flag of a pirate it shows whether the worshipers of Diana are going to rule the city. The next thing to expect is a statue to Bacchus and to Venus."

CATHOLICISM continues to prosecute its work of affiliating itself with republicanism, now that it sees that that form of government is to prevail. The Berlin Tageblatt, with the pope's approval, says that it is impossible that the Roman Catholic religion should remain chained to a corpse like the French monarchy.

AT the Indian village of Garden River, Mich., trouble may result from the determination of the chief medicin man to search the tent of a medicin woman for a medicin bag by which she is bewitching a young brave who jilted her daughter. The Canadian authorities hav been requested to make the search, but they hav declined. The Indians are taking sides, and may shed blood.

AN allegation by Rev. Dr. English that drunkenness prevails among the Mohammedans has been contradicted. Their religion forbids liquor-drinking. "It is shown by official reports," says one challenger of the clergyman's falsehood, "that the amount of these beverages consumed in Turkey is very small in comparison with the amount consumed in Christian countries."

AMONG the exhibits of the pope at the World's Fair will be "two geographical maps designed in the beginning of the sixteenth century, which hav been preserved at the Borgiano Museum of the Propaganda, one of them showing the first discovered islands and portions of the continent of America." There probably will be none of the maps of the century preceding, based on scriptural geography.

THE little Mohammedan congregation which has sprung up in Liverpool, Eng., is continually assaulted by Christian believers. The members, even the women, are stoned and kicked. A few days ago a knife was used on two English believers in Mohammedanism so that they are now in the hospital. The persecuted persons hav appealed to the Turkish embassador at London, who will complain to the sultan of Turkey.

FREDERICK REMINGTON, the artist, who with Poulteney Bigelow attempted a literary and artistic trip through Russian waters for Harper's Magazine, reports that their canoes and accouterments were seized and they were ordered to leave. He says: "The Russians don't care for the embassadors or ministers or sovereigns of any other country. In other countries they pick your pockets deferentially. In Russia they throw you on your back and go through you, and then laugh at you because you don't like it."

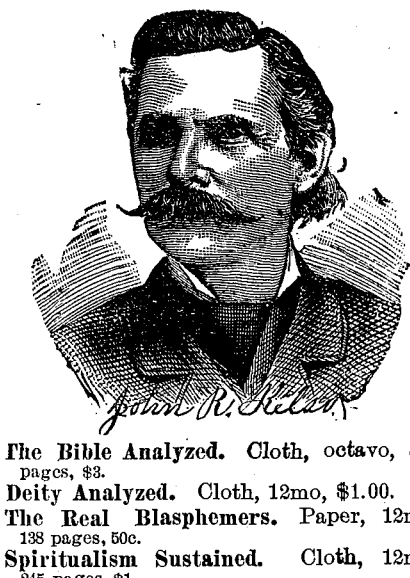
POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE
CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.
A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.
12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.



Answers to Christian Questions
And Arguments.
By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.
By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.
An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman
Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.
BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.
By BRONSON D. KEELER.
CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 133 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
8	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system; the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

INVALIDS recovering from the effects of Fevers, Dyspepsia or Wasting Diseases in any form will always find

ALE AND "Peptonized" BEEF

The ONLY TRUE TONIC combined with a perfect food known—and so recognized by the leading physicians throughout the country.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—E. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

CONQUEST by evil means or ways
Is shame more than defeat.
—Buddhistic Scriptures, Rock Inscriptions of Asoka.

THE best man is he who most tries to perfect himself, and the happiest man is he who most feels that he is perfecting himself.—Socrates.

THE truth is everything. If the truth is bad we must still take it. We cannot help ourselves. We cannot swap off the truth for a lie even if the lie is a good one. The lie will not stand.—S. P. Putnam.

HE who, when provoked to wrath,
Refrains therefrom,
And stands serene,
Unruffled both in face and spirit,
Hath won a triumph
Lasting as the soul.
—Buddhistic Scriptures, Udanavarga.

IT must be obvious that hell is a mere nullity both to believers and unbelievers. To unbelievers, because they regard it as a mere scarecrow of the priests to keep the ignorant in order; and to the believers, because they are exonerated from all its terrors through faith; for they are taught, and believe, that hell is to be the portion of the unbelievers, and unbelievers only.—Anon.

As far as the telescope reaches, and as far as man was able to espy the laws of the heavens—and this has been done to the extent of billions and trillions of miles—he has met everywhere with the same law, the same simple, mechanical principles, the same mathematical formula, and the same phenomena that are subject to computation. But never has been found the slightest trace of an arbitrary finger, ordaining the spheres of the heavens and appointing the courses of the earths, the suns, and the comets. "I hav searched through the heavens," said Lalande, the great astronomer, "and nowhere hav I found a trace of God."—Büchner.

OUR ethical text-books in the plainest terms teach the possibility of curing diseases by prayer and mystic ceremonies. "If any man is sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord." "And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." "And when he called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out and to heal all manner of diseases." Yet in at least forty-five of the fifty most civilized countries of Christendom the attempt to cure any serious diseases on that plan would be followed by a prompt indictment for quackery.—Prof. Felix Oswald.

IT will be admitted that the good man is kind, merciful, charitable, forgiving, and just. A church must be judged by the same standard. Has the church been merciful? Has it been "fruitful in the good things" of justice, charity, and forgivness? Can a good man, believing a good doctrin, persecute for opinion's sake? If the church imprisons a man for the expression of an honest opinion, is it not certain, either that the doctrin of the church is wrong, or that the church is bad? Both cannot be good. "Sanctity" without goodness is impossible. Thousands of "saints" hav been the most malicious of the human race. If the history of the world proves anything, it proves that the Catholic church was for many centuries the most merciless institution that ever existed among men. I cannot believe that the instruments of persecution were made and used by the eminently good; neither can I believe that honest people were imprisoned, tortured, and burnt at the stake by a church that was "inexhaustibly fruitful in all good things."—Ingersoll.

ALL through the Middle Ages these sufferings, this fever, this over-tension [of Christianity] lasted; and we moderns still feel in all our limbs the pain and weakness from them. Even those of us who are cured hav still to liv with a hospital-atmosphere all around us, and find ourselvs as wretched in it as a strong man among the sick. Some day or other, when humanity shall hav got quite well again, when the body and soul shall hav made their peace together, the factitious quarrel which Christianity has cooked up between them will appear something hardly comprehensible The fairer and happier generations, offspring of unfettered unions, that will rise up and bloom in the atmosphere of a religion of pleasure, will smile sadly when they think of their poor ancestors, whose life was passed in melancholy abstinence from the joys of this beautiful earth, and who faded away into specters, from the mortal compression which they put upon the warm and glowing emotions of sense. Yes, with assurance I say it, our descendants will be fairer and happier than we are.—Heine.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c. cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.: clo., 80 cts.

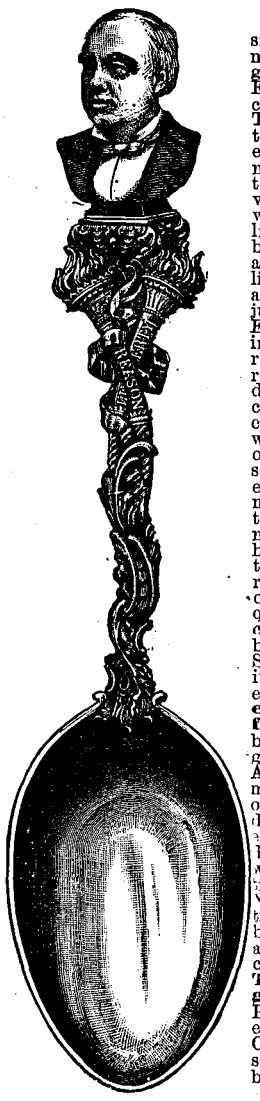
ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

The



Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR

THE KING OF SPOONS

IN HONOR OF

THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3 Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

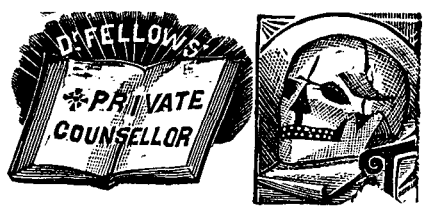
WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE MYSTERIES OF INSPIRATION.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WANTED.

An aged Freethinker wants a home in a family of the same belief respecting theology. Prefers a farm or country home where expenses would be small. Address,

"GOOD HOME," TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 50 cents

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense.

This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

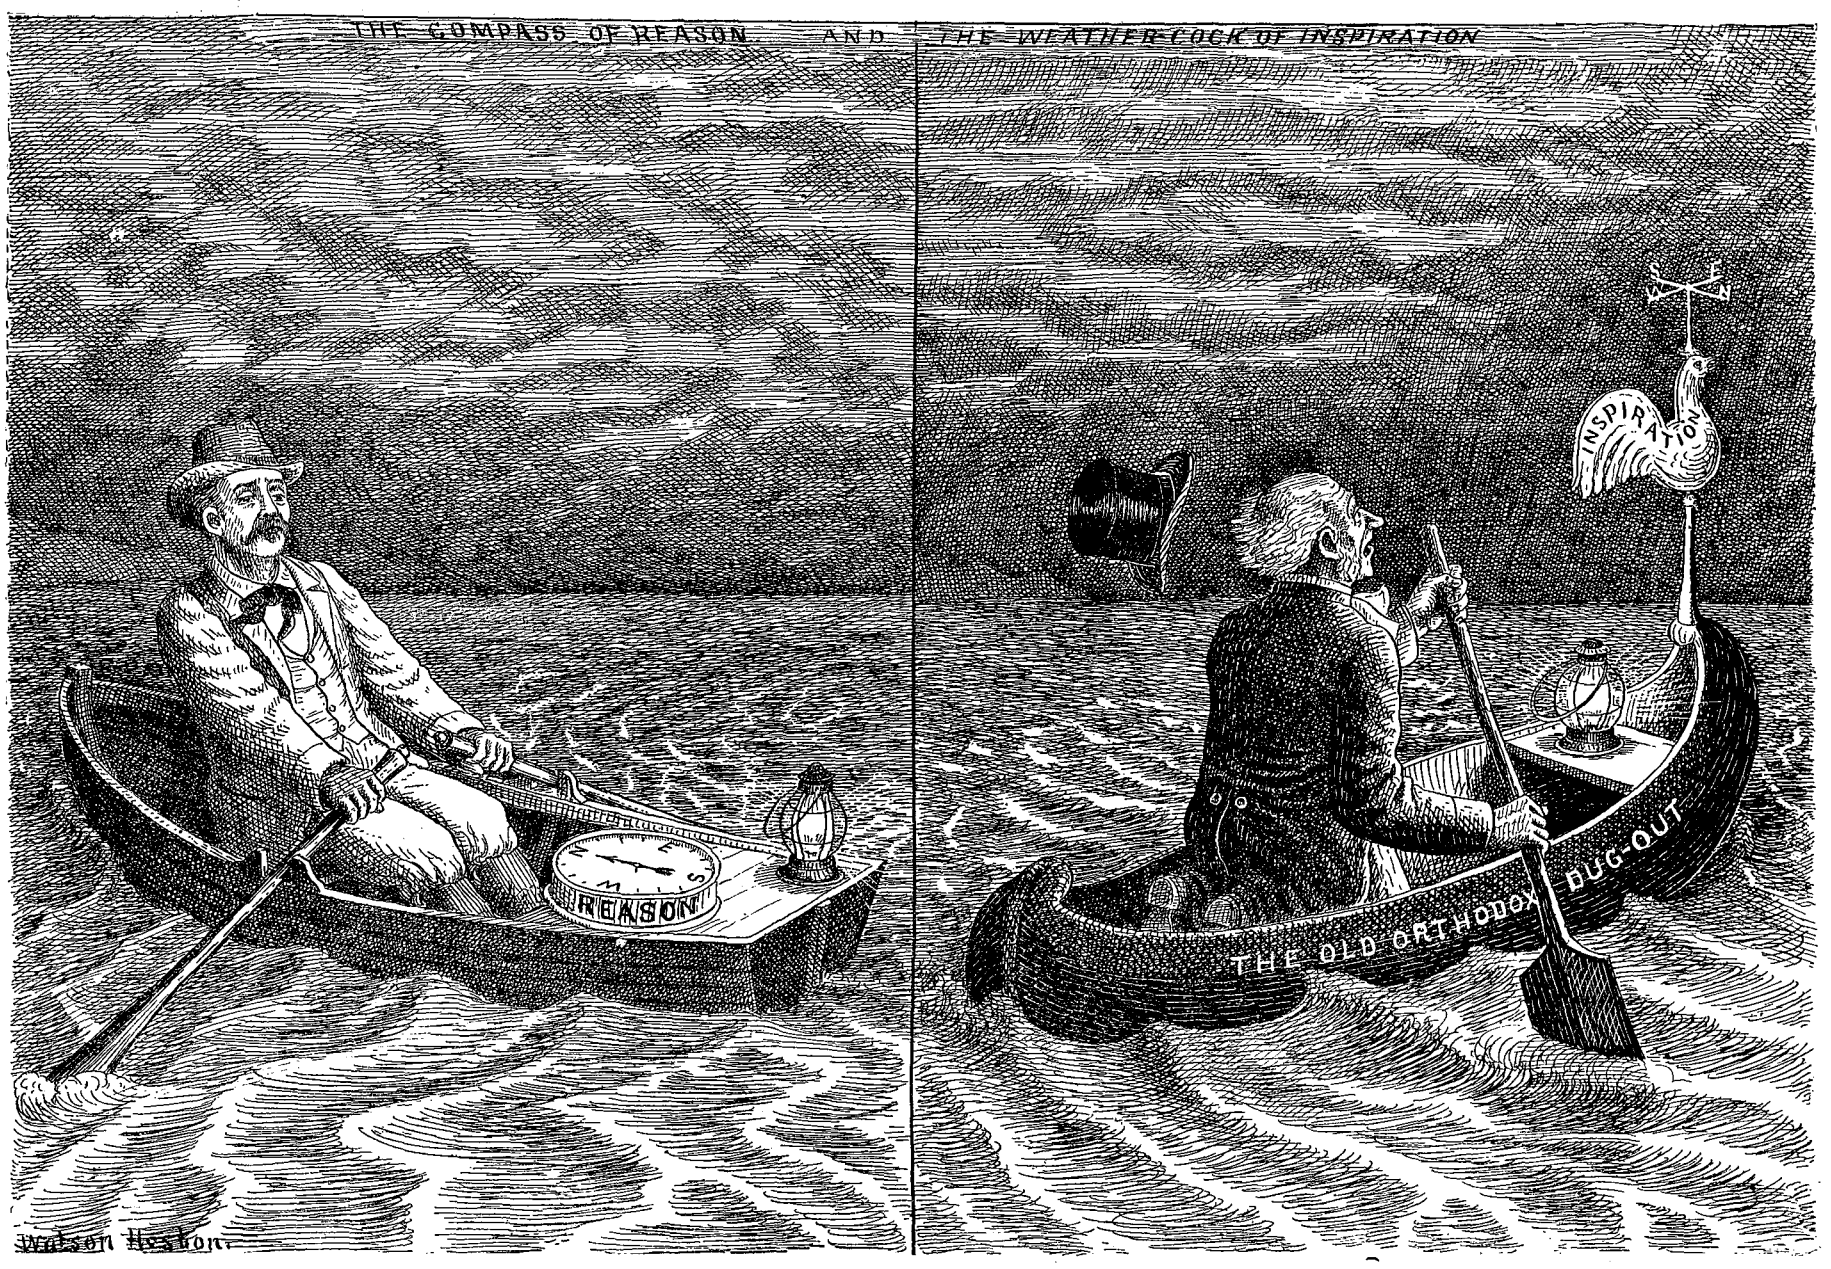
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 28. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 9, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

TWO GUIDES—WHY THE CHRISTIAN IS IN DANGER OF BEING "ETERNALLY LOST."

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 899pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins.
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the anthor in Volnme I, and each volnme containing forty to fifty illnstrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the varions countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF
ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents, Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 28. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 9, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE. NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 9, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Urgent Work to Do.

The Senate committee has favorably reported the Palmer bill allowing about five and a half millions of dollars to the World's Fair, provided the Fair is closed on Sundays. Every reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER should at once write to the Senators from his state and protest vigorously and earnestly against this Sunday-closing amendment to the bill.

The following are the names of the Senators: Alabama—John T. Morgan, James L. Pugh; Arkansas—James H. Berry, James K. Jones; California—Charles N. Felton, Leland Stanford; Colorado—Edward O. Wolcott, Henry M. Teller; Connecticut—Joseph R. Hawley, Orville H. Platt; Delaware — George Gray, Anthony Higgins; Florida—Samuel Pasco, Wilkinson Call; Georgia—Alfred H. Colquitt, John B. Gordon; Idaho—George L. Shoup, Frederick T. Dubois; Illinois—Shelby M. Cullom, John M. Palmer; Indiana—David Tarpie, Daniel W. Voorhees; Iowa—James F. Wilson, William B. Allison; Kansas — Bishop W. Perkins, William A. Peffer; Kentucky—John G. Carlisle, Joseph C. S. Blackburn; Louisiana—Randall L. Gibson, Edward D. White; Maine—Eugene Hale, William P. Frye; Maryland—Arthur P. Gorman, Charles H. Gibson; Massachusetts—Henry L. Dawes, George F. Hoar; Michigan—Francis B. Stockbridge, James McMillan; Minnesota—Cushman K. Davis; Wm. D. Washburn; Mississippi—James Z. George, Edward C. Wallthall; Missouri—Francis M. Cockrell, George C. Vest; Montana—Wilbur F. Sanders, Thomas C. Powers; Nebraska—Algernon S. Paddock, Charles F. Manderson; Nevada—William M. Stewart, John P. Jones; New Hampshire—William E. Chandler, Jacob H. Gallinger; New Jersey—Rufus Blodgett, John R. McPherson; New York—Frank Hiscock, David B. Hill; North Carolina—Matt. W. Ransom, Zebulon B. Vance; North Dakota—Lyman R. Casey, Henry C. Hansborough; Ohio—John Sherman, Calvin S. Brice; Oregon—Joseph N. Dolph, John H. Mitchell; Pennsylvania—Matthew S. Quay, J. Donald Cameron; Rhode Island—Nelson W. Aldrich, Nathan F. Dixon; South Carolina—Matthew C. Butler, John L. M. Irby; South Dakota—Richard F. Pettigrew, James H. Kyle; Tennessee—William B. Bate, Isham G. Harris; Texas—Horace Chilton, Richard Coke; Vermont—Redfield Proctor, Justin S. Morrill; Virginia—John W. Daniel, John S. Barbour; Washington—John B. Allen, Watson C. Squire; West Virginia—Charles J. Faulkner, John E. Kenna; Wisconsin—Philetus Sawyer, William F. Vilas; Wyoming—Francis E. Warren, Joseph M. Carey.

The address of these spokesmen for the people is, "Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C."

Something About Thomas Paine.

When S. P. Putnam was visiting Dr. Foote at his Larchmont residence the doctor hitched up his horses and took the Secular pilgrim over to Paine's house in New Rochelle. Of the visit Mr. Putnam wrote: "We enter the little room where he wrote, a room with one window, through which crashed the bullet of the enemy, as the legend says, but which reached not the heart of the illustrious patriot."

This attempted assassination of Paine is not a legend, as Mr. J. W. Grece, of Dresden, Ont., shows by forwarding an account of the affair written by Paine himself in a letter to "Mr. William Carver, Horse-shoe smith, — Cedar Creek, near Lovett's Tavern, N. York." The letter runs:

"N. ROCHELLE, Jan. 16, '05.

"ESTEEMED FRIEND: I hav received two letters from you, one giving an account of your taking Thomas to Mr. Foster—the other dated Jan. 12. I did not answer the first because I hoped to see you the next Saturday or the Saturday after. What you heard of a gun being fired into the room is true. Robert and Rachael were both gone out to keep Christmas eve, and about eight o'clock at night the gun were fired. I run immediately out, one of Mr. Dean's boys with me, but the person that had done it was gone. I directly suspected who it was, and I halloed to him by name, that he was discovered. I did this that the party who fired might know I was on the watch. I cannot find any ball, but whatever the gun was charged with passed through about three or four inches below the window, making a hole large enough to a finger to go through. The muzzle must hav been very near, as the place is black with the powder, and the glass of the window is shattered to pieces. Mr. Shute, after examining the place and getting what information could be had, issued a warrant to take up Derrick, and after examination committed him. He is now on bail (five hundred dollars) to take his trial at the supreme court in May next. Derrick owes me forty-eight dollars, for which I hav his note, and he was to work it out in making stone fence, which he has not even began; and besides this I hav had to pay forty-two pounds eleven shillings for which I had passed my word for him at Mr. Pilson's store. Derrick borrowed the gun under pretence of giving Mrs. Bayeaux a Christmas gun. He was with Purdy about two hours before the attack on the house was made, and he came from thence to Dean's half drunk, and brought with him a bottle of rum, and Purdy was with him when he was taken up.

"I am exceedingly well in health and shall always be glad to see you. Hubbs tells me that your horse is getting better. Mr. Shute sent for the horse and took him when the first snow came, but he leaped the fences and came back. Hubbs says there is a bone broke. If this be the case I suppose he has broke or crushed it in leaping a fence when he was lame on the other hind leg, and hung with his hind legs in the fence. I am glad to hear what you tell me of Thomas. He shall not want for anything that be necessary if he be a good boy, for he has no friend but me. You hav not given me any account about the meeting-house. Remember me to our friends.

"Yours in friendship, THOMAS PAINE."

The original of this letter is in the possession of James Clair Grece, of Redhill, Surrey, England, who is a member of the Scientific Association which met at Montreal in August, 1884. He received it from his uncle, Daniel Constable, also an uncle of the Constables of the firm of Arnold, Constable & Co., now on Broadway in this city. In sending a copy of this letter to his cousin in Dresden, Ont., Mr. Clair J. Grece writes some reminiscences of Paine which will be of interest to Liberals, and also some conjectures as to the identity of William Carver, to whom the letter was written:

"Well, my dear cousin John I told you upon the occasion of most agreeable meeting that I was the possessor of some relics of Thomas Paine, the literary author of the American revolution. I possess his snuff-box and also a letter, of which I inclose you the promised copy. I am not quite certain who William Carver was, but the conjecture has some probability that he was the father of Dr. Carver, who was the originator of the Pacific railway. I know that my uncles were acquainted with Dr. Carver, and I am in possession of some letters of his, as well as of a pamphlet published in 1846, in which the feasibility of that undertaking were eloquently advocated. The gold of California had not then been discovered, and probably without the accession of that powerful stimulus, Dr. Carver might even up to this time hav continued to be looked upon as a half-crazy enthusiast. Possibly it was through Dr. Carver that my uncle came into possession of Thomas Paine's letter. I must now tell you how my uncle, Daniel Constable, came into contact with Thomas Paine. Paine was of Quaker stock, and though, at an early stage of his life, disowned by that society, on account of his having married out of it, he continued to be loosely attached to it. About the year 1775, he was an exciseman at Lewes in Sussex, when he wrote a pamphlet, a bold thing in those days of rotten boroughs, advocating the claims of excisemen to higher pay. Benjamin Franklin was in England about the same time and the community of grievance brought these men together, and Paine was induced to emigrate to America. At Lewes, there was living, as there still is, a Quaker family of the name of Rickman, and with a junior member of this family, Thomas Rickman, Paine formed an acquaintance. Thomas Rickman likewise was expelled from the society for the offense of marrying out of it. There is no truer adage than this 'Birds of a feather flock together.' Thomas Rickman assumed, rather conceitedly, the name of Clio, set up a bookseller's business at No. 7 Upper Marylebone street, London, and became one of the venders of the Radical political literature of the day. When Paine came to England in the year 1787 the acquaintance between Paine and Rickman became extended, and Rickman spent much time in Paine's society down to the time of Paine's departure from England for the last time, in 1792. Well, my uncle Daniel Constable was from about 1797 engaged in the linen-draper's shop of a Quaker at Brighton, eight miles from Lewes, where Rickman was an occasional visitor, and he imbued my uncle with his Radical principles, as well as with an admiration for the author of The Rights of Man. A close acquaintance gradually matured itself between Rickman and my uncle, so that when my uncles Daniel and William in the year 1806, started for America, they were furnished by Rickman with an introduction to Paine. They kept a journal of their travel, from which I will quote the following extracts: The diary is in my possession.

"1806. July 1. Mr. Segar at the Globe offered to send for Mr. Paine who lived only a few doors off. He seemed a true Paineite.

"3rd Thursday. . . . opening our packages and dressing took our time till dinner, after which Crespin went to see his friend and William [his brother] and I went to see Thomas Paine. When we first called he was taking a nap. Thence on and delivered C. Rickman's letter &c back to Mr. Paine's at five o'clock, sat about an hour with him. He had never seen Clio's likeness or poems. We promised to show him. Home to tea about six. I meant to hav had T. Paine in a carriage with me to-morrow and went to inquire out for one. The price was one dollar per hour, but when I proposed it to Thomas Paine, he declined it on account of his health.

"Friday the 4th. Fine clear day. The annual festival of independence. . . . In the fore part of the day I had the honor of walking with T. Paine along the Broadway. The day finished peaceably and we saw no scenes of quarrelling or drunkenness. . . .

"October 30 Thursday. . . . In crossing the Hudson we got wet through. It was a very cold rain. After cleaning myself I waited on Colonel Swartout whom I found a fine pleasant gentleman, after which I called to see T. Paine, who was walking about Carver's shop.

"Nov. 1 Saturday. . . . Mr. B. West* came and drank tea with me. Changed snuff-boxes with T. Paine at his lodgings. The old philosopher in bed at 4 o'clock

* This may be Benjamin West the historical painter, but I cannot aver this. C. S. G.

afternoon. Seems as talkativ and well as when we saw him in the summer.

"6th February 1808, Saturday. . . . Took a final leave of Mr. Thomas Paine. Had his compliments written on a slip of paper for several of his friends.

"Clio Rickman remained upon intimate terms with my uncles till his death about 1833, and through them he became introduced to my father. He was a guest at Chart Lodge about 1822, during our grandfather's absence in Canada, and he wrote some verses upon the views from Chart Lodge, of which, upon another occasion, I will send you a copy. He was a poetaster rather than a poet. I hav a collection of his occasional pieces, published by subscription. Among the subscribers figure such names as Charles James Fox, Thomas Jefferson, Dr. Priestly, and in short nearly every name of distinction at that time, for Clio Rickman had a wide acquaintance, was an agreeable companion, brimful of anecdote, and dined much abroad. It is sad to say that his latter years were clouded with penury, for he was a bad financier, and his principles were not popular. Now perhaps he would hav thriven better in the world than in that age of persecution.

"Yours very truly, CLAIR J. GRECE.

"Redhill, Surrey, England, 18th Jan., 1885."

Moses Harman in the Penitentiary.

A queer mixture of law and injustice has been made in the case of Mr. Harman, and that much-persecuted man has been landed in the penitentiary as the result.

It will be remembered that after Mr. Harman was convicted and sentenced, he sued out a writ of habeas corpus returnable before the United States circuit court. Upon giving bonds that he would prosecute the writ he was liberated. The decision of Judge Caldwell, herewith reprinted from Lucifer, states the matter clearly:

"In the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas.

"Moses Harman vs. United States.

"In error to the United States district court for the district of Kansas.

"Mr. David Overmeyer for plaintiff in error. Caldwell judge.

"On the 9th day of April, 1888, the plaintiff in error was indicted in the district court, for depositing on the 18th of June, 1886, in a postoffice for mailing an obscene paper in violation of Section 3,893 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by act of Congress, approved the 12th of July, 1876, Chapter 186, 19 United States Statute 90. He was tried before a jury, found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned in the Kansas state penitentiary for five years and that he pay a fine of three hundred dollars, and thereupon the defendant sued out this writ in error under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1879, chapter 176, 20 U. S. statute, 354.

"The chief contention of learned counsel for plaintiff in error is, that the act of Congress on which the indictment is founded, 'contravenes the first amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which provides among other things that the freedom of the press shall not be abridged, and is therefore unconstitutional and void.' If authority can ever silence contention, the constitutionality of this act of Congress is no longer open to discussion. Ex parte Jackson 86 U S. 727; Ex parte Rapeir 144 U. S.

"There is, however, a fatal error in this case on the face of the record. The act of Congress provides that persons convicted of its violation 'shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for each and every offense be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars or imprisoned at hard labor not less than one year nor more than ten years or both at the discretion of the Court.' It will be observed that where the punishment or any part of it is imprisonment it must be 'at hard labor.' The plaintiff in error was sentenced to be 'imprisoned in the Kansas state penitentiary for five years,' and hard labor is not made part of the punishment, as the statute requires shall be done, where imprisonment forms any part of the sentence. When the statute makes hard labor a part of the punishment, it is imperativ upon the Court to include that in its sentence.

"In the courts of the U. S. the rule is that a judgment in a criminal case must conform strictly to the statute, and that a variation from its provisions, either in the character or extent of the punishment inflicted, renders the judgment absolutely void.

"A different rule prevails in some of the states; but the rule on this subject prevailing in a state whether by statute or judicial decision, has no force in the federal courts administering criminal justice under the constitution and laws of the United States. In those courts the doctrin of the Supreme Court of the U. S. on this subject is of paramount authority. It seems probable that if the plaintiff in error had sought relief from the void sentence after suffering a part of the punishment by habeas corpus his discharge would hav been absolute and final, and he could not hav been again sentenced or tried for the offense. Ex parte Lange 18 Wal. 163.

"Assuming, but not deciding, that his discharge on habeas corpus, after suffering a part of the punishment under the void sentence would hav precluded the imposition of a legal sentence upon the verdict of guilty, or another trial for the same offense, it does not follow that a reversal of such a sentence on a writ of error sued out by the defendant himself is attended with any such consequences; but this aspect of the case has not been argued and no opinion has been expressed upon it. If the defendant conceives that a legal sentence cannot now be imposed upon him on the existing verdict of guilty, and that he cannot be tried again for the same offense, he can raise these questions in the trial court.

"The judgment of the district court of the United States for the district of Kansas is reversed and the cause remanded to that Court with instructions to proceed therein according to law."

When this decision was handed down, Mr. Ady, prosecutor, gave Mr. Harman to understand that nothing further would be done in the matter till the September term of court, when a new trial might be had. He was naturally not a little surprised when on June 21st a deputy marshal informed him that he had an order from Judge Caldwell for his immediate imprisonment to serve the sentence of one year, imposed upon him in 1890 by Judge Phillips, from which conviction an appeal was likewise had to Judge Caldwell's court. The following is the order of commitment:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, } SS.
DISTRICT OF KANSAS. }

"At a term of the circuit court of the United States of America, for the district of Kansas, begun and held at the city of Leavenworth, in said district, on Monday, the 6th day of June, 1892, proceedings were had, and appear of record, in words and figures following, to wit:

"Monday, June 13, 1892.

"Moses Harman, 2768, vs. the United States.

"The writ of error in this cause came on for hearing, the plaintiff in error, Moses Harman, appearing by David Overmyer, his attorney, and the United States by J. W. Ady, district attorney, and the court having heard the argument of counsel, and being now well and sufficiently advised of the [matter] in the premises, doth order, consider, and adjudge that the judgment of the United States district court for the district of Kansas in this case be, and the same is hereby in all things confirmed.

"It is therefore ordered, considered, and adjudged, that the said Moses Harman, the defendent below, be adjudged guilty on the first, second, and fourth counts of the indictment herein, and that he be imprisoned in the Kansas state penitentiary for four months on each of said counts, at hard labor.

"It is further ordered that the marshal deliver or cause to be delivered the body of the said Moses Harman to the warden of said penitentiary within ten days from this date, in execution of this sentence. Dated June 11, A.D. 1892. HENRY C. CALDWELL,
"Circuit Judge."

On the afternoon of June 21st Mr. Harman was accordingly escorted to the penitentiary at Lansing, Kansas. The Topeka Capital, after reciting the facts, says: "Harman said yesterday to a representativ of this paper: 'The judges who hav decided me guilty and sentenced me hav, in my opinion, taken a big responsibility upon themselvs. Posterity will reverse their decisions. But this sentence will hav no effect whatever upon my future. I shall take up the work again when I am out. The reforms I teach are the most important of any, and the coming generations will bear me out. In my absence Mrs. Lois Waisbrooker, of Antoic, Cal., will conduct Lucifer.' Harman is now sixty-one years old and has published Lucifer twelve years. He has a good face, and appears to be in dead earnest in his teaching. When talking yesterday tears would frequently fill his eyes. He has once before served a term in the penitentiary."

To this statement, which he reprints, Mr. Harman makes no exception except a denial that his eyes filled with tears. He then concludes: "Hoping to hav a chance to send a few lines before this issue of the paper goes to press I close now by earnestly asking all who feel an interest in Lucifer's work to uphold and strengthen the hands of Mrs. Waisbrooker, who kindly consents to take my place at the helm of Lucifer during my enforced vacation. She is needing a vacation herself (of another sort) and was getting ready for a trip to Colorado when this new complication was sprung upon us. Though weak in body I verily believe that she is abundantly able in every respect to fill the position to the satisfaction of all concerned, provided she gets the necessary financial aid and sympathetic coöperation. Believing that all will be well, I once more bid the Lucifer co-workers a hopeful and fraternal good-bye."

At this point Mrs. Waisbrooker takes up the story, as Mr. Harman was hurried away before he could complete his statement of his work as he wished. She writes: "I want to speak more particularly about the missionary work, sowing seeds for future harvests. There hav been more letters received within the last few weeks expressing thanks for sample copies than at any previous period of the more than eleven months that I hav been in the office. Some of them contain small orders for books, and some a three or six months' subscription, but the most of the writers either express regret that they cannot subscribe, or say they will do so soon, etc. I never saw a man more entirely devoted to the work of evolving a higher, purer sex-morality than now prevails than M. Harman is, and whenever people show a desire to understand this question of sex—whenever he feels that good can be done, the fact of lack of money does not deprive the party of the reading-matter desired, particularly as it regards copies of Lucifer or such of Lucifer's publications as he has in large supply. The work thus done will make coming generations wiser and better, and surely, no intelligent Freethinker of any name will regret that the money has been thus expended, but will continue to contribute for future work of the kind."

The case, legally, is pretty much of a muddle, for Mr. Harman won the appeal on the first case and lost on another. The decision to commit him seems to hav been conceived suddenly, and contrary to the prosecutor's assurances. His own lawyers were also taken by surprise, and scarcely know what to do in the matter. But one thing stands out clearly enough: Mr. Harman is in the penitentiary, unjustly sentenced by a court which has no more rightful jurisdiction over his alleged offense than it has over a man accused of violating a municipal ordinance. The espionage and censorship of the press established by the Comstock statute is thoroughly despicable and infamously tyrannical. The injustice in this case is very apparent, for the first conviction, on what is known as the Markland letter, carried with it a sentence of five years; the second, on what is known as the O'Neill letter, most brutally vulgar, carried a sentence of only one year. The Markland epistle was plain but not obnoxious to decency; the O'Neill letter, written by an irresponsible and very coarse doctor of this city, should never hav been printed. It was probably this discrepancy and difference in the merits of the cases which led the judge to find a technicality on which to reverse the result of the first trial and confirm the second because, to him, the offense was heinous under the law. But Mr. Harman goes to his doom with unfaltering step, the victim of the religious conspirators who framed and procured the enactment of the Comstock statute—a piece of legislation which converts our republic into a despotism, almost completely destroying the freedom of the press and mails.

Mr. Harman's address now is the penitentiary, Lansing, Kansas. Letters from his friends will no doubt cheer him greatly, but those who write him should be careful not to use vituperativ or violent language, as such only makes his conditions worse.

Of Helen Gardener's new lecture, "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle," the Investigator says: "It is an emancipation proclamation for women and children. A severe, yet just arraignment of the pulpit for holding the pew and the cradle in subjection. Every sentence in it was wrought out of a woman's love of freedom and a woman's love of her race, and this pamphlet ought to be sent into every home in the land and be read by every mother therein." The pamphlet can be had at this office for ten cents.

The director-general of the World's Fair made a statement recently that in his opinion the officials hav never contemplated that the machinery should be in operation, the manufacturing processes carried on, and the regular force of employees kept busy on Sundays, but that there should be a suspension of work and no occasion for the services of others than watchmen and guards. This is a whipping of the devil around the stump quite worthy of politicians, who are quite ready to say good Lord, good devil, so long as they get the office or the cash. Much more sensible are the views of the Rev. Dr. Gifford, of Chicago, who has made considerable stir by advocating the opening of the Fair on Sunday, with reduced rates of admission, for the especial benefit of laborers who cannot spare either the time or money on week-days. We trust that all Liberals will spare no effort to get signatures to the petition printed in THE TRUTH SEEKER and see that they are promptly and properly forwarded.

E. H. Heywood found time to call on his New York friends a few days since. His long incarceration has left him very weak, but he does not intend, he says, to afford his enemies the pleasure of saying they hav killed him. In prison he was not compelled to wear close-cropped hair, but he voluntarily permitted the prison barber to remove his beard. The chaplain of the prison was his worst enemy there, but the other officials treated him with as much kindness as the stupid rules permit. Prisoners there are not allowed to receive newspapers, but the prison library is well supplied with good books, though some of them, he thinks, are more obnoxious to the law under which he was indicted than the Word. Through his friends, too, he received THE TRUTH SEEKER regularly, and he appreciated it highly, as did the other prisoners, to whom he passed it, and who said that after all the religious stuff forced upon them by the chaplain it was very refreshing. They particularly liked the pictures. The postmaster, Deacon Gregory, has not yet atoned for his trapping of Mr. Heywood, but he says his orders came direct from Wanamaker to the effect that no decision on matter published by Mr. Heywood was to be given till it was deposited for mailing—which act constitutes the offense. Mr. Heywood is now engaged in repairing his fortunes, and intends to publish his paper again soon. He is thoroughly devoted to the labor cause, and to maintaining the right of publication of his physiological notions. He evidently thinks that some of his persecution is due to his refusal to join with the Republicans of the East, who would hav given him honor and office if he would agree to let reform alone and go in with them. Of all the parties concerned in his prosecution and conviction he is, he says, the only one who has not broken the law, for he never mailed the issues of the Word on which he was convicted, but only left them for an official decision as to their mailability. Notwithstanding his physical weakness and much persecution, he is full of courage and determination to continue to teach what he conceives to be the most important things for people to know.

In the West.

News and Notes.

On Sunday afternoon, June 19th, I lecture at Murray. The electric cars run to this place from Salt Lake City, and the ride is quite charming, alongside the green fields and between the shining mountains. The distance is eight miles, and probably one day the whole length will be filled up with elegant dwellings. As it is now, Murray is becoming a suburb of Salt Lake, being so easy of access.

The hall in which I lecture is about full, and Murray is on the gain for Freethought. Mr. Andrew Cahoon is our efficient leader here, assisted by Harry Haines, John Cahoon, and the McMillans, etc. I always enjoy the sociable atmosphere of Murray. Mr. and Mrs. Haines throw open their hospitable mansion to friends from far and near—and along with the lecture there is a neighborhood life. Liberals from Salt Lake, with those of Murray, help along the cheer of the occasion. Mr. Cahoon, formerly bishop in the Mormon church—for forty years a member of it—gave the opening word for Liberalism, and everything was successful.

In the evening I lecture to a large audience in Salt Lake Theater. Arthur Uvedale and Professor Hill assist with music. The attendance was considerably greater than on the first evening, and the welcome was all that I could expect. It was generous and enthusiastic. Salt Lake has been one of the brightest points along the route.

I must thank Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Mason for their cordial support. These friends are always ready to advance Freethought, although they join with the Unitarian church also in its moral and sociable work. Dr. and Mrs. Chapman never fail to lend a hand. Mr. Alexander Forbes is an unflinching comrade through all fortunes. He has had many a battle to fight for liberty, and is at the front still. President Jones of the Spiritualistic Society shall receive my blessing, for he adjourned his own meetings to attend my lectures. The Ames brothers, whom I formerly met in Denver, and many others, hav given efficient aid. These are the most successful lectures I hav ever delivered in Utah, and it givs me great hope for the future.

I must thank the Rev. Mr. Utter for kindness and courtesy. It is seldom that a "Rev." is so manly, and so broad in fellowship. I do not like to call him "Rev.," but I suppose it is a matter of conventional necessity. I had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Utter on Sunday morning on "Certainties and Uncertainties." It was a radical Freethought discourse. There is no question but that we all are in the same camp. On the main issue we are heterodox, although with different points of view. I do not see how Mr. Utter can pray, but he does, and very successfully. So far as the audience is concerned, the prayer means something. It is a kind of essay on the benefits of meditation. But what the prayer can mean to anything outside of the people who listen to it is beyond my comprehension. The Unitarians had a conference here awhile ago, and invited all sorts—Christians and Antichristians—to speak their mind in a good-natured way. I should hav liked to offer my view of Unitarianism. I should like to meet a Unitarian in debate, just for the fun of it. But after all, it is best, perhaps, to recognize that we are together in our fight against orthodoxy, and that orthodoxy is the supreme foe of the human race; and he who hits orthodoxy in any way is in the army of progress.

On Monday morning I leave the City of the Saints. I leave the beautiful valley, the shining lake, the glittering mountains, and speed on to the sagebrush of the mighty West. Through the alkali plains we pass, and white and dazzling they stretch away, a splendid desolation. The endless plains roll round one like a sea. The mountains are like enormous billows. All day long, all night long, I travel.

Tuesday morning we wind into Washoe valley—and a lovely scene opens on the view. Beautiful farms appear shining against the bare gray hills; orchards, vineyards, groves, and gardens decorate the ample space. In the midst of these attractiv pictures the city of Reno appears, one of the handsomest and brightest places I hav visited. This was the first time I had journeyed this way, and I was surprised to find such a beautiful city, and also to find such a splendid Liberal element. I was met at the station by Judge Young, John Sunderland, and Peter Gilson; and I was speedily made acquainted with other Freethought comrades. Mr. Sunderland took me at once to his house and I was made welcome. Arrangements were made for a lecture that evening. Friends took hold with vim, so that a large audience was present, and it was intelligent and responsiv. I hav not been in a more favorable atmosphere than Reno. The best people here are Liberals and are not afraid to speak their honest thought. Mr. Sunderland is one of the largest merchants in the place—doing an extensiv business East and West—but his radical opinions are not held in reserve, and he is popular withal. This is the general spirit of Reno. It has the mountain freedom.

I hav an appointment at Carson on Wednesday evening, and at Virginia City Thursday evening. This latter appointment interferes with my appointments in Inyo county, Cal., Bishop Creek, and Round Valley, for the railroad train in that country only runs tri-weekly, and it is impossible to make connections. I am in a quandary what to do, not being able to be in two places at the same time. It is a great disappointment not to meet my appointments in Inyo county, where John E. Jones and other Liberal friends are waiting to receive me. But I cannot afford to hire an extra train, and as I cannot drive it or walk it, it being two hundred miles away, I must submit to an iron fate. It was beyond any of my calculations that any railroad in this country ran trains only three times a week. I hav learned something new, and shall profit by it.

In view of my decision to fill appointments at Virginia City the Reno Liberals arrange for a lecture Sunday night, and I expect a crowded house.

I am disappointed with Carson. I do not find a single Liberal here, except Mr. R. R. Parkinson, of the Carson Tribune. He is ready to do his share, having given Liberal lectures himself in his extensiv travels over the Pacific coast. It is uphill work to do anything at Carson. I should hav to hire the hall myself, and the outlook was not very promising that anybody would come. Carson has a very quiet aspect. There is scarcely any movement; only a few people are on the street; the mint is pervaded with a solemn stillness, and so is the elegant post-office, except when the mail arrives. Carson, however, is a pretty place. If one did not hav to earn money he might liv here very comfortably. There is a Rip Van Winkle look in the hazy atmosphere about. I guess the town has gone to sleep and is dreaming. I almost imagin myself in a quaint New England village. There is a delicious monotony in the objects that strike the view, and one feels as if there was no use in doing anything. The world jogs on, and you must jog on with it. That is my impression of Carson. There is no snap to it. I made no effort to giv any lectures here. I felt a foreordination of defeat in the very stillness of the summer air, and the quiet and affable motions of its people. For a stranger desiring simply to look on, Carson is a happy spot; but for a reformer—well, he must simply move on.

Well, I moved on to Virginia City. This is a wonderful city, perched up among the hills and overlooking a marvelous extent of country. It seems something like a balloon flight as you go sweeping around the hills in horseshoe fashion, climbing seven and eight thousand feet high. You look far below and far away upon a marvelous panorama.

Virginia City has a population of about seven thousand. It has been as high as twenty and twenty-five thousand. Sidewalks hav been so crowded that if one wanted to stop and talk with a friend he would hav to get upon the open street. That glory is now departed. The Comstock lode is not the magnet it once was, although its wealth and the wealth of other mines in the vicinity are by no means exhausted. Within a stone's throw of where I write over $300,000,000 worth of gold has been taken out. Alas, to be so near and yet so far from all that gleaming bullion.

Virginia City still presents a lively appearance. Its streets are somewhat crowded, or rather street, for it has really but one long street, which stretches abreast the hills. The dwelling-houses are perched, and hung, and stuck upon the sides of the precipitous incline. Some are quite stately. The majority are little one-story houses. Over beyond Virginia is Gold Hill. Towering above is Mount Davidson, upon whose peak a flagstaff glitters. From this hight a magnificent view extends—rolling massiv hills, blue and white, sinking and rising, with dark azure chasms, in a circuit of over a hundred miles. It is a continual exhilaration to look round about Virginia City. I was never in a place where one could see so much at one time. There is a superabundance of scenery.

I hav had a peculiar experience at Virginia City in the Liberal work. I never struck it quite so bad. It is a forlorn hope. I can only find a few Liberals. There may be more, but, like the gold, they do not put in an appearance rapidly. The first lecture was advertised, and I supposed, of course, there would be enough present to begin with, but it was not so. Only a baker's dozen were there. I adjourned until Saturday evening hoping that more advertisment will bring out a larger number. I am now living on faith, but the prospect is not good. Virginia City is a dismal failure in regard to Freethought lectures up to date. The tide may turn and I may report progress.

The population of Virginia City is quite nondescript. It is floating, changeable, evanescent. The Catholic church is quite strong. There are numerous other churches here, but they do not count much except as squads. The church of Rome dominates.

There hav never been any Freethought lectures here, I believe. Perhaps that accounts for the apathy of the people. There was a Mr. McGrath, once a clergyman, who broke the trammels of the church and organized a Liberal movement, which was quite successful as long as he lived. That was quite a number of years ago, and only a few seem to remember anything about it.

Virginia City is problematical. Like Micawber, I am waiting for something to turn up. I make my experiment this evening. I do not anticipate much. There is only one TRUTH SEEKER subscriber, Mr. F. A. Biercke. He has done all he can to assist me, but he seems to be about alone.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Virginia City, June 25, 1892.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

W. S. Bell in Washington.

This is a remarkable country for rain, and this year has been remarkable for its extra downpour. Still, the Webfeet seem to get along nicely and do not seem to feel at all afflicted.

The magnificent Columbia is high, affording grand sights to the traveler. No other river in the country can compare with it in magnitude. At Astoria it is like a small sea. Fishermen are busy catching salmon, which are taken to the canneries and canned to be shipped to various parts of the world. At Stella, Wash., I meet the well-known Liberal warhorse Mr. F. C. Scharnhorst, who givs the itinerant lecturer a hearty grasp of the hand to welcome him, and another kindly shake as he bids him good-bye, and invariably leaves something in the palm of the pilgrim's hand that enables him to go on his way encouraged. It was raining when I reached Stella, and it rained the evening I lectured; and yet, in this place where only three dwelling-houses are to be seen, I had a large audience of men, who gave very close attention to the lecture. I was not, however, able to get subscribers for either THE TRUTH SEEKER or Investigator. From this point down the Columbia is a fine sail. From Astoria I crossed the river in a small steamer to Deep River, and across Grady's river to Crooked creek, at the mouth of which livs Mr. O. Nelson, one of our standard-bearers who does not desert his post.

I spent a week with the Nelsons, all of whom are fond of playing cards in the evening. Mrs. Nelson is always ready to take a hand when no household cares demand her attention. Emma and Ella, the two daughters, add interest to the entertainment. When I reach Crooked creek—and I hav been there several times—I seem to be so far away from everywhere that I almost fancy myself at the jumping-off place; and yet I do not want to jump off. My royal entertainment by the family removes all jumping-off ideas. In fact, I hardly care to walk off after my time is up.

My lecture at Deep River on the "Evolution of Worship" was well received, and I regretfully took the boat to leave that neck of land so far away from the rest of the world. I volunteered to help row the boat across the bay to Stack's point, a distance of four miles, with wind and tide against us. It was a fearful tug to reach land. At times I thought I should break in two; and with all my exertions at the oar I was not very effectiv. I bid good-bye to Mr. Nelson, and saw him hoist his small sail and run away before wind and tide toward Crooked Creek, while I moved off in the steamer Queen toward Deep River to return to Astoria.

At Tacoma I meet with a cordial reception from Dr. M. D. Angus; Mr. Eben Pierce, president of the Secular Society; Mr. Bixler, and many others. The society is very strong here, and I am pleased to report the good work C. B. Reynolds is doing. After his lectures he answers questions sent up to the platform in writing, which, taken in connection with good music and good lectures, causes quite a deal of enthusiasm to be manifested by a thousand or more people of his audience. Last night I enjoyed a treat in speaking before this lively audience. We pilgrims do not always meet with large and enthusiastic audiences, so that when we do we enjoy the occasion hugely.

From here I go north, and after canvassing the upper country I move eastward to Spokane county.

W. S. BELL.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTH SEEKERS: I am now about one hundred and fifty miles from Manchester and two hundred and eighty from London, being here to assist at the annual conference of the National Secular Society. With me are my Freethought dean and archdeacon of Manchester, who always accompany their bishop on important business.

But before I go into details as regards Newcastle or its conference, I should like to write a few words about the Freethought work of the past three or four weeks. Freethought has its humorous side, as well as its melancholy. The almost wearisome repetition of sods and stones rattling round one's head and shoulders is occasionally relieved by sallies of wit. For instance, a week or two ago an aged Christian at Pendlebury, in denying that Christ's mission to save the earth was a failure, gave as his reason the remarkable fact that up to the present there were large tracts of land in Canada which hav never been trodden by the face of man. Therefore, the name of Christ could not hav failed in places where it had never been heard.

Another unconscious humorist wished at Huddersfield to reply to a lecture I had delivered there two years before, instead of confining himself to the subject then under consideration.

In Manchester, where we hav opened a Freethought bookstore, some amusing incidents hav resulted. Folks cannot quite understand the goodness of God in letting this hotbed of Infidelity remain open. Some think it to be the utmost limit of toleration that a hall for lecturing should be allowed to us; but to permit the presence in their very midst of this hell opened to believers is going far beyond what good Christians can be expected to tolerate. Even the outdoor lectures are preferable to the bookstore; for cannot the lambs of Jesus hullabaloo and sing the doxology and so minimize our efforts to preach? But when it comes to people buying forbidden fruit, taking it home to read and reread, and then passing it on to their friends and neighbors, it plays what we call "Old Harry" with the superstitions of the church and Sunday-school.

One fine day a curate from our parish church came in with all the dignity of a fighting-cock, and with sonorous voice demanded anxiously whether everything in the window was for sale. Thinking I had a good customer, I naturally replied in the affirmativ. "I don't think you ought to sell indecent literature," said his reverence. With quivering lips and strained eyeballs I assured him there was none such. "You hav Mr. G. W. Foote's 'Was Jesus Insane?'" he replied, "and I consider that very indecent." My reply was that it could not beat the Bible. He spoke of liberty and license, for doing which the ill grace of the suggestion from a parson of a church whose history is so blood-stained was duly brought home to him.

Heston's capital cartoons hav taken Manchester by storm and goodly crowds assemble round the shop front and thoroughly enjoy the pictures. There has been such a demand for my copies that I hav sent to Mr. Stocker at Liverpool, who sells THE TRUTH SEEKER, to send me some on; and I confidently believe that the good old TRUTH SEEKER would soon be popular in our miserable island. Heston is thus a public benefactor. May his pencil flourish and his humor flow unchecked.

Leeds led me a nice dance the last time I spoke there. My eccentric friend, Greeoz Fisher, chaperoned me to Roundhay park, where a mild lecture was given to a small audience, who had struggled out in the hope of finding some sunshine. Roundhay park is a lovely spot and American visitors to Leeds would do well to look it up. In the afternoon we tried Woodhouse moor, a sort of civilized green where people promenade and the sky-pilots howl praises to Yahweh. There we raised our stand and voices. But Christians love to bully, and they bullied me. A score of big lads, backed by those who ought to hav known better, rent the air with their revilings and tried again and again to wreck the platform. In the evening the lecture passed over admirably and drew forth a complimentary criticism in a local newspaper; but immediately after the meeting had concluded, the pent-up energies of the Christians were let loose and they conducted themselvs like wild beasts and savages rather than tame Englishmen. After all, the tumult was a blessing in disguise, for it has stimulated the sleepy-headed Leeds folk to sustained activity and has drawn public attention and that of the press to the existence and liveliness of the Secular Society.

One thing I am extremely glad to note. The great idea of my mind was a federation of National Secular Society branches in the large counties of Yorkshire and Lancashire. The plan was for the greater towns to establish a network of small branches, principally for open-air work, in their respectiv suburbs. These local branches could then be federated together for local purposes, and collectivly, in the name of the chief branches, be federated into county societies. This part of my hope has been realized. The towns hav been banded together in a Lancashire and Yorkshire Secular Federation. What is left now to do is to strengthen the branches and to create new ones. Of course the second part is much harder than the first; but I generally find that enthusiasm spreads rapidly; and if the town work goes merrily, it will be contrary to all my experiences in North Middlesex if the surrounding villages do not unite with them for the double purpose of having occasional lectures at home and of feeling interest in the parent branches. Every step bristles with difficulties. Old Freethinkers do not want to be bothered; younger ones hav not the warmth and perseverance of their elders; and the Christians are simply getting frantic and beside themselvs with rage and envy as they watch the progress of our own movement and deplore the moribund condition of their own.

Newcastle-on-Tyne proves to be a charming city, surrounded by places no less charming than itself. Historical spots are there in clusters, such as Americans can scarcely imagin. To us, of course, the meeting of old friends and introductions to new ones were the most charming of all. Mr. Foote came up smiling, apparently in the best of health. Bonnie Charlie Watts, vigorous of mind and body, delighted all. My brother George, with Forder and R. O. Smith, represented the Hall of Science section. Others from London, with Gott, of Bradford; Fisher, of Leeds; Hemingway and Willock, of Manchester, and Hooper, of Nottingham, showed the newer blood in the work of Freethought. Scotland was represented by Mr. Gilmour, and Peter Kavanagh hailed from Dublin. Almost a hundred delegates assembled and took part in one of the most important, contentious conferences we hav yet held.

Suffice it to say that Mr. G. W. Foote remains our president for another ye r, and Mr. Charles Watts has been restored to his rank of vice-president. May the good old society go on and prosper; and may the extraordinary energy which Mr. Foote is putting into the National Secular Society bring about the downfall of Christianity.

SAM STANDRING.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, June 4, 1892.

Bible Readings.

1. The goodness of God.

Question. Did Jehovah ever giv his chosen people bad laws?

Answer. "Wherefore, I [Jehovah] gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not liv" (Ezek. xx, 25).

Q. How does this fact indicate to us the wisdom and goodness of God?

A. "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit. . . . A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit" (Matt. vii, 17, 18).

2. The second advent.

Q. Did Jesus manifest and command haste in preaching, for fear that the Jews should not all be able to hear the gospel before his second coming?

A. "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of diseases. . . . These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand . . . for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not be gone over the cities of Israel till the son of man be come" (Matt. x, 1, 5–7, 23).

Q. Did the savior continue to predict his speedy second coming?

A. "Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the son of man coming in his kingdom" (Matt. xvi, 28).

Q. Was this second coming to be a public affair?

A. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so also shall the coming of the son of man be" (Matt. xxiv, 27).

Q. What did the redeemer promis when he should come?

A. "When the son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another. . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal" (Matt. xxv, 31, 32, 46).

Q. When did these things happen?

A. See commentators.

Q. Did Paul expect Christ's appearing in his lifetime?

A. "Then we which are alive shall be caught up together with them [the resurrected ones] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. iv, 17).

Q. Did the Holy Ghost likewise inspire John to predict the imminence of the last days?

A. "Little children, it is the last time: and as ye hav heard that Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists; whereby we know it is the last time" (1 John ii, 18).

Q. How may we be sure that the above prophecy is correct?

A. Because the holy Bible declares that "many false prophets shall arise and shall deceive many" (Matt. xxiv, 11).

Q. How may we "beware of false prophets?"

A. By remembering that "all scripture is inspired of God" and that it contains the "sure word of prophecy."

Q. How did Jeremiah the prophet know this to be true?

A. By blessed experience: "Lord, thou hast deceived me" (Jer. xx, 7).

Q. How may we console ourselvs, especially in reflecting that prophecy, as it occurs in the holy scriptures, is as a "light that shineth in a dark place," and that the old prophets were "holy men of God," who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost?"

A. Because "God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, [in order] that they all might be damned" (2 Thess. ii, 11).

Q. How may we at least know that the Lord's own words and promises concerning his final coming, to receive and reward his saints and punish the wicked, will be fulfilled?

A. By calling to mind this precious passage of scripture: "And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I, the Lord, hav deceived that prophet" (Ezek. xiv, 9). A. H. DARROW.

Phœnix, Ariz., June 20, 1892.

A Free Man.

Behold a man, tall, erect, robust, kind, honest, intellectual, independent! On his Atlas shoulders there rests a world of thought. Within the invisible realms of his mind many things are taking place. Great thoughts and ideas wander through the noiseless avenues of his brain with chainless freedom.

Think of a tongue that is a traitor to the brain—that will not express an honest thought.

The free man spreads the sails of his imagination on the boundless intellectual sea. He sees the world on many sides. He sympathizes with all trades and professions, with all positions and distinctions, from the lowest to the highest. He walks around the tree of life. He sees the trunk of common sympathy that binds all humanity together. He looks higher and beholds the branches spreading in all directions—the infinit ramifications.

There is a class of people, however, who are all cripples. They cannot walk around. They will not take treatment, declaring that they are well and that everybody else is sick—that is, that they are right and all others are wrong. They prefer to stand only where the branch of superstition casts its shadow.

But the free man still goes on. He sees specialists pursuing their vocations, he himself, perhaps, being a specialist. He knows that behind every action there lies a cause. He feels for all. He sees also the faults and failures, the mistakes and imperfections, in the lives of men, and at last concludes, It takes a genius to do right.

Springfield, Mo. HARRIS F. WILLIAMS.

Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep It Holy.

The obligation of this command depends upon its reason. It can be the duty of no one to obey an unreasonable order. It is assumed that the Sabbath law came from the creator and governor of our earth and all upon it. Should this be no more than a naked, unfounded assumption there can be no obligation for its observance. The essence of all obligation must come from truth and reason. So long as we hav reason it is our duty to use it in discriminating truth from error, right from wrong. The duty to disregard the unreasonable command is no less than to regard the one of justice and reason. That the command to keep the seventh day holy has in it neither truth, justice, nor reason is about self-evident. Its origin is not only fictitious but absolutely false. No such being as the Bible God ever existed. If he had, it were impossible for him to create our world, the sun and moon, from nothing, and then from the nothing left over the infinit numbers of stars in the infinit space. Again, it is absolutely impossible for an infinit being to tire on six days' work of no more than the breath of his mouth—if, indeed, he had one. Then, unless one is tired he cannot rest; to try is to be lazy, vicious instead of virtuous. Besides, if the creator had rested the seventh day to make it holy, it is but reasonable to infer that he had brought all his works to rest on that day. Moreover, it is impossible for the inhabitants of our planet to agree in knowing and keeping the seventh day. The difference between our seventh day and the Chinese is no less than twelve hours, and at or near the frigid zone about six months. Then again comes the change from the seventh to the first day. The outrageous murderer, the distinguished Christian, Constantine, removed the Sabbath law of his Lord from the seventh day to celebrate his rest, to the first day to celebrate the work of his son in rising from the dead. Many of our best Christians and all the Jews protest that this Constantine repeal is unconstitutional and void; so they hold on to the Sabbath of the Decalog. How then can any simple lover of truth and right recognize any divine obligation to keep any one day more holy than any other? Or how can any man of common sense believe that rest is any more holy than work?

Jacksonville, Fla. W. PERKINS.

In Love With the Colonel.

My wife is in love with the colonel,
And yet she's ne'er spoken to him;
To her e'en his name is supernal,
And what could his presence be then?
Ah! yes, she once saw him and listened;
Each word was copied and fastened—
Her brilliant black eyes fairly glistened
E'en at his gestures, so chastened.

The rostrum was freighted with reason
Of manhood, of woman, and child;
While the gems he evolved were legion,
And wisdom prevailed undefiled.
The tomtom, the skulls, and the dugout,
Depicted in classical lore,
Convinced fanatics, without a doubt,
That evolution reigned of yore.

The springtide of Reason is coming,
Its torch has scorched superstition.
The tomtom, with Ingersoll drumming,
Has "dug out" the faith of contrition.
The world has awaked from its slumbers,
The priest is hunting his lair,
The churches are counting their numbers,
While Liberty sits in the chair.

All hail to the chief of Liberal thought!
This valiant hero won the crown—
Not made of thorns, we hav read about,
More precious still, of true renown.
Forsooth, is it strange his trinity—
Man, woman, and child—endeavor
To call him true divinity
And acknowledge him their savior?

Profound in his wisdom and reason,
Prepared to do battle with popes,
Prescribing to heal up the lesion
'Tween truth and the mythical hopes.
His tasks and lessons are not ended,
He's taught us how best to subdue,
Though our joys and sorrows are blended—
"The time to be happy is now."

If my wife did not love the colonel,
For what he has done for her rank,
I'd think her a Christian infernal,
And style her an absolute crank.
She's far from a crank, yet she's a fad,
Like most other ladies. A boon
Of a souvenir made her heart glad—
'Twas a Robert G. Ingersoll spoon.

Buffalo, N. Y., June, 1892. R. E. FLECTION, M.D.

Instruments of Torture.

London Correspondence Washington Star.

Four centuries ago an inventiv genius with the brain of a Gatling, but lacking his experience, facilities, and opportunities, produced a death-dealing instrument of warfare, so constructed as to fire fifteen balls at one time.

It was in those days called a "hell machine," and it was considered so violent an innovation on the civilization of the time, and as being so much outside the pale of fair warfare, that its use was forbidden by international agreement. This curious forerunner of the mitrailleuse or gatling-gun is now the property of the earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, and opportunity was afforded me of examining it.

A few weeks previously I had examined, at the naval exhibition in Liverpool, the very latest "hell machine," built at the Armstrong works, and designed for the use of Johnny Bull in any future trouble he may hav with his neighbors. It was a steel twenty-pounder of marvelously beautiful workmanship, manipulated by electricity, with a scarcely perceptible recoil, and capable of discharging twenty shots a minute. There is no international agreement to prevent the use of this in present-day warfare, and this fact may prove a good text for the pessimists and croakers, who mourn for the civilization of the good old times, and think the world is going to the demnition bow-wows in the closing years of the nineteenth century.

Pretty bad and fiendish old times these good old times were—the days of "hell machines," so devilish in purpose as to almost convince one that they were planned in the regions of his satanic majesty, and beside which the fifteen-ball gun would seem as harmless to fifteenth-century civilization as a baby's popgun to the nineteenth. I hav had an object-lesson that I will tell you something about, and that will be a text for the optimists who know they are living in the most glorious period that was ever experienced. I spent a day among some hundreds of the "hell machines" of past ages, comprised in the famous historical collection of instruments of torture from the Royal castle of Nuremberg, belonging to the earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, but temporarily in the possession of Mr. S. Lee Bapty, F.R.G.S. This collection is the most complete in existence, and is of wonderful educational value as showing the progress which the world has made in the interest of truth, humanity, and justice.

Its most conspicuous ornament is the celebrated "iron maiden," of which all students of history hav read. To approach her makes the blood run cold, and the imagination teem with horrors as one pictures the many wretches, of noble birth or mean, God-hating or God-loving, murderous or dovelike, guilty or innocent, who were led up to her smiling face and inclosed in her stomach, in that awful embrace of death in its most horrible form. The iron maiden is in a very good state of preservation and still quite capable of hugging an individual to death; though her interior arrangements are somewhat rusty. She is built of strong wood and iron, and from her shoulder down stands out after the manner of the old-fashioned crinoline. Two doors under her chin opened to admit the victim and disclose scores of long and still very sharp iron spikes. When the doors were pressed to these prongs forced their way into various parts of the victim's body. Two entered his eyes, others pierced his chest—in fact, he was impaled alive in such a manner that he died in the most agonizing torture.

The iron maiden now blinks through her battered eyes on other instruments of torture as cruel as herself. Near her is to be seen the machinery for carrying out that most terrible torture known as the peine forte et dure, which was peculiar to England. This was the punishment to which was condemned the person who refused to plead to the offense with which he was charged. He was laid flat on his back, with his arms and legs drawn as far asunder as possible by ropes. Then as much weight as he could bear was piled upon him, which was increased day by day until he pleaded or died. He was given the very smallest possible amount of food, and the day he ate he was not allowed to drink. Who can picture without a shudder the terrible agony of the victim—agony which was inflicted in the name of religion or justice in the "good old times?"

There are in the collection several specimens from various countries of the pear-shaped screw gag. It was known in Spain as the mouth pear. It is made of iron in sections, and can be squeezed together in the shape of a pear. It was an especially handy adjunct to the torture of those privately seized, as when forced into the mouth it sprang open and the prisoner could not utter a sound. There are about half a dozen mouth-openers, instruments with graduations to open the mouth to a certain size. They were used when it was found necessary to slit the victims' tongues or tear them out by the roots, or while boiling oil or molten lead was poured down the throat. If a prisoner, fearing a more awful end, tried to starve himself to death, these mouth-openers were used while he was being forced to eat.

Another mouth instrument is known as a tongue-tearer. It is in the shape of a pair of tongs, with a screw, and by it a strong hold could be taken of a tongue, so that it could be torn out by the roots. This was principally used on blasphemers. An iron implement to be affixed to the ears before they were cut off was in common use for comparativly minor offenses. Many a poor devil took a ride to death on the "Spanish donkey," an instrument formed with a V- or cone-shaped top, worked to a sharp point. The victim was placed straddle-legged on this and heavy weights were hung on each foot, until the sharp point of the donkey's back cut clean through his body or broke him right in halves. Spain is also credited with the invention of a boot made of two strong pieces of heavy wood, fitting inside with protruding iron knobs or buttons and made to screw up so as to completely break the leg and inflict the most agonizing torture.

A portion of the flooring of a prison is interesting for its ingenuity. It is of oak, cut into diamond-shaped points, so as to be as hurtful to the prisoners as possible, and, as in many cases the walls were also of the same material, it was very painful to lean, sit, lie, or stand. Another ingenious instrument is an iron mask, made only in skeleton, but so constructed that parts cover the mouth, nose, and eyes. It has a long, outstanding head-top, and was worn by a prisoner perhaps for years, until his identity was almost lost. The "iron spider" was very frequently used on women, whom it horribly mutilated. It is shaped somewhat like a spider, and was made to grip the flesh of various portions of the body and then tear it away.

There are in the collection about a dozen specimens of the iron mail chain foot glove, which, when red-hot, was fitted to the victim's foot. A couple of wheels giv one an idea of what "breaking on the wheel" meant. This was not a figure of speech, but a stern and terrible reality. When the condemned was laid out on the wooden bed and the wheel brought into action upon him and weighted with all the strength of the executioner and his assistants, every bone in the body was literally broken. In some countries the victim was tied on to a wheel and turned round and round as the wagon moved, but the combination of wheel and wooden bed seems much more cruel and lingering.

A pair of terrible tongs are known as the "old Roman martyr pincers," because with them Christian martyrs were tortured. Not only did they pinch the skin or flay, but with them entire pieces of flesh were pulled away from the ribs. The catgut "head tormentor" would hav been a welcome acquisition to the armory of Sitting Bull. It has an iron handle for the executioner, and with this he twisted the cords across the forehead until the victim was almost scalped. There are dozens of thumbscrews, branding irons, spiked rollers, spiked collars, spiked crowns, steel-barbed scourges, Russian knouts, handscrews, racks, terrible "spiked hares," ladles for pouring molten lead, and iron chairs whereon the victims sat while attendants lit lively little fires beneath them.

No wonder that titled aristocrats are proud of their descent from the noble ancestry that designed such ingenious playthings as these. What good old times there must hav been. And how popular in the ruling set must hav been the chief inventors of these "hell machines." In these degenerate days we are barbarous enough to consider the comfort even of murderers. We are trying to abolish capital punishment, and, indeed, an ex-hangman is now stumping this country with that end in view.

Many things these wicked oldtime rulers did, however, which some people would not consider amiss if they were in operation to-day. They took no uncertain measures with scolding women, drunkards, "light-weight" bakers, and similar people who are not blessings to any age, as this collection of the earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot will show. They had all sorts of devices for the punishment of scolds, such as a "shame mask" with a movable tongue to be worn in public places, wooden collars with holes attached to hold the hands as high as the head, and double collars for scolding husbands and wives or for two scolding women, in which they were placed, neck and hands, and forced to stand facing each other until they were, or pretended to be, friends again.

A large iron mask, with goggle eyes and large, open mouth, was worn by blasphemers of the milder type. An iron shame mask with long, asses' ears was put upon drunkards or lazy ne'er-do-wells, and a confirmed toper was condemned to stand exposed for perhaps a week wearing a shame mask with long, straight, protruding ears, long snout, and overlapping lip (a sign of drunkenness), two curious round raised and blotched ornaments under each eye, and a deeply furrowed forehead. Dishonest children were made to wear a curious wooden devil's head mask, with real goat's horns; and a devil's head was also the shape of the mask used for the punishment of eavesdroppers and backbiters. A curious yoke was worn by the father and mother of a child born out of wedlock, and thus yoked together they were forced to carry water up to the top of a hill. The baker who gave short weight was locked up in an oak cage about six feet high, which was then hung to chains and drawn up and down in the water until the occupant was nearly drowned. The entire collection is most interesting, but the selections I hav made will giv the reader a general idea of its character.

The Cause in Washington.

The annual conference and election of officers of the Washington Secular Union was held as per announcement on Sunday and Monday, June 5 and 6, 1892, at the Fremont Opera House, Seattle, and despite some adverse circumstances, was a decided success. The cause throughout the state, alike east and west of the Cascades, cannot fail to receive a new and powerful impetus from the action of the conference and the selection made of officers. We hav a board of directors devoted to the promotion of the aims and objects of the Washington Secular Union. Each and all are practical hard workers, possessed of the needed indomitable persistency and spirit of self-sacrifice.

On Sunday afternoon, June 5th, desiring that all the delegates should participate in all matters of import brought before the convention, only routine business was transacted, after which the conference was addressed by the secretary on the aims and objects of the Washington Secular Union and the necessity of energetic and persistent endeavor.

I had to leave immediately after the afternoon session to catch a train for Tacoma, being advertised to deliver the usual Sunday evening lecture at Germania Hall. I left the reception and introduction of Dr. Seth Tozer to that earnest, bright, and popular young Liberal, Ashton Thomas, of Waldron, San Juan county. I greatly enjoyed the immense gathering and deep interest manifested at my lecture at Tacoma, only regretting I could not be in both places at once, but confident all would be well at the Fremont Opera House, for Dr. Tozer is a gentleman of very great ability, and possesses the happy and rare faculty of presenting new ideas in the most entertaining manner, having a fund of rich humor that never fails to delight his audience.

On my return home on Monday morning, I learned there had been grievous disappointment. Dr. Tozer had failed to put in an appearance, leaving friend Ashton Thomas in a most embarrassing dilemma, as no provision had been made for any such condition of things, and Mr. Thomas is a genial but very modest man; and to address an incensed crowd, without any authority or knowledge of what was the occasion of the trouble, was out of the question; so, the crowd learning that I was at Tacoma, and finding no lecturer, and none who could explain the situation (for, of course, Mr. Thomas did not know but the doctor might put in an appearance at last, or that he had communicated with me and I would send some word), dispersed, supposing for some reason the lectures had been abandoned. Dr. Tozer was taken suddenly sick, and was unable to send word.

Most unfortunately Mrs. Reynolds had gone east, and there was no one to lecture or come to the rescue.

Our conference session on Monday afternoon was very enthusiastic and harmonious. Our president, Mr. Charles F. Blackburn, of Seattle, one of the most self-sacrificing and generous-hearted of men (elected by the director, to fill the unexpired term of Mr. R. J. Wilson, resigned), was unavoidably absent. His mining interests in British Columbia imperativly demanded his personal supervision. He had some time since proffered his resignation, finding the incessant demands on his time as geologist and mining expert prevented his being able to giv the needed time to the duties of president, but he kindly held over until the conference.

Dr. D. M. Angus, of Tacoma, was elected chairman of the convention. The following is a brief summary of the most important business transacted.

Eben Pierce and J. C. Ford were appointed to audit the accounts and books of the treasurer and secretary.

Motion was carred unanimously that the secretary be instructed to write a pamphlet on the Taxation of Church Property and the great Injustice of Our Present State Revenue Law, and make appeals to Liberals of the state for funds to hav five thousand copies of such pamphlets printed and gratuitously circulated throughout the state.

A letter of regret was read by the secretary from the treasurer, Mrs. Mary E. Boman, lamenting her unavoidable absence from the meeting and giving assurances of her earnest interest in the work and desire for the success of the Washington Secular Union, inclosing a donation of $20.

It was ordered that the executiv board hold regular monthly meetings at time and place appointed by the president; the secretary to mail notification of such meeting to each member of the board three days in advance of such said monthly meeting.

Motion carried that the executiv committee cause the time and place of the next annual meeting of the Union to be inserted in THE TRUTH SEEKER, Investigator, and Ironclad Age, in the three successiv issues preceding the date of said meeting.

REPORT OF THE AUDITING COMMITTEE.

The auditing committee reported that the books and accounts, both of the treasurer and secretary, had been "well and faithfully kept," and were found correct. But the committee deplored finding that notwithstanding the evident care and strict economy of expenditures, there remains a deficit of $43.75; and that the efficient and hard-worked secretary had received in payment for his services the enormous sum of $7.03½ per month for the last sixteen months.

On motion, the report of the auditing committee was accepted and approved and the secretary ordered to enter the report on the minutes.

The following persons were unanimously elected by secret written ballots, no nominations being allowed: Dr. D. M. Angus, of Tacoma, president; C. B. Reynolds, of Fremont, secretary; Mary E. Boman, of Fremont, treasurer; Albert Rosenow, of Walla Walla, and Dr. Otto Wilde, of Tacoma, directors at large.

Our president, Dr. D. M. Angus, is a physician of repute, a gentleman held in very high esteem in the city of Tacoma, a clear-headed, energetic business man. From the first formation of the Washington Secular Union Dr. Angus has been an earnest, activ member, ever ready and willing to giv alike time and money to help forward the good work. He possesses a genial, sanguin temperament that inspires hope, courage, and confidence in all with whom he associates. He has no idea of the office of president being a sinecure or mere honorary title. Already he has commenced practical work by writing personal letters to the members of the society, urging a general arousing, and a taking of united action to secure repeal of our present infamous revenue law that not alone exempts all church property from taxation up to $5,000, but declares all church charitable institutions, if wholly or in part sustained by charity, are entirely exempt from all taxation.

I had to again assume the duties of secretary. The $1,200 a year salary limit has not been reached. I wanted to be quite sure that the secretary would devote his or her entire time to the work in consideration of receiving the enormous sum of $7.03½ per month; so to prevent any mercenary securing such a well-paid sinecure, I consented to run and won the prize. Seriously, the very kind words of praise and cheer I received from all parts of the state made me willing to again assume my arduous task, for if not well paid, at least my poor services hav been highly appreciated.

Mrs. Mary E. Boman, ever ready with heart and hand and purse to aid the cause of liberty and human happiness, was the unanimous choice of the convention; no other name was even mentioned in connection with the treasurership.

The very name of Albert Rosenow, of Walla Walla, inspires devotion to the cause of "making a heaven here and now by promoting the happiness of all around you." No man more fully works for that heaven. The high esteem and love entertained for Albert Rosenow by all who hav the honor of his acquaintance, or know of his life of loving-kindness and benevolence, insured his being the first choice not alone of the conference but of every Liberal in the state. Walla Walla has nobly kept her proud position as advance-guard of Liberalism in the state of Washington, and the Washington Secular Union did itself honor in its unanimous reëlection of her favorit citizen to be director for the country east of the Cascades.

Dr. Otto Wilde is a young physician of Tacoma, of high repute in his profession, who has "won golden opinions from all sorts of people," despite his known devotion to Liberalism. He is a practical, yet most enthusiastic, worker for the entire divorce of church and state, and in perfect harmony with the other members of the board in all their plans and hopes. He will prove a power for good as director at large for the country west of the Cascades.

The public lecture, on account of the disappointment the preceding night, resulted in the house being little better than two-thirds full. The secretary delivered a lecture on "The Divorce of Church and State," which was well received, and awoke considerable interest.

The conference and public lecture was greatly enlivened, and all in attendance were delightfully entertained, by the sweet singing of that incomparable Scotch balladist, Mr. Robert Howden, released from the shackles of Presbyterianism through the efforts of good Father J. J. Ford and the lecturers at Germania Hall.

Charles A. Cantonwine, of Kennewick, Yakima county, called on me at the office of the Washington Secular Union on Saturday, June 11th. He informed me of his long desire to see me, and to do something for the cause in Washington and at large. Knowing the Washington Secular Union must be in need of funds, and learning we were nigh $50 behind, he generously gave me a check for that amount, and subsequently another $50 to forward for him to THE TRUTH SEEKER. More anon.

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Fremont, Wash., Lock Box 155.

Our London Letter.

Although it is an open secret that many medical practitioners are extremely skeptical on religious matters, it does not yet answer to let it be known that such is the case, and Dr. Allinson has found that open skepticism will meet with speedy punishment, and for that reason has shared the same fate as Dr. Allbreth. His name has been removed from the general medical council's register, though the reason given for serving him thus is by no means the real one. His crime ostensibly is advertising himself in the public press, though this is by no means confined to him, but is done by many medical men who are not interfered with for so doing; but in his particular case it is described as being "guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect." He has taken legal proceedings against the council and it remains to be seen whether he will be reinstated in accordance with his wish. Possibly he considers he will suffer pecuniarily if his name is struck off the register, but it can scarcely be pleasant or satisfactory to be mixed up with such a crew as his judges.

The progressiv London county council has been caught napping. Confident of their numerical strength they grew careless and allowed a vote to be carried by the reactionary party on the question of Sunday bands in the public parks. A clerical alderman moved that dance-music should be disallowed, for fear the parks should be turned into dancing saloons—a most preposterous idea certainly—but he succeeded in getting his way, no doubt much to his own astonishment, but he will hav to be carefully watched in future or he will manage to abolish the bands altogether. The sensible folk who prefer open-air music to church services are rapidly increasing, and the majority of the clergy are waking up to the fact that their crop is in danger. It is only those amongst them whose salaries are secured by endowment or otherwise that are able to take a sensible view of the matter, and do not greatly object to a rational use of the weekly holiday.

The great Booth boom is on the wane, and the great schemer is very doubtful if he will be able to raise the £30,000 he wants this year, and threatens to close the show if this amount is not forthcoming. Curiously enough, he has caught Mr. Labouchere, and has induced him to sign a special appeal to the public to raise this sum; but it is scarcely likely that this will be much of a draw. Those who subscribed so freely last year consider they hav done enough, and as there is nothing much to show for the money, are not likely to be caught again. Booth admits that the results are small, but considers the public should subscribe for five years before passing judgment, and then I suppose the Booth family would hav enough to satisfy even them, and would not care a straw if the whole concern ended.

Hugh Price Hughes tries hard for originality, and has apparently succeeded again. He suggests that the idea that the evangelization of the world can be done by proxy is a delusion, and he wants badly to see a mighty exodus of able-bodied and wealthy Christians, who, instead of retiring when they hav made their pile, shall go to Timbuctoo or Calcutta and work for Christ at their own expense. Of course he knows they won't do it, and if he had any thought that they would accede to his wishes, he certainly would not express them so boldly, as his own financial ruin would be the result, for who would be left behind to enrich him for talking nonsense?—though, on the other hand, it would be no loss to the country if the class named did take themselvs off.

A parson has been honest enough to own that David was not altogether a desirable example to follow, and the bold Varley, who since Mr. Bradlaugh's time had well-nigh sunk into well-merited obscurity, has attacked the parson for making a misleading and false statement, forgetting or not knowing that his idol, the late Mr. Spurgeon, on various occasions spoke very slightingly of David's veracity and morality. But, then, as we all know, "fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Varley had better hav stuck to his butchering business; when his own party goes against him, he will stand a poor chance in the gospel bin. J. D.

The Abominations of the Church.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I used to write for your paper when D. M. Bennett was captain. I sent him many subscribers, also after he had "passed on" and you were at the helm; but after getting acquainted with the "Man With the Badgepin," I "pulled" for him, and sent many a long list of subscribers and filled my corner of Freethought with my "On the Trail" jottings. Seeing your kind invitations some time ago for old patrons of Freethought to still send in their best thoughts, I will try to do so once again. For four long years hav I wandered up and down the valleys of living green and scaled the rugged mountain-sides of all the vast country on this slope between Mexico and British Columbia. I think that but few of our lecturers hav done more work than myself. I hav given from two to three hundred lectures each year, mostly in small towns and villages, and hav met the wily, slick-tongued priest, with his banner of J. Christ, everywhere. (It ought to hav been the skull and cross-bones, or the black flag, for it is death and damnation to all who will not drink of the blood of the holy "lamb.") It was the priest I was on the trail of; go where I would, I found his bloody finger-marks, and his trail was everywhere, well worn and dusty, and his temples of superstition raised their symbols (steeple and cross) of phallic worship high above all other structures, thus I had no trouble to follow the trail. I sometimes get weary of this bushwhacking gipsy life; lecturing to people who hav no organization, no system, no revenue, no anything, except one of the grandest papers in the world, which is a pyramid in the desert of disorganization, The Truth Seeker. But when I reflect after reading the history of the priest and Christian church; of the religious Crusades against the followers of Mohammed and his Allah; of the seas of blood that hav been shed; of the homes, towns, and cities that hav been pillaged, plundered, and burnt; of the thousands of martyrs burnt at the stake; of the vast amount of money forced from the pockets of millions of rich and poor to build up their Holy Inquisitions and carry on this bloody religion—when I reflect on the bloody priests in the past, as they gathered up the flowing blood from the slaughtered rams, bullocks, etc., at the altar of sacrifice, slaughtered because their God must and would hav nothing but blood to appease his anger, they the priests sprinkling the crimson gory mass, warm from the throbbing hearts of Mother Nature's innocent lower (upper) animals, all over themselvs, their altars, and devotees (the bloody butchers, devils incarnate!)—and that to-day, 1892, in this age of science and civilization, the bloody business is still kept up, by feasting the faithful on the body and blood of the lamb of God, and the sinner "born again" can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven until plunged in the fountain drawn from Immanuel's veins—when I think of this, I feel the need of work. If some poor unbalanced crank commits murder, nothing will satisfy the law in most states and Christian countries except the fulfilling of the law—based on the one Moses, that meekest of all men, received on Mt. Sinai—of blood for blood. The Christian world is doing all it can to crush freedom by this same law of force, oppression, eye for eye and tooth for tooth, God in the Constitution, social ostracism. The same savage, vindictiv spirit is shown that appears in the character of the tiger and hyena and the cannibal races. When I perceive all this which is so apparent everywhere, instead of the gentle, kind teachings of the humble Nazarene who said to the woman, "Go and sin no more," "If thine enemy smite thee upon one cheek turn him the other also," "Do good to them that despitefully use you, return good for evil," etc., I feel that every thinker, lecturer, writer, must keep his armor on, and follow "on the trail" of the "man of God," wherever it may lead, and turn on the electric search-light of science and Freethought, and oust, if possible, these bats and owls from the darkened chambers in the brains of superstitious humanity. "Let there be light" is needed now more than it was before there was anything to use it. Get the cross down and the flag up, is our work.

Prof. D. C. Seymour.

Portland, Ore., June 17, 1892.

An Infidel Hero.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: Captain Daniel Pelton, of New Rochelle, was a disciple of Thomas Paine, buried in the Friends' cemetery without a stone to mark his grave because no other sect was willing to hav his body rest in what they considered holy ground. But whether he deserves a monument or not let a brief story of his life decide. He had been a captain of a Long island market sloop and subsequently kept a humble country store at the New Rochelle landing, and many a lot of ducks and pigeons has the present scribe bought of him, but no liquor or tobacco; however, all his neighbors might not hav boasted in like manner. In a word, as the world goes he was to all appearance the least likely to be first to volunteer to do a deed worthy of remembrance by a monument. And yet when all looked out upon the sound and saw a flag of distress raised, a coaster's flag at half-mast, near the light-house at Sands's point, and it was plain the vessel could not move against the ice (too thin to bear the weight of any of the crew and yet too strong to suffer her to pass) and it was evident that help could come only from the shore, while the crew were starving, Captain Pelton took a plank and a bushel basket of provisions, landed his plank on the thin ice, and with a pointed stick in each hand went aboard and pushed himself, and plank, and basket some three miles over the surface, and so fed the hungry, if he did not clothe the naked; and so has performed the duty of a Christian at the plain risk of his life. But when he died he was refused a grave in any of the churchyards of the village because he was an Infidel. Now, I hold he was a better Christian than any of his critics, and deserves to hav a granit monument set up on the small island near to David's island—although he may care little about it, yet as a lesson to survivors.

If you choose to publish this, and will take charge of a little fund to pay for such a monument, the present scribe will cheerfully giv. one dollar as a nest-egg for the fund. To be sure, this is a small mite, but a larger sum might discourage many who would like to join in the memorial and make the laying of the stone occasion for a pleasant trip and some useful lessons to the public. I do not wish to glorify myself, but would rather stand aside and giv to Colonel Ingersoll or some other benevolent Infidel an opportunity to read a lesson in defense of Thomas Paine's disciples. By the way, I saw in a late number of The Truth Seeker that many do not know what has become of the bones of Thomas Paine. I hav heard that Cobbett took them to England and made buttons of them for keepsakes.

C. R.

At a Revival Meeting.

From the Detroit Tribune.

It was difficult to conjecture why the elderly lady with glasses and corkscrew curls who sat in the fourth pew from the front should be more deeply agitated than on any former evening during the entire series of protracted meetings. It was not the first time by any means that the exhorter had predicted with demonstrativ reiteration an awful, indefinit catastrophe.

"Brothers and sisters," he had shouted night after night, "let your lamps be trimmed and burning, for we poor sinners all are to be visited with divine wrath."

He had hurled his words into the very face of the elderly lady in the fourth pew. He had assailed the citadel of her soul. Now he beheld in her the first effects of his eloquent pleading.

"I know it, I know it!"

With a suddenness that was startling the elderly lady had risen to her feet and was gesticulating violently. The corkscrew curls shook with the force of the emotional outbreak.

"I know something awful is going to happen," she cried, hysterically.

"Glory!" shouted the exhorter, "a hardened heart is touched."

"You can't get ready too quick," the elderly lady shrieked.

"Amen!" roared the evangelist. "The day of wrath is at hand."

It was a dramatic scene. The sight of a mature woman, whose face was furrowed with lines betokening a cankering and corroding knowledge of the world, beseeching her hearers to prepare for the doom of which she declared the coming as with the tongue of prophecy, was most impressiv.

"Sinners will be destroyed," howled the evangelist.

"The worst is at hand," screamed the elderly lady, glaring through her glasses.

"'Tis a voice from above speaking through the lips of an earthly creature," excitedly explained the exhorter.

The elderly lady strode from the pew and took her stand in the aisle, where her tall, gaunt form was plainly visible from all parts of the church.

"My friends," she exclaimed, with trembling voice, "be warned in time. I used to be callous, too, and did not believe this man when he said that some terrible punishment was to be visited upon us. But I was led from my error this very morning."

"Hallelujah!" thundered the minister, "an inspiration."

The elderly lady glared through her glasses.

"As I was saying," she earnestly proceeded, "I didn't believe it until this morning, when the old black cat had a fit and I knew that settled it. Brethren, beware!"

The exhorter announced three hymns in rapid succession, after which the meeting closed.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. Putnam's lecture appointments:

Scappoose, Wash...	July 9	Colville, Wash..	July 29–31
Tacoma, " ... "	10	Missoula, Mont..	Aug. 6, 7
Buckley, " ... "	11,12	Albert Lea, Minn..	" 13,14
Spangle, " .. "	14,15	Watertown, " ..	" 16–18
Palouse City, " .. "	16,17	Minneapolis, " ..	" 21
Oakdale, " .. "	19,20	Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis..	" 24–29
Rosalia and vicinity, " .. "	21–24	Chicago, Ill..	" 4, 11
Davenport, " .. "	25–27

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

Little Blasphemies.

"I tells you, Brudder Abner, dem ar postels wuz mighty big gospel guns."

"Yas, sah, Uncle Abe, der pistols shows dey wuz dat."

Sitanchin: "To hear people talk, you would think there was something new about trying preachers for heresy."

Herdso: "Has it been long a custom?"

Sitanchin: "Why, they used to tie 'em to a stake, and try the heresy right out of 'em."

Letters of Friends.

Truth Is as Good as Turkeys.

MORRISON, IA., May 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1, for which please send us the Bible Picture Book, for as we enjoy your paper so much we think the Picture Book must surpass all. We hav only taken THE TRUTH SEEKER since last fall, and every week we are as anxious to get it as though it was a great fat turkey on Thanksgiving day. Yours for truth, amen, MR. AND MRS. FRED. BILLMAN.

Has Found a Good Instrument to Lay Open Bible Absurdities.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., June 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $1, for which send to my address another one of Heston's Bible Picture Books. It is the best medium to show up the absurdities of the Christian Bible I hav ever seen. Some people may read a silly story and not pay much attention to it, but if it is pictured out, the ridiculousness, cruelty, or impossibilities can be more plainly seen. I remain, Yours for the Nine Demands of Liberalism, J. F. ROGERS.

Thinks Landholding Wrong.

CARROLL, IA., May 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We are getting too old to read one-half the Liberal papers we take. I cannot but think that Heston is up on all questions. Although I pay taxes on thirty-five hundred acres of land, I am not in doubt in regard to holding it being as iniquitous as holding your brother man in slavery and taking his labor, giving him such compensation as you hav to to keep him in working order. Of course you read all Liberal papers and in time can work some of those ideas into THE TRUTH SEEKER. W. T. MINCHEN.

Obituary.

DE SMET, S. D., June 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: No doubt many of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER will be grieved to learn of the death of Mr. Almond Owen, which occurred on Thursday morning, June 2d, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. S. Bowes, who livs a few miles from this place. Mr. Owen was enjoying his usual health until about a couple of weeks ago, when he contracted a severe cold which ultimately caused his death. The last thing he read was "The Problem of Life," in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 28th. He was eighty-eight years old, and died as he had lived, a Freethinker to the last. W. E. RUDOLPH.

Two Brethren Who Won't Dwell in Unity.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read your valuable paper for several years, and am a great admirer of the truth, but must say I was very much astonished at an article in your paper of May 28, 1892, by one who signs himself O. I. Jones, Edina, Mo. Of course the article should only be treated with contempt, but when published by THE TRUTH SEEKER, and especially against such a bright light as Robert Ingersoll, it deserves to be thrown in the waste-basket. I think this man is on the road to lunacy, or some sharp usurer got ahead of him whether he was a Jew or a gentile.

Respectfully yours, L. BAUM.

The Only Thing in Which the Black-Coats Are Wise.

TACOMA, WASH., June 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I do not like to be behind in paying for so good a paper as THE TRUTH SEEKER, but my circumstances hav been such that I could not pay before this time. Last fall some damned wretch stole $140 in gold out of my pocket, and it left me down to the bed-rock with quite a large family and winter coming on. But we still liv, and I hav the pleasure of listening to C. B. Reynolds every Sunday night. He lectures here in Germainy Hall to crowded houses every Sunday night. Long may he liv to shake up their old bones. The reverend black-coats do not want to tackle him in a discussion, and that is where they are wise.

Fraternally yours, M. B. CRANE.

A Little Infidel Girl's War On Christians.

June 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav moved into a perfect nest of orthodoxy. The children in the place gave my little girl to understand that she had to believe in God or they would not play with her. So she wanted to know where he (God) was and if they had seen him, etc. They told her God made everything. She said she did not believe he made her, and wanted to know if he made them. They said Yes. My girl told them he must hav slept with their mothers, and she knew he would not sleep with her mother, for she was a Freethinker, and there would not any of the Freethinker women sleep with God, or the preachers either—they thought too much of themselvs for that. And thus the war goes on. But I think my girl is going to come out all right. One day she asked them what God stood on while he made the world. Then they came for her; said they would hav God kill her. She said she was not one bit afraid of him. They told her she must not talk about God, for he was good. She said, "No, not good, for he got the devil to hurt poor Job with boils, when the Bible says Job was a just man." She has just gone out—I guess the war will progress. R. J. BATTY.

Materialism.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., June 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am somewhat surprised to see that you accept in your valuable journal in the article, "The Materialist Is Not a Freethinker," page 358, signed by August Buesing, such expressions as ignoramus, lunatic, and liar, which is rather ungentlemanly language to use and does not tend to make a good impression on any of your readers. Mr. Buesing must be a rampant Spiritualist, and is trying bullying tactics, which were in vogue a few centuries ago, but he stands nevertheless on untenable ground. He must know that his spirit did not exist before his birth, for the simple reason that he has no recollection of spiritual life before that period, which goes to show that it will not exist after death. As soon as the brain (which is the organ of the mind or spirit) decays, the spirit ceases to exist. If my spirit lived one hundred years ago and I do not know it now, I cannot recognize a theory of this kind; and if I should liv hereafter, as Spiritualist and religious creeds assert, and lose my individuality—that is, not recollect myself in my present condition—it would be of no use to believe in a spiritual hereafter.

The following is good logic: As long as I do not know that my spirit lived before my birth, my spirit will not liv after my death. As I mentioned before, as soon as the brain decays spiritual life will cease to exist. ROBERT C. HAHN.

The Only Use of Going to Church.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: At the earnest request of some of my orthodox friends I hav put myself in the hands of "our new minister"—a Methodist—for "conversion," but I am afraid he will hav a pretty hard job of it. A week ago last Sunday morning I went to his church and listened attentivly to his sermon. A day or two later one of my Christian friends met me and said that she was very glad to learn that I had been to church and hoped that it had done me good. I replied that I certainly did feel much better spiritually for having gone. She was delighted to hear me confess so much. "Yes," I continued, "for I can now see more clearly than ever that my standard of virtue and morality is so much higher and better than the Christians' that I naturally feel myself much better, in comparison with them, than I did before."

And now a word or two to J. R. Perry, who attempted to answer my remarks about Spiritualism in THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 23d. He was kind enough to quote a few of my words: "I hav never heard or read of an instance where a spirit has revealed a fact that had hitherto been unknown to any mind then living." I still stick to this, and am glad that he quoted it, so that those who did not read my article and did read his reply can, even from these few words, see how little the instance that Mr. Perry relates "fills the bill." It was not his personal experience, either, that he relates, and he himself therefore cannot know it to be a fact, and I wonder if he expects me to accept it as sacred truth! He asks me if I can pick a flaw in his "compliance with my proposition." I do not wish to elaborate on the subject here, but simply to say that before writing my article I had heard or read of hundreds of instances similar to the one related by Mr. Perry.

LIZZIE J. MAGIE.

Hard Money Enables Capitalists To Steal.

MOUND CITY, KAN., June 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to make a few remarks. I am for justice. In THE TRUTH SEEKER just arrived, May 28th, I notice two communications—by O. I. Jones, of Missouri—on Colonel Ingersoll, which I indorse, and the other by F. H. Marsh, on money, which I also indorse. I am gratified that the finance question is being discussed in the noble TRUTH SEEKER. I think the money question outweighs all others at this time—yea, for a few years. The old money unit of value of both metals has been changed to suit capital, which by the fiat of unjust laws filches from labor and the industrial classes who build up a republic and promote the welfare of humanity. Money is as necessary to civilization as the circulation of the blood is to the human body; therefore, enough per capita should be in circulation for all the useful and legitimate industries to succeed and prosper, and thus society and the nation may prosper. I do not mean money based only on commodity value in itself, but based on "fiat" of law—a nation's sovereignty impressed upon either metal or paper, as conferred upon Congress by the Constitution and paid directly to the people, based on the credit of the nation. WM. B. LEWIS.

Open the Fair Gates!

NEW YORK, June 8, 1892.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE WORLD'S FAIR, AND TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

There is a class of the clergy so narrow-minded and bigoted that they make the most strenuous efforts to hav the World's Fair closed on Sundays, the only day in which the working class, the great majority of the people, are free, and can without loss of wages see the wonders of the world which our ever-activ inventiv geniuses are glad to exhibit.

If these ministers of religion do not know that Sunday is not the biblical Sabbath, then are they extremely ignorant; and if they know it, then they appear and show themselvs as impertinent sophists, and ought to be classed as no better than counterfeiters of money. In the whole Bible is not found one word or one sentence whereupon one Christian, or many combined as a council in synod assembled, has the authority to set aside or transplace in such reckless disregard the seventh day, the Sabbath day, named and appointed with such precision by God, whom they profess so pharisaically to reverence and adore. How dare these Pharisees set aside or change God's commandment, given with such strictness and severity as the Fourth? Is not their arrogance without bounds? These Pharisees know well enough that no one intends to interfere with their liberty to assemble in their churches when and where they wish. What right and justice then, I ask, hav they to be my and other people's keeper? I spurn them! The Dark Ages are gone, and churchly tyranny will not be suffered any longer. The most intelligent and honest ministers of the present day will no more contend for the inspiration of the Bible.

Open the Fair every day. No one is compelled to visit it Sundays or Sabbaths.

Yours for equal liberty,

FREDERICK KOEZLY.

Why?

NEW YORK, June 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am so forcibly struck by the wonderful coincidence in an apparent case of two great minds evolving the same thought and in exactly the same language, as is indicated in a letter published in THE TRUTH SEEKER of June 11th over the name of Chester Bedell, and as was published in THE TRUTH SEEKER some months ago over the name of Helen H. Gardener, in a lecture entitled, "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle," and recently published by you in pamphlet form, that I cannot resist the feeling that your readers may be interested in so extraordinary an instance of thought-transference, or whatever queer mental twist it indicates. The last paragraph of Mr. Chester Bedell's letter of June 11th, dated by him March 2, 1892, making about one-fourth of a column of THE TRUTH SEEKER, is verbatim et literatim the same as was written by Helen Gardener, as a part of a lecture delivered in Newark, N. J., and also in Montreal, about a year ago, and which lecture you published as above stated. Now, Mr. Editor, is not this a queer case, and will it not be profitable, as a mental gymnastic, for the readers of your excellently edited journal to philosophize over it somewhat?

While my hand is in, Mr. Editor, I may as well ask a question I hav wanted to ask for a long time, but feeling sure that THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Editor thereof, and generally the patrons thereof and contributors thereto, believe in and swear by all sorts of equality without sex limitations, my innate modesty has prevented. Here is the question: Why does the editor who culls the "Gems of Thought," that adorn a column each week of your journal, confine himself to male "Gems?" Must we conclude that there are no female "Gems?" Or is your editor's knowledge limited to thoughts of the male kind? Hav men constantly quoted ever said better things—expressed better, more enduring and far-reaching, thoughts—than hav been expressed by Madam de Stael, George Eliot, George Sand, Lucretia Mott, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Helen H. Gardener, and scores of others? CHARLES SELDEN.

Proof that Infidels Go to Heaven, and Christians to Hell.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As my other letter was honored in your most valuable paper, I thought I would write again. I wish to giv a few random shots. I sent and got the evening Telegram of Feb. 24, 1892, and I noticed an article written by the Rev. Dr. Peters that I think should be brought to notice. I want all of the Freethinkers and all that are in possession of the Telegram of that date to look the statement over he made concerning the progress of the so-called Christian denominations. He had taken the census of 1880, which givs a population of 50,000,000, and out of that number he says there is to-day in the United States of America 39,339,712 Christians, leaving the Jews, Mormons, and other classes besides the nonbelievers. He does not say what they are; does not call the Jews, Mormons, or the other classes Christians. I suppose he calls them Infidels. And he givs the balance left, 10,660,184. Now subtract these he calls sinners from the Christians, you hav 28,679,628 more Christians than you hav sinners. And now I will take his own club to break his own head with. I will call your attention to Matt. vii, 13, 14: "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." So, taking this to be true, for Dr. Peters's little Jesus said it, and as the Jews and Mormons and the other classes and sinners, including ourselvs, are in the minority, we must be in the narrow way, and we will go through the strait gate, while the 39,339,712 will go on the broad way, and at the winding-up will slip through the broad gate into a devil's hell where they will get the hot stuff poured on them. So I think I am on the safe side; I am among the 10,660,184. Now, I am surprised at his statement—to class the wicked Catholics among the Christians and leave the Jews and Mormons out, while every sensible man knows that the Jews and the Mormons liv a better moral life than the Catholics do. I think it is well enough to leave the Catholics among the Christians, for I think if there is a hell these ought to get stuck in it, for they are estranged from good morals.

And now he goes on and says that Christianity is gaining fast. Let the good work go on. If they die on that side, according to Matthew they will get the hotness thrown on them. So much for Mr. Peters.

Now a shot at Dr. Talmage. He is a big gun but his caliber is very small. I see in the Kansas City Journal, April 28, 1892, he favors opening the World's Fair on Sunday. That is the best I ever heard out of him. That is my sentiment. He could make a stake if he could preach a sermon on Sunday and take up a collection. It would be a snap, especially if his sermon would be like the one he preached on April 17th, where he says death clears the way. I did not know he had turned Universalist, but that part of his sermon looks like it. That family group when they all get up there, what a rejoicing there will be! Yes, if they all get there, but we will suppose they do not all get there, then what? For if a person knows any one of the family he surely would know all. He forgot to tell his brethren that all would not be sheep, but some goats. And I think there are some, he said, up there in heaven who are goats. He says we will be introduced to old Joshua, the man that was partner with the dirty old Bible God. Look at Josh. x. And what had those five kings done that Joshua and God should go over there and kill innocent children and women? It makes me shudder when I read the book of Joshua. Think of the Holy Ghost putting such damnable murdering as that on record for one. To think they never stopped until thirty-one kings were killed, and all they had was stolen by them or destroyed. Look at the twelfth chapter—it is counted up—thirty-one kings. Women and children were murdered in the most revolting manner. As for me, I am glad he is on that side that Mr. Peters tells about; for I do not want to be introduced to such a being as that, for I do not keep company here with such people; and I suppose all of those old tough fellows will be up there, and as for me I hav no use for them. If Dr. Talmage likes that kind, all I hav to say is, stick to them. Now, then, if this article meets the eyes of any person that is a fit subject to get into that heaven that the Bible talks about, I want his or her name, place where they liv, and the church they belong to. I want them to send me a curl of their hair and the name of some persons living in the neighborhood. I want to see how many I can get. I want to take the hair to the World's Fair and put it on exhibition.

Good-bye, from W. S. PHILLIPS.

P.S.—I gave three of THE TRUTH SEEKERS to a man by the name of Wakes. He says he will write to you. He is a Salvation Army man. I expect he will open battle on you. If he does, giv him hail Columbia. I send you $1 for the Bible Picture Book.

Why Christians Call Infidelity Obscene.—A Judge Who Will Make Us Keep Our Opinions to Ourselvs.

LEWISBURG, TENN., June 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As I hav already advised you, I hav been trying to secure a list of subscribers in this orthodox town for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and while my efforts hav not been altogether futil, I hav not met with the success I could hav desired or that I could hav reasonably anticipated in view of the extent and strength of Liberal sentiment in our midst. I believe I hav sent you five subscribers, and there are not less than twenty-five men here who, to my personal knowledge, are in entire sympathy and accord with the spirit and purpose of the paper, and who ought to subscribe for it, both in justice to themselvs and to the great cause which it represents. However, I am not discouraged, considering the fact that my effort was the first ever made to introduce a Liberal paper in this town—a town where the building of churches has been the chief industry, and praying and preaching the chief occupation. I am constrained to think that five subscribers represent not such a very bad beginning, after all. Besides those who hav subscribed for THE TRUTH SEEKER, three hav taken the Ironclad Age. I represent all our papers and allow our friends to take their choice. They are all good, and I sometimes cannot determin myself which I like best.

I propose to make my experience in soliciting subscriptions for Liberal papers the text, or rather the occasion, for some general observations, which I trust may not fail to prove highly edifying to those thin-skinned friends in this town, who, through considerations of cowardice, refuse to subscribe for the paper, or take a positiv stand on their convictions, as well as those thick-skulled fanatics who hav been horrified at the bare suggestion of circulating such literature beneath the very shadow of their gorgeous church-steeples.

It has always been an inscrutable mystery to me how, or upon what grounds, those people who love to read the Bible and who think the thirty-eighth chapter of Genesis inspired can object to the circulation of any kind of literature. If their taste and sense of decency hav become so indurated and atrophied as to enjoy the detestable obscenity and vulgar lewdness that besmear the pages of "God's holy book," then the grossest and beastliest sensualism that ever emanated from the mouths of the viragoes of Whitechapel ought to be as the entrancing melody of music to their ears. If THE TRUTH SEEKER were to publish anything even in the one-hundredth part as shocking to every moral sensibility as that horrible recital of filth in Genesis, I am satisfied every Infidel in the country would spurn the paper from his presence as the breath of a loathsome pestilence.

All the Liberal papers I hav ever seen hav uniformly been the most chaste and decent in their expressions, containing nothing whatever to even remotely shock the most delicate sense of propriety. There must, therefore, be some other ground on which the sanctimonious cranks object to the circulation of such literature. Is it possible they fear the reading of such a paper as THE TRUTH SEEKER will shake the faith of some deluded follower of Jesus Christ, and reduce by that much the income of the contribution-box? Do they fear that Colonel Ingersoll's logic can overturn the wisdom of God almighty, or that Mr. Macdonald can write anything that will appeal more forcibly to human intelligence than the inspired prophets and apostles? It certainly has not come to such a pretty pass as that; for in that case somebody might get the notion into his head that probably men with less sense than even Ingersoll and Macdonald wrote the wonderful productions of those prophets and apostles. That would never do at all. It seems to me that these superlativly confident Christians should rather laugh at or pity the pueril efforts of Infidels to expose the slightest possible weakness in the work of omniscience and omnipotence. A man who is so cock-sure that he is right, who is so absolutely certain that he is intrenched within the invincible fortifications of truth, ought not to go to trembling in the knees whenever he hears a single random shot of a popgun from some far-off redoubt. It might lead to the impression on the part of somebody that the gallant soldiers of the cross know they hav been lying all along about the strength of those fortifications and the unassailableness of their position.

And permit me to say, that is just what they do know—they know they hav been lying about it. If they hav ever taken the trouble to think about the matter at all, they know their pretensions will not bear investigation. They know the preposterous absurdities of the Bible are shocking to common sense, that its horrible indecencies are revolting to every ennobling impulse of human nature, and that the only way by which the faith of the people in that book can be maintained is to prevent the light from being turned upon its atrocious imperfections. That explains the relentless hostility of the high priests in this town to the circulation of THE TRUTH SEEKER in the outer court of their tabernacle, as they esteem this goodly little city. That explains why a certain eminent Christian judge of one of our courts charged the grand jury to indict every man whom they could apprehend as having openly espoused Infidelity, saying at the same time that if such a man were brought before him on that charge, that man would be glad in the future to keep his Infidelity to himself.

Now, as for myself, I propose to surrender my personal sovereignty to no man, however high; to no judge, however brutal; nor at the behest of any fanatical hierarchy, however insulting, domineering, or tyrannical; and if anybody here or elsewhere doesn't like that sort of disposition on my part, they can adopt whatever remedy they like for their ailment. It will not interfere with my health of mind nor serenity of spirits in the least.

I must close this letter for fear of making it too long for publication, but I propose, with the consent of THE TRUTH SEEKER, to follow it up every week henceforth with such observations as will best serve the purpose of the surgeon's scalpel in getting under the hide of the orthodox stiffs and cadavers. JAMES W. BRENTS.

Brief History of Christianity.

BRADFORD, PA., June 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad to note that the question at present agitating the great mind of the people is, "Is our civilization Christian?" The Elmira Telegram, of Elmira, N. Y., is busy in the discussion at present, and the gentleman on the Anti-christian side of the fence seems to hav the advantage of the argument. I felt extremely good over one issue of that paper myself some few weeks ago, when one of our sort over in New York state somewhere, perhaps a reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER, clipped one of my articles and had it published over his own signature, or rather initials, under the heading, "This Man Is an Unbeliever." I never entertained the idea for one moment that an article of mine would ever find its way into a paper governed by Christian influence. And really the only objection I had then, or hav now, was that he or she did not mark it as a quotation or let on in any way that it was borrowed from elsewhere. Be that as it may, I was more than pleased to see it in the paper mentioned above.

This question of late is being taken in hand by the common herd. They hav listened to the subject long enough discussed by theologians, and the attentiv layman has found out to his entire satisfaction that the theologians hav not been telling him the truth—that they hav not given him the correct account of the subject in hand. Perhaps the text might be, "Was the flood universal?" "Who was Cain's wife?" "Was Solomon the founder of polygamy" (I believe this text is not disputed, at least by the good Mormons)? "Was Christ the son of God and man withal?" On this latter text the clergy hav done all in their power to show beyond the shadow of a doubt that he really was. The Infidel—i. e., one whose opinion is worth anything on the subject—has always answered in the negativ. Infidels are perfectly honest about it, and say that to their mind he is only a character in fiction. We are indebted to St. Matthew for this character. He wanted mankind to be extricated from the sin of the first parents and he used that ruse to annihilate it. Good fellow! But he made a most decided failure of doing away with the sin that Adam and Eve committed in the garden of Eden. And to-day the church only merits the censure of the educated man for trying to do away, or endeavoring to obstruct, nature in this one particular. We only know now that it is impossible for the human family to be ushered onto this terrestrial sphere through any other medium. The church has been working on this matter for eighteen hundred years, and man is still born in the same sin. We are certainly indebted to the church for the consolation that we are totally depraved and deserve eternal torment for something that we are not responsible for. Better every minister would fall palsied from his pulpit, better every pulse of life would cease, than that one of the human family would be consigned to eternal torment. If theology has been a curse instead of a blessing to mankind, it should be kicked off the face of the globe, and all its having. It covered the cheeks of the world with tears, filled the asylums with the demented, struck terror to the hearts of the superstitious, imposed its monstrous assumption upon the credulous followers of its particular dogmas, made cowards and slaves of the truly innocent, and through all the weary years endeavored to make right wrong, black white, and has partially succeeded in turning daylight into darkness.

And in the face of all this we are told from the pulpit that if it was not for Christianity and its civilizing influence we would be savages to-day. Think of that impudent assumption in this nineteenth century. The rigid stand she has taken in the past in opposing science is down in history against her to her eternal dishonor. Let us here take a view of the church in the sixteenth century and see what inducements she gave to science. The science of anatomy, what about that? We will see, in order to giv her all due credit. All that was known at this time of the structure of the human body had been learned from a study of the muscles and bones of lower animals, so that we can judge of the incapacity of physicians and surgeons of medieval times. About the middle of the century Andreas Vesalius, a Belgian, became professor of anatomy at the University of Padua. He taught that the only way to obtain a correct knowledge of human anatomy was by dissecting the human body. Putting this theory into practice, he completely revolutionized the study of anatomy. He finally published a book in which he gave a description of many of the bones and organs of the body of which little had previously been known. In this way he brought his teaching to the notice of the Inquisition (a splendid Christian civilizer invented and put into use by Pope Innocent II.), which, upon a false charge of dissecting a man alive, condemned him to death. Charles V. interceded for his old physician, and the sentence was changed to a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. The vessel, however, was shipwrecked and Vesalius perished. This was the year in which Shakspere was born.

Medieval philosophers taught that the earth was the center of the starry systems, around which every heavenly body, even the sun itself, revolved. But Copernicus taught that the sun was the center of our planetary system, and that the earth, with other planets, revolved around it. It is said he died just in time to escape being burnt for heresy. But the church was still furious, and some one had to suffer for spreading the damnable heresy, so Bruno, a Dominican friar, was burnt at the stake in the last year of the sixteenth century. And it has been truly said, "To-day his monument rises above the cross of Rome." What does that mean? Was the church right? Hardly; Bruno must hav come nearer the truth than the church, assisted by its God as it was.

And these are the civilizing influences the church has been preaching in all ages. These are facts that no supreme, no infinit being can beat around. They stand as monuments to the infernal arrogance and cruelty of the Christian church. Science has at last succeeded in lighting up gloom established by Christian hate. The credulous used to ask, "Where was Moses when the light went out?" The fact of the matter was, they never had any light to put out. But now, since Darwin, Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, Haeckel, and Thos. A. Edison hav lit the intellectual lights, we ask, undaunted and fearless, "Where is the Christian God?" Ha! ha!

I am told every day I am tearing down and giving nothing in the place of what I am pulling down. And I tell them, it is enough to know that it does not exist. I direct them to the Religion of Humanity instead. It covers with its broad mantle the footsore and weary, the tired and lonely. It takes in its outstretched arms the jaded, the jilted, the old and the young, the kind and the cruel. It is always at your service. Brethren, let us laugh, yes, always. JAS. SPELLEN.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Invocation to Song.

Child of my spirit, song of my soul,
Whither to-day?
Giv from thy measure every sweet dole
Sorrow to stay;
While I come mournfully make me but whole;
Heed me, I pray.

I hav besought thee early and long
In the fierce rain,
Here amid haunts that harbor each wrong
Pleading in vain—
Child of my waiting heart, add to my song
Labor's refrain.

Tell of the tender babes toiling for bread—
Little white slaves;
Sing of the homeless herd dying and dead,
Low in their graves;
Say that humanity soon shall be fed,
Wrecked on life's waves.

MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Talks on Political Economy (Continued).

One lovely May afternoon Isabella sent a note to Ethel by an obliging schoolmate to try and get permission to go out on the grounds that afternoon, as she particularly wished to see her. Ethel soon got the coveted permission, and going to their favorit nook under the elm-tree, she espied Isabella reading a familiar-looking book, which turned out to be nothing less than the aforementioned "Social Wealth," by J. K. Ingalls. Now, Ethel knew what Isabella wanted her for, though she asked as though she did not, and Belle replied: "I wanted to see you, for I felt this afternoon like talking political economy. My request to see you did not inconvenience you in any way?" she asked in evident concern. Upon Ethel replying in the negativ, Isabella continued: "I hav, as you perhaps may hav observed, been reading Mr. Ingalls's book. It is very instructiv and has some very plausible arguments, though I do not agree with all of them. However, this is not the point. Since we had our last talk I hav learned to simplify the terms of political economy. I think it more lucid to drop the term land and make the factors in the products of wealth simply labor and capital." "What will you do with rent?" asked Ethel. "Make it one of the sources of the increase of capital," replied Belle. "Capital might be divided into two terms, abstract and concrete. If we ask a business man what his capital is, he will state a certain amount of money—an estimate of the amount of an inventory of his stock, buildings, and implements. This amount is abstract capital, and the increase to which it is entitled we call interest; while the concrete, i. e., commodities that aid production—tools, buildings, materials, food, etc.—are entitled to the increase rent. A man may rent his house or a plow as well as land." "What do you understand by the 'wage fund?'" asked Ethel. "It was argued by the early economists," answered Isabella, "that wages were drawn from capital. And capital was afterward referred to as 'a fund for the maintenance of labor.' But it is generally claimed now that wages are drawn from capital; it is not necessarily capital created by the laborer." "Why do you say"—this from Ethel—"that capital is entitled to this increase?" "Because," answered Belle, "the capitalist has acquired it by abstinence and self-denial. But the fact of increase is a fact of nature, and if the owner is not entitled to it, I don't know who is." "Yes," said Ethel, "but is it a fact of nature, or an arbitrary custom, or law, of covetous man? I can understand the aid to labor that capital is, but why it should be made a factor and be entitled to anything I cannot understand. The cultivator of itself will not cultivate." "But its owner may hire a laborer to do the cultivating," returned Isabella. "Of course, I am willing the owner should hav all the advantages that it may giv. But your theory of rent due to concrete capital would indicate that the use was not essential, the mere fact of possession should yield an increase." "No, indeed!" exclaimed Isabella in surprise; "I think that use is the only process of determining any rate of interest. What others giv for a thing, you ought to receive if you use it yourself. The trouble with your ideas is, that you allow your sympathies to wander with the poor, the incompetent; to create in your own mind a sense of wrong, of injustice, when no injustice exists, unless you claim that nature is unjust." "I think," said Ethel quietly, "that you will find it is not the use of capital that givs the increase, but the power its possessor has of holding it out of use. It is the monopoly of land and money that creates rent and interest. I think it is usury, not use, which reaps the increase." Isabella clasped her hands in front of her and looked down at her feet, as if imploring their aid. Looking up, she asked Ethel, "Did you ever hear of the marginal theory of rent?" "Not until now," answered Ethel. "Well, I'll tell about it," Belle said. "This theory I mentioned is generally known as the Ricardian law of rent, because Ricardo elaborated it. It assumes that the poorest land yields no rent; that when put under cultivation the laborer receives only his wages, and interest on what capital he may employ. After a time the fertilities of the soil, or the utilities, produce an excess over wages and interest; this is economic rent, and its amount is always determined between the poorest and most fertil lands. Ricardo seemed to hav confined the illustration to agriculture, but later economists hav destroyed all difference between land and other utilities and established the formula like this: Produce equals wages plus interest plus rent. Then produce minus rent equals wages plus interest." "All that," said Ethel, "sounds very plausible; but your theory supposed what does not exist—a state of nature. Where will you find the no-rent land that the laborer can put under cultivation, and employ his capital to fertilize?" "But," returned Belle, "don't you see, Ethel, that it is not essential to the theory that such land should exist; the theory would be equally good without it. We will say that the rent of land is equal to the value of what it produces minus the product of the poorest piece cultivated with the same outlay." "Yes," said Ethel, "but there is no difference in your distinction, at least none in kind. If he makes a small profit on his cultivation you call it wages. If he employs tool and machine and enlarges the profits, you call it interest. By and by other utilities enable him to again enlarge his profits, and you add economic rent. Yet it is all profit, and if obtained in fair competition it is simply wages of labor. Rent and interest as we know them are simply the result of monopoly—that power which is enabled by custom and law to hold the wealth of nature out of use, and place a tax upon all who would in the sweat of their brow eat bread."

Isabella rose, looked at her watch, bit her lip, and said: "I giv you the benefit of the last word, for duty calls me to the college now. Adieu, mam'selle logician!" And as Ethel smilingly nodded her adieu in return, Isabella entered the college.

IDA A. BALLOU.

Legend—Continued.

"Dear Jane," said Seth, "I called upon Mr. Wicklow, the Presbyterian clergyman, this morning, and saw his pet beaver building a dam with the books in his study. The little animal made a pile of Baxter's 'Saint's Rest,' a poem which Tennyson would not wish to write; Argyle's 'Reign of Law'—some of nature's laws would frighten a kind god. A work on miracles fell down and went to pieces, when this terrible talking beaver quoted Milton: 'The oracles are dumb,' and no miracles. Then there is no omnipotent God, who could, if he pleased, destroy every force in the universe, and substitute something else in its stead. If electricity were retired, we would change in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.'"

"How profane," said Mr. Wicklow. "Election and fate are the same thing; God and his laws are unchangeable." The beaver said, "Dam," but he meant no harm.

Poor Jane was silent and sad, for a Christian lady promised her a piece of work and part of the pay in advance, but broke her promis, and gave the rich embroidery to a young lady, who, though wealthy, wished extra funds for jewelry. Such things are done every day by female Christians. If a kind citizen made Jane a present, pious women would declare they were the donors.

Just then the raven came in with tears in his eyes. "Will you believe," said he, "that Christian liars hav said that I catch rats and mice for food? Would such people hav brains or thoughts at all, if the delicious roots of all intellectual treasures were not hid in the nature of such little beings as I am? Weak-minded as they are, they could not grasp the synthetic principles which pervade my nature."

"Yes," said Seth, "it took four old women to beat the synthetic genius out of me, for the fault of another boy. I am weary of worldliness. If a young lady proposes to marry me, I will inquire: Mary, can you wash the feet of the poor, the weary, the hungry, the desolate? Can you throw your arms around the neck of the abandoned woman, and whisper to her of something nobler and better, something which will raise her nature from earth to heaven? Our pursuits are not lofty. Let us awake, and though dressed in rags, let us labor for honor and peace, purity and unselfish holiness." ALHAZA.

What the Corner Is Doing.

A friend writes, "Do you know all that your Corner is doing? I guess not, and so I will say that a nephew of mine saw something once that one of the correspondents of the Corner wrote. It was some years ago. He writes to the author in short clothes, and the correspondence thus begun has been kept up, until, about a month ago, the young man hies away to Iowa and brings the said correspondent East as a life-partner. She appears a very worthy young lady, and says that her case reverses the usual order, which is that men generally come East to get their wives."

[Very good. And we wish all the happiness possible to the grown-up children of the Corner in their onward journey. May they always walk heart and hand together. May the matches made in the Corner never turn out so ill as some that are thought to be made in heaven.—ED. C. C.]

The Story of Two Foxes.

There is an old story of two foxes who were so lovingly attached to each other that they could not quarrel. One day, however, they decided that life would be less monotonous if they could only hav a difference, so they resolved to dispute about a piece of meat.

"I want that," cried one.

"Very well, dear fox," said the other, meekly, "take it."

"Oh, no, dear fox," said the first one, penitently. "I wouldn't take it away from you for worlds."

Thereupon they concluded that quarreling was an impossibility and resolved never to attempt it again.

Dick and Dora are twins and quite inseparable companions. One day, however, a little cloud arose and blackened upon their horizon.

"What's the matter?" called Dick, finding Dora sulking in a corner.

"Nothing!" was the dignified answer.

"Oh, come now, I know there is. Was it because I was playing with Tom Rogers?"

"No, it wasn't that," owned Dora, her eyes filling with tears; "but you needn't hav told me not to touch your things."

"I didn't mean it that way," protested honest Dick. "Truly I didn't. I just meant, 'Don't joggle till I get that knot tied.'"

"In future," began Dora, with the air of a queen determined not to be pacified, "if you want me to play with you"—here she paused, a roguish light rippled over her face—"you just mention it and I'll be there!" And the quarrel of the two little foxes was adjourned.

Pocket Theology.

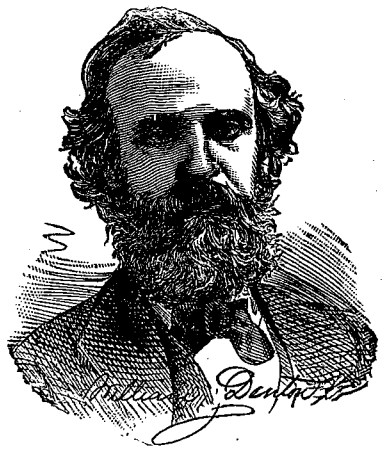
By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.



Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.

God Proposed for Onr National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religions Snbjects. $1.25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New Amerikan Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll; and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages; 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

At Alliance, O., a few days ago, Rev. Mr. Norton was providentially stricken with paralysis in the midst of a sermon.

Rev. J. Ives, of Bridgeport, Conn., was hanged in effigy on the 4th. He had been trying to hav street-cars stopped Sundays.

President Harrison has named for secretary of state John Foster, of Indiana, who has filled many embassadorial and similar positions.

The latest anti-Jewish move in Russia is the shutting of all Jewish pawnshops in Moscow, on trumped-up charges such as that their keepers cheat Christians and insult their women.

Christians are shocked at a report that the "Passion Play" as given in Switzerland—i. e., a drama representing Christ's crucifixion and preceding scenes—will be produced at the World's Fair.

The London Post's Paris correspondent says that the pope's encyclical will propose the canonization of Columbus as St. Christopher Columbus on the ground that the discovery of America was a divine inspiration.

Republicans say that they will urge the "Force bill." Democrats threaten armed resistance. They say: "No more momentous, no more perilous issue was ever tendered to the American people by a besotted and deluded party. Secession itself was not more pregnant with mischief."

Billy Buckley, the minstrel, while on a tour through England was seized with hallucinations that he had become privileged to hold conversations with God, and the like. Instead of receiving deference, and the writing down of his communications as scriptures, as would hav been the case of old, he was locked up as crazy.

The cholera, which has been devastating Asiatic countries, has spread to Russia, a land equally enthralled by superstition and hence adverse to sanitation, and it is feared that it may make its way through western Europe and perhaps to America. It might gain entrance here through the notorious incompetency of the physicians selected for the New York city health board by the Tammany-Catholic party, in return for political services.

Among the miraculous cures of the late Father Mollinger, of Pittsburgh, Pa., which are being trumpeted by Catholics, are: Mrs. Howard, Brooklyn, blindness. Mamie Crane, Sharon, Pa., blindness. F. Conway, Boston, Md., bronchitis. Mrs. John Hanner, Bridgeport, O., cancer. Mrs. Hackmann, Teutopolis, Ill., deafness. Mrs. John Morrisson, Butler, Pa., deafness. Philip McEnearney, insanity. John Thompson, Louisville, Ky., lameness. Mrs. Sarah McCallin, Rock's Run, Pa., paralysis.

The jealousies of the Protestant and the Catholic missionaries at Uganda, Africa, recently led to a pitched battle between a "Protestant army" and a "Catholic army." The Protestant forces with a mitrailleuse mowed down among the Catholics women and children. After repelling three attacks the Catholics were driven to the lake, and five or six hundred forced into it and drowned. The lives of Bishop Hirth and King Mwanga, who led the Catholics, were saved by the arrival of German military. European governments hav intervened.

Late storms both here and in Europe seem to hav made churches especial objects of destruction. At Meliana, Spain, lightning struck a church and killed ten worshipers and injured many. At Mucientes, in the same country, by a similar catastrophe five were killed and ten injured. At Burges the famous cathedral was damaged. As in Spain persons struck by lightning are firmly believed to be objects of divine wrath, consternation was occasioned. At Galesburg, Ill., the Methodist church was wrecked, one person being killed and several injured; the Baptist church was unsteepled, and the Congregational church injured. At Lafayette, Ill., every church was damaged.

The People's party in convention at Omaha nominated Gen. Jas. B. Weaver for president of the United States. Gresham was desired by many, but he declined. The party adopted a platform demanding issue of money direct to the people without the intervention of banks, "at a tax not to exceed two per cent per annum," according to the Farmers' Alliance sub-treasury plan or a similar one; "free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1;" increase of the currency to not less than $50 per capita; a graduated income tax; postal savings-banks; government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, and telephones; redemption of land held in excess of need by railroads and other corporations.

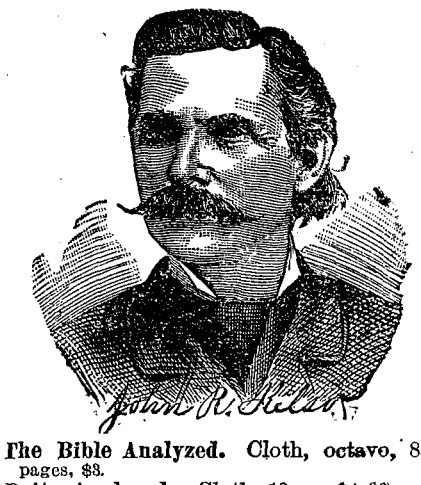
POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation,

THE
CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.
A Controversy between the
Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Max Muller,
Prof. T. H. Huxley, M. Reville,
E. Lynn Linton.
12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.



Answers to Christian Questions
And Arguments.
By D. M. Bennett. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.
By Karl Heinzen, the famous German Radical Editor.
An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman
Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.
BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.
By BRONSON D. KEELER.
Contents: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By Wm. McDonnell. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING
THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
S. D. Greene, 367 Nostrand ave., Brooklyn.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 916 Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

FOOD TONIC for INVALIDS, Because it gives fresh vitality, new strength—the power to throw off the shackles of disease.

USED BY CONVALESCENTS, Because it supplies the nerve and blood food necessary to a complete re-establishment of health.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia B. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1 50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Greene, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

I WAS educated to regard liberty as an evil; I hav learned to regard it as a good. —Gladstone.

EVEN if a man hath done evil a hundred times, let him not do it again.—Udanavarga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

THERE was a time when men beheld the truth, spake the truth, and lived in the truth, enjoying it alway.—Cullavagga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

IF you in wisdom would advance
You first must learn your ignorance;
And, when you've humbly learned it, then
Discover that of other men.—Anon.

To honor him who has merited it,
Who is worthy of it,
Uplifts the world.
—Mahamangalo-sutia, Buddhistic Scriptures.

To control the mind,
To liv in serenity,
This is wisdom,
This is happiness.
—Udanavarga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

THERE is not a popular magazine in this country that would dare to print a child's thought on important subjects without comment. It must be submitted to the D.D.'s. I would it were the chickadeedees.—Thoreau.

THE foundations of all history are the recitals of events made by fathers to their children, and afterward transmitted from one generation to another. They are, at most, only probable in their origin when they do not shock common sense, and they lose a degree of probability at every successiv transmission. With time, the fabulous increases and the true disappears; hence it arises that the original traditions and records of all nations are absurd. Thus the Egyptians had been governed for many ages by the gods. They had next been under the government of demigods; and, finally, they had kings for eleven thousand three hundred and forty years, and, during that period, the sun had changed four times from east to west.—Voltaire.

MODERN science ranges among exploded fables that idea that used to be entertained on the strength of religious myths, according to which man came out of the creator's hand as a ready-made product, endowed with all the qualities of his race. However obscure and incomprehensible the appearance of man on the earth's surface may hav seemed in former times, and however necessary it may hav been thought to explain or elucidate what an English scientist designated as the "secret of secrets" by the aid of a great miracle or of a supernatural act of creation, it has now become obvious to all men of science that the lofty form of man only owes its origin to a slow and gradual uprisal from the animals next below him, and that the beginnings of, and tendencies to, all his high physical and intellectual qualities and faculties are clearly present in the forms of life beneath him.—Büchner.

WE know that man is a conditioned being. We know that he is affected by a change of conditions. If he is ignorant he is superstitious: that is natural. If his brain is developed—if he perceives clearly that all things are naturally produced, he ceases to be superstitious, and becomes scientific. He is not a saint, but a savant—not a priest, but a philosopher. He does not worship—he works; he investigates; he thinks: he takes advantage, through intelligence, of the forces of nature. He is no longer the victim of appearances, the dupe of his own ignorance, and the persecutor of his fellow-men. He then knows that it is far better to love his wife and children than to love God. He then knows that the love of man for woman, of woman for man, of parent for child, of child for parent, is far better, far holier than the love of man for any phantom born of ignorance and fear.—Ingersoll.

CHRISTIANITY hurled the world back into devout ignorance and pious barbarism. For centuries there were no colleges for science and philosophy between Mohammedan Seville and Mohammedan Bagdad. "From the third to the thirteenth century," writes Draper, "Christianity gave to the world no scientific man;" and "for eight centuries," writes Buckle, "there was not in all Christian Europe four men who dared to express an independent opinion." There were only abbey-fuls of designing monks, and some thousands of swashbuckler nobles and devout serfs wallowing in ignorance and filth and bloodshed. Instruments of torture and the diabolical machinery of the Inquisition were their great inventions and discoveries; and their efforts were directed with too much success toward converting the cities and fields of earth into a fire-blackened and blood-soaked wilderness.—Saladin in God and His Book.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges. $4 50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8 00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN,

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

New model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, all modern improvements, and guaranteed a perfect timer. In silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold dust-proof case, $26; hunting, $31 to $35. Same, nickel movements, $2 more. In solid gold cases, $45 to $150.

Regular Grade American Watches.—In silverine case, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' Gold Watches.—All latest styles; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16.50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, enameled, or diamond-set cases, $2, $5, $10 to $100 more. All shipped in plush cases.

Diamonds in rings, pins, studs, etc., $10, $20, $50 up to $1,000 per set; guaranteed. 20 per cent below regular.

Sundries.—Sterling silver spoons, regular, in sets, $1.60 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, $1, $1.50 to $3. Best triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, same; teaspoons, $1.80; dessert spoons, $3; table spoons, $3.60, all for six. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2.

The Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon.—Acknowledged finest spoon out, sterling silver, massive, $2.50; gilt bowl, $3; orange gilt, $3.25; sugar gilt, $3.50; etched, "The Time to be Happy is Now," 50 cents extra. Extra heavy teaspoon, 50 cents more.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, small pins, $2, $2.75, $3.50; charms, $3, $4, $10; large pins, $3, $4, $5, $7, $14; charms, $5, $6, $15, $30.

All goods sent prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory.

I study to please; try me.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established 1857.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarrs, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence) You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS.
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ISAIAH'S GOD IS THE INVENTOR OF CONSUMPTION.

For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.—Isa. x, 23.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectnres. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 29. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 16, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE MORAL INFLUENCE OF THE GOSPEL—ANOTHER SAINT IN TROUBLE.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 398pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc.. etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price. cloth. 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco. gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.;

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2 Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 29. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 16, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 16, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Pope's Latest Order.

The pope thinks that the time has come for Catholics to take a hand in politics, at least in the diocese of New York, and force denominational schools. In his latest letter to the bishops of this province he commands them, at their next meeting, to seriously deliberate as to the best means of preventing the children of Catholic parents from attending schools where instruction in the Catholic creed is not given. Moreover, he says to the bishops, "we desire that you should endeavor to induce those who govern in your various states, and honestly acknowledge that of all things the most salutary to the republic is religion, to secure by wise legislation such a mode of teaching as shall not offend the religion and conscience of Catholics, who, equally with their non-Catholic fellow-citizens, furnish the means of education. We hav the conviction, based on the fair-mindedness and practical prudence of your countrymen, that they can be easily brought to lay aside suspicions and prejudices offensiv to the church, and to recognize freely the services of that power which dissipated pagan barbarism with the light of the gospel, and created a new society with all its glory of Christian virtues and human culture. Such considerations will, we hope, lead every man in your country to the conclusion that Catholic parents should not be forced to build and support schools and institutions they cannot use for the education of their children."

What this means is, in plain words, that the Catholics shall force, by means of their ignorantly compact mass of voting tools, our state government to set up and maintain denominational schools, giving the selection of teachers and course of study to the officials of the various sects. That the pope has given this command at the present time, and for this diocese, shows that he knows the power of Tammany Hall and is not only willing to use it, but intends to use it. And there is too much reason to fear that he will use it successfully. He may not be able to establish the system of denominational schools at once, but his tools may find some way of turning state funds over to Catholic schools, as they now obtain money to maintain their asylums and convents on the pretext of supporting children which would otherwise become state charges. The Freeman's Journal says: "With union, fearlessness, and perseverance in our own ranks, we can win in this battle for religion and education one of the grandest of victories, not only for ourselvs, but for the mass of our countrymen who fail to appreciate the de-Christianizing influence of an instruction which sharpens the wits at the expense of the hearts. If, in the deliberations recommended by the holy father, our bishops map out a plan of action which, in their judgment, will be feasible and satisfactory, they will find a ready coöperation in carrying it out from laymen, who hav for years been hoping and praying for some such word from those whose duty it has been to take the initiativ in such an important matter. Pope Leo has spoken wisely and well. Close up the ranks, friends of faith and fatherland, and stand together in a grand determined effort for that which is ours in the nature of things and ought to be ours without question, at this day of our civilization."

The plan of action will undoubtedly be a demand for appropriations for Catholic schools, whether the other sects get any or not, and the coöperation of the laymen will be to vote as they are ordered.

Christianity Does Harm to Morals, and Does Harm by Its Charity.

Among the considerations which induce many disbelievers in Christianity to forbear opposing that religion, two are: the notion that the Christian pulpit does service to morality, and the notion that the church does good by fostering the practice of charity. We purpose to show that in both of these articles the church does more harm than good.

Now, the method by which the reader will be enabled to detect the harmfulness of the church in these two matters, is, to transfer his attention from their conspicuous and striking aspects to those aspects which are inconspicuous and easy to be overlooked. To divert his regard from immediate, instant effects to those effects which succeed later and indirectly or at the end of a succession of causes and effects. This method of investigation we see around us daily to be the only one by which we can reach the truth in many matters; for instance, did we dwell only on the immediate and obvious effects of a parent's chastisement of his child we should be led into the mistaken belief that he meant the child harm, and should we attend exclusivly to the first and plainest results of a sower's scattering his grain over the fields we should deceive ourselvs with the supposition that he was perpetrating wanton waste. And so some persons by confining their attention exclusivly to those effects of the church's denunciation of immorality and inculcation of charity which are the first and the most apparent—namely, abhorrence of immorality induced in some, and present comfort conferred upon the relieved destitute—fall into as great errors in regard to the total effect of the church on wrong-doing and poverty.

The slight good worked by the church in its sermonic condemnation of wrong-doing is, we affirm, vastly overbalanced by the furtherance given to wrong-doing by a large number of its other influences. The main one of these evil influences is, perhaps, the suppression of the natural activities which would divert men's energies into innocuous and profitable exercises. Ecclesiasticism just in proportion as it has had the power has repressed cultivation and science; when it was in the plenitude of its power it had nearly accomplished their total extinction. In doing this it essayed the destruction of agencies more powerful in decreasing wrong-doing than all of its pulpitry multiplied a thousandfold. For the nature of man is and must be irrepressibly activ; man must be doing, and if not given good to do, he will do bad; his energies will pour through some outlet, and if that of harmless study and industry is closed they will seek that of turbulence and dissipation. During the ages when the church wielded most power and most exhorted to morality, strife, both national and individual, was most prevalent and vice most rampant. The people were prohibited from learning and culture; they were forbidden scientific inquiry, and thereby the manufactures and other industries which science when applied givs birth to; and the mischief which the devil found for their idle hands to do is written in what are history's most melancholy pages. The vital power of man is limited, and what is drawn in one direction cannot flow in another. The nervous force that is consumed in intellectual action does not remain to feed the fires of anger or of sensuality. Man is willing to study, to observe, to discuss, to experiment, to invent, to philosophize; but if prevented from doing these things, he is, unfortunately, not unwilling to fight, to lecher, and to sot. That element of combativness, destructivness, which forms so large a part of man's mental endowment, must and will operate; when debarred from acting on nature it spends itself on humanity. The moralizer of mankind is not the priest or the preacher; it is the scientist, the literator, the artist, the culturist, the inventor. By the bloody priest and the barren preacher of former ages we were made only worse; by the Benthams, Voltaires, Hugos, Burnses, Jeffersons, and Edisons of the present we are being made better every day.

There are many other influences of ecclesiasticism which make for immorality. One unfortunate effect of the denunciation which is the cleric's only weapon against ill deeds, is to stimulate to the doing of the very thing denounced a certain proportion of every congregation. To a numerous portion of humanity stolen fruit is sweet. They enjoy with redoubled zest that which has a spice of daring and wickedness. Such people would be infinitly better served by the presentation of those objects of innocent interest with which culture and science abound, with but a passing reference to the emptiness and inadvisableness of vice, than by the revelations and inveighments of the sensational preacher. Another evil influence of Christianity is its pointing us to the wrong object for our love and service—God instead of man. Another, connected with the foregoing, is its substitution of ceremonies and formalities for actual deeds of substantial benefit. Another is, the provision which it makes for absolvement from crime through the means of a redeemer. Another is, the vileness of the collection of barbarian writings which it chanced to adopt as sacred and is now obliged to maintain. Another is, the fostering of the cruel and malign passions by the intolerance and persecutions which its tenet that it is necessary to salvation givs rise to. Another is, its suppression of that guide without which we should never be able to reach the right however fervent and united we might be in desire to do so—the intellect.

But these latter are the minor ones among Christianity's ill influences. The chief one we believe to be that indicated in the preceding paragraph. What we would lay most stress upon is the wisdom of providing a proper object for man's activities, rather than endeavoring to eradicate them. Indirect means, not direct means, hav accomplished most in the history of the race. Substitution, is the key-word.

Our second design in this article was to show that Christianity does harm by its charity. In this, as in our preceding topic, the reader is to withdraw his gaze from the immediate effect of charity, which alone the church desires us to see, and examin its remote and indirect effects. These remoter effects are, first, the deferral of some readjustment of economic conditions which, labor reformers pledge us, will render charity unnecessary; and, second, the encouragement of pauperism and diminishment of industry. The procrastination by charity of the justice which is better than charity, we will not dwell on; economic reformers set it forth sufficiently. Most of our readers know already how the church opposes that intellectual activity and untrammeled thinking which alone can giv us light on this or any other subject; they know that the best ideal which the church has been able to evolve in this matter is the proprietor of endless acres who will giv the tillers thereof such charity as will keep them alive, and giv themselvs, the clergy, somewhat more to hire them to preach the workers into submission. The other harm which we pointed out as done by indiscriminate Christian charity, namely, fosterment of pauperism and diminution of industry, space limits preclude expatiation upon; the evil worked in every European land for centuries we cannot particularize; let a description of a late instance in England alone, given in the words of the historian Mackenzie, suffice:

"The evils of pauperism in England had in 1835 become unendurable, and it was felt that some attempt to remedy them could no longer be delayed. According to the wise practice which about that time came into frequent use, a commission of inquiry was appointed, that legislation might be based on competent knowledge. The investigation of the commissioners revealed a system 'destructiv to the industry, forethought, and honesty of the laborers; to the wealth and morality of the employers of labor and of the owners of property; and to the mutual good will and happiness of all.' The enormous cost of the system—nearly eight million sterling—was not by any means its most serious aspect. It was achieving with appalling rapidity the utter demoralization of the English peasantry. Already the wholesome repugnance to accept the pauper's dole had become almost extinct. In some counties men refused to work, as they preferred the easier and ampler maintenance of the parish. Wages were supplemented from the rates, and in consequence fell so low that they ceased to yield support to the laborer. There were whole parishes in which the laborers were paid partly by their employers and partly from the rates. There were other parishes where cultivation actually ceased, because the revenue yielded by the land was not equal to the sum exacted for support of the poor. Relief was demanded as a right, and in some counties was avowedly given to all who applied. Pauperism had become hereditary. Once conceded to the applicant, the privilege was continued during life, and transmitted to his idle and debased progeny. Money thus acquired was spent freely in vicious indulgence. Tradesmen bribed the parish officers to obtain for them contracts at unjust prices. The parochial administration with fatal rapidity was corrupting the poor and consuming the substance of the rich.

"So deeply were these evils felt that some voices were raised for the total abolition of poor laws as the only cure. Parliament enacted that outdoor relief of the able-bodied, except in cases of emergency, should cease. Henceforth the pauper would not ordinarily receive money to be expended at his discretion; he would receive food and lodging, in order to obtain which he must accept the restraints of a strictly governed workhouse. The supplementing of wages from the rates was forbidden. A central board, with large powers, was appointed to direct the administration of the law. A vast and most beneficent change in the condition of the English peasantry takes its date from that day. Two years after, wages had risen; the able-bodied paupers had found employment, and were self-supporting. The rates had diminished forty per cent. There was gradually a marked change for the better in the habits of the working people, and a marked decrease of illegitimate births. But this amelioration has not been progressiv; indeed, it has not been permanent. In course of years the practice of giving outdoor relief became once more so habitual that now only about one-ninth of the paupers enter the workhouse. One person in every twenty is a pauper. The annual cost of pauperism in England and Wales exceeds seven million sterling. Nor is the expense of the system its greatest evil. It is a yet greater calamity that so large a proportion of the people hav fallen so low as to compete for a disgraceful maintenance out of the earnings of others rather than undergo the labor by which they might honorably support themselvs."

The charity which Mackenzie speaks of above was not, it is true, administered by the church, but it was managed by the people upon the system to which the church had habituated them. Such is the effect both of church charities and of charities by church-impregnated governments. The church is responsible.

Thus, then, let us repeat that the church, with her one weapon of denunciation and her many anti-moral influences, does morality more harm than good; that by her charity, and encouragement of the state to ill-judged charity, she does more harm than good; that the reason that she is thought to do good is that most people are prone to judge by superficial and immediate consequences; and, finally, that Rationalists are to detect that she does harm by directing their attention to deeper-lying and remoter consequences.

Preparing to Tyrannize Us.

The Society of Christian Endeavor opened a huge convention in New York city on the 7th inst. Railroad men call the excursion to it one of the biggest in modern times. Excursions came from every state, and from Manitoba and Canada. The city was thronged with sour-faced and one-ideaed strangers, each wearing a white badge bearing an E within a C.

Dr. Deems delivered the address of welcome. The pledge of the society he modestly styled the nearest approach to inspired writing since the canon of the scripture had been closed. He prophesied a membership for the society of eight millions before the close of the century. It now claims one million two hundred thousand.

Next came Rev. Mr. Dixon, of New York. The World thus describes an incident of Dixon's introduction:

"The interesting part of his speech was his welcome. President Clark said Mr. Dixon was loved for the enemies he had made. He meant the suit for libel which Colonel Ingersoll has begun against Mr. Dixon. They all understood. They read the papers. They don't need a map and guide for such things, and they applauded, once, twice, three times. The wave of handclapping rose, broke, and subsided. Mr. Dixon opened his mouth to speak and had to stop, for a fourth wave came up."

The Rev. R. V. Hunter, of Terre Haute, Ind., was introduced to report from the committee on Sunday closing of the World's Fair. "There are some people who would like the World's Fair to be opened on Sunday," he began. "Are there any of them here?" A monster "No!" came from the audience. "I am glad to hear so many of us express ourselvs that way," exclaimed Chairman Hunter, and then he read his report. Parts of this report we will giv here:

"A mighty struggle is waging in our nation over our historic Sabbath. Shall we allow this restful day to be displaced by the continental Sunday? More than a million Endeavorers join with other millions of good and patriotic people in protest.

"If the Columbian Exposition is to be our Thermopylæ, like Leonidas and his heroic band we should stand immovable against the heathen hordes.

"It should be understood that this question is one of theism and anti-theism. Whether or not the World's Fair shall be opened on Sunday, with all its accessories of evil, is a contest, virtually, between the true religion and Atheism. In the name of liberty those who advocate Sunday opening would destroy our institutions and bring perpetual ruin and blight upon the land that has nurtured them and that has furnished them with refuge from oppression."

"In the name of liberty" no good institution has ever been destroyed. Every experiment in the direction of liberty, history shows, has resulted in increased prosperity. But "perpetual ruin and blight" has been brought upon many a land by the constricting and imbruting despotism of just such meddlers as these.

It is here said that Sunday-openers would ruin "the land that has nurtured them and furnished them with refuge from oppression." What refuge from oppression did this land furnish the Quakers, and other dissenters, and so-called witches, of New England? What did it furnish anyone before diffusion of the views of a few Freethinkers stayed the hand of persecution and began to make the country a fit one to liv in? What refuge is it today furnishing the Adventists of Southern regions where Freethought has scantily penetrated? Did this country furnish a refuge from oppression to Thomas Paine who after publishing "The Age of Reason" could not walk New York streets with safety? No, but he, Paine himself, with a few others like him, made this country whatever it is of a refuge from despotism both political and religious. Paine and Jefferson and Franklin and other Infidels gave this country what of liberty it enjoys; and the action and desire of Christians has been solely to take that liberty away.

"This nation owes what it is largely to the Christian religion. The Sabbath is one of the essential factors of this religion. To desecrate it would be to smite the breast that has nurtured us."

What good does this nation "owe to the Christian religion?" Has that religion added to our scientific achievements? Has it contributed to our inventions? Where are its literary works? Has it educated our children? Has it bridged our rivers or laid our railroads? Does it help us to govern? Did it aid to free the slaves? Did it preserve the Union? Are we to infer, judging from the condition of the South American and European nations where it has most control, that it has promoted our morals? What has it done?

"As patriots, as intelligent beings, and as Christians, can we do this irrational thing? Forbid it, almighty God!

"It is not a question as to whether the gates of the Fair shall be opened on Sunday, but shall they continue to be opened? In the language of one of the commissioners, 'The gates are now open.' I understand that already thousands are visiting the grounds every Sunday."

Yes, fortunately, the Secularists hav won the first move of this interesting game.

"Who are these that demand that the gates of the Columbian Exposition shall be opened on Sunday?

"1. Some who are financially interested in the monster project.

"2. Some foreigners who are not accustomed to our American Christian Sabbath.

"3. Americans by birth of the Ingersoll type.

"4. A small proportion of ill-informed and misguided laboring people, who do not see that their advocacy of a Sunday exposition is the forging of the chains which will in time bind their class in a slavery more relentless than that of the black man prior to 1863.

"5. A few people of respectability who care nothing for religion, and who hav never weighed this question in its patriotic, humane, and historic bearings.

"We believe these classes are largely in the minority. Yet there is a great danger that because of their loud demands, greatly assisted by monetary considerations, they will carry the day."

These classes are not "in the minority." Those who wish the Fair closed are the minority. The bigots are organized and fanatical, and make themselvs heard the soonest and most numerously; but the angry outcry that will rise from multitudes if they are debarred Sundays will show how many are obliged and how many disobliged by the act.

"We understand the machinery is not to run on that day. But that is of comparativly little consequence. The gates will be open and the attractions will be sufficient to draw immense crowds to Chicago. Innumerable excursions will run into the city; tens of thousands of people must labor in consequence; Sunday will be disregarded; good morals will be outraged; law will be broken; our nation will be disgraced in the eyes of the world, and almighty God will be dishonored."

If almighty God is going to be dishonored, we would say, let him interfere. As he makes no sign, we must conclude that the trouble is not any incivility to be shown that very retiring personage, but a depletion of the parsons' own pockets.

The report proceeds: "You ask, What can Christian Endeavorers do to avert this national disaster?" and after recounting extensiv labors says:

"As a result of this work tens of thousands of letters hav been written to United States Senators, Representativs, legislators, commissioners—state and national—begging that our nation may be spared the disgrace and humiliation of a violated Sunday and of a national saloon.

"Resolutions and protests without number hav been filed with the proper authorities, with what success the future alone will reveal. Your committee is of the opinion that personal letters written to those who are in authority and personal appeals are more effectiv than resolutions and protests. As an evidence that our Congressmen care but little for these protests so long as they hav no fear that their action will not be remembered against them at the polls, the following incident may illustrate:

"A member of your committee writes under date of June 23d as follows:

"'I am told by an eye-witness that a two-bushel basket of petitions against Sunday opening of the World's Fair were laughed over and drank over by the Congressional committee into whose hands they had fallen, and were never even read or examined, tabulated or counted."

This we believe true enough. Congressmen are in the main a broad-minded, well-informed lot, who do deride the bigots and religionists in secret, and would if it rested with them alone free the land from the last vestiges of ecclesiastical bondage. But they must feign and dissimulate to retain their constituency. And thus the outlook is not altogether bright.

"Our Congressmen must learn that there are questions which lie very near to the hearts of several million Americans other than the coinage of silver and the tariff."

It is, indeed, time that the Congressmen and all the people learn that there are questions as to the relations of church and state here in America more important than any others to-day. We hav often said so, and must so repeat till church properties are taxed, the Christian scriptures removed from our schools, holidays made purely civil, and the last forms of the present un-American and dangerous alliance of church and state abolished.

This unlovely gathering next resolved, among other things:

"That the chairman and secretary of this convention be requested to telegraph the following to the speaker of the House of Representativs and to the president of the United States Senate:

"The eleventh annual convention of Christian Endeavorers assembled in New York city, 20,000 strong, and representing 1,200,000 people, respectfully request the Senate of the United States, in connection with the House of Representativs, to take such action as will compel the commissioners of the Columbian Exposition to close the gates of that great institution upon the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday."

At the close of this the first day's proceedings Dr. Clark announced:

"Another piece of good news: Great Britain and Canada hav decided that their exhibits shall not be opened on Sunday."

This brought an exultant grin to the faces of these precious fellows who want to make everybody in the world think and act just as they take it into their own narrow noddles to. The Ohio Musical Quartet now favored the assembly with this declaration:

"O-hi-O,
We won't go
To the World's Fair
If it keeps open Sunday, or liquor's sold there."

The long ears of the hearers as they took in these strains nodded in approbation, subdued brays of concurrence arose and died away, a smile of confidence diffused itself on their not overintellectual visages, and a twinkling in their eyes told of augmenting hope of gratification of their desire to bully and domineer.

The subject of our first-page illustration this week is the transaction narrated in the following dispatch: "Visalia, Cal., June 30th.—Rev. James Wilson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, was Tuesday night given twenty-four hours to leave town. Wilson was in the habit of taking two young girls out riding in a buggy, and on several occasions took undue liberties with them. Tuesday the father of the children came to town to kill Wilson, but was persuaded not to do so by deacons of the church. Wilson acknowledged his guilt. He is over seventy years of age, and heretofore has been greatly esteemed. He left town last evening, leaving his family behind." This is but one incident among the multitude of like ones which fill the daily papers, and which hav made it a matter of common notoriety that the ministry abounds more in sexual crimes than any other class. It is not pleasant to be ever on the chase after such people and their misdeeds, but it seems to be necessary in order that the claim of Christianity that it promotes morality may be shown false.

The Louisville Courier-Journal remarks that "Colonel Shepard has unquestionably a great head," and the Voice comments: "So has a cabbage." What we want to know is, why this discord among the brethren? Is it because Deacon Shepard and Elder Funk are rivals in minding other people's business?

In the West.

News and Notes.

Reno, Nev., made ample amends for all the disappointments I suffered at other places. I lectured there on Sunday evening, June 26th, to a large audience, and found the same warm welcome as before, with substantial gifts for the campaign work. The Liberals of Reno are unstinted in their generosity. They do not do things by halves, but with whole-hearted enthusiasm.

I must thank Miss Kate and Miss Annie Sunderland and Mrs. Mary Nelson for the beautiful music which they furnished for the Sunday evening lecture, and which added greatly to the interest of the occasion.

Mr. John Sunderland, whose hospitality I enjoyed, has a model family—four girls and two boys—who since their mother died hav been carefully reared by their father, and show the beautiful results of a Secular education, where fear and superstition hav no place, and humanity prevails. All the children possess a fine musical genius, and during my stay the path of toil was made cheerful with melodious hours.

I was glad to meet my brave veteran friend, Harmon Wright, the grandfather of these children, and also Miss Martha Wright, their mother's sister. I was delighted to discover that Mr. Wright was also the father of F. F. Wright, of San Diego, who is well known for his devotion to the Liberal cause.

Charles Jones, a young lawyer of Reno, of marked ability, an earnest and enthusiastic speaker, and a generous supporter, introduced me on Sunday evening. He is not afraid to stand by his colors. Mr. H. A. Waldo, who introduced me on the first evening; Judge W. H. Young, H. H. Greer, Peter Gilson, Stephen Conner, R. L. Fulton, H. S. Wright, and many others, make a splendid company for Freethought.

Washoe valley is one of the most productiv domains in the world. Fruits of almost every kind are raised in great abundance. The apples of this region are of a superior flavor, and command an extra price in the market. Mr. Sunderland showed me apples over a year old and finely preserved. This is also an excellent stock country. There is a ready sale for everything produced. I hav not seen any place large or small that is pervaded with finer indications of progress.

The Salvation Army is here, among other institutions. Its numbers are not large, but they make a great deal of music and noise, and march the streets as if the Lord was indeed with them. One of their number, a captain, I believe, armed with the Holy Ghost, ventured to tackle me at the first lecture. I gave him full swing and hoped he would amount to something. But it was the same old story, the love of Jesus, etc., and at the end of ten minutes he was exhausted of his ammunition, and concluded by saying, "I hav given witness to my faith. I will now disperse." And he did "disperse." He suddenly wheeled off the platform like a bicycle, and I saw him no more. I had great pleasure in answering him. It was a picnic.

I hope to return to Reno. It is really inspiring to work in a place like this, to meet these friends, and to receive such generous support.

I could not hav closed my trip East and West, of nearly twenty thousand miles, under more favorable circumstances, and it givs hope and courage for the still immeasurable fields of labor.

I had the peculiar pleasure while at Reno Monday morning of being introduced to the simonpure Indian messiah, Johnson Sides. This was the first time that the Infidel Pilgrim in his peregrinations had ever struck a messiah, and he was quite delighted to find out just what is a messiah. I am quite sure that the Indian messiah will compare favorably with any other messiah, new or old. I should say that he is a "brick," and I think that is the secret of the success of every messiah. There is a good quality of human nature about them after all. It is not any supernatural gift they possess that givs them power, but vigorous character. Now, the Indian messiah never claimed to be a messiah. He was utterly astonished when he saw his picture printed in the Police Gazette as the Jesus Christ of the Indians. "A hell of a Jesus Christ I would make," said he, with honest fervor, to John Sunderland. This is just exactly what he said, although I suppose it will never be so put down in the books. These thoroughly sincere expressions never do get recorded. As Wendell Phillips says, "History is a lie." I hav no doubt that Jesus would express the same sentiments if he could realize the enormous racket that has been stirred up to vindicate his anointed majesty.

I find Johnson Sides, the Indian "Jesus Christ," to be a very sensible fellow. He says: "What the Indian needs is education, work—let by-gones be by-gones—make the best of what is, look to the future."

The Indian messiah says, "Some Indians are d——d fools," and hence the messiah craze. But are not some white men also d——d fools? "Don't they hav the messiah craze?" Johnson Sides again inquires, "What's the difference?" Johnson says, "The medicin man claims that he can pluck down the sun, moon, and stars; that he can control the lightnings and earthquakes; that he can cut off hands and feet and put them on again, etc.—all these things the medicin man says he can do"—but, Johnson says, "I never see him do it." Johnson thinks that nature is the only power, that we must trust in nature and work through nature. Plow the soil, plant the seed, that is the way to reap the harvest.

Johnson is a philosopher, I think, and as good and wise as any philosopher, Christian or otherwise, that has ever lived.

As a matter of fact, he never claimed to be a messiah. He repudiated the title, rejected the miraculous, and yet he was accepted by thousands and thousands of Indians as the messiah. Deputation after deputation waited upon him, and would do him honor. If he had died at that time he would hav been enthroned as a great and supernatural being. Fortunately he has lived long enough to giv the truth of the matter. But his experience shows how easy it is for people to be humbugged, even without the consent of the messiah himself. If we could get at the foundation of all the messianic myths we should find without doubt that they had no more facts to start with than the latest "craze." If we could penetrate to the reality of every "Christ" who has adorned or clouded the pages of history, we should discover, as in the case of Johnson Sides, that the "avatar" was after all a plain-spoken, honest man who had no craving for divine honors and only wanted to help the people.

I like Johnson Sides. He is evidently a power among the Indians, but solely because he believes in peace, and that the best thing for the Indian to do is to trust in his own genius and work out his destiny according to nature's laws.

If every "messiah" had been as much a "man of affairs" as Johnson there would hav been far less bloodshed and more civilization.

My acquaintance with Johnson Sides has given me some new ideas in regard to the interpretation of human history.

On Monday morning I leave Reno for the Golden Gate. The journey over the vast Sierras is wonderful in its magnificence. You mount above the snows, the audacious iron horse cleaving his way almost among the clouds, as if he were a Pegasus. Far below is the gleaming lake; round about are the mighty and swelling hills, like fantastic billows tumbling against the immense horizon. Down we come into California's gleaming vales. How beautiful they look, with glowing grain and glowing fruits. Sacramento's superb capital glitters in the moonlight. Then the great bay stretches before the rushing train. Then San Francisco lifts its far-flashing brow. Then the distant glory of the Pacific peers through the majestic mountains. One day I remain in San Francisco with its panoramic life, its cosmopolitan glare, and rustle and tussle—bright and beautiful in the sunshine. The winds blow and make the waters resplendent with innumerable waves. The air becomes bracing and the cool night rolls on while the city blazes like a palace.

Then, northward I pursue my thousand-mile journey, up the Sacramento valley, through the interminable forests out of whose bosom Mt. Shasta lifts its pyramid of snow, and as we circle a hundred miles away its perpetual glory crowns the illimitable scene. Then we lose sight of this imperial mass as we slowly climb the Siskiyous, while enormous gulfs open before us; then we plunge into the shining Rogue River valley, while the sunset makes purple and golden splendor along our swift way; then with the darkness of the night we wind through the precipitous canyons until the morning's rays flood before our dreamy vision the valley of the Willamette, gorgeous with summer's wealth. Then Portland beams along the river's side. The flags are flying from a hundred boats. The dark-green hights glimmer above the spacious buildings. Far off Mount Hood adorns the cloud-decorated horizon. Here, twelve hundred miles from where I wrote the last News and Notes, I pen these News and Notes; and before me opens another vista of travel—from the bosom of the Columbia to the Palisades of the Hudson. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Portland, Ore., July 2, 1892.

Is the Bible Inspired?

MILWAUKEE, ORE., July 30, 291.

MR. EDITOR: A lady friend in Sacramento sent me a lecture of H. L. Hastings on the "Inspiration of the Bible," delivered before the Massachusetts Young Men's Christian Association. I hav written her the inclosed review of one or two points in the lecture.

D. PRIESTLEY.

MRS. D. D. SMITH, Dear Friend: I wish to thank you for the pamphlet you sent me. I hav read it over carefully, though I had read it before several years ago. Of course it looks to you as if Mr. Hastings had made everything very plain. This is because you hav never paid strict attention to what others besides preachers hav to say. To show you that such arguments do not impress the average young man in our day, take the statement of the June Record of Christian Work to the effect that there are in the state of Illinois over 650,000 young men; of these 500,000 never attend church, 150,000 attend church occasionally, and 70,000 are professed Christians.

What does it signify to tell us how many Bibles are printed, and in how many languages, so long as no one accepts it or thinks of accepting it as a practical guide in life?

Mr. Hastings ought to be ashamed of himself to tell over those old bugaboo stories about Voltaire and Paine. They are not true. They hav been refuted a hundred times. Why do they not giv us something new? Why not hav the candor to say that outspoken Infidels die by the hundred every year and die as peacefully as infants going to sleep? Why not tell us of the death-beds of D. M. Bennett, Courtlandt Palmer, Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, and Charles Bradlaugh? Is it manly to prowl about Infidel death-beds in order to gloat over their dying agonies? What kind of a religion is it that would put thorns in the pillow of a dying man? Why not tell us that even the founder of the Christian religion, though he is claimed to be more than human, could not die with equanimity, but sweat, as it were, great drops of blood in his abject terror at the prospect of death, and cried out with his last breath, "My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" When cold-blooded murderers can go peacefully to their deaths, as four did in Sing Sing prison the other day, why should Infidels fear to die?

I do not wish to worry you, but would like to hav you see that Mr. Hastings, Mr. Moody, Mr. Jones, and that style of agitators, can never convince an earnest seeker of truth, simply because nearly every statement they make is either a fallacy, a misstatement, or a misapprehension.

For instance, Mr. Hastings says Paine was a drunkard. Hence he wants you to infer that Paine was a very bad man. Noah was picked out of the world as the only righteous man in it. Noah got drunk and cursed part of his descendants to perpetual slavery, and Mr. Hastings asks, "What of it?" Mr. Hastings wants it inferred that Infidels are a bad lot, because they admire Paine, and Paine was a drunkard. But the Infidels hav taken the trouble to prove that the preachers hav lied about Paine—that he was not a drunkard. The Christian's own inspired book says that Lot got drunk, and became the father of his own grandchildren, and yet he is brought forward into the New Testament as "just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversations of the wicked, for that righteous man, dwelling among them, seeing and hearing vexed his righteous soul, from day to day, with their unlawful deeds" (2 Pet. ii, 7, 8).

They must hav been a bad lot if they were worse than "righteous Lot."

Mr. Hastings is either stupid or uncandid when he represents that Infidels object to the Bible because it givs truthful biographies of those murderous old patriarchs and prophets, though there is no reason why any book should be filled with cruelty and filth when there are so many useful and pretty things to write about. But the point is, that those cruel and horrid deeds are represented as right in the sight of God.

"Because David did right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from anything that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite" (1 Kings xv, 5).

Let us note some of the deeds which David did which were right in the eyes of the Lord. Michal was David's wife, and Rizpah was his concubine. David gave the five sons of Michal the daughter of Saul, and the two sons of Rizpah the concubine of Saul, to be hanged up before the Lord as human sacrifices. And Rizpah sat upon a rock all through barley harvest, and watched night and day to keep the buzzards and jackals from the corpses of her sons. Put yourself in poor Rizpah's place, and then express your opinion of David and of what is right in the eyes of the Lord. (See 2 Sam. xxi.)

Don't you think Michal enjoyed David's society after he had hanged her five sons all in a row, and left them there to rot without burial?

Read chapter xx of 1 Chronicles—how David captured Rabbah "and brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes; even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon." Recollect this included all the people—the aged and the sucking child, the women and children. "The Sweet Singer of Israel" was gloating over scenes like these when he warbled sweetly, "Blessed is everyone that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones."

Here is a humorous little incident which forms a paragraph by itself:

"And David came to his house at Jerusalem, and the king took the ten women his concubines whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in ward and fed them but went not in unto them. So they were shut up unto the day of their death living in widowhood" (2 Sam. xx, 3).

This, too, was done with divine sanction. When God supplies a man after his own heart so plentifully with wives and concubines that he can spare ten of them for perpetual imprisonment, it is hardly to be wondered at that there should be a mild protest when he steals a friend's wife and then coolly and deliberately murders that friend. When God brings forward a man after his own heart to be an example to all coming ages, and a pattern of virtue for Sunday-school children, he must not be allowed to swear and work Sunday and do wicked things like the horrid Infidels.

Now let us listen to the last words of this dying saint—his instructions to his son Solomon: "And behold thou hast with thee Shimei son of Gera which cursed me with a grievous curse . . . but he came down to meet me at Jordan, and I sware, by the Lord, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword. Now, therefore, hold him not guiltless . . . but his hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood. So David slept with his fathers" (1 Kings ii, 8, 9, 10).

What a death scene! What a spirit to hav in the last moments! What words to utter with the last breath! What a bequest to leave a son! O ye Infidels! behold a dying saint so intent on the murder of a helpless old man, whom he had sworn by the Lord not to kill, that he forgot he was dying himself!

The other acts that David did—his polite conversations with Abigail the wife of Nabal, and the way in which he purchased Michal the daughter of Saul, and how he tried to warm himself during his last illness by help of the beautiful Abishag—behold, they are all in the holy book! But in the opinion of impious Infidels they are not fit to be written.

I hav dealt with this subject as tenderly as I could. What the Infidel wants specially to know is not how all these acts of David got into the inspired book, but how they got the approval of the Lord, and how a book which approves such actions can be an infallible moral guide.

Sincerely yours, D. PRIESTLEY.

Christianity at the Bar of History.

Two of the most important events during the fourth and fifth centuries were the dispersion of the magnificent library at Alexandria and the murder of Hypatia.

The first of these events is thus described by Draper: "At this time the bishopric of Alexandria was held by one Theophilus. An ancient temple of Osiris having been given to the Christians of the city for the site of a church, it happened that in digging the foundation for the new edifice the obscene symbols of the former worship chanced to be found.

"These, with more zeal than modesty, Theophilus exhibited in the market-place to public derision. With less forbearance than the Christian party showed when it was insulted in the theater during the Trinitarian dispute, the pagans resorted to violence and a riot ensued. They held the Serapion as their headquarters. Such were the disorder and bloodshed that the emperor had to interfere. He dispatched a rescript to Alexandria enjoining the bishop, Theophilus, to destroy the Serapion; and the great library, which had been collected by the Ptolemies, and had escaped the fire of Julius Cæsar, was by that fanatic dispersed" (Conflict of Science and Religion, page 54).

In this century too appeared a man named Arius. He proclaimed a new teaching and affirmed that the son, although begotten of the father, was not of the same, but of "like substance" with the father. He founded a new sect called the Arians, which was for a long period in conflict with the Catholics.

The points at issue between the rival parties were actually represented on the stage in burlesque. (See Gibbon, vol. iii, page 402.)

The council of Nice by and by accepted the Nicene creed, which is now printed in our prayer-books, condemned and banished Arius, and promoted his opponent, Athanasius, in a prominent position. In the year 330, however, the council reversed its judgment, reinstated Arius, and banished Athanasius. Arius did not, however, liv long after being recalled, but died under very suspicious circumstances in the year 336.

The fifth century was one of great strife indeed. During this period the Roman empire of the West was practically destroyed; this century also witnessed the rise in importance of the great Gothic monarchies.

Learning went down to a very low ebb, and as a consequence ignorance and vice, twin brothers, increased enormously. The vices of the priesthood, their luxury, arrogance, avarice, and voluptuousness, developed almost to the fullest extent, while the bishops appointed substitutes to perform their duties for them while they devoted their time to extravagant and evil courses.

Superstition was everywhere rampant. All sorts of mad follies were practiced by the people, the maddest of which were performed by the "Stylites," a set of superstitious maniacs, who stood motionless for hours on the top of pillars, one poor lunatic occupying himself in this stupid fashion for upward of sixty years (Mosheim, Ecclesiastical History, page 128).

In this century the infamous bishop of Alexandria had the beautiful and accomplished Hypatia barbarously murdered.

Of this terrible blot on Christian history Dr. Draper givs the following account: "The bishopric thus held by Theophilus was in due time occupied by his nephew, St. Cyril, who had commended himself to the approval of the Alexandrian congregations as a successful and fashionable preacher. It was he who had so much to do with the introduction of the worship of the Virgin Mary. His hold upon the audiences of the giddy city was, however, much weakened by Hypatia, the daughter of Theon, the mathematician, who not only distinguished herself by her expositions of the doctrins of Plato and Aristotle, but also by her comments on Apollonius and other geometers.

"Each day before her academy stood a long train of chariots; her lecture-room was crowded with the wealth and fashion of Alexandria. They came to listen to her discourse on those questions which man in all ages has asked: what am I? where am I? what can I know?

"Hypatia and Cyril I.! Philosophy and bigotry. They cannot exist together. So Cyril felt and on that feeling he acted. As Hypatia repaired to her academy, she was assaulted by Cyril's mob—a mob of many monks. Stripped naked in the street, she was dragged into the church and there killed by the club of Peter the reader. The corpse was cut to pieces, the flesh was scraped from the bones with shells and the remnants cast into a fire. For this frightful crime Cyril was never called to account. It seemed to be admitted that the end sanctified the means.

"So ended Greek philosophy in Alexandria. So came to an untimely close the learning that the Ptolemies had done so much to promote. The 'Daughter Library,' that of Serapion, had been dispersed. The fate of Hypatia was a warning to all who would cultivate profane knowledge. Henceforth there was to be no freedom for human thought. Everyone must think as the ecclesiastical authorities order him A.D. 414. In Athens itself philosophy awaited its doom. Justinian at length prohibited its teaching and caused all its schools in that city to be closed" (Conflict of Science and Religion, page 56). Add to this the fact that the monks of various orders were filthy in their habits, ignorant, fanatical, and superstitious; some of them traveling about like mendicants, and all of them making themselvs obnoxious members of the community; while two orders—the Cœnobites and the Sarabaites—were guilty of the most vicious and scandalous practices (Decline and Fall, page 102). From this it will be seen that Christianity during the fourth and fifth centuries was of a very low and degrading character; that those in authority were bigoted, cruel, and tyrannical; that the priesthood were for the most part superstitious and vicious; and that the people were abject slaves, at the mercy of those in power. True, there were one or two heretical priests who stood out in bold relief from such a dark picture. Of these Vigilantius was the most remarkable. He denied that "the bones and the tombs of the martyrs were proper objects of worship; and declared that prayers to the departed saints were void of efficacy." Further, he "treated with contempt fastings and mortifications, the celibacy of the clergy, and the various austerities of the monastic life. And finally, he affirmed that the conduct of those who, distributing their substance among the indigent, submitted to the hardships of a voluntary poverty, or sent a part of their treasures to Jerusalem for devout purposes, had nothing in it acceptable to the deity" (Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, page 129). This bold priest is a type of brave heretics who in all ages hav fought against superstition and risked their lives in the sacred cause of intellectual freedom.

The sixth century saw no improvement; indeed, if anything, each succeeding century became worse than the preceding one. Christianity spread, but conversions were wrought, not by argument and persuasion, but by bribery or fear of punishment. According to Mosheim the Jews in Gaul were compelled by Childeric to receive the ordinance of baptism; and the same despotic method of conversion was practiced in Spain (History, page 141).

Libraries and schools were opened in some of the monasteries, but on account of the "bitter aversion" displayed toward them by the bishops, they did not succeed.

Naturally the clergy regarded such institutions as opposed to the progress of piety; indeed, the priests were not slow to recognize that learning and superstition could not flourish very well together.

But notwithstanding the fact that education was discouraged, and that philosophy was practically banished from the seminaries, the wealth of the church increased. "The arts of a rapacious priesthood were practiced upon the ignorant devotion of the simple; and even the remorse of the wicked was made an instrument of increasing the ecclesiastic treasure. For an opinion was propagated with industry among the people, that the remission of their sins was to be purchased by their liberalities to the churches and the monks" (Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, page 146).

During this century the council of Nice condemned the doctrin of Origen; but heretics and heresies continued to spring up in various directions spite of the strenuous efforts of the priesthood to extirpate them. New sects came into existence from time to time and some of them grew into importance; incessant wrangling and disputing took place among these diverging parties, which often ended in persecution and bloodshed.

In the succeeding century learning had almost disappeared; even the bishops were so illiterate that many of them were unable to write their own sermons. Those of them, however, who had not lost the art of writing altogether composed stupid homilies based upon the writings of Augustine and Gregory(Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History,page 159).

It is remarkable that in all these ages of superstition and persecution the wealth of the church increased rather than diminished. One would naturally suppose that such methods as were pursued would hav led to the destruction of Christianity as an organization and the overthrow of the church. Such, however, was not the case; indeed, quite the contrary was the fact. The more evil the ways of the clergy the greater the prosperity of the church. Indeed, it fattened and waxed strong on the wages of sin. For as Mosheim avers: "Abandoned profligates, who had passed their days in the most enormous pursuits, and whose guilty consciences filled them with terror and remorse, were comforted with the delusiv hopes of obtaining pardon, and making atonement for their crimes by leaving the greater part of their fortune to some monastic society. Multitudes, impelled by the unnatural dictates of a gloomy superstition, deprived their children of fertil lands and rich patrimonies in favor of the monks by whose prayers they hoped to render the deity propitious" (Ecclesiastical History, page 161).

In the eighth century Charlemagne exerted himself successfully in spreading Christianity among the Saxons. At this time the Saxons were a numerous and formidable people, inhabiting a large part of Germany, and though they resisted to the utmost of their power, they were ultimately conquered by Charlemagne, who persuaded a large number of them to make a public profession of Christianity in the year 785, and to promis their adherence and support for the remainder of their lives. "To prevent, however, the Saxons from renouncing a religion which they had embraced with reluctance, several bishops were appointed to reside among them. Schools were erected, and monasteries founded, that means of instruction might not be wanting. The same precautions were employed among the Huns in Pannonia to maintain in the profession of Christianity that fierce people whom Charlemagne had converted to the faith, when, exhausted and dejected by various defeats, they were no longer able to make head against his victorious arms, and chose rather to be Christians than slaves" (Ecclesiastical History, page 170).

After this we are not surprised to learn that the Church canonized Charlemagne for the admirable manner in which he had used the sword in the service of the Lord. Mosheim commenting upon this, says: "Not to enter into a particular detail of his vices, it is undeniably evident that his ardent and ill-conducted zeal for the conversion of the Huns, Frieslanders, and Saxons, was more animated by the suggestion of ambition than by a principle of true piety; and that his main view in these religious exploits was to subdue the converted nations under his dominion and to tame them to his yoke, which they supported with impatience and shook off by frequent revolts. It is, moreover, well known that this boasted saint made no scruple of seeking the alliance of the Infidel Saracens, that he might be more effectually enabled to crush the Greeks, notwithstanding their profession of the Christian religion" (Ecclesiastical History, page 171).

In truth, Christianity was spread in the early ages by fire and sword, by persecution and bloodshed, and the so-called "religion of peace" became a religion of warfare against everyone who resisted its aggressiv and insidious power.

The clergy got fat and the church opulent upon the results of the iniquities of the rich and powerful; while immense treasures were poured into the coffers of the church to keep the monasteries and endow them for the benefit of the priesthood in succeeding generations.

Further, as Mosheim points out, "Another source of wealth is to be found in the desire of the kings of the various warring tribes to attach to themselvs the bishop and clergy in their dominions; by bestowing on these lands and dignities they secured to themselvs the aid which the church officials had it in their power to render, for not only could bishops bring to the support of their suzerain the physical succor of armies, but they could also launch against his enemies that terrible bolt of medieval times, excommunication, which, 'rendered formidable by ignorance, struck terror into the boldest and most resolute hearts'" (Ecclesiastical History, page 174).

In this century a great controversy raged between the Iconoduli, or Iconolatræ—that is, image-worshipers—and the Iconomachi, or Iconoclastæ—that is, image-breakers. The emperor Bardanes, a supporter of the Monothelite heresy, ordered that a picture representing the sixth general council should be removed from the church of Sophia, because that council had condemned the Monothelites. He went further and sent an order to Rome that pictures and images of the same nature should be removed from places of worship. This Constantine, the pope, declined to hav done; in defiance he set up the offending pictures in the porch of St. Peter's, and called a council at Rome, which denounced the emperor as an apostate. A revolution followed, and Bardanes was dethroned. The matter, however, did not rest here: for Constantine's successor, Leo, revised the quarrel, and issued an imperial edict commanding the removal of all images except one representing the crucifixion of Christ. Pope Gregory thereupon excommunicated the emperor, and insurrection broke out all over the empire; and so the quarrel waxed hot and furious for years; the image-worshipers and the image-breakers gaining in turns, but neither getting a complete triumph for any lengthened period. In this century a number of heresies spread, among them the Arian, the Manichæan, and others. In the Latin church a form of the Nestorian heresy made its way. The adherents of this new heretical creed argued that Jesus was the son of God by adoption only, and not the very God of very God. Through the persistency with which they propagated the idea of the oneness of God the Nestorians became alienated from the Christians. They found no difficulty, however, in affiliating themselvs with the Saracen conquerors, and through the influence of the latter many of them got appointed to important offices of the state. Soon the Nestorians applied themselvs to the study of science, in which in a short time they made considerable advancement. They also did something toward establishing a great library.

Draper tells us that "there was in every great library a department for the copying or manufacture of translations. Such manufactures were also often an affair of private enterprise. Honian, a Nestorian physician, had an establishment of the kind at Bagdad (A.D. 850). He issued versions of Aristotle, Plato, Hippocrates, Galen, etc. As to original works, it was the custom of the authorities of colleges to require their professors to prepare treatises on prescribed topics. Every khalif had his own historian. Books of romances and tales, such as 'The Thousand and One Arabian Nights' Entertainments,' bear testimony to the creativ fancy of the Saracens. Besides these, there were works on all kinds of subjects—history, jurisprudence, politics, philosophy, biographies, not only of illustrious men, but also of celebrated horses and camels. These were issued without censorship or restraint, though, in later times, works on theology required a license for publication. Books of reference abounded, geographical, statistical, medical, historical, dictionaries, and even abridgments or condensations of them, as the 'Encyclopedic Dictionary of all the Sciences,' by Mohammed Abu Abdallah. Much pride was taken in the purity and whiteness of the paper, in the skilful intermixture of variously-colored inks, and the illumination of titles by gilding and other adornments" (Conflict Between Science and Religion, pages 113, 114).

Again the same learned author says: "The Saracen empire was dotted all over with colleges. They were established in Mongolia, Tartary, Persia, Mesopotamia, Syria, Egypt, North Africa, Morocco, Fez, Spain. At one extremity of this vast region, which far exceeded the Roman empire in geographical extent, were the college and astronomical observatory of Samarcand, at the other the Giralda in Spain. Gibbon, referring to this patronage of learning, says: 'The same royal prerogativ was claimed by the independent emirs of the provinces, and their emulation diffused the tastes and the rewards of science from Samarcand and Bokhara to Fez and Cordova. The vizier of a sultan consecrated a sum of two hundred thousand pieces of gold to the foundation of a college at Bagdad, which he endowed with an annual revenue of fifteen thousand dinars. The fruits of instruction were communicated, perhaps, at different times, to six thousand disciples of every degree, from the son of the noble to that of the mechanic; a sufficient allowance was provided for the indigent scholars, and the merit and industry of the professors was repaid with adequate stipends. In every city the productions of Arabic literature were copied and collected, by the curiosity of the studious and the vanity of the rich.' The superintendence of these schools was committed with noble liberality sometimes to Nestorians, sometimes to Jews. It mattered not in what country a man was born, nor what were his religious opinions; his attainment in learning was the only thing to be considered. The great Khalif Al-Mamun had declared that 'they are the elect of God, his best and most useful servants, whose lives are devoted to the improvement of their rational faculties; that the teachers of wisdom are the true luminaries and legislators of this world, which, without their aid, would again sink into ignorance and barbarism'" (Ibid, page 115).

The further results of this movement are summarized thus: "The effects of this scientific activity are plainly perceived in the great improvements that took place in many of the industrial arts. Agriculture shows it in better methods of irrigation; the skilful employment of manures; the raising of improved breeds of cattle; the enactment of wise codes of rural laws; the introduction of the culture of rice, and that of sugar and coffee. The manufactures show it in the great extension of the industries of silk, cotton, and wool; in the fabrication of cordova and morocco leather, and paper; in mining, casting, and various metallurgic operations; in the making of toledo blades. Passionate lovers of poetry and music, they dedicated much of their leisure to those elegant pursuits. They taught Europe the game of chess; they gave it its taste for works of fiction—romances and novels. In the graver domains of literature they took delight; they had many admirable compositions on such subjects as the instability of human greatness; the consequences of irreligion; the reverses of fortune; the origin, duration and end of the world. Sometimes, not without surprise, we meet with ideas which we flatter ourselvs hav originated in our own times. Thus our modern doctrins of evolution and development were taught in their schools. In fact, they carried them much further than we are disposed to do, extending them even to organic or mineral things" (Conflict of Science and Religion, pages 117 and 118).

What a great contrast we hav here to the progress of Christianity. While the Arabians cultivated science and literature, the Christians were involved in warfare; persecuting all who did not agree with them; groveling in the dust of ignorance, superstition, vice, and crime. Yet Christians profess that their religion was a religion of love, a religion of peace and good will toward men.

By the fruit we judge of the tree; and the fruit produced during the first ten centuries of the growth of the Christian tree was rotten to the core.

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTH SEEKERS: The recent National Secular Society conference has caused considerable flutter in the Freethought dovecote, which will need some words of explanation. Whilst Mr. Bradlaugh lived his strong powers of attraction held men to him just as a magnet will hold a number of tacks end on. Apparently they were united so that although the magnet might be removed the tacks would form a united chain. We all know that with removal of the magnet the contact of the tacks ceases. Amongst the Secularists the disruption was not so complete, because Mr. Bradlaugh had organized them a little through the National Secular Society. But Bradlaugh's organizing power was not large. He had no special gift in that direction, and his personal magnetism in a degree rendered organization unnecessary so far as his own objects were concerned. On Charles Bradlaugh's decease it was felt at once that his magnetic influence must be replaced by better-planned schemes; and so an organization committee was formed to giv closer attention to some of the details connected with the work. Owing to Mr. Foote's foresight in this matter and his more practical views on working a society such as ours, the National Secular Society not only continues to flourish, but has extended its aims and sphere of labor, growing stronger in the mean time. Hitherto a fairly large salary, seeing the poverty of the society and the extraordinary calls made by Mr. Bradlaugh's various relief and memorial funds, has been paid for a secretary who has been a general factotum. In the old days, absurd as the idea was, it worked passably well; but in these days of increased vitality and extended jurisdiction, the scheme utterly fails. Mr. Foote and his colleagues accordingly suggest a paid secretary to do the comparativly light clerical work in London, and dividing the balance of the old secretary's wages amongst the special lecturers for the purpose of paying organizing expenses when incurred. For the general secretary to be away half his time on missionary work is to injure the cause both in London and the provinces; for whilst he was on tour the work stood still at the office; and every time he ventured forth there were heavy railway fares to be paid. Hence the desirability of leaving the breaking of the new ground to men more locally situated and using the expenses of traveling for purposes of making the new movement known to the surrounding public. Unfortunately, in this readjustment many thought they saw a scheme for placing Mr. Foote in a more autocratic position than he now occupies; and they strongly dissent from his claim to be the captain of the ship to whom obedience ought to be rendered. By many the president is regarded as a titular chief and mouthpiece only; not as a commander-in-chief. I do not agree with them. You can hav no sound organization without disciplin and confidence in leader and led alike; and I should be extremely sorry to figure as the captain of any ship whose crew was unwilling to lend me a cheerful obedience. The president is bound to retire at each Whitsuntide, and is in a measure controled by the executiv council, so that he cannot possibly be autocratic: besides which his interest in the cause is so great that he cannot wish to do injury to Secularism or Secularists. Anyhow, I hav every confidence in his skill and integrity and so long as he is faithful to the trust committed to him I shall stand by him most loyally. The trouble is, that the people in these northern districts are considerably out of touch with the executiv authorities, owing to distance from London. The men of the South who know all the circumstances much better are true to Mr. Foote; thus are the relations somewhat strained.

In my own district things are going on apace. New ground opens up everywhere; and if I only saw my way to getting bread and butter at it I should be unspeakably happy. Unfortunately even $10 a week doesn't come like rain from heaven; and one cannot always expect the Manchester branch to find it for me. It is even more useless to look for it in those places where new ground or forsaken ground is broken up. Still, Manchester has not failed me yet, and it is no use to meet troubles half-way. In Rochdale, whither I hied me on Sunday week, I had good and lively audiences. Amongst the opponents was the mayor, who is a thorough gentleman and a believer in the old superstition; but there was no stone-throwing or mobbing. The afternoon lecture was very well attended; but the evening address was delivered in the hall to a comparativ handful; so it was decided to run a third address outside in the town hall square, and remarked success attended the effort. I go there again on Thursday of this week, having given an open challenge to debate with any Christian they choose to put forward on any suitable subject they like to select.

Last Thursday I broke up some very old ground at Barnsley. Once there was a flourishing branch there, but it died. On Thursday, then, I delivered a lecture in the May-day green, an ordinary market-place, to some two hundred or three hundred people. There was no discussion, no enthusiasm; so I started on a second lecture on "Christ on the labor question." A thousand people gathered up and a discussion was prolonged till nightfall. A branch is to be reëstablished there.

In Manchester, large audiences are the order of the day. The various newspaper correspondences, the action of the police in removing us, our vindication of our rights to speak at the corner of Denmark-road, and other causes hav led to immense concourses of people. On Sunday afternoon and Monday evening I spoke there to over two thousand on each occasion, and had very rancorous opposition. One fairly large stone was flung at us on Sunday. The noise of the browbeaten Christian Evidence Society is so great that I hav to strain my voice every time I speak there; the result is a very painful, sickly feeling at the heart which I feel sure I shall hav cause to remember in later years. On one or two occasions I thought I should faint, though I am physically strong and hav not had a day's illness for twenty years. Yours fraternally,

Manchester, June 20, 1892. SAM STANDRING.

The World's Columbian Exposition—Should It Be Kept Open on Sunday?

By holy writ we are enjoined to "Prove all things, and hold fast only to that which is good;" also, "To be ready always to giv an answer to every man that asketh a reason" (2 Pet. iii, 15). As I am much inclined to observe these injunctions, the tremendous and persistent pressure of Christians and their following to secure the closing of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sundays has impelled me to "prove" this Sunday question.

As a starter, I think I may take it for granted that, in the absence of any authoritativ command or law to the contrary, one space of time, one day—if it behaves—is as good as any other; and that men, of their own volition, no matter how wise, could never discover any taint of evil in a thought or action merely on account of its birthday.

But it is said, a certain day of each week was authoritativly so set apart and sanctified by the creator that it has ever since been a heinous sin to labor therein; and we are referred to the Bible as proof. Let us examin it.

"And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work which God had created and made" (Gen. ii, 2, 3). Please mark very distinctly and permanently the number of this day and the reason for its sanctification, etc., and that this number, and especially this reason, will not, and cannot be made to, fit any other day. Also observe that, to enable us to apply this scripture to the subject in hand at all, the idea now fully entertained by nearly all scholars and thinkers, Christian and secular, that the original of the word translated "day" in this chapter means "vast period of time"—a geological epoch—must be ignored entirely, since I am sure the good people now moving, or trying to move, heaven and earth in behalf of this Sabbath-Sunday-closing would not want this Exposition closed for any "vast periods" of time, even though all the living, and most of the dead, should be induced to petition for it.* For the sake of the investigation, then, I will suppose these were regular days, not of three to six months long, as near the poles, but of about twenty-four hours' duration, as nearer the equator. Bearing these suggestions in mind, let us return to the scripture quoted.

Ob erve that in it or its connection, there was no command, or even hint, that Adam—then just created, perfect in his ignorance, and yet without a helpmeet or the "sumptuary order"—was expected to observe, reverence, or pay any attention to this seventh-day sanctification. Indeed, his "eyes were not yet open," so he could not know a good thing (day) when he saw it. This Gen. ii sanctification, etc., of the seventh day appears to hav been for the Lord's exclusiv use.

According to Bible chronology, for some 2,513 years the matter rested thus. Then, by the fourth Commandment man was made a partner in Sabbath-day holiness; thus, "Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work; thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates; for in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested on the seventh day, wherefore, the Lord blessed the seventh day and hallowed it" (Ex. xx, 9, 10, 11). Forty years later the great legislator, seeming, like some of our modern small ones, to hav forgotten the laws in force, as also the reason of the same, made this same identical law again (Deut. v, 13, 14, 15). But observe the reason this time: "And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm; therefore, the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." How entirely different from the reason before assigned. Such, then, under the "Old Dispensation," was the seventh-day law; and such the reasons for the same (and as we proceed, let us bear in mind the maxim, "Whoso forgets the reason of a law, forgets the law itself").

Yet no penalty had been prescribed for the violation of this law. Hence, according to the view of modern civilization, it should hav been without force or virtue as a criminal statute. But this view—doubtless entertained by him—proved very unfortunate to the man who gathered sticks a few Sabbaths later: "And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness they found a man that gathered sticks upon the Sabbath day. And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron; and unto all the congregation: and they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done with him. And the Lord said unto Moses, The man shall surely be put to death: All the congregation [father, mother, wife, brothers, sisters, friends—if any, "all"] shall stone him with stones without the camp. And all the congregation brought him without the camp and stoned him with stones, and he died, as the Lord commanded Moses" (Deut. v, 13, 14, 15). Verily, God must be love, for so it is written. "The same yesterday, to-day, and forever." And Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are one.

As this law was, "Thou shalt not do any work, etc.," it made no difference if this man gathered these sticks to correct a wayward son that he might not be spoiled in sparing the rod, or to kindle a little fire to take the chill off a sick child or dying wife or mother. The motiv was of no moment, therefore not a subject of inquiry. And this penalty, observe, was not prescribed by any ignorant, over-zealous, cruel underling, but by the "all-wise Lord God, whose mercy endureth forever," "whose anger is so slow to rise, so ready to abate."

I hav lingered a trifle upon this point to impress upon Sabbath-day-holiness advocates what they hav to do, or rather not to do, to be saved; and consistent, if they base their Sabbath views at all upon this commandment. To make sure that I hav not overdrawn in supposing the penalty would hav been the same if the sticks were gathered for the purposes suggested, observe the repetition of and amendment to this commandment: "And Moses gathered all the congregation of the children of Israel together and said unto them, These are the words which the Lord hath commanded that we should do them. Six days shall work be done but on the seventh day there shall be to you a holy day, a Sabbath of rest to the Lord. Whoever doeth work therein shall be put to death. Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitation upon the Sabbath day" (Ex. xxxv, 2, 3). Does not that settle it?

I think this will quite suffice to show that every kind and description of work was positivly prohibited.

And is not the parson a worker? Does he not talk of "his work?" And Sabbath-school superintendents and teachers, do they not talk of and delight in their Sunday work? Verily did not Christ recognize the labor of preachers as work, when he declared of them that "The laborer is worthy of his hire?" "The Lord's work," do you say? Under this arrangement and command the Lord has no work upon the Sabbath day. He sanctified it and rested from all his labor on that day, and only after following this up diligently, and enjoying a monopoly of it for over twenty-five hundred years, did he see fit to take man in as a partner and giv him an undivided half interest, by enacting this fourth Commandment.

Does anyone like such a law? How would a

* The Industrial News, of Jackson, Mich., is authority for the statement that the petitions for the Sunday closing of the Columbian Exposition in the office of the secretary of that state, and procured and filed by its "good people," contain 4,050,518 names, while Mr. Porter's census-takers were only able to find 2,093,898 persons aboveground in the state. Other states, under management of their "good people," are reported "close seconds" in this behalf.

lame minister get to his church and pulpit? He could not walk without a cane or crutch. He dare not pick up a stick. He could not ride to church, for that would necessitate not only the working of "cattle," but also the labor of hitching up. He could not be carried, since that would necessitate the violation of a positiv command—"Thus saith the Lord: Take heed to yourselvs, and bear no burden on the Sabbath day" (Jer. xvii, 21). And even walking is a labor—hard labor. Under this "Old Dispensation" a doctor could not giv an antidote for poison or tie an artery without incurring the stoning-to-death penalty.

While at least nine of every ten present-day Sunday advocates base their advocacy on these Old Testament Commandments, without thinking how inconsistent they are, or how incongruous their practices, the learned ones, when cornered, say: "We know, if that old seventh-day law were now actually in force, every mother's son of us would be stoned to death several times before breakfast every Sabbath. We know that fourth Commandment was of the seventh day only, and that practically, and so far as the reason of the Lord resting from his labors, or delivering the people with a stretched-out arm, is concerned, Sunday, being the first day of the week, when the Lord was the least tired, is the most objectionable day that could be substituted; but to make the matter short, and play fair, we admit that we ignore the 'Old Dispensation' Sabbath with its reasons, its solitary confinements and cruelties untold, and hav an entirely new Sabbath-Sunday, the first day of the week, erected upon an entirely new foundation." (According to the wants of trade—their trade—and for revenue only, methinks.)

Is there within the lids of the Bible one single verse, line, or word authorizing this substitution? I can find none. If I am mistaken, would not the mere substitution of another day leave all former prohibitions and penalties intact, including the stoning-to-death penalty for gathering sticks?

It is said that this substitution was made on account of Sunday being the day of Christ's resurrection, and was sanctioned by the practices of more or less of the Apostles. Waiving the point that no one can determin the day of resurrection, I hav searched diligently, but in vain, for a line or word sustaining this view. Christ certainly nowhere authorized such change, neither did the Father or Holy Ghost, and none other had power to do so.

There has then been no substitution of the first day of the week for the seventh, except by human authority and usurpation. Neither the reasons of the law, the logic of the situation, or facts proved, warrant any other conclusion.

But according to the record, Christ had authority to, and I believe did, entirely repeal this old Sabbath law, and place all days on a perfect equality. Perhaps the reason was, that in the interval of 4,030 odd years for God, and some 1,500 for man, he thought resting enough had been done to satisfy the reasons of the law, and therefore decided to substitute a go-as-you-please for every day alike. Let us examin the question on this line.

In his beautiful Sermon on the Mount (which, by a coincidence, seems to hav occurred also to Confucius some five hundred years before) Christ seems to hav undertaken to giv his views of men's duties quite fully, but does not even mention the Sabbath day. Did he forget so important a matter as the fourth Commandment had been made under the "Old Dispensation?"

In instructing the inquiring young man how he might hav eternal life, did he again forget it? "And behold one came unto him and said, Good master, what good thing shall I do that I may hav eternal life? And he said unto him, . . . if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He said unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, thou shalt not commit adultery, thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not bear false witness, honor thy father and thy mother, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man said unto him, All these things hav I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet?" So far Jesus had designedly or inadvertently omitted all hint of the Sabbath. If he had forgotten it, this last question must hav recalled it if he deemed it important. But Jesus only replied, "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and giv to the poor, and thou shalt hav treasure in heaven; and come and follow me" (Matt. xix, 16–23).

Now, is not here Christ's express word, not only that a man may be his follower and hav treasure in heaven without observing the Sabbath, but that he may be even perfect without it?

It will not do to suppose so important a matter was omitted by a slip of the pen of the inspired reporter; for this story is, in substance, told in each of the four gospels, without a word of Sabbath observance in any of them. And from these several accounts we learn this young man was rich, a ruler, a lawyer, and a man of such character that Jesus loved him. Being a man of this character, his question, "Which?" conclusivly implied that it was then and there current knowledge that more or less of the "Old Dispensation" had been dispensed with. Otherwise, when Jesus said, "Keep the Commandments," that would hav ended it.

The record abundantly shows that Jesus himself was, according to the "Old Dispensation," a frequent Sabbath-breaker, and that he permitted and taught his disciples to follow suit. When rebuked for this, which was frequently, what answer did he make? Did he ever plead "not guilty?" No; but replied, "My father worketh hitherto, and I work" (John v, 17).

And was this not true, and a complete, well-founded defense? Christians constantly affirm that all the various operations in nature's fields, workshops, and laboratories are but God's handiwork. If this affirmation be true, God has at least long since ceased to rest upon the Sabbath, and has never seemed to pay any attention to Sunday; for does not all vegetation grow, do not the winds blow, waters ebb and flow, suns and planets spin on their axes and sail in their orbits; and nature's race-track, saloon, and dancehouse, wherein the cyclones, earthquakes, Titusville and Oil City disasters, and the like, are conceived, manufactured, and launched forth—do they not keep as wide-open doors on "God's holy day" as upon any other? Verily, does not all nature move along under control of its great engineer in such a manner as demonstrates that his hand never rests or lets up from the work of managing the "throttle-valves" of its curiously and wonderfully made enginery?

With his disciples, Jesus went through the fields on the Sabbath day and gathered corn (Mark ii, 23), for which high crime, under the "Old Dispensation," they should all hav been stoned to death. When the Jews reproved them, Jesus replied, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath" (Mark ii, 27). How could he more clearly and concisely hav taught that the Sabbath was not to be maintained or tolerated merely as an ecclesiastical institution for religious pleasures, works, ceremonies, and revenue—not for the monopoly, sanctification, enrichment, and salvation of a certain class, curiously fashioned with taste and talent for dogmas, creeds, and that sine qua non, faith (i. e., belief of absurdities without evidence); but, as all other days, for the benefit, labor, innocent health-giving pleasures, instructions, and general welfare of all; according to the different capacities, tastes, and dispositions in their dowry?

When to the impotent man Jesus said, "Rise, take up thy bed and walk," the Jews objected, saying, "It is the Sabbath day; it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed" (John v, 8, 10). And were they not quite right, if the fourth Commandment, and especially its amendment herein quoted (i. e., Jer. xvii, 21), were in force?

Would Christ hav commanded one for whom he had so much regard as he had just shown this one, to commit a capital offense?

The main indictment under which Jesus was tried, convicted, and executed, was Sabbath-breaking. And his best beloved disciple, John, admits the truth of this indictment, so it cannot be quashed as false: "Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his father" (John v, 18). Jesus could not hav considered this law in force. He could not hav violated it by his repeated acts.

We are not left to conjecture Jesus's view of this question from his acts alone. He expressly declared, "It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day" (Matt. xii, 12). I know numerous attempts hav been made to warp and narrow this declaration with its context into an authority only for what is called church work—Sunday work of preachers and their flocks. I submit to common sense, wherever it may be found, that lifting a sheep from a pit is no more church work than hoeing corn, if it is weedy, or playing ball, if exercise be needy. At that time, from the Jewish standpoint, as also from Christ's—though they differed as to the laws in force—to keep "the law" was to do right, and to violate it was to do wrong. Hence, this text will truly and more plainly express the idea of its author when rendered, It is right to do well on the Sabbath day. The opposit, It is wrong to do ill on the Sabbath day or any other day, is "an easy one;" quite as easy as, It is right to do well upon any day. Hence, all days are to be regarded and used alike according to Christ.

If any class can be supposed to know the law upon this question, certainly the great Apostle Paul stands at the head of such class. Much might be quoted from him, but let this suffice: "Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath day" (Col. iv, 16. See also Rom. iv, 10, 11; vii, 6; xiv, 5; vii, 6).

And observe this scholarly, precise enthusiast nowhere says a word in favor of Sabbath or Sunday or first or seventh day observance, while all that he does say upon the subject is against it.

Moreover, I think there is no proof that Sunday was substituted for the Sabbath for about three hundred years after Christ. And where did it then come from? Here is the law or edict of Constantine establishing it:

"Let all judges and all people of the towns rest, and all the various trades be suspended on the venerable day of the Sun. Those who liv in the country, however, may freely and without fault attend to the cultivation of the fields, lest with the loss of favorable opportunity, the commodities offered by Divine Providence should be destroyed." This was in A.D. 321. Surely the farmer should hav a go-as-you-please on Sunday.

Why should the World's Columbian Exposition be closed on Sundays because of this edict? Who was Constantine? A Catholic emperor of Rome whose hands were dyed in the blood of at least seven murdered kindred. Why did he thus establish Sunday? Because he thought it policy. A large portion of his subjects were pagans, who had long, according to their respectiv zeal, worshiped the sun and observed the first day of the week as the day of the sun. And the Catholic priests, that they might the better corral the people so they could, in modern Western parlance, hav a whack at them, had long been clamorous to hav a day set apart wherein the people could do nothing else but submit to them. Any day would suit the priests, and as Sunday was well established and much revered among the pagans, it was, of course, easiest and most politic to select "the venerable day of the Sun," which was accordingly done as aforesaid.

And Luther—the Christopher Columbus of the Protestant's "strait and narrow way"—what did he say? He said: "As regards the Sabbath, or Sunday, there is no necessity for keeping it. If anywhere the day is made holy for the mere day's sake, then I order you to work on it, to dance on it, and to do anything that will reprove this encroachment on the Christian spirit and liberty" (Luther's Table Talks).

Finally, the reply of the drowning men catching at straws, "The officers and employees must hav rest," is echoed all along the line. Though this is a large subject, I will only use space to reply:

1. It would hav been more manly to hav made the request and based the petitions upon that ground alone.

2. In that case no petitions should be regarded but from the interested parties—the officers and employees.

3. If their pay were understood to go on according to the time spent, these petitions would not contain the names of any dead, and not many of the living.

4. Outsiders are not interested, as none hav to attend.

5. As the great cry now is, "Low wages, and a want of labor," it would be easy and beneficial to procure substitutes and reliefs.

I discover no reason why the grand and glorious light of the Columbian Exposition, which is to show the people so much of human progress, achievement, and capability, and which can but prove a most potent incentiv to all possessing a germ of ambition to be up and doing for the noblest and best part of which they are capable in the grand procession of human progress before it has entirely passed them by; I can see no reason why such light should not shine, even with the sun, upon every day—at least, no reason except that which impelled the clergy of olden times to importune Catholic Constantine to prohibit labor on the "venerable day of the Sun" as aforesaid.

Verily, it is still right—though unfortunately, owing to unwarranted and dangerous usurpations of authority, and gross encroachments upon the Constitution, I think it is not always lawful, in this "free land"—to do well upon the Sabbath day.

CYRUS SEARS.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

PalouseCity,	Wash	July 16, 17	Albert Lea,	Minn.	Aug. 13, 14
Oakdale,	"	" 19, 20	Watertown,	"	" 16–18
Rosalia and vicinity,	"	" 21–24	Minneapolis,	"	" 2
Davenport,	"	" 25–27	Eau Claire and vicinity,	Wis.	" 24–29
Colville,	"	" 29–31	Chicago,	Ill.	Sept. 4, 11
Missoula,	Mont.	Aug. 6, 7

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

Letters of Friends.

No Priest, No Hell.

NEW YORK, June 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please add the inclosed $3 to your free circulation fund. I am glad to do a little in the humane cause of demolishing priestcraft and spooks. No spook, no fear. No priest, no hell.

Yours earnestly, L. G. REED.

What Shall We Do at the Fair?

SHERMAN, IA., June 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been watching the fuss over shutting up the World's Fair on Sunday. Now, I think the better plan would be to build a large tent there, and get Talmage and Ingersoll there to debate every Sunday. I think it would draw the best of anything they could get for the Fair; and the Christians could not complain of being slighted, for there would more go to hear them there than in the city.

MRS. JOHN GARING.

Apt Symbol for Freethinkers.

CHAMPLIN, MINN., June 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read quite a number of suggestions in your paper from Liberals on the form and propriety of a badgepin for Freethinkers to wear, but could not idealize anything nicer and more appropriate than what had been proposed, until looking over a few numbers of the Agnostic of 1883-4, published in Dallas, Tex. On the title-page, just under the name, is the picture of a bird perched on a dead branch, and in the attitude of singing its song. Now, let him or her that is interested in the breast-pin question go and look at one of the above-named papers, and tell me if there can be anything produced by art, within so small a figure, that can be more suggestiv of independence of person and freedom of speech than that bird sitting and singing so gaily on its dead branch.

The engraving of this figure on gold or silver plate will not require more space than the three-fourths of an inch square.

J. KINSER.

Marvels at Christian Credulity.

BUSHNELL, ILL., June 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I was at a loss at first to conceive an excuse for your publishing that long gob of platitudes brought forth by "Teresa Thorndyke," but second thoughts developed a legitimate object, in the fact that a (supposed) popular newspaper published it. Now, editors are not apt to publish anything distasteful to their patrons, so Freethinkers may think of the necessity of keeping their eyes open and their armor bright. There is nothing like religion to seal up the intellect, and the fact that a newspaper would send out such a stew of weak trash that a bright child would laugh at shows unmistakably the stultification of mind that pervades society in the matter of religion. The acceptance on the part of people of apparently sound minds of the dogmas of Christian theology has been to me a wonder. The only explanation is, they are not taught to think in their childhood, but just to accept, and so they go on through life. A little thinking is all that is necessary, and Freethinkers should miss no opportunity to sow a little seed wherever there is, or seems to be, congenial soil.

S. L. BABBITT, M.D.

Would Hav Us Investigate No Other Subject Than Religion.

FOREST GROVE, ORE., June 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please discontinue my subscription now addressed to San Francisco, Cal., with its expiration. I wish to take a paper voicing Atheism, but do not wish one that would cause me to blush should a copy fall into the hands of some person who would use its weapons against me.

Such articles in THE TRUTH SEEKER as exhale Anarchy or make attacks on or flings at marriage are the ones I most sincerely denounce. And this is the only potent objection the church can fling at Infidelity to-day—"the tendency it has to destroy that which is good in society and government." My observation persuades me that most of us are above indorsing these objectionable things, but "Old dog Tray has to suffer with the rest" because caught in bad company. I am of opinion that because we hav a few papers among us, one or two even worse than your own, none of which hav the power to get above a wallow—I am of opinion, I say, that this is the prime cause why Infidels are unable to permanently and generally organize.

Yours with a hope that you may not always abuse the liberty you enjoy,

GEO. R. SCHOCH.

That Auto-da-fe of the Picture Book.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: An amusing incident occurred recently in this city, demonstrating the fact that wise men are not the only ones alive. A man by the name of Max Roth sells papers, cigars, and tobacco. Among other things, he keeps THE TRUTH SEEKER and Mr. Heston's Bible Picture Book. One day a man (made, no doubt, in the image of his God) stopped to look over the daily papers and read the headings, and thereby save a nickel. While looking over the different papers for sale he happened to see Mr. Heston's book. After examining the pictures for some time he became very wroth and exclaimed loudly against it, and finally said he would buy the book if he could find some one to burn it in the street. A young man standing near said he would "for a cigar." The book was promptly bought, as was also the cigar, and the young man proceeded to execute the Auto-dâ-fé. The unusual sight called many people together, and within ten minutes Mr. Roth had sold four books and immediately sent for fifteen copies. So the burning of the book was very similar in effect on a small scale to Mr. Wanamaker's postal restrictions. Thus these over-zealous people often overreach themselvs. People, or rather church people, are so afraid that the world will get so enlightened that they will no longer be willing to support church institutions that they would gladly burn, tear down, overthrow, and suppress every Liberal institution, book, and paper in the land. But Truth and Liberty will prevail.

Yours for Advancement,

C. H. LAWRENCE.

Pietists Admit That They Are "Broken-Necked Asses."

MARENGO, ILL., June 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: "We're all broken-necked asses." This is what the Rev. C. H. Tyndall, of the Broome street Tabernacle, proclaimed himself and his flock, according to the New York World, and for once they are not far out of the way. He starts out with saying that "the ass is a wonderful animal, but he can kick all the same. Now, if you were going along the roadside and met an ass and he kicked, you wouldn't kick back, would you?" The manner in which these reverends are kicking against the bulwarks of our liberties hardly carries out the supposition that they are setting the world an example of what they preach. "What you want to do is to mind your own business," he continued—a lesson they are sorely in need of themselvs. "Practice what you preach" is what I would suggest to them.

Expatiating at length upon a lamb which must redeem the firstling of every ass, or hav its, the firstling's, neck broken without further ceremony—the ass's subsequent issue being consigned to sheol, probably—the exhorter then proceeded to illustrate his sermon by pulling out a live turtle from his coat-tail pocket (he being a devout believer in the efficacy of object-lessons), and after he had allowed it to claw the air in true oratorical style, he declared that in almost the same identical way God "used to [he does not any more now] impress his truths upon mankind," clinching his harang with the astounding proposition: "Hence the turtle." Such a stunning argument is almost equal to the schoolboy's logic: "Strawberries is good, hence the immortality of the soul."

Continuing in his soul-inspiring strain (during which, I presume, the reporter almost expired, or at least dreadfully transpired, if it didn't make him tired), the reverend gentleman finally burst out with: "Every man is by nature an unredeemed ass whose neck is broken. [Should be broken for swallowing such stuff, would hav hit the nail on the head.] The redemption price must be paid, and that's where the lamb comes in." He should hav said: That's what we are after—the lambs, loaves, and fishes. If he then had added: This price must be paid to "We, Us & Co." he might hav forcibly illumined his text with the object-lesson of letting a cat out of a bag.

But lest some of the edified listeners should forget into what category of intellectuality they all belong, he repeated: "We are all alike. We're all asses with our necks broken."

Then, after all had sung, "Come to Jesus just now," the reverend gent counted the asses who put up their front hoofs to signify their willingness to indorse the Christian tenets, and lo! seventy-seven brayed assent.

Fool-killer, where artest thou?

HERMAN WETTSTEIN.

That Remark About Lame Senses Making Trouble.

FORT WORTH, TEX., June 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As a constant reader of your valuable paper, permit me to say a few words in reply to the article of Mr. August Buesing of June 4th.

The Materialist is a Freethinker, because his mind rejects everything which cannot be proved true beyond a reasonable doubt.

Mr. Buesing says the Materialist's five senses are lame. His must hav reached extraordinary developments, or perhaps he is endowed with several more, to be so positiv of something which at its best is only conjecture, Spiritualism.

To advance a theory in order to explain certain effects or manifestations, is not sufficient proof in itself of the truth of said theory. A science it is certainly not. In science certain causes produce inevitably certain results, but in Spiritualism, although the causes are there, the results very often are lacking, but the medium will tell you that certain conditions are lacking.

To sneer at Spiritualism certainly could not save a Materialist from living another life, if such a life exists, but does it exist?

Is there any evidence in science of such an existence before or after birth? At what stage of existence does part of that intelligence enter the human body?

No Materialist denies an eternal infinit existence. What he does deny is a conscious existence.

Mr. Buesing says: "Of what use is that immense space in the universe, if vacant?" Who says it is vacant? Anyone but a fool knows that it is occupied by uncountable worlds. Perhaps all of these are occupied like our own. Nature—or call it what you please—certainly did not hav to confine itself to producing life here on this one planet, and hold all the rest for the future home of the spirits departing from this. Such a version of creation is only the product of the human intellect in its childhood.

He says the human mind does not originate from mother earth. Assertion proves nothing; how do you know it does not?

He says: "Nor does it depend for its growth and subsistence upon vegetable, mineral, or animal products of mother earth." He says further, they only giv strength to the body, but not to the mind. Strange, very strange! Why should the child, the babe, not hav the same intellect then as the matured man, since the mind is full-fledged when it enters the body?

He says the human mind borrows its intellect from the father of the universe—whatever he means by that—and vacates the body like an image that passes out of a mirror. Well, we can all, with our lame senses, see an image pass out of a mirror, but did anyone ever see a mind pass out of the human body? Perhaps Mr. Buesing has, as his thoughts are not limited to the present existence, and not being a Materialist he is acquainted with a former as well as with a future life. What power there is in egotism, and what effect it has on some men. The wise man knows he is a fool, but the fool thinks he is wise. This maxim might be remembered with profit by Mr. Buesing.

Respectfully, P. G. BECKER.

Had a Hard Fight for Liberty.

YANKTON, S. D., June 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I like THE TRUTH SEEKER very much. I think it is a paper which everyone with a spark of reason in his brain ought to read. I think you cannot do much better than you are doing to wipe superstition out of existence. I hav been a member of the Congregational church. My parents were both Freethinkers. They always told me to wait until I was old enough to know what a church was before joining one. My mother died when I was fifteen years old. My father died a year later. They did not regret having lived a moral life without superstition or the churches. When my father died I was surrounded by the church people, who told me that my parents were in hell, and if I wished to escape the "wrath to come" I must join the church. I finally joined the Congregational church and became very religious. I was advised to go to college (a Congregational college of Yankton, S. D.) and study for the ministry. I started going to college in the fall of 1888. In the early part of 1889, C. B. Reynolds (I think the one who is secretary of the Washington Secular Union) advertised to lecture at Yankton. I wished to hear how "these Infidels talked," for I had never heard a Freethought lecture. As Mr. Reynolds talked I was dumfounded, for he said things I had never thought of. At the close of his lecture I bought some books of him, viz.: "The Age of Reason," "One Hundred and Forty-eight Self-Contradictions of the Bible," and "Why Doesn't God Kill the Devil?" I read them through and studied them well. Finally, after much deep study of the question of the inspiration of the Bible, I prayed God to show me the truth. No answer came to my prayer, and I finally left college. I was disliked by all because of my heresy, and went to work on the farm. I was a Deist for some time. I finally sent to you for a four months' subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and some books. Now I was in hot water. When it became known that I took THE TRUTH SEEKER, people were very shy of me. They said it was bad enough to be a Deist, but to be a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER would certainly make an Atheist of me, which was too horrid to think of! Well, I did evolve finally, from a Congregationalist to an Atheist and Materialist, and a happy evolution it was. THE TRUTH SEEKER has done wonders for me. People who three years ago avoided me and thought I was crazy, now say that Liberalism has not injured me. I hav made several converts to Freethought, but no one dares subscribe for a Freethought paper. I lend my TRUTH SEEKER to all my friends and acquaintances.

I shall try to get some names against closing the World's Fair on Sundays. I work on the farm by the month, and do not get much time to go round for names.

Yours for truth and justice,

MERTON HIMES.

A Series of Intellectual Repasts.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As we hav just closed our meetings of the Liberal Club for the season, and are to hav a three months' vacation, I wish to say our success is greater each year.

While the attendance has not been as large as it ought to hav been—for it should fill the largest hall in our city—it has filled our hall almost every evening. There seems to be a greater interest manifested each year. There is not any regular meeting held in the city that is reported for the city papers as much as ours. Most of the lectures are either published in full, or a very good synopsis given, thus giving thousands of readers a chance to read what is said.

I will giv a few of the names of some of the speakers and their subjects. We opened our meetings the first Sunday in October last with E. G. Comstock, a prominent lawyer of the city, subject, "The Origin and Basis of the Christian Religion;" Robert Schilling, a journalist and speaker on political reform, subject, "The Monopoly Coontrap;" Prof. John Ulrich, on "Shall We Vaccinate Our Children?" Rev. N. H. Brown, on "Are Sunday Laws Religious?" E. W. Chafin, a lawyer, on "Conventional Lies;" Mr. McFarlaine, on "Is Christianity, as Taught in the Churches, Equal to the Demands of the Age;" Rabbi Hecht, a Jewish priest, on "The European Emigration, Especially the Russian—Its Causes and Effects;" C. S. Clark, a journalist, on "The Keeley Curse;" Alfred B. Westrup, of Chicago, on "Free Trade in Banking;" Dr. Wingate, our health officer, on "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness;" Prof. A. B. Severance, on "Who are Spiritualists?" Robert Schilling, on "Why We Should Hav Free Coinage of Silver;" H. A. Vaudalson, on "Woman's Sphere;" A. Rindhart, on "The Objects and Aims of the Turner Societies;" O. A. Wright, of Madison, secretary of the board of charities, on "The Defectiv Classes;" Dr. H. S. Hickson, on "Why Do We Need a New Party?" Dr. E. W. Krackowizer, on "A New Education;" Prof. A. B. Severance, on "Freedom vs. Slavery;" Colonel Pier, on "My Share."

This will show your readers the range of subjects we hav discussed after each lecture. They are thoroughly discussed by the audience.

It seems to me that there cannot be meetings of any kind as instructiv as such meetings, where all subjects are discussed in a calm, dignified manner. And I would here recommend that all towns and cities where there is any Liberal element try to start such meetings. You can depend largely upon local talent to make them instructiv. Our meetings are growing more popular each year. They are attended by Catholics, Protestants, Materialists, and Spiritualists, and all shades of Freethinkers. So that conservativ speakers as well as Radical ones hav a following among the audience.

The meetings are opened with a piano solo by Mrs. A. F. Stillman, followed by a recitation or a poem read, then a song, after which the speaker of the evening is introduced. PROF. A. B. SEVERANCE.

Report from an Organization.

CLEVELAND, O., June 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If you will permit me a few lines in your valuable paper, I would like to make the following, a report of the Cleveland Secular Union, which would giv a good deal of information to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER in this city and abroad.

As certainly it is a well-known fact that the above society dissolved about two years ago, owing to lack of material and means, it has now been reorganized on May 9, 1892, by about twenty people, some old members and some new members, and has to meet every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. for lectures, debates, and discussions. They also decided to be an auxiliary of the Ohio State Secular Union.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: A. Lee, president; Dr. C. S. Hurd, vice-president; F. S. Dean, corresponding secretary; J. Rosenberg, recording secretary; L. B. Silver, treasurer; E. M. Geiger, librarian, and an executiv committee of five, namely, Mrs. M. Smith, Thomas Whitley, Wm. Wurm, L. A. Launderville, and P. F. Lehman, who constitute a board of directors together with the officers. In a short time after we were organized, in nature's immutable laws, an inevitable event has happened—that which is known as "death." One of the most earnest workers in the cause of Freethought, the president of the State Secular Union and corresponding secretary of this Union, passed away never to return again.

In the mean time, we made arrangements for Mr. Charlesworth's lectures, which took place on June 13th, 14th, 15th. True, we had to go around among our friends to solicit toward the lecture fund, but we were quick enough to solicit little by little, for which we kindly thank our friends, only to giv the people of this city a good chance to hear both sides. About one week prior to the lectures we sent out through the mail about seventy-five to eighty tickets to the preachers (pests), and we distributed about nineteen hundred tickets on the streets and meetings, etc. But alas! we were greatly disappointed in all three lectures. Not one preacher showed up to contradict the statements of the speaker. This certainly goes to show that they are afraid to be "downed," and in my opinion religion is only a farce and a hypocrisy.

Owing to the great heat, we had a lack in attendance, yet those who went to hear Mr. Charlesworth were satisfied with the subjects and with the lecturer, for certainly he explains everything so clearly that every person within his reach can understand him, and his voice is powerful enough to be heard a distance away.

We would now earnestly request readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER and other Liberal papers in this city and vicinity to assist us by joining and having their friends to join, so that we may be able to hav Mr. Charlesworth with us frequently. Till now we hav had good speakers at our regular Sunday meetings and certainly we will endeavor to hav the same in future. Any information desired by friends will be cheerfully given, either at meetings or through the mail.

I trust that the readers will comply with the request, for the sooner you wipe out superstition the sooner we shall hav Liberty. And that is what every person ought to strive for—Liberty. I am,

Yours in Freethought,

J. ROSENBERG,

Recording and Corresponding Secretary Cleveland Secular Union.

Greenbackism.

GLOBE VILLAGE, MASS., June 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I notice an article on the money problem in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 18th inst., in which the writer, one "H.," says: "I had thought that the advocates of an irredeemable currency had become extinct." Well, I think the advocates of "H.'s" position on the money problem ought to hav become extinct long ago. He says: "Money is nothing more nor less than a certificate that labor has been performed." Very well, I hav no objection to that definition as far as it goes; but I would add, "Or material furnished to the amount named in the certificate, or labor or material or value received to that amount," or in a shorter and more convenient expression, "a certificate of debt to the holder for value received." We hav five forms of these certificates—gold, silver, nickel, copper, and paper, and all a legal tender for the payment of debts. Now, then, in the name of reason and common sense, wherein is there any justice or propriety in making any one of these different forms of certificates redeemable in any other form, and especially when the form to be redeemed is several times larger than the form in which they must be redeemed? Nonsense! These different forms of certificates amount to practically the same thing; they are evidence of debt to the holder, but the paper form is far superior to any of the metallic forms, because it is of far less expense to the taxpayers. I think "H." must be a banker, and wants all money based on gold so the bankers can control the volume and contract it to suit themselvs, so they can get a big interest for its use off the foolish people. "H." thinks we must hav gold as a standard by which the value of money must be measured. How foolish! Does not the value of any product in the world, at all times, other circumstances being equal, depend on its volume? Is money any exception to the rule? By no means. And any intelligent political economist knows this.

Then for the welfare of the people all they hav to do is to issue to the people direct for value received a sufficient volume of money, without interest, for the convenience of exchange, say $75 or $100 per capita, and let that volume adjust itself to the different volumes of the other different products, which it would naturally and inevitably do. If the United States would demonetize both gold and silver and issue a sufficient volume of full legal-tender greenbacks for the convenience of exchange, and keep that volume uniformly at so much per capita of the population, they would soon go to a premium above gold and silver in the money markets of the world. The example of the republic of Venice proves this: that republic issued to its people an inflated paper currency irredeemable in gold and silver or in any other one thing in particular. This paper currency stood at premium above gold and silver for more than five hundred years; and the government had to pass a law limiting the premium to not over twenty per cent. This financial system was a complete success and probably would hav stood to this day had not that financial damphool Napoleon abolished it when he conquered the country. Had he had sense enough to hav adopted the system himself, in all probability he might hav overcome all his enemies; but he was as foolish as the man that killed the goose which laid the golden eggs.

The Greenbackers are not all dead yet.

F. H. MARSH.

The Hard-Hitting John Guild Meets His Match.

PORT HURON, N. Y., June 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper some time ago, Mr. John P. Guild seemed to lose his reason over a letter I wrote in regard to the Prohibition craze, and as he has had time to recover over the matter I now propose to giv him another idea, and trust when he reads it that he will not exhibit such an ebullition of temper as he showed in his answer to the advanced thought which I gave him. He must know that abuse and ridicule is no argument Bold assertions will not destroy the facts in any case. I still maintain that alcohol is nature's sword to hew down all who will not obey her laws, and by this means a better race takes up the problem of nature, and the car of human progress rolls onward. Mr. Guild is indebted to alcohol for his home in Massachusetts today, as it has destroyed the Indians who once roamed over that state in the ratio of one thousand to ten.

Mr. Guild says that "Liberals are not all honest, wise, or even decent, and if they were they would not sustain laws to keep sinful church people in order; I want to convert them to sober reason." Now, this is a most remarkable statement from a gentleman like Mr. Guild.

Nature says man shall convert nothing; she will do that in her own way, and when she gets ready to do so. Hence such statements are the second-hand vaporings of a sky-pilot. Again, the Liberals of this country do not make the laws, but hav to abide by the rules made by the church. Will Mr. Guild tell the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER why the churches hav not converted the Indians?

The saloon is the product of the Prohibition church, and as soon as this curse is removed they will be no more. The churches build the jails, prisons, poorhouses, and lunatic asylums, and knowing this fact they howl about the ungodly rum-sellers to keep public opinion from investigating their own infernal work. The liquor traffic has been made the scapegoat for all these church people's crimes for the last fifty years, when in fact it has no more to do with it than the beefsteak they eat for breakfast.

The lawyer, doctor, poet, or statesman who has not the moral courage to control his own appetite is not worthy to be called a man of brain power, and is better off under the ground than above it.

Again I say that liquor never killed a man worthy to liv, and there is no escape from the conclusion, for the reason that all who will not strengthen their mind by controling their appetite must pay the penalty that all must pay who will not obey Nature's law. Mr. Guild does not seem to know that "Paddywhacks and macaronies," with the assistance of the Prohibition fanatics, make the laws of this nation to-day.

Mr. Guild tries to ridicule my own state, but I am proud to say that it was under the oaks of this state where the tocsin of liberty went forth which gave freedom to four million of human beings. No one ever owned a slave in this state; no one was ever hanged for witchcraft; no paupers were ever skinned and their hides tanned; no Quakers were ever whipped at the tail of a cart because they would say "thee" and "thou." Can Mr. Guild say as much for Massachusetts?

Men are typical of the soil which produces them, hence his letter was in sympathy with the slush, lies, and deceit which the church hypocrits hav taught for the last eighteen hundred years, for the purpose of living off the labor of others and doing nothing themselvs.

Mr. Guild calls the saloonman a "hell fakir," which should never be done by any man who professes to be a Liberal, for the reason that all who indulge in such epithets sink lower than the person whom they seek to traduce. The churches breed the thieves and vagabonds; the saloons kill them off (priests with the rest), and all the gush and slobber of Mr. Guild will not destroy the fact. Stop the liquor traffic and let the churches breed the criminal class in the same ratio that they hav in the last one hundred years—the Liberals would be driven off the face of the earth, as the church pays no taxes—hence the bread would hav to be taken out of the Liberal's mouth to feed the scum the church has covered the land with. I declare, again, that the Prohibition business is a scheme to get control of the government, although it does kill sixty thousand of its followers each year. What do they care when the cry is, "Multiply and replenish the earth," regardless of the laws of nature? Hence no Liberal should uphold it for one moment, as every time he does he cuts a whip to scourge himself with; yea, more, he is upholding a system that will one day take the bread out of his own mouth.

Mr. Guild wants to know what becomes of the money not paid for revenue. This is purely a church question, manufactured by a sky-pilot, and it is degrading for anyone who professes to be a Liberal to make use of such cant and deceit for the purpose of misleading the people. The saloonkeepers in this state each pay from $300 to $500 per year for the privilege of killing off the church hypocrits, and as a class pay their honest debts and support their families, so they are not a burden on the public. The rack, thumbscrews, dungeons, police courts, and policemen are all products of the church, and they pay nothing to support the criminals they breed.

Mr. Guild says Liberals are not all honest (which I deny), and if he is correct he must be behind with his subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I maintain all Liberals must be honest, as honesty is the a b c of Liberalism. The act of a man makes him a Liberal, not what his pen or tongue may say.

The church pretends to work to make people better, and all the time working against the well-known laws of nature. All Liberals know that the nearer man livs to nature's laws the better his condition will be. My former letter givs Mr. Guild a new idea, and now let me inform him that the only way to convert the church is to castrate all criminals who are sentenced to state prison for five years, within twenty-four hours after their arrival at that institution; and after they hav eighteen months of good conduct to their credit let them go free. This is Nature's plan, and according to her laws thieves forfeit their right to leave any of their kind on this earth when they go under the sod.

This treatment will stop the crime of murder, wipe the church off the face of the earth, and the drunkard will be known no more. Saloons will all be gone. Jails, prisons, and asylums will only be known in history after one hundred years hav rolled away from the time criminals are dealt with according to the laws of nature.

Many who read this letter will say that such a punishment would be inhuman and barbarous. I deny it, and ask, Is it not better to stop them from being born than it is to whip, burn, and electrocute after they are in this world?

Any man with brain power will say Yes to the last proposition. All the churches in the land will fight this idea to the bitter end, as they know their doom is sealed should this measure become a general law.

Hoping Mr. Guild will not get in a passion over this last idea, I remain, Yours sincerely, W. E. LEONARD.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

To 'Gene Remsburg.

Is our loss your gain, little 'Gene?
You hav left us alone in the night;
Do you bask in the sunshine of heaven,
And roam with the spirits of light?
Are angels your constant companions
Where sorrow can reach you no more?
Oh, could we but know there were greetings
To welcome you safe on that shore!

Our home is so lonely without thee,
Where once it was cheery and bright.
There's an empty chair by our hearthstone,
And our hearts are all empty to-night.
Could we gain but a glimpse of your pleasures,
A glance, were it ever so slight,
We could take up anew our life burdens,
And travel ahead to the light.

Our course would be onward and upward
To where our lost treasure had flown,
And there to unite our home circle,
More perfect than earth could hav known,
Bid adieu to our present surroundings,
Which hav brought us this sorrow and woe;
Then we'd speak to the cruel old boatman,
"We are ready and anxious to go."

MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

Lone Rock, Ore., June 21, 1892.

Song.

List, 'tis music stealing
O'er the silvery sea;
The joyous bells are pealing
A gladsome melody.
The waves seem list'ning to the strain,
As softly on they flow
O'er mysteries 'neath the mighty main,
'Mid coral reefs below.

Music sounds the sweetest
On the moonlit sea,
Our bark sails the fleetest—
'Tis a gladsome melody.
Then, as we list to the merry bells,
We'll sing a gay refrain
Of coral reefs and fairy dells
Beneath the mighty main.

List, the bells are ringing
O'er the silvery sea,
Mingling with our singing
In gladsome harmony.
Then sail, and sing a joyous strain,
In the moonlight's silvery glow,
Of mysteries 'neath the mighty main,
'Mid coral reefs below.

IDA A. BALLOU.

[It givs us pleasure to print the following excellent address from one of our young ladies of the Corner.—ED. C. C.]

An Original Plea for Education.

Friends: We hav met this glad morning in the interest of education and pleasure—in the interest of the public schools—and I will try to make a short address on this occasion. I am glad to see so many happy faces here to-day, and, in the name of this union of schools, we welcome you, one and all, and Carbondale extends her hand to all these glad people and the sympathy of an honest heart to any who sorrow. Parents, we hope we hav paid you for the time given us here to-day, so that you may long remember it with pleasure. This large gathering tells me you are in favor of education, in favor of the public schools, in favor of man, woman, and child. I love to see the world pay some respect to the child. I love to think what education has done for us. It has banished the whip, it has civilized cruel fathers and superstitious mothers. Oh, what a jubilant day will that be when all are free—physically, morally, and intellectually free. Evolution is the law. Evolution reaches from the farthest nebulous isle in the sidereal ocean down to the government of home by the fireside. Too long has the race been chained to the customs of a semi-civilized past. Too long hav all been in bondage to the traditions of other years. Education is the lever, the public schools the fulcrum, that will lift the race to a higher sphere, redeem man from darkness, and make right royal kings and queens of common clay. Teachers, do you know that you hav the grandest calling beneath the stars? Do you know that in your hands are the intellectual monuments of the future? Hold high the torch of unfettered reason, beckon the world to follow, and light will make you free. No shackles for the soul, no fetters for the brain. Emancipated man, I will take you back a little way. Only a few centuries ago there was in Alexandria, Egypt, the grandest library the world had ever seen. There were the records of all man had ever seen and done, the records of all the eons gone, the record of all his hopes, of all he had suffered; in a word, the splendid intellectual fruits of all the ages past. But that hydra-headed monster, superstition and fanaticism, with forked tongues of fire laid in ashes that grand monument of books—greatest monument of the ancient world, grander than the pyramids—ashes more sacred than the dust of all the gods of this world. Then came the darkest night for a thousand years this world ever knew. Intellectual night for a thousand years! Think of it! In that long, dark night not one intellectual star dare show its face above the mental horizon.

But the martyrs hav not died in vain; they hav sowed the seeds of education, of civilization. Civilization—the grandest word in all the language of this world, the culmination of all the hopes of the heroic dead, the child of all the progress we hav made. Bruno died at the stake, but his name will liv while the earth moves, imperishable. Giordano Bruno is dead, but science is immortal. Philosophy and the name of Bruno will liv forever. Baron Humboldt, one of the greatest of men, left his footprints in the depths of extinct craters, and on Alpin hights of the Cordilleras, far, far above the clouds; he discovered this, the sublimest of truths—the universe is governed by law. And let me say to-day, we are gaining, we are on the high road again, and the brave ship is afloat once more. Gentle winds are swelling every sail. Women, do you know I think there is coming a better day for us, too. We are coming to the front in every important department of life. For a thousand years we were taught to sit quietly by and learn of the men at home. The men were "bosses" by divine right then. Oh, I love to see the dead branches and withered leaves of another age falling from the tree of civilization and progress, and buds and blossoms of promis and hope taking their places. We will soon be free. Education is liberty, knowledge is freedom, science is emancipation. Back of kingdoms and monarchies stands the church, a faithful ally. Back of republics, liberty, education, and humanity. Yes, our public school system is one of the greatest institutions of this world. It will be the nursery of all the intellectual fruits of the future.

In conclusion, let me urge you to stand like Hypatia and battle until death for mental freedom—for intellectual liberty; remembering always the good we do will liv forever. [Tremendous cheering.] From the fullness of my heart I thank you.

Correspondence.

LONE ROCK, ORE., June 21, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: When I sent you the poem, "Little Boys' Questions," I thought I wrote on it "Copied for the Children's Corner," which was the case. I did not know what paper it had been published in before or the name of the author, but I had no wish to claim the authorship, although I would be proud, indeed, if I could write one-half as well. Some of the friends hav thought I composed it, is why I make this explanation.

MRS. A. M. CRAWFORD.

BOND, KAN., June 23, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: As it has been a long time since I hav written to you, I will try to write again. I like to read the letters from the girls and boys. Mr. John J. I. Remsburg writes both funny and interesting letters.

We hav five cats. Their names are Tom, Tootin, Testerman—we named him after a minister—the others are Pussy and Foxie. We also hav two dogs. Their names are Sport and Drive. And I must not forget to tell you that we hav a pet white rabbit. His name is Nicken-Frisk. My cousin bought him for his little brother and we think a great deal of him. I will now close. Your Liberal friend,

IDA HEGEX.

LEON, IA., June 22, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I am fourteen years old. I go to school; but school is out now. I hav several Liberal friends here, but they liv in the country. I was to visit some of my Liberal friends last Sunday. We hav a nice strawberry patch, but it did not bear many strawberries this year. I spoke several of the pieces in the school and it made the teacher mad, and I spoke one at a Christmas tree. I like to read the Children's Corner. It is splendid. If this escapes the waste-basket I will write again. Well, I will quit for fear it will take up too much room.

Yours for the Freethinker,

MAY MARTIN.

PENNSBORO, W. VA., June 25, 1892.

DEAR MADAM: This is the first time I hav written to the Corner. I am fourteen years old. There will be a fair out here on the 13th, 14th, and 15th of September. I think the Corner is the most interesting page of THE TRUTH SEEKER, especially the letters.

Pennsboro has about six hundred inhabitants, four churches, and eight manufactories.

If this escapes the waste-basket I will write another.

William Carlton is the only Freethinker I write to. Won't some of the boys write to me? My address is Pennsboro, Ritchie county, W. Va.

With best wishes to the Corner,

FRANK CORNWELL.

BOND, KAN., June 23, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will now write my third letter to the Children's Corner. I liv on a farm, and Bond is the name of the post-office. There is also a store, blacksmith's shop, a school-house, and a few dwelling-houses near by. It has been very wet and cold this spring, and peaches, cherries, and apples are injured for this season.

My oldest brother, who has been studying law for the last two years, was graduated this summer, and has now gone to Oklahoma.

There is a church not far from our house, but I do not go half a dozen times a year. As my letter is getting too long, I will close.

Your true friend,

THERESA HELLSTROM.

BOND, KAN., June 23, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav been a reader of the Children's Corner for a number of years, but hav never attempted to write before. I attended the junior grade of the high school at Laurence last winter. We had chapel exercises every morning. During the first of the term we had calisthenics, but as examination week drew near it was thought best to omit them, as we had so much work to complete, but the chapel exercises were kept up the same as before.

While I was in Laurence I attended a lecture given by John E. Remsburg on "Bible Morals." I thought it was very good, but he did not hav a large audience. But nothing better could be expected of the people of Laurence, they are so pious. Laurence is full of churches. Wishing you success in your good and noble work, I remain, Your friend,

ELVA HELLSTROM.

FOREST HOME, May 29, 1892.

MISS WIXON, Dear Friend: It seems a long time since I sent you anything for the Children's Corner, but I use every opportunity to speak for our cause, and I hope all who claim an interest in humanity will stand firm and grow up to be men and women grandly free. Herein find my last effort before about one thousand people at Carbondale, where five schools had arranged for a picnic and general good time. If you can afford space for it, please publish it in THE TRUTH SEEKER. And to the many friends to whom I owe letters—please excuse my delay. I am so very busy I really cannot answer all, but remember we are all akin, all dear to each other, all doing our best for the same great end. I see by a monthly circular of the World's Fair commissioners that they think they hav reached a solution of the question of keeping the World's Fair open on Sunday. The circular says that many preachers and church people already visit the grounds on Sunday, and that the Fair will be open on Sunday, but no articles will be sold or machinery run on Sunday.

Yours, MAY FOSTER.

ARCH BEACH, CAL., June 1, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: I am going to avail myself of your kind invitation to "Come again." There is so much I wish to tell you and the Cornerites, though to say it all would appropriate more than my share of the Corner.

How I would like to hav helped plant your "Liberty tree." But you will giv me a leaf, just one, that I may call it "our" Liberty tree.

There never was a grander cause,
Nor statelier symbol of its laws.
Long may it liv to bloom and thrive,
May Liberty its death survive!

I do enjoy Watson Heston's pictures; he is truly a genius. Three that hav appeared lately were especially illustrativ; they shall occupy a prominent place in my scrap-book. The last, on unjust taxation, is a hard, but effectiv, pill for orthodoxy to swallow. The tree of Christianity, ah, that was rich! Those diligent workers will hav it completely destroyed before the serpent and hornets are aware.

Ingersoll and the pygmies! Here stands our champion, a magnificent specimen of manhood, with no artificial weapons, no Bible, only his oratorical powers, unblemished character, and inseparable Shakspere to sustain him, armed and ready to meet the foes of human advancement, while those contemptible, insignificant what-d'ye-call-ems, with their hatchets, saws, guns, slingshots, and the like, are vainly searching for some flaw, some weak point, some unfinished argument, where they may, without self-injury, attack the Freethought giant.

I hav just returned from a very pleasant two months' visit to my brother and his wife, who liv in San Jacinto, one hundred miles from here. It is very warm there in summer-time, otherwise it is delightful. Grain is the chief product.

Mr. Putnam has lectured there several times, and almost all the settlers in the valley are Liberals. Our colors are kept flying. I obtained upward of seventy names to a petition for the opening of the Fair. I hav now almost a hundred, and hope to double, if not treble, the number. I close with best wishes to all,

HARRIET E. THURSTON.

P.S.—What has become of Lores L. Goodwin? H. E. T.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER
AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

THE Probibitionists hav nominated John Bidwell, a Californian and ex-Congressman, for president.

THE country about Guadalajara, Mexico, is being shaken by continual earthquakes, despite the prayers of the people.

A MERCHANT of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, has been fined $25 for profanity in heading an advertisement, "Let there be light, and there was light."

THEATER MANAGER CRONHEIM is serving a six months' sentence in a penitentiary for rivalry of ecclesiastics by keeping open his Jersey City theater Sundays.

REV. O. MURRAY, of Chicago, condemns the design to present the Passion Play in that city as "a scheme to set forth the passion of Christ for revenue only."

THE Brooklyn mother who was charged with burning her little daughter with a red-hot stove-cover-lifter for not learning passages in the catechism, has been acquitted for lack of evidence.

THE pope will grant an extraordinary indulgence to all who visit the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes between February 11th, the date of the apparition at the sanctuary, and December 8th.

THE Russian government has signified that it will permit the importation duty-free of Bibles printed in any other than the Russian language, but no version other than that authorized by the Greek Catholic, or state, church will be allowed.

CARNEGIE'S iron-works at Homestead, Pa., hav for some days been in the possession of strikers. The strikers repulsed a force of Pinkertons in a set battle in which the total loss was about twenty killed and one hundred wounded. Militia hav been ordered to the spot.

BISHOP HIRTH, head of the Catholic mission at Uganda, Africa, denounces Captain Williams, leader of the Protestant forces who massacred so many Catholics, and says that Williams refused to treat with King Mwanga unless he became a Protestant and submitted to the British.

"I TOLD him he was running in the face of Providence starting off on Sunday," cried Mrs. Bergman, of New York, on learning of the arrest of her husband, a professional burglar. She was his abettor, and had just intrusted a kit of burglar's tools to a detectiv who feigned to be his friend.

DETECTIVS at McDonough, Ga., hav discovered the murderers of Dr. Sloan to be a negro preacher named Bivins and his two deacons. Bivins escorted his wife to church, and, accompanied by the deacons, went to the house of the physician and killed him with a shotgun. He then returned to the church and took up a collection while, it is related, the congregation sang, "Play on your harp, little David."

WHEN the result of the Rome election was made known, a crowd gathered before the residence of the Freethinker Crispi, who was successful as a Liberal candidate, and cheered and shouted, "Long liv Crispi!" "Down with the pope!" "Down with the Clericals!" After Crispi had responded in a speech, the crowd proceeded to the Palace of the Propaganda, in front of which it made an anticlerical demonstration.

A RUSSIAN court has convicted six male and female members of the society of "angel-makers," who murdered children not wanted by their parents, on the plea of saving them from sin. These fanatics recall the society of Spanish monks in the last century who agreed to prevent recovery of any person who was expected to die and had taken extreme unction, lest he should sin more and endanger his salvation.

AN English visitor at Malta refused to salute the image of the Virgin which he met borne by a procession, and the crowd bonneted him—i. e., knocked his hat down over his head—and hustled him off. Later, having gone home and got a new hat, he met another procession, and this time prudently raised his hat. A yell arose, and the mob chased him several blocks till he escaped in a boat. He had saluted Pontius Pilate, who was going to be burnt in effigy.

As the Catholic church is getting the worst of the conflict with the Freethinking government in France, it is taking a position just the opposit of that which it held when itself was the victor, and deprecating oppression because of religious distinctions. The pope has written to the bishop of Grenoble, France, that the church is appealing for the coöperation of all honest men in the task of overcoming sectarian persecution, which, he says, is compassing the religious and moral ruin of France.

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman
Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16.50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

A SHORT
HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

—THE—
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
3	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N. Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
S. D. Greene, 367 Nostrand ave., Brooklyn.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 916 Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

INVALIDS SUFFERING FROM

Nervous Prostration, La Grippe, Dyspepsia, and all forms of Wasting Diseases find immediate and lasting relief in

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED."

It is the only mild stimulant combined with a perfect pre-digested food known that makes BLOOD and MUSCLE. For sale by all druggists.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait. Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

Is the fear of not lasting forever more sad than that of not having existed from time immemorial?—Meslier.

THE study of the Bible, and comparing it with the sacred writings of other nations, convinces me that the Bible is a human compilation of the traditions, poetry, history and religious ideas of the Jews in earlier and darker ages than the present. It is "God's word" only in the sense that what is good in all written, spoken, or secret thought may be called God's word. Its atrocities, indecencies, and incomprehensible dogmas are of the earth. I reject the orthodox doctrin of inspiration entirely.—Robt. C. Adams.

IT will not avail to call him [the poet Ossian] a heathen, because he personifies the sun and addresses it; and what if his heroes did "worship the ghosts of their fathers?" . . . We cannot but respect the vigorous faith of those heathen, who sternly believed somewhat, and are inclined to say to the critics who are offended by their superstitious rites,—Don't interrupt these men's prayers. As if we knew more about human life and a God than the heathen and ancients! Does English theology contain the recent discoveries?—Thoreau.

THE further astronomy advanced in the knowledge of the laws and phenomena of the heavens, the further it repelled the idea or hypothesis of a supernatural cause, and the easier it became to trace back the origin, grouping, and motions of the heavenly bodies to the simplest possible phenomena induced by matter and by the laws of its motions. The mutual attraction of the smallest particles rolled the worlds together, and the laws of attraction with their primal motion gave rise to that system of reciprocal revolution which we now perceive in them.—Büchner.

As something of a writer myself, I trust the Holy Ghost will accept of my sympathy with him in the garbled vandalisms that hav been thrust upon him by Stephens and others. In my beardless days I hav lain all night awake in vexation at typographical errors I had discovered in the effusions by which, at that period, I tried to win the ecstatic admiration of the world. I wrote a poem on Poland, full of blood and blazes and thunder, and the printer turned my sublime "bursting bolts" into contemptible "bursting belts," which nearly drove me to distraction. Consequently, the Ghost has a keen sympathizer in him who suffered degradation under the "bursting belts," and I extend my sympathy to him under the infliction of all those who hav "improved" upon him, from the erudite rabbis who wrote the Targums to the inky-knuckled type-sticker who split up the New Testament into verses.—Saladin in God and His Book.

THE Greeks well knew how to distinguish history from fable, and real facts from the tales of Herodotus; just as in relation to important public affairs, their orators borrowed nothing from the discourses of the sophists or the imagery of the poets. . . . Among us, on the contrary, a standard is brought by an angel from heaven to the monks of St. Dennis; a pigeon brings a bottle of oil to the church of Rheims; two armies of serpents engage in pitched battle in Germany; an archbishop of Mayence is besieged and devoured by rats; and to complete and crown the whole, the year in which these adventures occurred is given with the most particular precision. The Abbé Langlet, also condescending to compile, compiles these contemptible fooleries, while the almanacs, for the hundredth time, repeat them. In this manner are our youth instructed and enlightened; and all these trumpery fables are put in requisition even for the education of princes!—Voltaire.

THERE are many unworthy motivs in the world—jealousy, hatred, vanity, love of gain—but there is no one that is more unmanly or more mischievous than fear. It chains the tongue and fetters the hand; it deadens the faculties, and chills the feelings; it crushes the elasticity of youthful resolve, and increases the hesitating indecision of old age. It sits like an incubus upon our noblest impulses; it turns our wisdom into foolishness, and levels the generous with the selfish. There is more hope of the fool than of the faint-hearted. Yet this poor, paltry, pitiful motiv—the characteristic of a weak mind, and the bane of a strong one—is held up to us as the life rule of those whom the deity delighteth to honor. Men are to be virtuous, not because virtue is a good thing in itself, not because it brings happiness to others and content to ourselvs, not because it gains respect and inspires love; no! but because God is angry with the wicked every day; a jealous God, visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children, even to the third and fourth generation! Out upon it!—Robert Dale Owen.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 330 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price. $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besaut-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Eqnities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Frnits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - 40 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

WATER OF LIFE

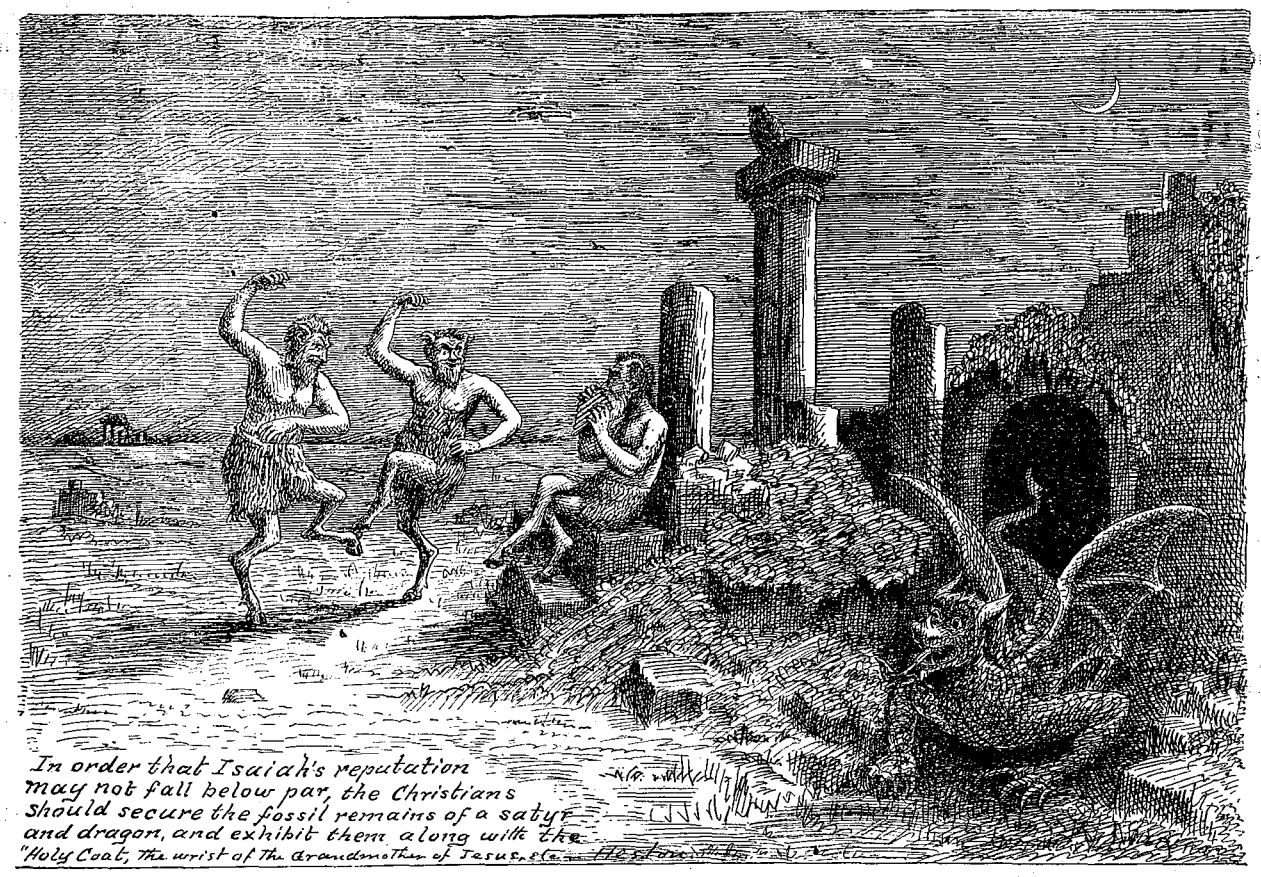
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS.
Vineland, N. J

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

INSPIRED NONSENSE—PREDICTING THE IMPOSSIBLE.

But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures; and owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there. And the wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces: and her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged.—Isa. xiii, 21,22.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo. cloth, $1 00.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - 10 cents.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

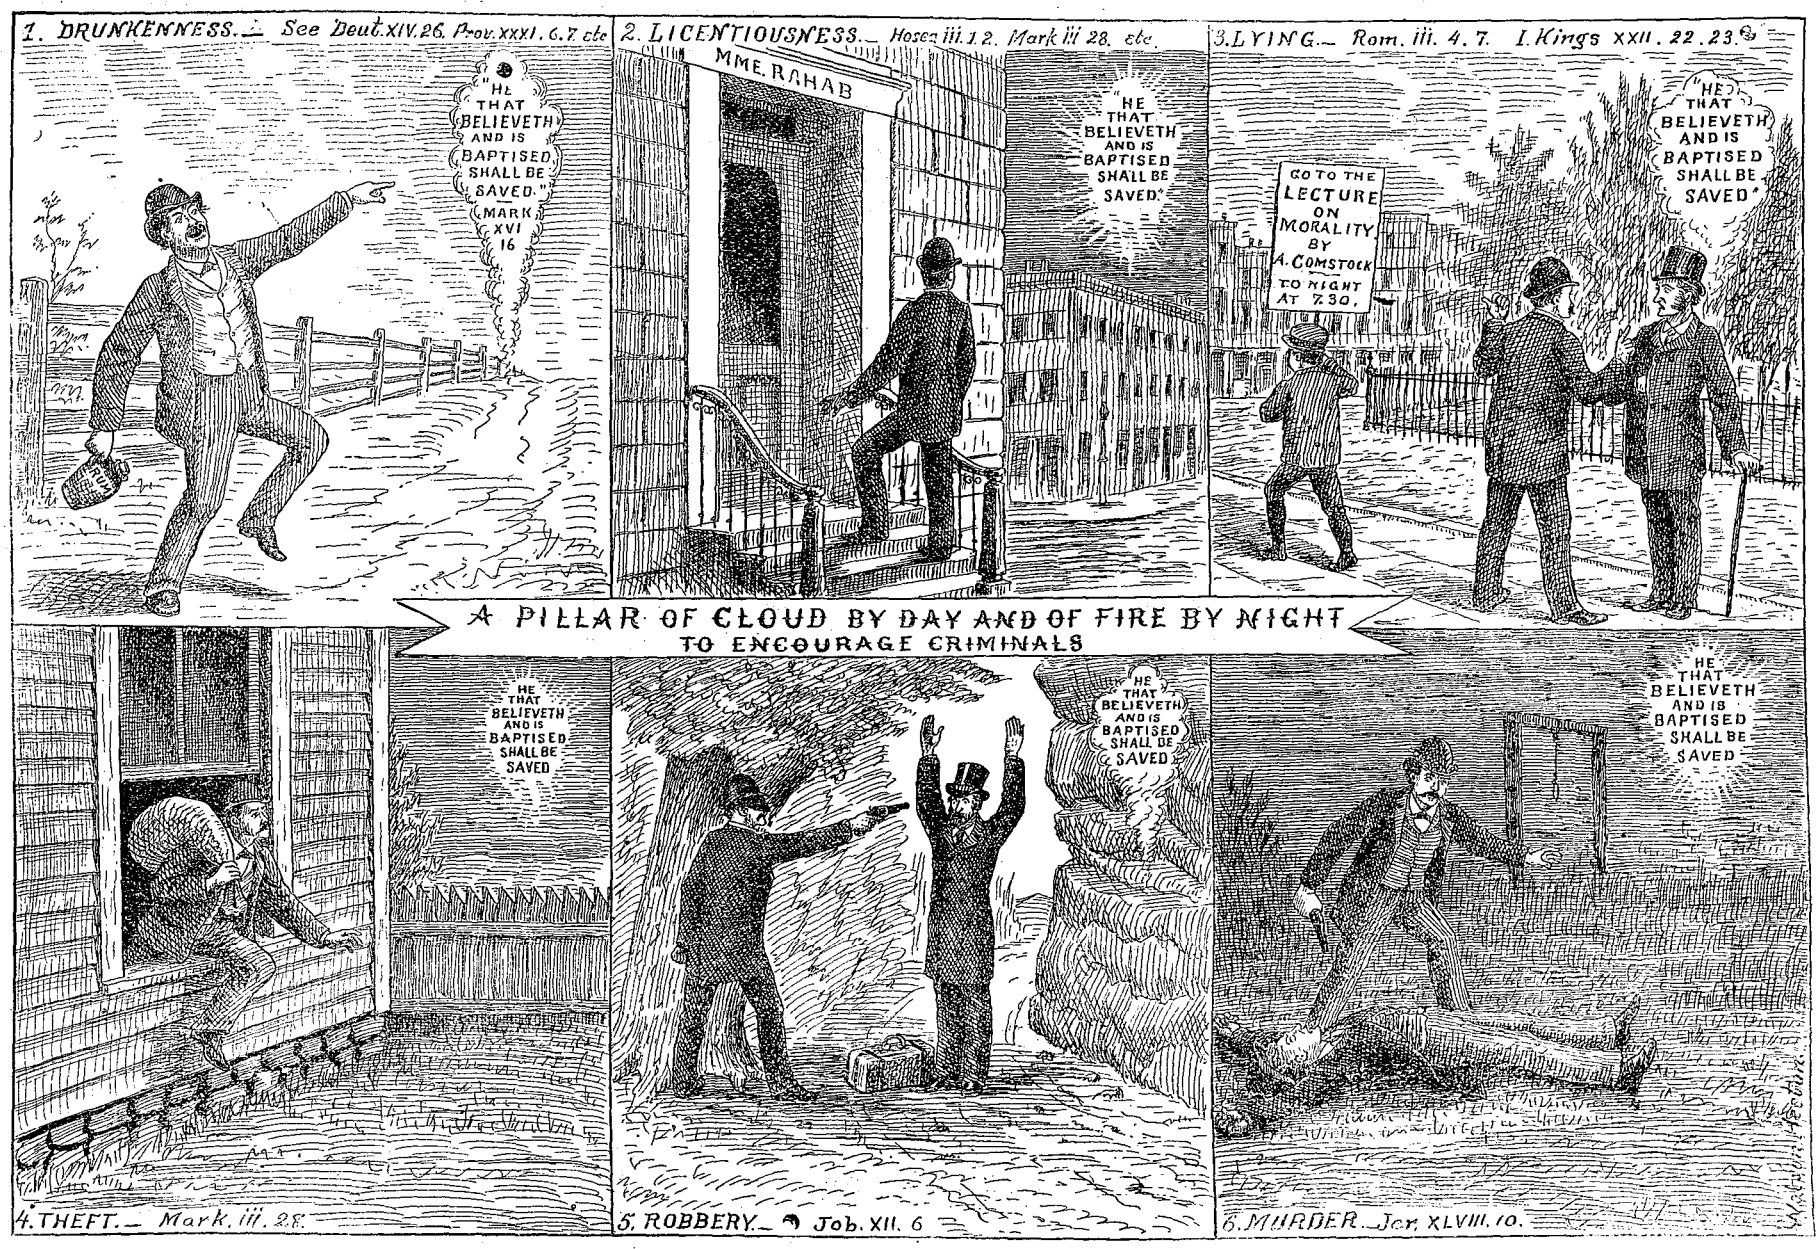
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 30. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 23, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

HOW THE ATONEMENT SCHEME AND BIBLE DOCTRINS ENCOURAGE CRIME.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

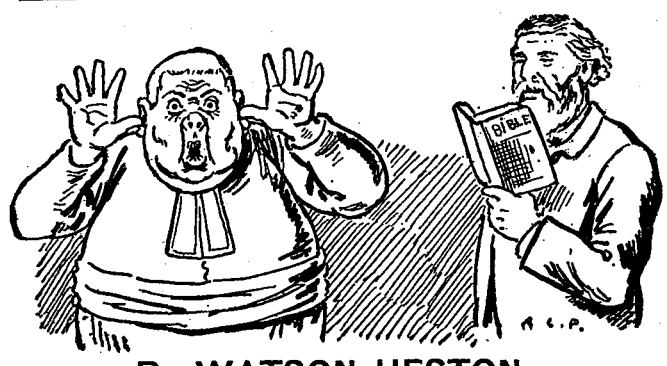
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.



JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 30. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 23, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 23, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

An Example of Religious Rule.

It is more or less known throughout the United States that New York city is politically controled by the Tammany party, and that this party rules with shameful mismanagement and corruption. Now, as Tammany is largely identified with the Catholic ecclesiastical machine, and composed of believers in the Catholic faith, we think that the influence of that church and religion on government may herein be estimated very justly and usefully. The Tammany party is called by some "the political wing of the Roman Catholic church" in this city. Or we may call the Roman Catholic church the ecclesiastical wing of the Tammany party. We may estimate that the members of Tammany possess, on the average, the religious spirit in a strength fifty per cent greater than the non-Tammany citizens—the informed and largely irreligious inhabitants. And the Tammany society of strongly religious citizens governs so badly that but for the struggles of the non-Tammany and less religious few the city would sink under its abuses.

The true character of Tammany is shown by the Post of this city by means of likening it to the Italian bandit organizations, so well that we will here transcribe the comparison. The Tammany Society, that paper says, is really an organization of the semi-criminal class of the city—by which we mean the class which leads a criminal or vicious life without being directly obliged to hide from the police—to secure the votes of the very ignorant, either for sale to the managers of the leading parties, or as a means of securing municipal offices for its more intelligent and shrewd members and their families, and procuring immunity from criminal prosecution. In fact, it resembles as closely as the social and political differences of the two countries will permit, the Italian criminal societies, known as the "Mafia" and the "Camorra," one existing in Sicily and the other in the mainland, and both the results of the long misgovernment of the Bourbons. The Italian government has been for twenty years making strenuous efforts to suppress these organizations, but so far without complete success. Probably thousands of Americans who go to Italy every year read about their operations with horror, without remembering that we hav really something of the same sort in our leading city at home. It is true the Italian "Mafia" is a secret society, and it is true also that it occasionally punishes informers or enemies by assassination; and owing to the fact that all the chief administrativ and judicial offices in Italy are filled by crown appointment, it is seldom or never able to put a member on the bench, or into the public prosecutor's office; but in a great number of other ways it givs them the same sort of succor, help, and comfort that Tammany givs its followers. It stops prosecutions before minor magistrates; it frightens away witnesses; it prevents dismissals from situations; and often controls elections by threats, and occasionally commits a murder in order to strike terror. But, if it existed here, it would not find it necessary to resort to extreme measures. It would probably do what Tammany has done—organize the vicious and predatory element of the population into a vast society, and through them control enough of the ignorant vote to seize now and then on the municipal treasury, and divide the leading municipal offices as plunder among its more activ members, and get the control of the police and minor magistracy.

The Mafia is the Italian Tammany; Tammany is the American Mafia.

We will not close without pointing out particularly one of the instances of Tammany-Catholic misrule that we think perhaps the most flagrant of all. This is the neglect of the public schools. Each year ten thousand applications for admission are made in excess of the capacity of the buildings. This occurs unfailingly year after year. The shortage is well known, has often been complained of and denounced, and is looked forward to every school season with the same assured expectation as the buds of April or the frosts of November. Yet no measures are taken to cure the deficiency. The office-holders are busy in political intrigue and do not care, and the priests favor continuance of the evil that their parochial schools may profit therefrom.

The rule of New York city we commend to all persons' attention as an example of the effect of religion on citizenship. That it is as decent as it is, is owing only to the sensible and skeptical few; if these few were absent and all were religious, the resulting condition may be imagined. On second thought, it may be more than imagined, it may be ascertained from history—it would be that of Europe during the Middle Ages.

Superstitions.

The Washington Star complains that so many superstitious practices are in vogue among the people of the United States. We join in our contemporary's deplorement, and will aid that paper in its work of pillorizing the offensiv doings.

"In Mansfield, O.," says the Star, "many years ago it was generally believed that the seeds of 'Job's tears,' worn around the neck, would cure goitre, as would amber or gold beads. Up through New England teething children were presented with the same charms, which were kept at the drug-stores to ward off sore throat and diphtheria."

To contribute our mite to the detection of this sort of follies, we will add that besides the "seeds of Job's tears," a book containing a narrativ about his tears and other things is also used as a charm against disease. The "amber or gold beads," too, remind us of the beads gathered on strings, constituting what are called rosaries, which are diligently counted over by multitudes of people to avert illness and other misfortunes.

"In Michigan a double cedar knot is carried in the pocket to cure rheumatism, and in New Hampshire a man carried a gall from the stems of golden-rod for the same disease. A small white grub is in the gall, and he thought as long as the grub remained alive no rheumatism could get hold of him."

The use of the "double cedar knot" as a curativ agent is like that of pieces of wood which are believed by many to hav come from a cross used for a crucifixion some ages ago. There is not the slightest evidence that these pieces of wood came from the cross, but much that they did not. Indeed, the numerousness of the pieces for which the claim is made is such that they would make twenty crosses. As to the "golden-rod gall" and the "small white grub" in it which protected its owner so long as it was kept alive, why, the religion of the Aztecs who formerly inhabited southwestern North America affirmed the same of certain altar-fires which had to be constantly kept alive; and sundry of our fellow-citizens attach mighty efficacy to the keeping alive of candles before images at particular seasons. Or, we may conjecture some affinity between the "small white grub" and the black-garbed creatures who grub upon us, or into us, for their living, and who tell us that our well-being depends upon exempting them from labor and by our self toil keeping them alive. But perhaps this comparison is superficial and pueril. Peradventure we shall not be able, in the present state of pantheological research, to duplicate the small white grub superstition.

"Hickory nuts, the buckeye, and its cousin, the horse chestnut, which bring good luck in New Jersey, are foes to rheumatism in different localities."

Indeed, in this very city, people desirous of preventivs of rheumatism and other illnesses congregate in multitudes every Sunday to receive what are vulgarly called "chestnuts." But this is said to be a slang use of the word.

"Some people wear a strange ring made of a potato, with a hole bored through it, for rheumatism, and others carry a plain potato in the pocket."

Some people wear on a string around their necks a strange object with a hole bored through it, called a scapular. Others carry a plain medal in the pocket.

"The charm is more potent if the potato has been stolen."

This throws light on a point that has always puzzled us, viz., why church people, by means of taxing unbelievers and all to support their operations, contrive that their ceremonials shall always be stolen.

"Almost everything seems to hav rheumatism-fighting properties, for in southern Michigan a pebble in the pocket serves to ward it off."

True. Man has utilized or worshiped as charm against his afflictions almost everything in earth or heaven or in the regions which be under the earth, as well as a good many things which are not above, on, or under said sphere. In our locality just at present he mostly worships a partnership composed of a celebrated enchanter from above the earth and one from under it.

"A New Hampshire cure for sore throat is to wear about the neck a stocking, in the toe of which a potato has been tied."

A sore-throated wight bewrapped with a stocking having a potato in it must be a rather comical sight. Some individuals in this city make themselvs laughable objects by donning queer raiment, in the belief that they thereby maintain immunity from mortal calamities. Some wear long black shirts outside of their other garments. Some wear queer hats. One of these believers in what we may call the dress cure, who is named Pecci and livs at Rome, Italy, affects a head-dress of three hats piled on top of one another. By the way, this man's stocking, or toe, enjoys especial therapeutic and other powers. The believer kisses it instead of wearing it on his neck, which is reputed to be already occupied by a yoke.

"Among the negroes the most striking remedies are to be found. Witness the combination of cure and spell, described under the name of 'conjuring a tooth,' in Alabama. Go into a lonely part of the woods with one of the opposit sex, who is to carry an ax. The bearer of the ax chops around the roots of a white oak, cuts off with a large jack-knife nine splinters from the roots of a tree, then cuts around the roots of the aching tooth with the knife, dips each of the nine splinters in the blood flowing from the cuts, and finally buries the splinters at the foot of the tree from which they came. While doing this the operator repeats something you don't understand, which is a charm."

We will keep up our end of this cosmotheological inquiry by calling public attention to the equal folly of some who for the same purpose employ wavings and placements of crooked sticks called crosiers, and of candles supposed to possess mystic symbolicalness. The magic number observed in these ceremonies is more usually three or seven than nine. The custom of dipping in blood will be readily paralleled from the memory of our readers. "While doing this the operator repeats something you don't understand." Our experience coincides with that of our Washington friend. This "is a charm." Certainly it always charms us away.

"From the same locality comes a curious remedy for chills and fever. Take the skin from the inside of an egg-shell, go to a young persimmon three days in succession, and tie a knot in the skin each day.

"On the eastern shore of Maryland biliousness is cured by boring three holes in a carefully selected tree and walking three times around it, saying: 'Go away, bilious.'"

We will direct ridicule as well to the similar flat, stale, and unprofitable fashion of crossing one's self three times and saying, "Get thee behind me, Satan." It may be remarked that the ceremonies to which we hav had the honor of calling attention hav this peculiarity, they preserve not only from one specified disease, but from death by any, or by old age. They hav, in the mind of their practicers, the virtue of conferring never-ending life.

"In parts of Massachusetts it is thought that if a girl puts a piece of Southern wood down her back, the first boy she meets will be her husband. In Boston if a marriageable woman puts a piece of Southern wood under her pillow on retiring, the first man she sees in the morning, so says the superstition, will be the one she is to marry."

The only superstitious practice attached to marriage that we had had any opportunity of noting, is that common one relating to the nuptial ceremony. Under the baneful sway of this superstition, thousands at marriage desert the civil magistrate who has recorded their previous contracts, in favor of a voodoo-man, obi-doctor, or conjurer—however he may be termed—whose alleged business has to do with a future life and supernatural beings and who has no call to meddle with the affairs of man and wife or any others belonging to this world.

We regret, along with our fellow-journal of Washington, the extensiv reign of these false notions and wasteful practices. We cannot forbear remarking that the superstitions which our co-laborer condemns are those which hav never chanced to get possession of the power of the state and so convert most of the populace into adherents of them, thereby making it uncomfortable for challengers of the said misbeliefs. Harmony in the future workings of this team of investigators of comparativ superstition, will be not at all disserved if our mate will occasionally apply himself to the state-supported as well as to the unsupported superstitions.

The Pope and the Royalists.

There is a revolt in the pope's household, caused by his policy toward France, which is that of friendliness to the republican form of government, though opposed to the men who at present administer it. The revolt is fostered by the royalist Catholics, who still hope that the empire may be restored.

The pope's policy is to found a conservativ party, which shall offset the Radicals who are fast separating church and state, and to use the ballot as he uses it in this country—to attain power and pelf for his sect. The royalists desire the old régime, and will tolerate nothing recognizing the republic as a permanency. The College of Cardinals at Rome support the royalists, and several of the cardinals hav told the pope that his program does not meet their views. Whereat, it is reported, the pope feels greatly provoked.

The pope is a cunning politician. He sees that the empire is a thing of the past, and that the only way to gain his ends is to form a party of which he shall virtually be the head, and which under his direction shall possess the power to dictate to the secular politicians. He does not desire this party to be known distinctivly as a Catholic party, but as a "constitutional conservativ party." But the royalists, who are not as far-seeing, or, perhaps, as Jesuitical as he, oppose all political progress and are endeavoring to turn France back to the time when kings and priests fattened on the people without effectiv opposition. They are the real representativs of Catholicism, for the pope's move is but a method of deception. His real purpose is the same as that of the royalists, to regain the power in France at present lost to the church. The revolt is that of lesser rogues falling out with a chief who is a little shrewder than they.

The Fair to Be Closed Sundays.

The contest over the Sunday closing or opening of the World's Fair has been transferred to the House of Representativs, the Senate having passed a bill giving five millions of dollars to the Fair providing its gates are closed on Sundays. Unless the House shall change this, the Sabbatarians will hav won a great victory and religious liberty will be seriously imperiled. At this writing it is difficult to say what will be done, as Congress intends to adjourn early next week.

The passing of this bill by the Senate has aroused the greatest indignation, and from the expressions of the newspapers it is easy to see that the majority of the people are against the fanatics, but lack organization whereby to make themselvs heard. Speaking for the people of this section, the World says:

"Hardly anything worse could happen to the World's Fair than the final passage of the Senate's Sunday-closing proviso with the five million dollars appropriation, the prohibition clause having been very wisely rejected as a little too much even for Senatorial hypocrisy.

"The other proviso, that the Fair grounds shall be closed on Sunday, is even worse. It will deprive every visitor of his best chance to enjoy the Fair. It will enormously reduce gate receipts. It will cut off the large laboring population of Chicago and all the cities within hundreds of miles from the pleasure and profit of visiting the Fair with their wives and children. It will reduce the influence of the Fair even more than its revenues.

"But further. It will thrust all kinds of temptation upon the strangers within Chicago's gates. The dulness of an idle Sunday to the sojourner in a city is intolerable. Thousands who would spend Sunday innocently in the art galleries and other pleasant places of the Fair if they might, will spend it—under the Sunday-closing rule—at the garish summer resorts, or in the saloons, the beer cellars, the dives, and the lower resorts of other kinds which abound in that city and which are never closed on Sunday. There can be no doubt whatever that the Sunday closing of the Fair will induce more immoral and hurtful indulgence than any other rule or practice which could be devised.

"It is no answer to all this to say that visitors to the Fair ought to spend Sunday at church. It is a fact perfectly well known that a very large number of people do not want to go to church and cannot be forced to go by the closing of other resorts. It is not the business of law-givers to try to force people to go to church, and, even if it were, law-givers cannot accomplish that end in a free country. Only bigotry could desire such compulsion, and in our time and country bigotry is lame of both legs in such a case.

"The House should strike this senseless proviso out of the bill. If it fails to do so the World's Fair managers should refuse to accept the money offered upon such conditions and look to an enlightened public to sustain them in that refusal."

The Herald, the Sun, the Times, and several lesser journals are also opposed to the fanatical restrictions of the Senate's action. The former says:

"It is not surprising that there is a strong and growing sentiment in Chicago in favor of declining the money offered by Congress if coupled with the Sunday-closing condition which the Senate has imposed.

"This condition must impair very materially the value of the contribution by cutting off the revenues of the enterprise on the day of the week when they would be largest. It will deny to multitudes of working people their best and in many instances only opportunity for the enjoyment and instruction to be derived from visiting the grounds. It will, in short, interfere seriously with the success of the great undertaking.

"The managers of the Fair and the citizens of Chicago hav good reason to be incensed at the action of the Senate, and their feeling of indignation may well be shared by the people of the country. For that action is un-American and not in keeping with the genius of our Constitution. It breathes a puritanical spirit, condemned by the tolerant sentiment of the nation.

"The keystone of our governmental fabric is the right of home rule—the right of the people to manage their own affairs. State sovereignty secures to the citizens of every state the right to observe Sunday in whatever way the majority may determin. They are free to make it a day of strict religious devotion or a day of liberal enjoyment. They may make it so puritanical as to leave to the people no choice but to go to church or stay at home. They may make it so liberal that festivities and amusements become the order of the day.

"Such is the right of the people of every state. It is a right recognized by the Constitution of the United States in the general grant of sovereignty and in the special guarantee of religious freedom.

"Congress has no business to dictate how the citizens of Chicago or the inhabitants of Illinois or the people of any other state shall spend their Sunday. Whether the Columbian Exposition shall be kept open or closed on that day is no concern of the Senate or House at Washington. The Exposition was not got up by the nation and will not be controled by the nation. Its organization and control are local. Its conduct should be left to local hands. Whether it shall be closed one day in seven is for its directors to say.

"Of course Congress has the technical right to giv or withhold its aid or to offer money on such terms as it may see fit to impose. But to demand the closing of the Fair on Sunday as a condition of advancing needful funds is simply an attempt to reach by indirection an un-American end that cannot be attained by direct means under the Constitution.

"The Herald has long favored a Congressional appropriation in aid of the Exposition for the reason that it is an enterprise in which the people of the whole nation are interested, and one whose success must reflect credit and confer benefits upon all. But this aid should be given freely and without any conditions designed to jeopardize success, hamper the management or interfere with the enjoyments of the people.

"We trust that both the Senate and the House will yet see the matter in this light, and that when the contribution of five millions is finally made it will be offered to Chicago without any obnoxious restriction."

In the debates preceding the vote on this matter, the Senators showed plainly that they were catering to the religious element, and most of their objections to Sunday opening were religious. And yet they knew and they knew that the country knew that they all break the "Sabbath" whenever it suits their political or financial or social convenience to do so. Even Senators Hawley, of Connecticut, and Colquitt, of Georgia—the most accomplished hypocrits of them all—ride on railroads and transact business on Sunday. But as Senator Hawley said, unless this provision was adopted, they knew the Fair gates would be kept open, and to please the narrow little Puritans of Connecticut and the superstitious crackers of Georgia they were willing to make religious laws to restrict the whole enlightened part of the United States. It is a most abominable and outrageous piece of work!

There is no time to do anything now. Congress has the matter in its hands, and unless the House reverses the Senate's action, the Fair will be closed, for Chicago needs the money and cannot afford to refuse it and depend upon the Sunday gate-money to make the loss good.

A writer in a Western journal recently made a visit to British Guiana, and while at Berbice the following incident came to his notice: A member of the Protestant church lost his wife suddenly. She was also a member. They were poor. He applied to the minister for a lot to bury her in. The minister refused unless he first paid the price, $3. He could not raise it, and with tears in his eyes, begged the minister to relent and bury his wife decently. The minister still refused. The authorities insisted on an immediate burial for sanitary reasons.

With a few friends, he took the body of his wife to the cemetery gate, and again begged the minister to bury her. Again he was refused. Leaving the body in the gate, he went away to try again to raise the money. While they were gone the minister's horse ran against the rude box, knocking it to the ground, and the body fell out on the earth. A crowd gathered around. The minister, without waiting for the husband to return, paid a man $4 to bury it without even a prayer. But this was not the end. Before the sun went down, the minister sued the man for $7 to pay for the lot and the expense he had incurred in burying his wife, and levied on his few household things as security. When it came up in court next day, the judge, who is not a Christian, shamed the minister out of the courtroom, amid the jeers and hisses of the assembled crowd, refused to entertain the case, and assessed the costs on the minister.

The Catholics claim that the rule of their priests over ignorant Indians is one of great beneficence and virtue. The Victoria, B. C., Times relates an occurrence which shows this: "The Rev. E. C. Chirouse, O.M.I., visited the La Fountain Indian reserve about the middle of last month. During his visit there a young Indian woman and her lover (a handsome young buck) were caught in the act of breaking a church law, mammook cultus. The reverend father ordered that both be flogged. The young woman was stripped of all her clothing, except a thin chemise; she was held down by two Indians, while one muscular Indian administered fifteen lashes with a rawhide whip. The next evening the young woman was flogged again (fifteen lashes) making thirty lashes with a rawhide in twenty-four hours. The above facts were not learned by the authorities until about ten days after the floggings. The Indians feared the young woman would die; then the truth came out about the floggings. The Indians who assisted at the floggings, were arrested and lodged in the Lillooet jail. A warrant was sworn out against the priest, Rev. E. C. Chirouse; he was arrested at Pemberton Meadows, by special constable W. G. Manson, and brought to Lillooet for trial. The preliminary trial was held at Lillooet on April 5th, John Martley, J. P., on the bench. The priest was bound over to appear at the county court to be held at Lillooet on the 2d day of May in the sum of $1,000 bail. The young woman has been unable to move since the whippings. She has to be turned over in bed by assistants, being too weak to turn alone. She is still in a very critical condition, but with careful nursing she may recover. The priest was convicted, but has been granted a new trial on a writ of error, by an official who is one of the stanch supporters of the Catholic church."

In the West.

News and Notes.

Floating over the broad Columbia. How beautiful it is; the mighty river sweeping along vast and wooded shores, its sparkling bosom contrasting with the tremendous hights. Wide expanses roll away, holding green islands in the shimmering splendor; and the far-off banks are lost in soft and misty gloom. The great mountains appear, enormous drifts of snow against the blue sky and above the dark masses of forest. All day long we float and speed amid this wild magnificence, gemmed here and there with bright villages, elegant dwellings, gardens, orchards, while saw-mills and canneries mingle their rude industry with the ever-changing panorama.

The flags are floating everywhere, on the boat, on the majestic ship, from the tall staff, from the roof. The stars and stripes wreathe the windows, the porticos, and stream across the roads. Music fills the air, the guns are heard, the muskets, the fire-crackers, and the boom of drum. It is the Fourth of July, the gala day of America, and the patriot heart feels the glad enthusiasm of the time.

Athens and Cathlamet, ancient Greece and modern Columbia, mingle their memories and their glory. Athens is beautiful for situation, with fields and groves, with hills and slopes, with valleys and rushing river, with wealth of timber and coal; the white wings of commerce in front; deep water close to shore, where the largest ships can anchor; the Columbia spreading like a lake, and flowing and winding onward to the sea. Beyond Astoria the eye catches the jeweled breast of the Pacific. A more charming prospect of rugged grandeur, glowing loveliness, magnificent extent, seldom greets the gaze in the Old World or the New. On these western shores, gleaming in the sunset, there could be found no more favorable place to unfold in fresh delight and liberal usefulness the art, the poetry, the philosophy of the most brilliant race that ever adorned the pathway of the orient. Let Athens flourish on the banks of the Columbia, and renew for this age the glorious youth of man.

I am here on the Fourth of July, and deliver the oration. The Declaration of Independence is read by Miss Dickinson, of Eugene, Ore. C. Beal is chairman of the meeting; Marshal Taylor keeps order. The Athens and Cathlamet brass band discourse sweet music; the Cathlamet boys defeat the Astoria team in a game of baseball, and on the whole it is a day of glory for Wahkiakum county.

In the evening there is a magnificent ball in West's new building. Judge Curtis and his confrères from Astoria keep the "light fantastic toe" in motion with enlivening strains until morning. I guess about five hundred people were present. In a blaze of fireworks the glorious Fourth was ended.

C. Beal and Van Houten hav inaugurated an enterprise here that certainly deserves the attention of Liberals. This is a Freethought community. There is no church here yet. There is prospect of a fine town, perhaps the largest city on the Washington side of the Columbia. Two railroads are in view—one from Kalama to Frankfort, via Cathlamet, and one from Athens, adjoining Cathlamet, to the Northern Pacific, twenty-four miles away through the Elokemin valley. What is needed is capital to develop the resources of the country, to build mills, factories, etc. Beal wishes to hav some day a grand university of Freethought here, and certainly the elements might be so mixed as to produce a noble flower of Liberalism. Mr. Beal is a man of enthusiastic faith, and dreams and builds with the ardor of a poet. But there is a solid basis of fact for his extensiv plans.

Forty years ago, or more, James Birnie, Judge Strong, and General Grant used to camp here and plan and dream of the future, two thousand miles away from civilization. What a change since that time. When President Grant went around the world he said there was one more place he would like to see, and that was Cathlamet.

There is plenty of fish in the water, plenty of game in the hills, and the soil is of the richest kind. Large crops of fruit, vegetables, and grasses are produced. The water is of the purest quality. The climate, especially in summer, is delightful. The ocean is twenty miles away and its breezes are softly tempered as they strike these gentle hills and dales.

Already a company has gathered here, of energy and Liberal spirit. Our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Albert, are well known to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. They now hav a beautiful baby and it is named after W. S. Bell.

Dr. Boynton is full of poetry and philosophy and is a Radical to the backbone. His wife is the same, and their two pretty babies are born with their foreheads to the dawn. W. C. Clow keeps time as usual, trains the brass band and is at the front. A. S. Douglass, proprietor of the new mill, is an energetic worker. The Chenys, formerly of Wisconsin, keep things shining, both in the tin-shop and out of it. J. Bruce Polwarth, district attorney; O. M. Harvey, auditor of the county; the Shepherd brothers; the West family; Alex. Birnie, postmaster for twenty-six years; Wm. Andrews; J. J. Foster, who owns a farm of five hundred acres; Davis & Cornwall, of the Cathlamet Gazette, McGrath and Frederickson, proprietors of the hotels, these and many others are among the pioneer corps of Athens and Cathlamet, and are determined to make this place worthy of its natural advantages.

Mr. Beal has started a brickyard, and it is said that the clay in this vicinity will produce the finest brick.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Davidson were with us from their ranch above Eureka and photographed the Fourth of July assemblage. Others joined from various places, and it was a pleasure to greet old and new friends along the Columbia.

Athens and Cathlamet hav a bright future before them as this great and splendid country develops. It will take time, work, energy, and capital to realize the possibilities of the situation; but I hav much faith in friend Beal's Liberal projects. I enjoyed the hospitality of his delightful home, where certainly there is rest for the weary. It occupies a commanding position from whence the river can be seen for miles in extent. Beyond the river the vast hills roll away with the still unbroken forest from base to crest. You can look down upon the bright little burg of Cathlamet, with its wharves, its hotels, its canneries, and the steamers coming and going. Backward stretches the lovely vale of Elokemin into the inexhaustible timber lands. I hav enjoyed my visit here while the pageantry of the Fourth of July has mingled with the magnificence of nature.

Barlow is my next lecture point, and here also is a new town, grown up almost since I was here a year ago. W. W. Jesse, formerly of New Era, is located at this place with a brand-new store and a brand-new house to liv in. He is a judge, too, although a Freethinker, and, although a Democrat, he was elected in a Republican district, which shows his popularity. I find the same jolly welcome in his home as ever. D. W. Smith and Katie Kehm Smith, of Port Townsend, Wash., are on a visit to Barlow, and it was a pleasure to greet again these fortunate comrades, so ardent always in the Liberal cause. Other friends are present, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne, George Johnson, Bogert, etc.

Barlow is a Liberal name, and I guess it will be a Liberal town. A fair audience is present at the lecture given in Barlow Hall, over Jesse's store. The hall is ornamented with evergreens and flowers, and the mottoes "Dig for Truth" and "Think for Yourselvs" shine amidst the fragrant colors. Mr. Smith takes charge of the meeting and introduces me, and after my lecture Katie Kehm Smith recites "The Betrayed," and the pathos of the poem is beautifully expressed. So I find Barlow radiant with Freethought. It is proposed to hav a Liberal hall here, and perhaps a Liberal school. Katie Kehm Smith expects some day to carry out her plan outlined in her article in THE TRUTH SEEKER on Liberal organization to form centers of work at Barlow, Portland, and other places. She certainly has the ability and the enthusiasm to succeed in this enterprise. It needs only the genius of some energetic leader to make Liberalism in this part of Oregon a potent factor. I think that Barlow will make a nucleus for Freethought work. There is an excellent country about it, fine farming lands; and undoubtedly there will be a handsome city here some day.

I lecture at Canby July 7th in Lee's grove. Canby, about two miles from Barlow, is growing too, and has the appearance of prosperity. The Methodist camp-meeting is blazing away, but so far no one has been converted. I had a fair audience in the grove. This is a busy season and it is rather difficult in the country to gather people together. Barlow sent down a good delegation, and New Era joined in, and all the Wrights from Wright's Grove came over—and a wagon-load there was—and I was glad to meet these stanch Liberals again. Reuben Wright has been married, and I congratulate him on his new fortune. May the flowers always bloom.

I am at the home to-day of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Lee, of Canby, and am taking a good rest ere I proceed to the North. The weather is delicious after the heavy rains. There is scarcely a cloud in the sky. The breezes are softly blowing. The earth is clothed in garniture of green with brilliant-colored flowers. The farmers are at work, and the harvest gold begins to gleam. One of our number has passed away, a martyr to her noble devotion, Mrs. Carrie E. Haight, formerly of Portland. She with her family went to Topolobampo colony, and to the success of this she consecrated her efforts. She was taken with the fever and died serving the cause of humanity. A brave and generous spirit has been lost to our work amidst the "forlorn hope" of progress; but her example of heroic labor will shine in our memory, and her grave shall not be forgotten. Over it shall bloom the flowers of love and hope. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Canby, Ore., July 8, 1892.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Burlington, Vt., Free Press.

The stories are suggestiv of important facts. Heredity is a powerful force, yet it seems impossible to accept all the conclusions as literal facts. The book is, however, well worth reading either by the thoughtful or by those who seek first of all to be amused.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Rosalia and vicinity, Wash.	July 24	Albert Lea, Minn.	Aug. 13, 14
Davenport, " .. "	25-27	Watertown, " .. "	16-18
Colville, " .. "	29-31	Minneapolis, " .. "	20
Missoula, Mont.	Aug. 6, 7	Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis.	" 24-29
		Chicago, Ill.	Sept. 4, 11

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

The Cause in Washington.

At Tacoma, June 12th, the lectures on evolution, presenting the facts of science in plain, simple language, intensified the interest both among Liberals and Christians. The Germania Hall was crowded alike upstairs and down, and standing-room was at a premium. Only the very early comers had any choice of seats. After the lecture, I answered questions for one hour and a half; even then the vast multitude seemed loth to depart and risked missing the last street-car and having a long, wearisome walk home. The nature of the questions asked and the eager attention with which the answers were received gave proof of deep and intelligent interest.

I hav made large sales of Liberal publications after every lecture. This is the surest possible gage of the amount of interest and spirit of investigation aroused.

The Tacoma Secular Union hav engaged the Wheeler Hall on Tacoma avenue for their regular weekly meetings (Tuesday evenings). They hav good attendance. On Tuesday, June 14th, over fifty were present, including ten ladies, and this despite very great attractions elsewhere, one of which was a mammoth musical festival at the Tabernacle.

After the routine business of the society—admission of new members, etc. (there hav been a number of new members admitted every meeting-night so far), they hav a very interesting program of social and literary exercises. Songs by the ever genial and popular Scotch vocalist, Robert Howden (a new addition to the ranks of Liberalism since the commencement of the lectures and one we hav reason to be proud of), readings, recitations, and brief speeches by the chosen six—six names are read off the roll in regular order by the secretary each meeting, each of whom must, at the next meeting, either read, recite, or make a brief speech, failing which he must pay fifty cents into the treasury. This extempore speaking class is alike a source of instruction and great amusement.

Among the visitors, Tuesday evening, June 14th, was Mr. Charles A. Cantonwine, of Yakima county, who requested Dr. Angus, president of the Washington Secular Union, to read aloud a will which he had instructed me to draw up for him, and which he proposed to sign, execute, and publish before the entire audience. He wished the president of the Washington Secular Union and the officers of the Tacoma Secular Union to sign as subscribing witnesses. He had long desired to help the cause of Liberalism and aid the work of securing complete divorce of church and state; and, while he should continue to do all in his power during the little span left to him of life (he is eighty years old), having done his full duty by his children and heirs, he desired at his demise the cause should receive the bequests as stated in his will. He made it thus publicly so as to put it as far as possible beyond the power of any of his heirs to break the will or defeat his purpose by claiming that at the time of making the will he was insane, under influence or constraint.

Dr. Angus read the will aloud. It made bequests to Charles B. Reynolds in trust for the Washington Secular Union, and to Charles P. Somerby in trust for the Truth Seeker Company, and the following stipulations in regard to his funeral services, which may prove useful, and so are inserted:

